Last year Buffalo outpointed Varsity by a considerable margin and Saturday's loss was their first in their last ten starts. An interesting side-light lies in the fact that Buffalo is rated as ranking third among the harrier teams in New York State.

Hec Phillips was very pleased with the performance of the Toronto team and said, "Varsity men ran well, packed well, and did an excellent job against Buffalo who has the same team that last year defeated our boys."

Roy Foulis in finishing third showed that he is coming into fine shape and he will probobly show better results in the meet against Niagara University next week. Buffalo has already defeated Niagara by a perfect score so it is not thuoght that the Blue and White will have much trouble over the High Park course.

The interfaculty contest run in conjunction with the dual meet gave victory to S.P.S. which finished Foulis first, Feldhans second, Lorimer third, and J. Brown seventh. Wycliffe placed second with Barnett sixth, Parke-Taylor tenth, Jefferies eleventh, and Storey fifteenth. Trinity ended third with Kirkwood, Boger, Beamon, and Edmunds. The intramural score was S.P.S. 13, Wycliffe 42, and Trinity 49.

School Stickmen Topple Forestry 9-2

School Fourths had little trouble in disposing of the lacrosse representatives of Forestry in the big gym last Friday. Led by Devine and Davey, who netted four and three respectively, the Engineers kept the pressure on for the whole game. Allman and Adams were the only Forestry men who were able to snake the pill through the strong School defence.

Soccer Stars Beat Army

Varsity All - Star Soccerites Score Two Quick Goals to Defeat Star-Studded . Army Team at Exhibition Park

DEFENCE STANDS OUT

Saturday morning at Exhibition Park Varsity's all-star soccer team edged out No. 2 District Depot by a score of two goals to nil. The game was one of the hardest fought contests we've seen or experienced in many a day. Playing together for the first time, the Varsity squad treated spectators to a fine brand of soccer. The heady teamwork of the defence in particular confounded the Army throughout the game.

FIRST HALF

Depot won the toss and elected to shoot down a decidely sloping field. Col. O. S. Hollinrake, O.C. of No. 2 D.D., kicked off and then the game got under way. For the first ten minutes Varsity was obviously jittery (perhaps the crowd of "conscripted" army fans had its effect). The Army took charge immediately and with smart passing had Varsity on the defensive but fell short of goal. After ten minutes of play the Blue and White settled down and made several brilliant rushes down the field. At the fifteen-minute marke Dave Hibbard, Varsity outside right, carried the ball down the wing and crossed to Art Riguero who parked it smartly behind goalie Ab Hallam. Seconds later a cheap but legitimate penalty was awarded to Depot but Urquhart sportingly kicked a slow roller to Hugh Thompson who cleared easily. A few minutes later the Varsity forward line broke lose again and Art Creswell whacked a scorcher past Hallam on a rebound shot of Tommy McIver's. As the half time whistle blew the Depot seemed slightly bewildered by Varsity's quick-passing attack and the sudden turn of events.

SECOND HALF

Shooting downhill in the last half Varsity came out with the intention of using a strong offensive to preserve the two goal lead. But such was not the ease. The Army perked up and in no time had the Blues with their backs to the wall. Time and time again the soldiers passed their way goalward only to be driven back by an air-tight Varsity defence. For forty-five minutes the Varsity defence of Hugh Thompson, Don Clee, Joe Fyfe, Ed Johns, Hal Seymour, and Russ Self held the Army forwards at bay while the Varsity forwards relieved with occasional rushes down the field. A second penalty kick against Varsity saw Bobby Hume shoot wide of the mark.

For the losers R. Urquhart at centre half and Bobby Hume at centre played outstanding games.

The Depot team is by far the best Varsity has encountered in recent years and the Blues hope that a return game can be arranged.

MUSCLE BUILDERS, INC.

"College is no longer a four year loaf," claimed an authority in the Athletic Wing the other day. And when or if you take a period of P.T. a week plus your C.O.T.C. hourage, you can well reiterate the statement. But the gruelling hours you take at the mercy of Charlie Zwygard and "Chesty" Martin are made that way for a purpose other than to make you stiff and to wear you out. For the extended athletic program, compulsory and voluntary, has been instituted for the long-term benefit of everyone. Two important reasons are brought forward—(a) study is aided by physical fiitness and mental tone-up, (b) most males are P.O.M., or hope to be, and to get to, let alone go through, Brockville, one must be in the very peak of physical fitness.

But the required P.T. and C.O.T.C. drill are only a starter and just get the athlete loosened (or stiffened) up. To develop the chest, arms and legs to the degree that Brockville demands, one must do some "homework." For it is your own responsibility to get out and get into shape. This is being done to a larger extent than formerly as noted in the large gymnastics classes and the doubled swim program. But we think that the very best developer is to join in the fun now and again in the boxing and wrestling room. The boxing end of it has attracted over 30 steady customers—mainly because of the introduction of the art in some of the P.T. periods. But the wrestling turnout so far has been discouraging for those in charge. The glove-game is in the hands of Dr. Les Black—one of Varsity's older greats — and Mel Glionna — tops in the fight game. George Daley and "Chesty" Martin are doing noble work in the maul department for those interested. Combining the two have been a number of demonstrations and classes in unarmed combat tactics. Do you know what to do if an enemy in charging you with fixed bayonet if you have no weapon—and you haven't time to change into your Superman uniform? Well, the answer may not be given at the next meeting but after some training you will at least learn how not to get in the position of being charged with said bayonet. So for some toughening plus the general knowledge of commando tactics the boxing-wrestling room any night is the place to spend a few scrappy hours.

The Varsity Soccer Club hopes to get as large a crowd out to its next game—this coming Saturday—as it played to a couple of days ago. In fact it is endeavouring to wangle the point with the orderly rooms of the C.O.T.C. For the game drew a huge crowd down at Stanley Barracks. And the simple matter they hope to have repeated —on our own campus. For it is a simple matter. All that was done was to get a company of men and march them up to the field in column route and a "halt" and "left turn" command was followed by a "watch the game and don't leave your place." By this means the playing field was completely ringed by a three-deep crowd. Neat trick, eh?

The Interfaculty Tennis Tournament which was slated to start Oct. 19, has reached the semi-finals at last. The whole schedule might have been finished up in one week with a little luck, but has now dragged past the third week, and will be well into the fourth week before the University title holder will be declared. Can all this delay be blamed upon the weather and training and drill periods? Some of the girls did co-operate and got thier games over early, and then they had to sit around and wait for a week or more for their next match.

On Saturday Muriel Finlayson, I P.H.E., defeated Yvonne Baillie, II Vic, and Virginia Kitto was victorious over another Physical Eder, M. Liston. Today Virginia Kitto, last year's champion, meets Muriel Finlayson. This promises to be a game with plenty of action. Muriel Finlayson hails from Ottawa, and made quite a name for herself as a tennis player in the junior circles last year.

Virginia MacLeod, II Vic, the champion two years ago, bested Ruth Carelton, III P.H.E., 6-1, 6-2, on Saturday. In the other game played Jean Herwell, I Meds, defeated St. Hilda's No. 1 player, Margaret Alexander. Today finds Jean drawn against Virginia MacLeod. We shall not try to make any predictions as to the outcome of this match. Jean Herwell ranked No. 2 for Meds. She has defeated some strong players to get to the semies, and may prove to be the dark horse of the field.

If these games are played today, the finals should be run off on Tuesday. Let's hope so, because this tourney has run long enough.

Until a few more of the basketball games have been played, the strength of the various teams is largely a matter of conjecture. At present the P.H.E. teams appear to be the best on paper. They have a few more experienced players who made good in previous years, such as Betty Allen and Zoe Christie for III P.H.E. But some of the P.H.E. students are not playing this year as they have accepted coaching duties for other faculties.

How about making a trip up to the C.O.E. gymnasium this week and see for yourself the type of basketball the girls are displaying? This evening's card has St. Hilda's Freshies "A" playing U.C. Srs. at 6:30; U.C. Freshies vs. St. Mike's at 7:30; and Vic Srs. vs. Nurses at 8:30.

BRITISH AIRMEN BLITZ VARSITY 29-0

A brisk autumn day, a peanut vendor, and the best team to visit these rugger-starved regions in a couple of year, combined to make the back campus last Saturday morning a rendezvous in that period between the last lecture and the first barked command.

To be defeated by the heavier and star-studded aggregation from R.A.F. Picton was no disgrace. In peacetime every member of the Flyers' fifteen, with the exception of Flt. Lt. Swyers of Newfoundland, was a star with one of the English Rugby Union teams in the Old Country. Players from such widely spread teams as Northern Ireland, Cardiff, Oxford, Cambridge, Bedford and Edinborough participated. For seven of the Air Force team it was their first game since the war started, and three others were present on special permission of the authorities only.

Flying Officer Mills is one of the game's outstanding stars, and even layman observers, like most of the student spectators, were able to recognize his ability. Mills scored 12 of his teams points, composed of three converts, a try (rugby touchdown) and a penalty kick.

The game was a far better exhibition than the previous encounter. Both teams used an open style of attack, fumbles were fewer, and injuries were absent. The R.A.F. scrum were too heavy and experienced for the Blue and White, and were able to "heel" the ball out almost consistently. Some of the end runs which resulted in major scores were a treat to watch. Varsity was only successful a few times in advancing the ball past centre, but stubbornly fought for every inch in their own zone. The star plays were not all Air Force. Lacking the services of injured Ian Todd, the Varsity crew were substantially handicapped, but her backs stood up well. Occasional lapses in tackling could be the only and minor criticism of their play, while their kicking and plunging compared with the Air Force when the differences in weight and experience were considered. Hugh Ford and Eric Robertson (a former "T" winner in his first time out) were the best for the losers.

At an early date, if arrangements can be made, it is planned to pit Picton and Clinton, the two Varsity vanquishers, against one another in a special exhibition match on the campus.

Another Tie Game In Theolog Soccer

In an early afternoon game Friday Emmanuel and Knox fought to a one all tie. This was the fourth tie in five games in the theological group and leaves all teams within striking distance of first place. Obtaining a point in Friday's game Emmanuel are tied for first place with Trinity, who have gained the only victory so far. Singh of Emmanuel and Hall of Knox were the goalgetters, the goals coming a minute apart in the second half.

The teams:

Emmanuel—Gillespie, Gibson, Cumming, Daynard, Singh, Morgan, Henderson, Wanless, Morewood, Creswell, MacKenzie, Waugh, MacRae.

Knox — Boyd, Fox, Cunningham, Barr, McIver, Hall, Vance, Kulio.

leave-denial for Queen's harvesters, we are in no way convinced that we were at fault. It is our belief that it is the chief function of a newspaper to print news—whether or not it is of a palatable nature. The fact that the denial order was issued at one university was news; the fact that it was later countermanded was news; and both stories ran under banner headlines of equal prominence. The supposition that parallel orders would be forthcoming at other universities whose students have participated in the harvest excursion was voiced by a man whose position gave his predictions news- value. At no time did The Varsity derive "a great deal of news material from an event which never actually took place."

We believe our present correspondent's logic to be ogoin at fault when he writes that "no such notification was received by other universities, which should suggest immediately that the denial was a mistoken and certainly not a formal order." Actually it appears that no other university mode enquiry, through its C.O.T.C. and Military District headquarters, regarding the matter. When such enquiry was made by Queen's, there was little in the reply first received to "suggest immediately that the denial was a mistake and certainly not a formal order."

We agree with our correspondent that the space we devoted to the incident was in all probability not contributory to the rectification of the denial order. It was not so devoted with that purpose alone in mind; because, as we have said, it is our chief function to publish news of events of interest to students; and we believe that all the available news of the incident WAS of interest to our readers.

Also of interest, as our correspondent wisely points out, is "the work of our student and graduates in the present war." If he cares to continue perusal of our columns, he will find that this subject will receive extensive treatment in the future, as it has in the past.

The recent landing of American and British troops on African soil, aside from strategic importance, will undoubtedly assist in dispelling the unfortunate attitude which the larger United Nations have acquired toward each other as regards the prosecution of the war.

In the United States there are many who feel that the American forces could have been spared many of the trials at Guadalcanal for instance, if equipment which has gone to Britain, Russia and China had been placed at their disposal. This new type of isolationism forgets that the resistance of Britain, Russia and China gave the United States an opportunity to train men and produce material in relative security.

Such useless criticism is sheer waste of energy which could be applied to the war effort, and none of the United Nations can justify their participation in it. Nevertheless the Toronto Evening Telegram is guilty of the new form of isolationism. Last Saturday in one of its amusing but dangerous editorials, Premier Stalin was rebuked for his statement in which he again appealed for an immediate second front. Actually however, Stalin himself "is primarily responsible for the lack of a second front." This situation apparently arises out of the fact that Russia did not enter the war soon enough and was engaged in persecuting little Finland "which wanted only peace." These opinions do not merit correction, what is important is that this manner of criticism only succeeds in undermining the prosecution of the war which is dependent upon the co-operation of the United Nations.

Various issues in Chile at the present time are causing general concern throughout the Americas.

The speech by Sumner Welles on Oct. 8, accusing Argentine and Chile of assisting Axis propagandists was followed by the postponment of President Rios' visit to the United States, and the resignation of the entire Chilean government on Oct. 20. Some circles believe that the outcome will be a neutrality pact between Argentine and Chile. At any rate, those who hope for complete Pan-American unity will be happy to learn of the appointment of Warwick Chipman, K.C., to Chile as Canadian diplomatic representative. His appointment is timed at a crucial moment.

PART I

Order (49) is repeated for purposes of information:

(59) UNIFORMS—ISSUE

Uniforms ordered by new members and caps and ties for all new members will be issued in Room 82, University College, on Monday, No. 9, from 2 to 5 p.m.

(51) DRILL

Regular drilll will be held on Tuesday, Nov. 10, at 4 p.m. in the U.T.S. courtyard.

(52) N.C.O. DRILL

All N.C.O.'s will report for special drill instruction with the Toronto Detachments at the University Avenue Armouries on Tuesday, Nov. 10, at 6:15 p.m., promptly. Regulation uniforms will be worn.

(53) REMEMBRANCE DAY SERVICE

The University Detachment, C.R.C.C., will participate in the University Remembrance Day Service on Nov. 11, 1942.

Dress:

Regulation uniforms will be worn with beige topcoat. As Detachment will stand for at least 30 minutes, it is essential that heavy, dark shoes be worn. In case of inclement weather, overshoes are permissable but socks will NOT be worn. A woollen jacket should be worn under coat unless topcoat is of winter weight. Particular care should be taken to ensure that hair is neat and secured so as to clear the shoulders. Brown or black gloves will be worn and nothing will be carried in the hands. Books and other impediments may be left in Room 82, U.C., prior to Assembly.

Assembly:

The Detachment will assemble on the North Campus, directly West of the Memorial Tower.

Forming Up:

Platoons will fall in on markers at 10.10 a.m. according to sizing to be arranged on Nov. 10. Roll will be called. Detachment will march off through the Tower as soon as the C.O.T.C. has gone through. Detachment will form up in close column, without spacing, East of the U.C. doorway and North of roadway.

War Memorial:

On passing the University War Memorial, "eyes right" will be given in succession by platoons. Similarly, "eyes front."

Ceremonial Procedure:

Commands will be given for procedure as required throughout the service. All ranks will stand at rigid attention for the "Last Post," two-minute silence, Reveille and the National Anthem. Officers only will salute.

Dismissal:

Detachment will be dismissed immediately at the close of the Service but may remain in position for the C.O.T.C. March Past.

ART, MUSIC & DRAMA

may be forgiven when they are played so impeccably. The Haydn Sonata was given a perfect performance, with a clarity of technique and expression that was truly remarkable.

Schumann's Scenes from Childhood are seldom played as the group that they are. No one could call them difficult technically, but it must be difficult to make them sound as fresh as Margaret Parsons did. Most amateur pianist at some time or another try Soaring; they heard how it should sound.

The Scriabin Etude was the highlight of the final group because it had impelling force behind it. The Saint-Saens Etude en Forme de Valse was a technical tour de force, played fluently. It had no depth, however great was its surface brilliance.

The encore, Schumann's Prophet Bird, was all to short, and far too solitary.

Dr. Walter's Lecture

In the last of his series of lectures on Modern Harmony, Dr. Arnold Walter gave an outline of present-day composition.

Before speaking on the harmonic devices used by composers of this century, Dr. Walter outlined the artistic purposes of modern music in comparison with the development of modern painting. After training the public to think objectively with their Expressionism, twentieth-century artists (using the term "Art" generally) found they had to about face and "retreat under a smoke-screen of Neo-Classicism." This subject of the purpose of modern music is as confused as music itself is today, since each composer has his own theory and probably changes it from time to time.

Next Dr. Walter explained the twelve-tone system with the aid of examples written on the blackboard. Except for the use of all twelve semi-tones and the dissonances resulting from their use, the system follows the contrapuntal practices of the fifteenth century.

To illustrate the points he had made, Dr. Walter played parts of recordings of a few modern compositions. First came two of Schoenberg's short piano pieces (written before he developed his twelve-tone system). Then, to illustrate the twelve-tone system, Dr. Walter played parts of Alban Berg's Lyric Suite for string quartet, and, in contrast, part of Stravinsky's Sacre du Printemps. To show the effect of American popular music on European composers, recording of Stravinsky's Ragtime and a similar experiment of Hindemith's for woodwind quintet were played. Finally came the first section of Hindemith's most popular composition, Mathis der Maler.

In his concluding remarks, Dr. Walter said that, although he did not subscribe to either the theory that music is decadent today or that we are in a position to set it on the right path after centuries of wandering, he has no fears about the future of music.

Some people have the sweetest way of putting things. Take this incident from last Friday's Meds' At-Home for instance. A tallish lad dancing by accidentally thrust his elbow into a lady's face. Being a gentleman, he apologized. "Oh, that's all right," came the kind reply, "yours is by far the nicest elbow I've run into all evening."

Less kind were the two couples who between dances stood discussing a shocking case of infidelity in very catty tones indeed. It seems the young lady in question was being unfaithful to two lads at once. "I shall have to take her apart and give her a good talking to," said one woman.

"Oh, no," said the other with emphasis. "Talk to her first and if she doesn't reform, THEN TAKE HER APART."

By-product of the recent St. Hilda's Knox College reception was a date made by a Knox lad with one of his new feminine acquaintances. When asked what her name was he replied, "Gee, I dunno, but I'VE GOT IT WRITTEN DOWN IN MY HANDBOOK."

WOMEN APPAL US, indeed they do, especially a certain peripatetic Lorelei recently observed circulating about campus perpetually combing her lustrous locks with a little blue comb. In keeping with the legend all sort of fellows have had their attention diverted and crashed into obstacles sustaining no end of hurts. THIS SORT OF THING MUST STOP.

PROFESSORS ARE SOMTIMES MORE THAN HUMAN. A lad in the back row at a lecture recently stood his prof's prosy remarks as long as he could and gave up the lecture as hopeless. He got up, went to the door, only to find it locked. The professor saw the predicament, paused in his unwanted words and went to the poor fellow's assistance. Unlocking the door without a word he opened it, bowed courteously, and closed it after the departing student, returned to the podium and continued his lecture.

Stumbling upon a hidden airport of the pigeons of Queen's Park the other day two co-eds were met by a rising cloud of angry pigeons. Without ceremony they quickly flattened themselves in the tried and approved manner for protection, anti-aircraft, passive, while the squadron zoomed low over their heads. No casualties were sustained.

FRESHIES ARE SO DARN OBSERVANT. There's a chapter here of a great international women's Greek letter society (fraternity?, sorority?) whose members are very proud of their recently acquired recognition pins, little bits of things in gold to be worn on overcoat lapels. A Freshie friend of one of these proud members met her the other day and admired her pin.

"Good for you," she said. "I SEE YOU'VE BOUGHT A VICTORY BOND."

OFFICERS ARE SO CONSIDERATE (sometimes). Three C.O.T.C. men in uniform were standing outside U.C. when a officer came into view. Approaching, the officer kept his eyes on U.C. while the boys debated whether they should salute or not. As he was passing, one of the lads snapped him a quickie, catching him unawares. He returned the salute and then turned around and said, "You fellows don't need to salute if you don't see me, you know!"

taken from Matthew Arnold, and concerned the struggling between two worlds, the one which is already dead, and the one which is to come after the war," explained Dandencau. Mr. O'-Leary stressed the part to be played by the Catholic youth in the work of reconstruction.

"Our present failure is the result of divorcing God from the government," the speaker stated. He deplores the decline of Catholic impact on Canadian thought, and emphasizes the fact that public life is open to Catholics, and that 'drag' is not necessary for success. He further urges Catholic youth to ignore petty politics and "fight for right."

The new Executive of the Canadian Newman Club Federation is composed of—President: Bob Campbell of McGill; Secretary Treasurer: Kay McLean of Toronto; Chaplain: Father Cooke of Western.

It was also decide that for the present, any expenses incurred in forming the new Federation would be born by the Toronto Newman Club.

"An interesting sidelight on the Convention," said Dandeneau, "was the fact that the majority of men who attended were in Science and Medicine. The sole representative from U.N.B. was an Engineer."

Five Military Units To Parade In Remembrance Day Service Planned By Alumni Group

Lieut. - Col. H. H. Madill to Command Entire Parade of Canadian Army Course, C.O. T.C., R.C.A.F. and U.A.T.C.

C.R.C.C. TD PARTICIPATE

Tomorrow, Nov. 11, will be the occasion of the annual Remembrance Day service on the campus. This ceremony is held each year by the University of Toronto Alumni Federation and the military units taking part do so at the request of this organization.

Five units, representing two services, will take part in the service. These will be the No. 1 Canadian Army Course, commanded by Major M. Howarth, the 1st Battalion of the C.O.T.C., commanded by Major M. B. Watson, E.D., the 2nd Battalion of the C.O.T.C., under the command of Lieut.Col. W. S. Wilson, E.D., and two air force units. These are No. 23 Detachment R.C.A.F. commanded by Flight-Lieutenant McMullin and No. 3 Squadron (University of Toronto) University Air Training Corps. The latter is under the command of Lieut. F. L. Hutcheson, C.O.T.C., who had charge of its predecessor, the Air Force Wing of last year.

As notified in C.O.T.C. orders the entire parade will be commanded by Lieut.-Col. H. H. Madill, V.D., Commanding Officer of the U. of T. C.O.T.C. Parade Sergeant-Major will be A. Andrews, (W.O. 1) R.S.M. of the C.O.T.C.

The formation on the parade ground will be in the shape of the letter U with the open side facing the steps of University College, location of the platform from which the service will be conducted. On the right arm of the U, facing west will be the men of No. 1 Canadian Army Course. At the base of the formation will be the two battalions of the C.O.T.C., the 1st (and senior) unit, on the right.

The left arm of the U will consist of

STUDENTS' CDUNCIL

Members of the Students' Administrative Council who are not parading with C.O.T.C. or C.R.C.C. have been invited to join the official procession for the Remembrance Day Service. Members will meet in the foyer of Simcoe Hall at 10:25 a.m., and will fall in as directed. Academic costume is not obligatory.

Bennett Stresses Soil Conservation

The necessity of soil conservation as a wartime as well as a post-war necessity was stressed by H. H. Bennett, of the U.S. Department of Agriculture, addressing the Royal Canadian Institute in Convocation Hall Saturday night.

"Profligate and wasteful as we have been in the past," he said, "we of this hemisphere are still in possession of the resources that will win victory for the cause of freedom and decency. Agriculturally, we propose to use these resources so wisely and so well that Hitler and his evil associates will damn the day they launched their treacherous and despicable attack on a too-trusting world."

Mr. Bennett explained that exploitation, overly intensive use, and failure to return plant food, sooner or later will wreck the productivity of any soil and that the soils of Germany and the occupied countries must be showing the strain.

"While the Axis is experiencing food shortages, even though carrying out a systematic program of starving out the peoples of conquered countries, we of this hemisphere have just established the greatest food production record in history. It is significant too, that our mammoth production was not gained at the expense of our basic resources, the

Sewing, Nutrition Classes Form Women's War Training

The Household Science Building is now the centre of activity for both Nutrition Classes and Sewing Groups which are part of the women's compulsory war service training.

The girls are sewing thirty hours this term work any morning or afternoon during the week except Thursday. Five to seven girls work at a time. They are preparing comfort bags for sailors, five hundred of which must be completed and packed in time for Christmas. These bags contain everything from towels, handkerchiefs and wash-cloths, which the girls sew, to socks, tobacco and soap. The work is supervised by an Alumnae from the Household Science Department and all the supplies come from the Red Cross.

Those who have chosen this branch of war service are enthusiastic about it. Mary Ferguson, III Vic, busily hemming a handkerchief, remarked, "It's swell fun, especially when you're doing your duty. Besides I'd rather take a whole afternoon once a week than have my time broken up . . . and everyone's swell to us."

Rachel Grover, IV Trin., said, "I think it's the best course. It's very practical and it makes you feel as if you have really accomplished something."

The Nutrition Classes under Miss Willard, only count for twenty hours in the term. In these the girls are taught general food needs and how to satisfy them.

"Food is one of our most important munitions," Miss Willard explained. "It plays a large part in keeping the people healthy. In times such as these when there is a shortage of doctors and nurses it is very important for people to keep themselves well. The course teaches the girls themselves what to eat for health," she said.

One senior from U.C. observed, "When you sit for two hours nothing seems very interesting but I think it is a good thing to know."

Jeanne Atkinson, II Vic, said, "I like it, and I've learned a lot of things I never knew before, but it's gruesome in spots."

R.C.A.F. Contingent Edits McGill Daily

Montreal, Nov. 9—(CUP)—Office of the McGill Daily was invaded last week by the McGill contingent of the R.C.A.F. who took over the editorial reins Nov. 6 to edit a special "Air Force Daily."

Flashing the streamer, Radio Locators Double Bond Quota, the four-page edition featured the story that the McGill contingent had oversubscribed their Victory Bond pledge some 200 per cent by purchasing more than $7,000 worth of bonds instead of the original quota of $2,500.

Other highlights included a message from Flight Lieutenant G. Fuller, Detachment O.C., radio mechanics sport stories, air force gossip sprinkled with wisecracks, and two R.C.A.F. editorials.

Warmly greeting the airmen, a message from Dr. D. Keys, physics instructor, read: "Your presence has added colour to the campus and interest to our citizens who have watched your marching in the morning, armed not with guns but with books—a real indication of the necessity of trained minds in modern warfare."

Captain W. C. Thomson Dies a Prisoner of War

Captain Willard Brewing Thomson, former manager of Hart House Theatre, reported missing and believed killed as a result of the Dieppe operation last August, was yesterday reported to have died of wounds while a prisoner of war.

Captain Thomson was educated at Oakwood Collegiate and Queen's University. He joined the Hart House Theatre staff as secretary in September, 1934, and became manager in 1936.

While with the Theatre staff Captain Thomson acted in several plays. He also directed the theatre production of "Holiday," a University Drama Committee Play, in 1939.

Queen's Principal Wallace Speaks In Convocation Hall On Education, Scholarships

Expresses Hope That in Future No One With "Enthusiasm" Will Miss Education Through Financial Disability

URGES MORE SCHDLARSHIPS

Hope that in the future no young man or women possessing the necessary enthusiasm, be deprived by financial disability, of the opportunity to be trained to the limit of his particular ability in that type of education for which he is particularly suited, was expressed by Dr. R. C. Wallace, Principal and Vice-Chancellor of Queen's University, speaking at Convocation Hall last night, on behalf of Education Week in Toronto.

Dr. Wallace explained that if attention is not paid to this problem, much of the potential force of Canada will be cut off from its natural expression. He suggested that scholarships be provided for the purpose, pointing out that Canada is far behind her sister dominions and Great Britain in this respect. In particular he deplored the fact that owing to agriculture depression many from the country have been unable to go on to higher education, not through inferior intelligence but because of lack of financial resources.

Dr. Wallace pointed out the growing importance of technical education as compared with purely academic learning, but emphasized the fact that the young man or woman going directly into technical school without training in the humanities, which is usually connected with an arts education is "brittle, without that mellow understanding necessary in life."

He expressed his appreciation of the part which psychology could play in advising young men and women as to the particular type of activity for which they are best suited and pointed out the advisability of having psychologists connected with the schools for this purpose.

"Moreover, we lose more through lack of enthusiasm, in education, than through lack of ability," the speaker continued. "If none were deprived of the opportunity of continuing their education, it would then be possible to clear out of our halls of learning all those

LECTURES WITHDRAWN

Lectures and laboratory classes will be withdrawn from 9:30 a.m. 11, in order that staff and students may attend the Service of Remembrance and Consecration to be held in front of University College.

Members of the staff are invited to attend in academic costume. A space will be allotted to them near the main door of University College.

School Asks Coeds To Serve Dinner

Shortage of waitresses threatens to deprive Schoolmen of their annual faculty dinner, M. J. Aykroyd, Engineering Society vice-president and chairman of the dinner committee, announced last night.

Unless 30 girls with some experience in the art of waiting on table volunteer to help out the Engineers, the 53rd annual School Dinner, scheduled for Thursday, Nov. 19, will be cancelled, Aykroyd said.

In former years waitresses for the annual dinner were supplied through the Hart House kitchen staff but this year there is no extra help available and the House staff itself is short-handed.

Girls with some experience are needed, said Aykroyd, for the trays are quite heavy. They will be paid for the work and will also have dinner at Hart House. They will be expected to work from 5:15 to 8:00 p.m.

"We are hoping the co-eds will look upon this as more of an adventure than a job," said Aykroyd. We will consider it a great favour and the dinner committee is already planning a party to express our appreciation to the girls who volunteer to help us."

Canadian Armed Forces' Exhibit Will Open in Hart House Gallery

Official opening of the Canadian Armed Forces exhibition this Saturday in Hart House Art Gallery coincides with the national observance of education week in Canada. This fact was pointed out by Warden J. R. Gilley in an interview with The Varsity yesterday.

Mr. H. O. McCurry, Director of the National Art Gallery in Ottawa, will make a special trip from Ottawa to open the Exhibition.

On Thursday evening, Nov. 12 at 7 p.m. Mr. Gilley will again speak on the Exhibition over the network of the Canadian Broadcasting Corporation. Last Oct. 28, the Warden delivered a radio talk which has since appeared in "Saturday Night."

"The Canadian Armed Forces Exhibition has a special significance in National Education Week," said Warden Gilley. "Art is a national resource, vital to our war effort and has an active place in democracy on the march. Art has to keep tempo with the war and this Exhibition is intended to promote art in the services. Such scenes as are represented in the contributions make a permanent part of our cultural heritage from this war—if they were not recorded, in all probability they would be lost," he explained.

Speaking of the work already put into the Exhibition the Warden said: "The whole effort has been made possible by the wonderful spirit of co-operation from all branches of the Armed Forces, the printing firms, the Canadian Broadcasting Corporation, the various civilian services, and the Hart House Art Committee. The committe hoped that the Exhibition will go to Ottawa when its presentation in Hart House is completed."

Mr. Gilley has received many enthusiastic letters from men in the Forces and others, who wish it every success. It has been expressed more than once that this will not be the last exhibition of the work of Canadian artists in the services.

During the week-end, committee members of the House assisted in the matting of this exhibition. About 200 pictures have already been accepted for display.

A special catalogue is being prepared

FORMER VARSITY STUDENT REPDRTED DEAD AT DIEPPE

Pilot Officer John Edwin Gardiner, 23, of the Royal Canadian Air Force, has been reported killed in action while participating in the raid on Dieppe last August, his father, Agriculture Minister Gardiner, learned last Saturday.

Pilot Officer Gardiner studied engineering at the University of Toronto in 1939, and transferred to areonautical engineering when war broke out.

The report of his death was received from German sources through the International Red Cross. He was officially reported missing in September.

FORMERLY LISTED MISSING DSGODDE GRADUATE DEAD

Captain G. Graham Sinclair, graduate of the University of Toronto and Osgoode Hall, who blew up the enemy fortification wall at Dieppe to let his regiment break through, is now reported dead. Previously listed as missing, a cable has been received by his mother informing her of his death.

Capt. Sinclair, former A.D.C. to Lieutenant-Governor Matthews, was promoted to major overseas but reverted in order to rejoin his unit.

Coventry Addresses Meds Men On 'Physical Health in Wartime'

Physical training leads to harmonious living, beauty and sportsmanship, and develops the individual as a social unit, said Professor A. F. Coventry of the Biology Department last night in addressing the Medical Society's Arts and Letters Club.

Speaking under the general subject of "Physical Health in Wartime," Professor Coventry enlarged upon the physical training theme and related it to the Sokol movement which originated in Czechoslavakia.

Professor Coventry was in Czechoslavakia at Prague for the national festival in 1923 and brought back with him a number of slides of the physical demonstration there. "I can only show you the physical demonstration," he said, "but the point of view fundamental to the Sokol movement is the manner of living. This manner of living reflects the spiritual, intellectual and social idcals of the nation, these elements are just as important if less demonstrable than the physical training."

"The Sokol movement was founded by Miroslav Tyrs in 1912, It was before Czechoslavakia achieved her status as a nation, while she was still bound up with the Austro-Hungarian Empire. Tyrs felt that the stimulus for the realization of Czech nationality would come through the co-ordinating power of physical demonstration, which was founded on the Greek classical ideal of citizenship." he explained.

"During the Great War the Movement gave indirect aid to the Allies, and after the War it was responsible for the maintenance of order in Eastern Europe. Most important was its influence on the recognition of the new nation of Czechoslavakia. The Movement moved gradually from national to Pan-Slavic ends, and included women, adolescents and later childrens' groups.

"The Sokol Movement has a number of general objectives: an equality based on ultimate values, so that men can make the best of their endowments; and an emphasis on social life. Although there are no religious or social tests, the standards are quite high. The idea is that each individual contributes to the totality of the nation. Although the demonstrations are emotional, felt by performer and spectator alike, there is a certain national dignity and restraint which is unmistakeable. In 1923 there were 700,000 members of the Sokol Movement."

Selective Education

"Education available to all, to the stage of which they are capable of benefiting from it" was the ideal postulated by Dr. R. C. Wallace last night as essential to the building of a truly democratic way of life.

At the same time, he emphasized the need of selecting only talented and enthusiastic students to receive the benefits of higher education, intimating that the blasé and the uninterested might better be weeded out.

Initial steps toward a policy of this kind have already been taken by the Government in recent regulations which provide financial aid for young people with marked ability along technical lines, and which threaten idle students with immediate draft call.

But Dr. Wallace's outline provides for expansion far beyond these measures which are dictated more by wartime expediency than by any long-range project for improving the educational system. While admitting the growing importance of technical courses, Dr. Wallace makes clear the necessity for some training in the humanities—not only for a small and specialized knot of Artsmen, but for all students. A student without this background is "brittle, without that mellow understanding necessary in life."

And perhaps Dr. Wallace's main point is the careful classification of all young men and women, so that they may be prepared for the type of work for which they are best suited. Current trends in government policy seem rather to favour moulding men to fit the jobs in which they are most needed.

Furthemore, regulations which weed out flagrantly idle students do not begin to accomplish the "purification" of the student body that Dr. Wallace advocates. Unaffected is the student who goes through the motions of completing his course and emerges bored and uninspired; the tireless plodder who never lifts his nose far enough from the grindstone to realize the broader implications of the work he has covered; the dilettante, who toys with his work brilliantly enough but lacks the interest to concentrate on it thoroughly; and, above all, the duffer with barely enough talent to "get by."

All these are saboteurs of an educational system as envisaged by Dr. Wallace. It will not be easy to sift them out of the "desirable" student body and it will be even more difficult to scour the country to find the young people who are to replace them. But these are the tasks which confront the men whose duty it is to rear a generation capable of building a truly democratic post-war world.

A Poet To Lead Us

A book of great interest in Canada and especially for the members of University College appeared last week when Lieut. Earle Birney's first volume of poems, David and Other Poems, was published. The poet is well known on this campus where he is a member of the Department of English at University College, absent since last spring on active service.

Beyond the simple fact that a volume of fine poetry has been written by one of our professors, for we are blessed with other poets, chief among them Dr. E. J. Pratt of Victoria, is the great tribute paid to the poet and his poem "On Going to the Wars" by a reviewer in The Globe and Mail on Saturday.

"The great Canadian poem of the war has been written. Here is the ringing note that speaks for us all as 'In Flanders' Fields" spoke for us in the last war. . . . When poets thus declare the war aims of the people, the politicians will know what to say. . . . but Lieutenant Birney, who today enters Canada's consciousness with a bang, is not a man of one poem only, and it is hoped that his first collection will be followed by others."

After reading Dr. Birney's poemes we are proud to congratulate him for the contribution he has made to Canada's literature, and, incidentally, to thank him for the pleasure his work has given us personally.

After re-reading the poem already mentioned, "On Going to the Wars" we think that the many clammering people in search of war aims may well give up their frenzied search and get on with the fighting, because the cause for which we fight is here put forth as clearly as it could ever be:

"Yet must we play the beast afresh
To claw from wolves their power to craze
The heirs of Raphael and the kin of Bach, our friends the foe.
. . . my doom
Will yet have helped to hold in bloom
Old English orchards and Canadian Woods unscarred by steel, Acadian and Columbian roofs unswept
By flame . . .
I'll stand by those who strive to chart
A world where peace is everyone's,
A peace that does not rot the heart
With hunger, fear and hopeless hate,
Nor rust the cunning wheels nor still
The subtile fingers, peace that will
Unlock the every man the gate
To all the leaping joys his hand
Creates. For no less prize I stand."

This poem should be circulated among all the states among the United Nations who have asked us to define our war aims and peace plans.

Girls Co-operate

After well over a month in which to test its worth the system of self service in the women's residences of the various colleges of this University has more than justified itself. Adopted as an emergency war measure owing to the restricted numbers of the residence staffs, there is some speculation about continuing the system even when adequate staffs might again be found after the war.

Miss Marion B. Ferguson, Dean of Women at University College, has expressed herself as "delighted with the way the girls have been equal to the emergency, and with the cheerful way in which they have gone about doing this extra work." The heads of the other women's colleges and residences are equally pleased, and rightly so.

At Whitney Hall the girls clean their own rooms, take turns as waitresses for dinner and take charge of desk and door duty in the evenings. Breakfast and lunch have been changed from served meals to buffet style quite satisfactorily. At the Victoria residence the girls also take waitress and door duty but do not clean their own rooms. The system followed at St. Joseph's College and Loretto is in the main silimar to that adopted by Annesley Hall.

That the girls in the University residences are so willing to help in any way that they can when an emergency of this kind develops shows a fine spirit of co-operation and sacrifiec. The war has brought many restritions in every phase of civilian life, about which we have heard a great deal of grumbling, but we have heard no student in residence complain about this added call in her time. Not only are the girls not complaining, but they are also making a success of their new housewifely duties, a field in which co-eds are traditionally not supposed to excell.

We congratulate them for their exploding of an out-moded tradition and forth their willingness to help in any new work resulting from the war, even if it is unexciting and of no immediate aid to our war effort.

MEDICAL COURSE DISCONTINUED

COMMANDOS LIQUIDATED

As reported here yesterday, the Medical Society received a message from United Nations' Headquarters which read: "HIT THE ROAD, BUMS."

The Varsity secret service finally transliterated this message from Army code into ordinary English. The final version of the translation was as follows:

"In view of the exigencies of the situation, we have decided to take all medical students into the army, and to suspend the course for the duration of the war, as it cannot be considered essential to the war effort."

The report caused great consternation in many circles. "I'm sorry to see the boys go," said an anonymous fees-collector in the Bursar's Office — "we had so much fun overcharging them."

"Does this mean . . . war?" asked several medical students.

"Where will we get targets for our snowballs?" moaned Tangent McSlide-Rule, Mech IV, President of the Engineering Society.

"Gosh," commented Lupus Vulgaris, well known Medical Reporter of The Varsity, "I hope they have nurses in the army. They were the only reason I ever went to clinics."

"What will we do with our our stiffs?" protested Mortem R. Ghoule, popular superintendent of the morgue.

Approval came from only one quarter. Dr. Horsecollar Swineblight, Dean of the Ontario Veterinary College, issued the following statement: "It's about time something was done. Think of all the years we have been restricted to animals. If a veterinary is good enough for man's best friends, he's good enough for you."

Scalpel O'Sawbones, well known medical authority and Dean of the Faculty of Medicine, refused to comment on the report.

Oh Dear Me . . .

Royal Alexandra

We confess we never guessed whodunnit in Major Robert Presnel's Her First Murder—we were never that interested. Zazu Pitts as the spinster amateur detective is good old Zasu as her most limp-handed and her incidental business affords some of the most enjoyable moments of the play.

For the rest the best we can say is that the play needs rewriting badly. The first act in particular is very slow, but then, perhaps we've been spoiled by corpses falling out of closets in the early minutes of reel one of the latest Hollywood slaughter smoothies.

The acting, too, is not up to stock standard. It lacks timing, and may improve in time to mesh properly if and when the play opens in New York. Miss Pitts' voice was weak last nigbt and she received little support from the numerous and partly redundant cast. Standing out above the rest was Ann Mason in a satisfying, but scarcely delicate portrayal of a phony French "Madame" from the Bronx. Her vitality and incongruous switching from "My Gawd" to "Mon Doo' under pressure kept us cheerful all the time she was on the stage.

Of the assorted vaudeville artists dumpted into act to no particular purpose, the one which interested us most was rubber-legged Joseph Caskey whose adagio sequence with Miss Pitts was much too short.

The technical crew of this production deserve credit for making the scene-breaks as short as possible. We regret there was not more of a show to get on with.

Victoria Stifles Senior School 13-0

Munro and Bundy Star in Vic Attack; Engineers Repeated Plunges Turned Back By Artsmen

FITZGERALD SCORES TOUCH

By Phil Shackleton

After dropping their first encounter with Senior School, Victoria came back yesterday to take a 13-0 victory. The Artsmen looked more like the champions of last year in dominating the play for the best part of the game while the Engineers were unable to get into scoring position. Glen Munroe's kicking and Bob Bundy's plunging were the highlights of Vic's hard-hitting attack. The game was in stark contrast to the rivals' first encounter which was a slow moving contest held on a soggy field; yesterday's game was packed with action and gave the crowd something to yell about through all four quarters. Vic has a very noticeably improved line which held time and time again as the Engineers plunger vainly.

First Quarter:

Vic kicked and School took possession on their 25. A School fumble was recovered by Vic and Munro kicked behind the S.P.S. line where Bob Seymour was rouged. School kicked and Vic settled on School's 45. Munro hoisted one and S.P.S., after two short plunges, kicked to Vic at centre. School took the return but lost to Vic on an intercepted forward. They were run out on the 4-yard line and an end run gave the ball to Fitzgerald who went over for a major. Munro made the convert.

Second Quarter:

School kicked to Vic who took the ball on their 15. Bundy plunged for nine and another short plunge gave them first downs. The kick set S.P.S. back on their 35 where a short plunge, an incompleted forward and a kick took the ball to Vi's 45. Both teams at this point began a kicking exhibition, all going out of bounds before being retrieved because of the strong cross-wind. Vic went for a 10-yard loss when Munro was unable to get the pass away. He kicked out at School's 40. Vic intercepted a forward and ran the ball back to the School 10. They tried two forwards but were unable to score before the half-time whistle went. Score: Vic 7, Sr. School 0.

Third Quarter:

Vic kicked to the S.P.S. 30. School's attempt at a forward was incomplete and the boot went to Vic's 40. The Artsmen fumbled on an end run but recovered. School took the next kick on their 30 but a fumble gave possession to Vic. Two beautiful plunges gave Vic first downs on School's 15. Here they lost 10 on a fumble but a penalty to S.P.S. on the next play incurred a 10-yard penalty. A long forward to the edge of the field, Munro to Bundy, resulted in Vic's second touch. Munro converted. School kicked and Vic settled on their 25 where they stayed until quarter time.

Fourth Quarter:

Vic kicked and stopped the receiver on School's 45. School plunged and then kicked out on Vic's 30. An intercepted forward gave the ball back to School where they plunged and kicked. The Vic receiver was run out on his 20. Vic made two short plunges and then kicked to S.P.S. who settled on their 45. An end run gained yards for the Engineers but Vic intercepted a forward. School recovered a Vic fumble and lost 14 yards on two plays when the game ended. Final score: Vic 13, Sr. School 0.

Sr. School—Gaw, McDonnel, Page, Shaness, Zimmerman, Webb, Quittenton, Plaxton, B. Seymour, MacIntyre, White, Parchello, Peterson, Orlando, M. Seymour, Biggs, Henry, Kellam, Brenner, Wallace.

Vic—Munro, Fitzgerald, Bundy, Burford, Shugart, Rutledge, Ibey, Austin, Guthrie, Saunderson, Jones, McComiskey, Thomson, Doner, Wickware, Wilson, Burwell, Harris, Fullerton.

S.P.S. Boxla Teams Win Two Games

S.P.S. forged ahead in the lacrosse league with two straight victories over Meds and Dents last night.

The first game was hard, clean and fast with School definitely having the upper hand throughout. Turner made the only point in the first quarter with a tally for School. Moorehead at centre and Graham playing home scored for S.P.S. in the second, while Currie and Murray smashed two in for Dents in the same quarter. Currie again tallied for Dents in the third; in the same quarter Moorehead heaved a long shot in from centre and Graham and Upper each scored for School. Turner scored again in the last raising the score to 8-3 for School. Steele in goal and Moorehead were best for S.P.S. and Currie starred for Dents.

The second game was hard fought but School rallied to victory in the last quarter. Rae hammered home two shots for Meds but goals by Anderson, Kallio, Bartlett and Howard insured victory for S.P.S. The final score stood at 4-2.

Rae was outstanding for Meds while Howard and Anderson were best for School.

First Game:

Dents—McCartny, Currie, Murray, Hambly, Cousins, Weaver, Lind.

Jr. S.P.S. — Steele, Turner, Scott, Moorehead, Keary, Graham, Upper, Hull, McDonough.

Second game:

Meds—Feigman, Spooner, Rae, Fielding, Strathman, Toogood, Nikaido, Fraser, Rutherford.

S.P.S. III—Howard, McBride, Ferrier, Cooke, Vencharriutti, Bartlett, Kallio, Anderson, Machum, Chipin.

School Swimming Squad Defeats Trinity Team

School thirds took their fourth straight win last night in the Group II swim loop. Nabbing three firsts and both relays they rolled up a 25-8 score against a weakened Trinity splash-squad.

In the concurrent meet Dents had a little tougher job to put out St. Mike's by a 20-13 count. Crane was St. Mike's outstanding swimmer, taking the free style in 30 seconds besides taking part in both relays.

Jack Sansom, School prodigy, augurs to carry on the Sansom natator name. He took the 50 yard free style for School in fast time.

50 back—McDonald (S), Forester (S), Fraser (T).

50 breast—Aykroyd (D), Thwaites (S), Boa (T).

50 free—Sansom (S), Baillie (T), Copeland (T).

200 relay—School.

St. Mike's-Dents Game:

150 relay—Dents.

50 back—Finnan (M), Lipman (D), Wickes (M).

50 breast—Chapman (D), Chapnick (D), O'Connor (M).

50 free—Crane (M), Lind (D), Fenier (D).

200 relay—Dents.

VIC OUTCLASSES MEDS 3-1; DELANEY SCORES FOR MEOS

The Red and Gold of Vic came out victorious in another contest yesterday by outclassing the Meds soccerites 3-1.

The artsmen went ahead in the first half as Atkinson bulged the twine twice. But the doctors held them in the second as Delaney struck the scoresheet. Rutherford came back to notch the Vic third counter.

Meds—Wilford, Boyd, Joseph, Cuthill, MacMattie, Robertson, Strand, Ford, Delaney.

Vic — Zurbrigge, Moeniger, Birkenshaw, Groover, Richards, Tonge, Atkinson, Bryce, Rutherford.

Speaking Of Sport

By Fred Sansom

EDITOR'S NOTE: Continuing in our policy of a weekly guest columnist we have one of School's main athletic mentors, Fred Sansom. Our guest, although by no means sticking to one sport, has made quite a name for himself in the pool. Among his many accomplishments are several firsts in the Senior Swim meet of last year, besides sparking Sr. School to the Interfaculty swim crown.

THE NEW DEAL

Last year marked a new era in the attitude of all the faculties towards sports. Everyone became sport conscious. "Gotta win the Reid Trophy" was the war cry that rang throughout the campus. The point system was revived so that the smaller faculties now had a fighting chance. Things began to pop in a big way. In S.P.S. we had, until then, won more than our share of championships. Our points were reduced to half because of the large registration. This move evened up the race, as last year's results showed, but to keep near the top we had to enter a huge number of teams.

"Let's see now," a manager would say, "we need another couple of teams—we only have 55 so far." Students who had shown no interest in sports before now are asked to participate. So the poor dazed student who had agreed to play found himself on the XIII B baseball squad, scheduled to play at 8:30 p.m. in the east cubby-hole.

This year things have been changed due to the heroic work of Mac McCutcheon and his assistants. To prevent overstraining the facilities of Hart House a system has been evolved whereby faculties may enter as many teams as they wish providing there is the required time and space available. If the direcorate thinks the entry list to be too large, the faculties will be allowed to enter teams on a registration ratio. For example, if Vic has twice as great a registration as Knox she will be allowed only twice as many entries.

CO-OPERATION DOES IT

The standing committees, established for the duration of the war replacing Athletic Clubs and Management Committees, have a very important function. The standing committee member is the head of one particular sport in his faculty. He acts as a liason between the managers and the intramural representative, thus making it easier for the managers, the faculty representative and consequently the Hart House Athletic Directorate.

Despite the terrific amount of work thrust upon Mac, he is doing a great job and it is up to the various faculties to help as much as possible. Managers should note that there is a schedule for the coming week in every Thursday's Varsity. If, for any reason, the team is unable to play, the manager should contact the intramural representative at once, as postponements must be made the day following the announcement of the schedule.

If you don't know by now, a bonus has been worked out for the Arts Faculties depleted by the harvesters. An arbitrary number of points was assigned to be divided among these colleges in proportion to the number of harvesters.

Athletics are certainly disrupted this year and it is more difficult than ever for everyone. It is now revealed that no leave will be granted a student in the 1st Battalion who wishes to play some sport on parade day. This, of course, is to be expected. After all, we are privileged in being able to come to Varsity during these times and if everyone pitches in and does his best, there is no reason why this can't be one of the best years for sports we have ever had.

Red and Black Drop Knox In 2-0 Soccer Skirmish

Yesterday at 4:15 on the front campus Trinity downed Knox 2-0, From the kickoff the Red and Black showed better organization and a stronger offense. The Knoxmen were too eager to kick and failed to dribble or pass into scoring position when the opposition lessened.

Trinity's first counter came early in the first half. In a wild scramble in front of the net, it was anybody's ball until Lambert booted it over the line. Knox had a monopoly of the play from the second whistle. Their chances of tieing the game were good, until a Trinity ganging play starting at centre field decimated the Knox defence. After a temporary skirmish directly in front of the goal, Wagland, the star centre, nabbed a loose ball and sent it home for the second goal.

By Betsy Govan

It would seem that not even all good things must come to a end—and so on, and so one, and so on—hence we found out yesterday that only one more game has been played over St. Hilda's way. Virginia Kitto was the winner in her match with Muriel Finlayson in the semi-final, and so is well on her way to contesting for that crown of noble worth now held by Shirley Geldert of U.C.

In the realm of basketball, many more things of moment are happening up in the gymnastic portals of O.C.E. Last evening as scheduled, three games were played off pretty well on time and delighted to a certain extent—the ardent and cheerful spectators who hovered around the precincts. St. Hilda's Freshie "A" team played nobly—but not quite as nobly as U.C.'s Seniors, yoeman of old, boasting of such staunch members as Marg. Stock—a defence woman of note—and several other old members we'll mention at a later date. The girls in red and white mounted up a score of 18, aided greatly by Caroll Armstrong and Joan Carter, whilst the St. Hilda's gals came forth with seven points to their credit. The first part of the game was definitely slower than the last, which can be said for all three games of the evening. Beryl Pollock refereed that tilt as well as the last game of the evening between Vic Seniors and Nurses (19-3 for U.C.). She kept the girls from bumping into each other too often with the old official whistle. Flo Allen did the honours for the U.C. Freshies-St. Mike's game—which ended 20-13 in favour of U.C.

On looking over these games from a view far away enough to be a bit complimentary—we might say that the one and only Miss Aileen McNally of St. Mike's really showed her steadfast versatility and skill in the noble art of getting the basketball away from her opponents time and time again. The rate at which she moved astonished—to say the least—the few noble spectators who honoured us with their patronage.

For a team so new in University athletic circles, we cannot help but praise the winner of the second fray of last evening—the U.C. Freshies. Their passes were very well made and their individual star—the awe-inspiring number 13—tallied for them time and time again.

Concerning the last game, Vic had the play for about three-quarters of the time and made good use of it as a team.

One great criticism of the type of basketball played in all these games is that it is definitely too slow and that the players—possibly through lack of practice—tend to bunch their plays and accomplish little in the way of high scoring. But, as the season winds its merry way along towards Christmas, we are sure that a better all-round brand of ball will appear. Meanwhile, if you like a little such-like diversion, truck on over to O.C.E.'s gym at the hour on the schedule that suits you best or during that hour when your favorite team is playing. We like to see you just as we like you to see us.

the two blue-clad units, drawn up en mass, side by side, with the R.C.A.F. No. 23 Detachment on the right and south of that arm of the formation. These units will, of course, be facing east.

The C.A.C. will be drawn up in close column of platoons, the 1st Battalion in close columns of equalized companies, the 2nd Battalion in close column of half companies and the two air force units in close column of flights.

The Brass Band will be stationed immediately in front of the platform and in line with the leading platoons of the two C.O.T.C. Battalions. The Pipe Band will be placed immediately to the right of the 1st Battalion.

The traditional memorial guard will be mounted at the screen by the Memorial Tower. This guard, to be under the command of Sergeant-Major J. Ironside (W.O. 2) will be mounted for one hour, from 1045 until 1145.

Following the service all units will take part in the March Past, heading west in front of U.C., rounding the campus and passing north through the Tower. The Hon. Albert Matthews, Lieut.-Gov. of Ontario, will take the salute from the platform.

The University of Toronto Detachment, Canadian Red Cross Corps, under the command of Miss A. E. M. Parkes, will also take part in the service. Its station will be immediately to the east of the platform, where it will be drawn up facing west. The Unit will be dismissed after the service and before the March Past commences.

Dr. Wallace explained that he looks to education as a solvent for the problem of the English and French speaking peoples of Canada. He pointed out the value of a system which would embody the best points in our respective educational philosophies, that we would do well to learn from French Canada, for example, the fact that religion should be an integral part of our whole educational system.

"Tuum Est," the motto of the University of British Columbia, has awed those passing through its portals for many years, but it seems that no one ever knew enough Latin to question it. Countless times campus wigs cloaked in the dignity of their robes of office have shouted exhortingly at bewildered students: "Tuum Est — IT IS UP TO YOU."

At last the cat is out of the bag. Dean Buchanan recently explained that when the University was first established, the tuition was supposed to have been free, and the motto chosen accordingly, "Tuum Est," meaning "IT IS THINE," "COME AND GET IT," or "IT'S ON US BOYS."

For a while U.B.C. was the only University in the British Empire which charged nothing for the privilege of attending.

But as is usually the case, the University became mercenary, but it kept up the motto. So, "IT'S THINE," if you can get it!

In the midst of the S.P.S.-Vic debate last week in the Mining Building, one of the seats gave away with a splintering crash. Various references were made to the incident by the speakers, but George Nixon seized a fortunate opportunity when he said, "To see the effects of applied science you have only to look about you—the clothes you wear, the books you read, the chair you sit on—er—well, we're sorry about that one."

People are getting so nutrition-minded these days what with war work courses, extra curricular lecturse, not to mention those taken in the ordinary pursuit of a B.A., it even affects the Whitney Hall dinner conversation. In the midst of an AWE?ful silence, a voice was heard to proclaim, "You know, there's lots of it in jelly; it's a special kind af calorie!"

Nothing like a little scientific confusion.

Co-operation which we so sadly need, would solve a lot of our problems, states the Western Gazette. For instance, freckles would make a nice coat of tan if they would just get together.

Back to the confusion angle we come with this one, even if the confusion isn't so scientific. It comes from an article in the downtown Press on the new regulations for taxi-cab drivers in Malifax, which states: "They propose to have all drivers wear a coat, military type shirt, necktie and trousers when on duty. Women taxi drivers will dress the same, substituting a dark SHIRT FOR THE TROUSERS.

The U.C. grads moved into their new abode next to the Museum not long ago, and held a tea as a sort of house-warming, to which were invited all manner of high dignitaries. During the course of the afternoon, one of the grads happened to ask Lady Falconer if she had ever been in the house before.

In ease you should make the same blunder — the building was onee the HOME of Sir Robert and Lady Falconer.

That some people in this day and age still have no conception of military life seems almost unbelievable, but that they do exist is evident, for one fond mother in bidding her son farewell as he left for C.O.T.C. Camp, said, "Now, my son, remember to be punctual in rising every morning so that you will not keep the colonel waiting breakfast for you."

MARITIME DEBATING LEAGUE HOLDS ANNUAL CONFERENCE

Fredericton, N.B., Nov. 9—(CUP)—The annual conference of the Maritime Intercollegiate Debating League took plaec at the University of New Brunswick on Friday, Oct. 30. The confcrence was attended by delegates from Saint Francis Xavier, Acadia, Kings, Saint Mary's, Mount Allison, Saint Thomas and Dalhousie.

During the day the delegates arranged future debates, heard speeches on debating, and toured the campus. In the evening they were entertained by the Delta Rho Society.

Various Cats on Campus Have Many Occupations

In case you did not know it before, there are several types of cats on the U. of T. campus. First and foremost of course is the Champus Cat, which we feel might have derived its name from a species that is (so we were told) now extinct, i.e., the two-legged variety. In addition to these there is the recently developed Hep-Cat.

However none of these is as important as the four-legged furry felines that roam the halls of various college buildings. This type has several uses. The chief one is to catch rats. It soon becomes noticable to your reporter that a good many of these cats were kept near the front doors of the women's residences.

Further inquiry revealed the fact that in former years the Women's Union has nearly always kept one or two of these pets but for some mysterious reason not strays have shown up this year.

St. Joseph's girls posses a tiny grey pussy bearing the imposing name of Joseph, and at Loretto, Tootles—Alexender to his enemies—has been attending arts lectures for several years.

The library authorities owned to having possessed a cat at the beginning of the year, but they refused to reveal its name.

Finally we ventured itno Hart House to ask if any cats lived there. The hall porter told is no, onee in a while one wanders in but we always chase her out!

All women students enrolled in Hospital Nurses' Aide Course must make appointments for medical examinations THIS WEEK at 44 Hoskin Ave., not next week as stated in yesterday's paper.

McGill Writers, Actors Present Radio Program

Montreal, Nov. 9—(CUP)—An ambitious group of playwrights and actors at McGill hit the air waves Friday last over station C.F.CF Montreal, with the transcription of their Victory Loan Play. Members of the three-weeks-old McGill Radio Workshop were solely responsible for the script and the acting of the play.

The new club hopes to secure a recording of the play to study mistakes made in order to streamline future productions. Several scripts have been submitted for future broadcasts and the group is already working on another play. They are hoping for a return engagement with CFCF and are anxious to work with the CBC.

Many women members are anxious to get on the air, and plenty of script writers are available, but returning harvesters are being urged to attend the weekly sessions to alleviate the shortage of male actors.

MILITARY CROSS AWARDED VARSITY MEDICAL GRADUATE

Captain Allen Frederick Graham, graduate in 1939 of the Faculty of Medicine, University of Toronto, and now a prisoner of war in Italy, has been awarded the Military Cross for distinguished service in the Middle East, according to a cabled despatch from England. The action for which Captain Graham received the Military Cross has not yet been disclosed.

After graduation in medicine, Captain Graham joined the Royal Canadian Army Medical Corps. Upon his arrival overseas he was attached to the Royal Medical Corps, stationed in the Middle East.

productive soil."

"I can tell you that conservation measures can do much for Canada—as they have in other countries—in the direction of maintaining your irreplacable soil resources and increasing the per-acre yields from crop, pasture and range lands," Mr. Bennett said.

He explained that the productivo soil resources of the world are shrinking and that it takes from 200 to 1,000 years to build back even as much as an inch of truly produetive topsoil.

After almost three months of preparatory work, the 1942 edition of the University of Toronto Directory will be available within three weeks, A. B. Fennell, registrar of the University, said yesterday.

The number of names in the blue book this year will not be known until the directory is off the press, said Mr. Fennell. Last year 7,147 students were registered in the University, This total will be exceeded this year, he said.

The first University Directory was published by an enterprising student, after the Great War. Directories have usually been sold for less than their cost price. The first unofficial directories were financed by advertising space in them. In 1921 the University, realizing the need for a listing of all students in the University, published the first official University Directory.

The 1942-43 Directory will be sold at the University Press for the same price as last year—40 cents to University members and 75 cents to others.

Vic Music Club Casting For "H.M.S. Pinafore"

Casting is not quite completed for "H.M.S. Pinafore," this year's offering of the Victoria Music Club, it was learned last night. Although all the principal parts have been filled and rehearsals have been going on for over a month, there is still room for several men in the chorus.

Pinafore, probably Gilbert and Sullivan's best-known operetta, is a rollicking satire on the British Navy. "My Gallant Crew, good morning!" sings Captain Corcoran to the men's chorus—as self-respecting a lot of tars as ever insisted that order be followed by "Please." The girls' chorus consists of the beautiful sisters, cousins and aunts of the First Lord of the Admiralty.

"Some of our crew are still out west, but the work is well up to schedule and everyone shows as much enthusiasm as ever," said Doug Stewart, president of the Club.

He added that Pinafore was chosen partly because it is shorter and gayer than most Gilbert and Suulivan works and will take up less of the students' time.

Mr. T. J. Crawford, Mus. Bac, F.R.C.O., well-known Toronto organist who has been with the club for nearly two decades, will again direct the production. Jack Watson, star of several of the club's previous shows, will take the part of Sir Joseph Porter and will assist with the directing. The case includes Dorothy Gass as the heroine Josephine, Orpha Farr as Buttercup, Don Peel as the Captain, and Al Allman as Ralph. Pinafore will be presented about the middle of January in Hart House Theatre.

let's go places

"Moseow Strikes Back" is an exeellent piece of propaganda describing the repulse of the German Army from the gates of Moscow. The sequences were filmed on the battle front and are not much more than a feature-length newsreel.

MIDTOWN DOUBLE BILL

If you have a strong stomach, you will enjoy this film. There are many gruesome scenes of piles of dead bodies. The whole thing appears a little overdone, but after all, it is intended as propaganda.

It is not hard to imagine that the destruction shown could easily happen in Canada. It is the type of film that makes you think seriously of the consequences of an invasion of our shores.

Naturally there is no plot to the show. But if you fit some of our own cities into the picture presented, you realize what could happen here.

"Keep Fit" is another one of those George Formby things. George gets all mixed up in a boxing match and the results are easily predictable. The plot is hackneyed but if you are a Formby fan you will probably enjoy it anyway.

The acting is second-rate, but it is a British film and it is hard to compare it with Hollywood standards. Blonde Kay Walsh takes the feminine lead, and Formby takes Walsh.

We Will Remember Them

Today we reproduce, with the deepest respect, the list of 87 University of Toronto men who have given up their lives in the present war.

War is a time of sacrifice. And to the finest of us falls the lot of making the greatest sacrifice in defence of our ideals. The men of this University who have gone forth to war and will not return have won for themselves undying glory; for when the memorial tablets which will be erected to their memory crumble into dust, the spirit of supreme sacrifice which guided them to death will remain—the intangible monument which is deathless.

The list has grown long since the last anniversary of Armistice Day; and it will grow longer before the cathedral bells of England peal out their victory message. But if victory is to come at last, the sacrifice must be unstinted; and even those of us who are not privileged to be front-line soldiers in the struggle for lasting peace must be guided by the same spirit which inspired the men we remember today.

We remember them easily now — they were our friends, our class-mates, our day-to-day companions. That memory must be kept fresh in the days which will follow the next Armistice. And when the peace is made this time, let us make it so that the sacrifice of the finest young men of all the United Nations upon the altar of stupidity will not have been made without purpose.

Warriors All

Today we pay honour to the glorious fallen. The massed military might of this centre of learning marches as the great bell of the Soldiers' Tower tolls its tribute, and throngs bow their heads and remember.

Let us also remember that a war is not fought only in the immediate shadow of death—that there are at least ten servicemen behind each man in the front line. And behind these servicemen again are the men and women of the civilian war effort. The factory girls; the skilled technicians; the research scientists; the doctors; the home defence workers; the nurses; the farmers; the miners; the shipwrights; the taxpayers.

And just as the Dominion serves alongside its allies in giving both blood and brains to the united war effort, so this University adds to its contribution of sailors, soldiers and airmen the contribution of scientists and technicians.

Here are trained men who will be graduated into the Canadian (Active) Army and the Royal Canadian Air Force as potential officers; here are trained women who will be qualified to serve in a variety of ways on the home front. And here too are trained the men and women who will serve in the hospitals, the laboratories, the industrial research-centres which make our national war effort an integrated whole.

This University is paying its full share of the national blood-sacrifice; but it also serves in the less spectacular, less glorious, but in no way less necessary ways in which wars are fought.

To Victory!

It is an encouraging thought today, as we stand in silence to pay tribute to the men who have gone before, that the Second World War is going in favour of the United Nations on every major front on the globe.

The men of Britain's indomitable Eighth Army—the Army which was forced back into Egypt this summer, but held before the Suez life-line was cut—have hurled an irresistible attack at the Axis troops to the west, and are now pursuing a disorganized enemy back into Libya.

At the same time, large bodies of United States forces have landed in the Vichy colonies of North Africa, in a move that may lead to the long-awaited opening of the second front.

And the people who have called for the opening of the new front—the Russian guerilla fighters and the Red Army—are holding firm along the battle-lines which extend from the Arctic to the Black Sea. They have withstood the most determined Nazi thrust upon Stalingrad and today are in a position to withstand any further attack which the Axis may project.

In the Pacific theatre the fighting men of the United States and Australia continue to hold the Mikado's forces at bay. In the air over Europe the United Nations hold and strengthen an advantage gained since the dark days of the Battle of Britain. Everywhere the conquered victims of Hitler stir under the heel of oppression in movements which may soon lead to organized revolt.

The war is not over yet; and while today the world situation is almost uniformly advantageous to our cause there are still ominous days to come in which we will need once more to invoke our full determination and zeal not to succumb to the still-potent forces which oppose us. But our enemy is not invincible, and we have it within our power, through unrelenting effort, to bring about his downfall.

We stand in silence today to remember the men who have died for us; and when we lift our heads from the observance, we can go forward once more in the well-grounded hope that victory may soon be within our grasp.

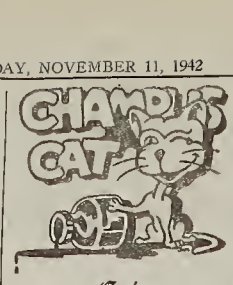
AIR MUSIC Drama

Experimental

Toronto Symphony Orchestra

The Concert last night by the Toronto Symphony orchestra was refreshingly off the beaten track. The orchestra outperformed itself and the music was generally interesting.

Conductor of the evening was Ettore Mazzoleni. He is a musician who is continually showing greater promise, a remarkable feat, for which Toronto should be grateful. His leadership was dynamic throughout the evening and the orchestra was completely at his call.



Two very well-known works had better be disposed of. The Overture to Russlan and Ludmilla was given a remarkably brilliant performance, and the 'cellos especially shone where they stood alone. Tschaikowsky's Romeo and Juliet Overture was well-played, as it should have been, considering its familiarity to the orchestra. For one who at times shows such striking originality, Tschaikowsky is surpisingly incoherent. Probably no other composer is so uneven.

The Canadian Trio appeared as guest artists in the Beethoven triple concerto. This is an experimental work in which the composer tried the effect of writing for a group of instruments against the orchestral background. The instrument of the concerto sometimes is the trio of violin, 'cello and piano as a unit and sometimes the individual instruments. Sir Donald Tovey has remarked that Beethoven succeeded in solving the concerto form in this work. It is, however, indicative of something or other that Beethoven never tried the experiment again.

The leading part of the trio is the 'cello, and Zara Nelsova showed her usual ability in handling the difficult situations which Beethoven had provided. Kathleen Parlow and Sir Ernest MacMillan did equally well, although Beethoven had provided the latter with scarcely nothing to do.

The Kodaly Suite from the Opera Hary Janos may be dismissed as badly, though cleverly, written. Its one redeeming feature is its wit, which degenerates too often to the lowest form of orchestral slapstick. It is no substitute for Brahms' first.

Speaking of Sport

By Bud Smith

Today we pause in the midst of a warring world to pay tribute to those who gave their lives in the first World War and to those gallant members of the United Nations who have already fallen in the present global struggle. Among the English speaking countries these present casualties have been fortunately low compared with the numbers slaughtered in the previous war. Nevertheless, great numbers of the cream of Canadian youth have fallen for the country. Among them have been many outstanding athletes, whose names it would take too long to mention here. These athletes, who first demonstrated their courage and coolness on the field of sport, showed themselves no less courageous on the field of battle. Many of them served with distinction in the Air Force, which service attracted many of our daring sport stars; the raid on Dieppe too headlined many who were famous is Canadian athletic circles before the commencement of hostilities; the Senior Service, in keeping up the gallant naval traditions of the past, has also enlisted the services of Canadian athletes, and many of them have paid the supreme sacrifice.

Before we start, we would like to correct an omission in the schedule published as of yesterday—the Meds-P.H.E. game to be played on this Thursday at 5:30. Now for the games that were played last night at our usual diggins. It was a clear sweep for P.H.E. Their first team defeated St. Hilda's Freshies "B" team 25-18 and their seniors triumphed over Nurses to the tune of 26-3.

In the first game, Doris Clark showed a lot of promise and was top scorer for P.H.E., whilst Joyce Cobban for St. Hilda's impressed us as well. On the whole, the game lacked teamwork—but made up for it with traditional freshie enthusiasm. Also, whilst dozing a while, the Mr. Hyde of us noticed a revolutionary trend in basketball attire—a knitted torso in the good old Red and White.

The last game of the evening showed forth a much better brand of basketball—especially since names like Betty Allen and Mary Sinclair graced the P.H.E. line-up, and accounted for a round dozen of points, each showing forth their inimitable elaborate style—and we don't mean in clothes this time. Elinor Cooper starred for Nurses as a staunch guard always cornering the ball. Spectators were sparse—but we did notice one R.C.A.F. man who came to cheer the gals along.

Miss A. Cole Laid to Rest On Monday

Widely Popular Lecturer in French at University College Dies November 7 After Short Illness

WAS ALUMNI PRESIDENT

Private funeral services were held on Monday afternoon for Miss Aelfreda C. Cole, M.A., lecturer in French at University College, who passed away at her home, 103 Gloucester street, on Saturday, Nov. 7, after a brief illness. Her death came as a great shock to her friends since she had continued her teaching duties up to three weeks ago, and had appeared in good health. She was the daughter of Mrs. Thomas S. Cole and the late Mr. Cole of this city.

Miss Cole's death removes one of the outstanding figures in University College circles where she took an active part in all the College's activities and served as president of the University College Alumni Federation. In this capacity she was one of the most enthusiastic workers for the erection of Whitney Hall.

Miss Cole graduated from the University of Toronto in 1901 and taught at Branksome Hall, Toronto, before joining the University College teaching staff in 1924.

Besides her mother Miss Cole is survived by one brother and three sisters: Dr. C. E. Cooper Cole and Mrs. E. F. Whittemore, both of Toronto, and the Misses Evelyn F. and Octavia A. Cole, both at home.

The pall bearers were Dr. Edward Fidlar, Dr. Gordon Struthers, Thomas F. C. Cole, Arthur R. C. Cole, John E. C. Cole and Alfred O. C. Cole.

Dr. Cody to Lead Service In Honour of The Fallen

Second University Casualty List of 53 Names Will Be Read at Solemn Re-Dedication Service

COL. MADILL IN CHARGE

By John William Griffin

This morning the University of Toronto Contingent, Canadian Officers' Training Corps, will once again parade in honour of those who have (and are) sacrificing their lives in the defence of Right, of Empire and of Canada.

The service this morning will be held on the front campus of the University, as has become traditional. It will be conducted by the Hon. and Rev. H. J. Cody, President of the University and Honorary Colonel of the C.O.T.C. Contingent.

The ceremony, under the sponsorship of the Alumni Federation of the University, will commence after the military and air force units participating are drawn up in position. The order of service, as published in pamphlet form, will include the Lord's Prayer, the reading of the names of the University's sons who have fallen in the past year, the sounding of Last Post and Reveille by the bugler, with the two minutes silence of respect in between.

The names of the fallen are more numerous, in this the second list of this war. Last year 33 names were read, 29 officers and six other ranks. This year there are 53 names to be read, 36 of them those of holders of the King's Commission.

The parade will be drawn up in the shape of a letter U on the front campus, under the command of Lieut.-Col. H. H. Madill, V.D., Commanding Officer of the C.O.T.C. The details of the parade arrangement, in which the two University battalions are to be joined by the men of No. 1 Canadian Army Course, No. 23 Detachment, R.C.A.F. and the No. 3 Squadron of the University Air Training Corps, were given in yesterday's issue of The Varsity.

Cosens Speaks On Lumber Trade

Forests and forestry will play an important part in the reconstruction plans after the war, Professor G. G. Cosens, Dean of the Faculty of Forestry, said in his lecture on "Forest Resources" in the fifth of the current series of lectures on Post-War Reconstruction.

During the last hundred years, forest trade has come to play a large part in our life, the speaker continued. Under the stress of war, wood is used as a substitute for other materials and the knowledge of wood and wood products has necessarily increased.

When peace re-opens the Baltic trade, Baltic lumber will again be on the world market and this is bound to affect Canadian forest trade adversely. Increased efficiency in timber production in Canada will therefore be necessary and working areas must be selected with regard to possibilities and accessibility. Planned construction works which have never been built should then be completed.

Professor Cosens stressed the necessity of preventing forest fires which may destroy the work of many years in a few minutes. Men and money will be necessary to bring forest lands up to their potential full production. Our forests must continue to contribute to the health and enjoyment of our citizens as well as to our trade and commerce.

In our future plans, we must have some thought of the forest worker and help him to lead a reasonably normal life. If these considerations are taken into account, the forest will contribute its share to any plan of rehabilitation in the post-war world, the speaker concluded.

Term Failures To Leave Queen's

Kingston, Nov. 10 — (CUP) — The Faculty of Queen's University held a meeting last week in order to make definite decisions regarding the procedure which they would adopt in implementing the government's requirements concerning students who fail to pass their examinations.

Those who do not qualify in their first term standing at Christmas will be asked to leave the University to be placed at the disposal of their district military officer or the Federal Selective Service Board.

Each student will be considered individually and the decision will be made after careful investigation into his or her ability, attitude toward work, progress during the term, and the probable progress throughout the rest of the year. It will not be based solely on the Christmas examinations, nor will the failure decide the matter. But in the case of failure the circumstances surrounding it will be taken into consideration.

"We do not want to fail these students," said one University official, "but it would be nothing but unpatriotic to keep men and women where they are accomplishing little when they might be otherwise employed accomplishing much."

Hugh Thorburne Is New "Disciple"

Last night's rehearsal of Bernard Shaw's "Devil's Disciple" featured two new faces in the cast. Tom Nixon, recently returned from harvesting, resumed a part in the play along with his other Victoria activities. The other newcomer was out for the first time. Following the departure of Doug Harris to the O.T.S. at Three Rivers, a new male lead was required. Hugh Thorburne has been the man chosen to fill this important role. Although only a freshman, Hugh has had experience on the CBC already, and his presence is expected to be a great asset to the play.

With Thorburne taking the male lead, the unusual condition occurs of having both the male and feminine leads being taken by actors in their freshman year.

S.P.S. second soccer team proved to be better mudders than Pharmacy on the back campus yesterday afternoon and walked off the field with two points. Two goals in the first half, both coming from the toe of Honeyman, provided the margin. McNair netted the third S.P.S. goal.

Pharmacy started off well, completely bottling up the Schoolmen for about ten minutes, but they soon faded badly and S.P.S. were quick to take advantage. In the early stages of the game Pharmacy failed to make good a penalty kick.

S.P.S. II — Crawford, MacCowan, Frost, Honeyman, Turner, McNair, McDonald, Adams, Jung, Denford, Wilkinson, Day.

Pharmacy — Spence, Dauern, Cameron, Katz, Lusthouse, Smith, Jacobs, Kuehambum, Monro, Blackman.

Nurses' Aid Course Features Sixty Hours Hospital Practice

As the war is making heavier demands on trained nurses, university women, through the Nurses' Aid Course, are training to assist them in city hospitals.

Classes are held twice a week in the University School of Nursing and in the nurses' classroom of the Toronto General Hospital. Graduate nurses supervise the students' practice.

Correct methods of making beds, bathing and feeding patients, taking temperatures, pulses and respirations, as well as other simple hospital treatments, are on the curriculum of the volunteer aids.

Training is under the supervision of the Civil Defence Committee and conforms with its rules. In the hospitals a uniform approved by the committee will be worn by the university girls.

"Real hospital practice will begin next week," said Miss A. E. Reid, who is assisting with the course. "As yet the girls have not been assigned to the hospitals, but they will be this week.

A medical examination is necessary before the students are permitted to begin their work."

The training covers 20 hours in the first and second term, with 20 hours of demonstration and 60 hours of hospital work. If a war emergency should arise the students taking this course are pledged to devote 150 hours to work in hospitals.

Practicality is the most attractive feature of this section of defence work, according to those enrolled. "It's a thing one can use all one's life," was the opinion of Kay Coyle, III V.C.—"and I'm looking forward to the actual work in the wards."

"We like it very much," agreed Ophelia Teghtsoonian and Betty Bell, both IV Victoria. "It would have been better if we had started sooner, though, so we would have finished by Christmas." . . . "It's the most practical of all the courses," was the opinion of a Trinity Sophomore.

Dr. E. Gavin Dies at Home On Monday

Member of Staff of School of Hygiene Was Engaged in Vitamin Research for Past 15 Years

WORKED WITH DR. BEST

Dr. E. Gertrude Gavin of the School of Hygiene of the University died Monday at her home in Toronto, following a prolonged illness.

Dr. Gavin, who had been engaged in research work at the School of Hygiene for the past fifteen years, worked under the direction of Dr. C. H. Best and was interested in the relation of "B" vitamins to fat utilization.

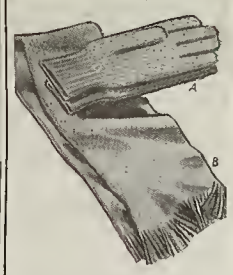
Born in Windsor, Ont., she had been a resident of Toronto since 1920. She received her education at Windsor Collegiate and Jarvis Collegiate and graduated from the University of Toronto in household economies in 1924. She received her M.A. in 1930 and the degree of Ph.D. in 1939.

Dr. Gavin was a member of the Canadian Physiological Society, the Bio-chemical Society of Toronto, the Toronto Ladies' Club, and was a past president of the Household Science Alumnae.

Surviving are her father, Frederick Pearce Gavin, a civilian adviser of the Army Trade School, Hamilton, and a sister, Mrs. John McCrimmon of Toronto.

POLITICAL ECONOMY CLUB DISCUSS WARTIME LABOUR

The Political Economy Club held its second meeting of the year last night at St. Hilda's College. Bill Diamond, Politieal Science IV, read a paper entitled "The Strategic Position of Manpower in a Wartime Economy" and an open discussion followed.



Diamond stressed the necessity of planning in a wartime economy as opposed to the "laisser-faire" conditions of peacetime in a preamble to his analysis of the specific problems of manpower. He emphasized the importance of the munitions worker's role as equal to that of the man in uniform. An active discussion took place following the reading of his paper, in which almost all of those present took part.

UNIVERSITY OF TORONTO

Service of Remembrance and Consecration

November 11th, 1942

IN FRONT OF UNIVERSITY COLLEGE, COMMENCING AT 10.50 A.M.

Conducted by the Alumni Federation of the University of Toronto

HYMN—(One chord will be struck by the band. The whole congregation will sing, led by the Hart House Glee Club.)

O God, our help in ages past,
Our hope for years to come,
Our shelter from the stormy blast,
And our eternal home.

Under the shadow of thy throne
Thy saints have dwelt secure;
Sufficient is thine arm alone,
And our defence is sure.

Before the hills in order stood,
Or earth received her frame,
From everlasting thou art God,
To endless years the same.

Impressive Service Held To Honour Fallen Sons

Dr. Cody, President of the University, Conducts Memorial Ceremony as Both C.O.T.C. Contingents Parade

MATTHEWS TAKES SALUTE

By John William Griffin

Yesterday, Nov. 11, the traditional Remembrance Day service was held on the front campus of the University, under the sponsorship of the University Alumni Federation. Also traditional was the weather and it almost seems, so often has it happened, that the very heavens weep on that day when the dead of the last war and of this are honoured by those who knew them. Last year, and three years ago, the day of the ceremony was bitterly cold with snow in the air; two years ago it rained so hard the service had to be cancelled and a substitute held in Convocation Hall.

Yesterday's ceremony was conducted by Hon. and Rev. H. J. Cody, President of the University, from the platform erected on the front steps of University College. With him on the platform was Hon. Albert Matthews, Lieutenant-Governor of Ontario, and a gathering of University, military and civic notables.

Drawn up on the campus were members of five units of the armed services, arranged in the pattern of a letter U. At the base of the formation were the two largest of these units, the 1st and 2nd battalions of the University of Toronto Contingent, C.O.T.C.

These were commanded respectively by Major M. B. Watson, E.D., and Major W. S. Wallace. On the right arm of the U, and facing west, were the men of No. 1 Canadian Army Course, under the Command of Major M. Howarth. Opposite on the left of the formation, and facing east, were No. 23 Detachment, R.C.A.F., commanded by Flight-Lieut. McMullin, and No. 3 Squadron (University of Toronto) University Air Training Corps, commanded by Lieut. F. L. Hucheson, C.O.T.C.

The service then began with the hymn, so deeply associated with these services at Varsity, "O God, our help in ages past," played by the Brass Band. This was followed by prayers and the reading of the names of those of the University's sons, faculty, graduates and students, who have died on active service within the past year. There were 53 names, almost twice as many as were read last year.

The bugler, stationed near the platform, then sounded Last Post while the parade stood at attention and then came the most solemn moment of the service, the two minutes silence of respect for the dead. The bugler then sounded Reveille, symbolizing that thought many may be dead, there are others ready to awake and carry on the

INTERNATIONAL STUDENTS' DAY

November 11th, 1942.

Late last month, His Excellency, Dr. F. Pavlasek, the Minister of the Czechoslovak Republic to Canada, presented on behalf of the Czechoslovakian students in Great Britain, a request that the University of Toronto should join with the universities of Great Britain and the United States, in commemorating the massacre of the Czechoslovak students in Prague, and the closing of the universities and high schools in Czechoslovakia on November 17th, 1939. A few thousand students perished in the massacre; hundreds were executed or beaten to death; and others were deported to concentration camps, where they were tortured and from which they never returned. This is the official statement of the facts concerning the massacre.

In Great Britain, the 17th of November is being commemorated as an International Students' Day. "An appeal is being made to student solidarity in all nations, that students may honour the brave resistance of their Czechoslovak colleagues and the martyrdom they suffered in defending with their bare hands, the ideals of liberty and democracy against German armed violence." In Albert Hall, London, this commemoration will take the form of a meeting to be addressed by the President of the Czechoslovak Republic, Dr. Benes, and a British Cabinet Minister. The main theme of the addresses will be a protest against the atrocities committed by the Nazis against academic personnel in the Occupied Countries, and the emphasis on freedom of thought as one of the war aims of the United Nations. On November 17th, meetings of the Student Unions in British universities will be held, and two minutes of silence will be observed in memory of the students persecuted or killed by the Axis authorities. In a communication issued by Sir Patrick Duff from the office of the High Commissioner for the United Kingdom at Ottawa, this information is given me. The British Ministry of Information is proposing a special telegram to commemorate this event. In accordance, therefore, with the request of the Czechoslovakian Minister, and in harmony with the desire of the British Ministry of Information, we are arranging for a special commemoration of the Czechoslovakian students who were martyrs for the cause of freedom.

Local conditions make it advisable for us to hold the service here on November 16, at 4:15 p.m. in Convocation Hall. The students whose death is immediately commemorated really stand as representatives of all students in the democratic countries over-run by the

Guard Duke Or Chase Soph Among The Duties Of Campus Cop

By Frank Rasky

"When constabulary duty's to be done, to be done,
A Policeman's lot is not a happy one,
happy one."

Let Gilbert and Sullivan sing what they will, but Police Chief Robert D'arcy will have you know that the 24 years during which he has patrolled the campus grounds have been packed with happy events. And it is with a mellow memory that he recalls his duties which have included anything from scolding freshmen swiping light bulbs to guarding the grounds from fire and theft.

A smile creased his face yesterday as Chief D'arcy remembered that exciting event in the '20's when he acted as guard of honour for Edward, Prince of Wales, who visited Hart House to play a few games of squash.

"We told city reporters and photographers that the Prince was not to be bothered," said Chief D'arcy, "but they persisted in waiting outside near the archway until he should leave."

"We fooled them, though," chuckled the Chief. "While the newshawks weren't looking we smuggled the Prince through another entrance and drove him down Devonshire Place. The Prince was quite grateful."

Leaving the army as sergeant-major, Chief D'arcy joined the University Patrol in 1919 as ordinary constable, working with two other men. As the grounds of the University expanded, however, a fourth constable was employed.

"Recently," said Chief D'arcy, "one of my men joined the Canadian Dental Corps. This has left us short-handed—especially since it is now impossible to hire an able-bodied man." The Chief sighed. "That's evolution for you," he said. "I start working here with a staff of three and wind up supervising a staff of three."

In a general way the Chief has a lot of fun patrolling the grounds, especially as he believes students "are a fine bunch, more co-operative than citizens on a city beat." His staff, which guards the University night and day on three shifts, claim the beat has been pretty mild since extreme initiations have been eliminated.

The University police force receives co-operation from the city police, Chief D'arcy said, and if there are special functions at the arena or Hart House, the staff is supplemented by city police squads. Should a student run afoul of the law downtown, the case is handed over to the University Caput.

Chief D'arcy thinks there is nothing more interesting than to observe the yearly change in the University grounds. When he arrived here in November, 1919, Hart House had just been officially opened by the Duke of Devonshire. Since then the Chief has seen more than a dozen buildings—ranging from the University Press to Simcoe Hall—mushroom into existence.

"For on old-timer like myself it's sometimes pretty bewildering," said Chief D'arcy. "Every year I look around a new building springs up."

International Student Day To Be Celebrated Monday By University In Service

U. of T. to Take Part in World-Wide Demonstration to Commemorate the Massacre of Prague Students

CZECH MINISTER TO SPEAK

A special service in commemoration of the massacre of university students at Prague, Czechoslovakia, in 1939, will be held in Convocation Hall, Monday, Nov. 16 at 4:15 p.m. This service, which was requested by Dr. F. Pavlasek, Czech Minister to Canada, is to be in connection with a world-wide display by universities all over the world and is to be known as International Students' Day. At the ceremony Dr. Pavlasek will be the principal speaker.

Professor B. Wilkinson of the History Department will speak on the contribution of the Czechs to civilization and Professor H. Wasteneys of the Department of Biochemistry will speak briefly on imprisoned and persecuted students throughout the world. A musical program of Czech and Polish music under the direction of Dr. Healey Willan will follow.

There are three aims of this world-wide university display, John Wood, chairman of the Committee for this International Students' Day, told The Varsity yesterday: (1) as a protest against the atrocities displayed opposing education; (2) as an emphasis of the participation of students in the effort; and (3) as an emphasis of one of the main war aims of the United Nations, that of free thought. Wood said, "This should make us realize how fortunate we are and more than anything else, increase the solidarity between ourselves and the other universities of the world."

International Students' Day is to be celebrated in free universities all over the world with Dr. Eduard Benes, President of the Czech Republic, speaking from Albert Hall, in London, over a world-wide BBC hookup at 8:15 p.m. on Nov. 17.

This commemoration was held for the first time last year in universities over the world and it was particularly well carried out in England where the following declaration was drawn up, "Realizing that the triumph of Fascism means among other things the death of cultures everywhere and the destruction of the brotherhood of unfettered learning, we free students give solemn promise to do all that is in our power to crush this brutal Fascist violence and

MEMORIAL SERVICE

A service, in commemoration of the Massacre of Czechoslovak students by the Nazis in 1939, will be held at 4:15 p.m. on Monday, Nov. 16, in Convocation Hall. Addresses will be delivered by His Excellency Dr. F. Pavlasek and by Professors B. Wilkinson and H. Wasteneys. President Cody will preside. There will be a Recital of Polish and Czechoslovak Music, under direction of Professor Healey Willan, including three Biblical songs (Dvorak) to be sung by Evaleen Kilby. Admission free. The public cordially invited.

Mathematicians Revolutionize War Production

"Engineering is not a science, it is an art that takes the results of the sciences and applies them to practical problems," R. F. Legget, assistant professor of Civil Engineering, said in a talk to the Maths and Physics Society yesterday.

He went on to say that the connection between engineering problems on the one hand, and mathematical and physical investigation on the other was very much closer than is generally realized either by mathematicians or by engineers who in some cases tend to talk of mathematics somewhat distainfully. As an example of this complete interdependence Prof. Legget showed how closely the recent very successful study of foundations and soil physics had been affected by research in higher mathematics and in "pure" physics.

"Another higher-mathematics subject that has revoluntionized a branch of industry is the mathematical theory of probability applied to quality tests in the turning out of parts for the war industries," Prof. Legget continued, explaining how formerly every single item used to be checked minutely and how this wasteful method had now been replaced by the testing, on a statistical basis, of only a few samples per day. This has in many cases resulted in a uniform improvement in quality, great cost reduction and the freeing of labour for other purposes.

Graduates of U.B.C. Given Homecoming Party

Vancouver, Nov. 11—(CUP)—University of British Columbia students recently welcomed graduates back to school in the University's fourth wartime Homecoming celebration which lasted one complete day and embraced all phases of university life.

After a luncheon, alumni and undergraduates were spectators at a rugger game between U.B.C. and the Navy. This was followed by relay races, a rugby game and a banquet.

In the evening the celebration featured a concert, a radio skit called "The Shooting of Dan McGrew," a Noel Coward play, a sing-song accompanied by a swing quartet and finally a monster dance.

THIEVES INVADE WHITNEY

Thieves last night entered Cody House, Whitney Hall, and stole a total of $21 from the rooms of three girls, all living on the second floor. It has not been determined exactly how and at what time the thefts took place but it is thought that the intruder got in during the dinner hour.

The loss was immediately reported to Miss Marion B. Ferguson, Dean of Women. The University Police are investigating the matter.

This theft is the first reported from the University College Women's residence for two years.

This University will join Monday in the world-wide observance of International Students' Day, to commemorate the young men and women of the University of Prague who fell victim to shocking Nazi brutality in the autumn of 1939.

We add our voice to that of the President in strongly urging that students attend the Convocation Hall ceremonies. Just as we stood in silence yesterday in honour of our own gallant dead, we should be ready to pay generous tribute to the memory of fellow-students of tortured Europe who preceded us into the anti-totalitarian war. Their example is a noble one from which we can learn much of steadfastness and stark courage.

Featured speaker during the observance will be Dr. F. Pavlasek, Czechoslovak Minister to Canada. Other speakers will include Dr. B. Wilkinson of the Department of History and Dr. H. Wasteneys of the Department of Biochemistry. Highlight to some will be the performance of Dr. Healey Willan's new motet: O King unto Whom all things do live, under the direction of the composer.

But it is not for the actual ceremonies that we should attend the commemoration; but for the spiritual values it will entail. If we fail in paying honour to the tragically fallen university students of Prague we fail in adherence to the very principles for which we fight; principles for which Prague victims fell. But if we offer sincere tribute to them we will find ourselves rededicating our spirit to the struggle. The way will be long, and we can afford to lose no opportunity of strengthening the moral fibre which we need to carry on to ultimate victory.

The murder of the Prague students was not merely a piece of wanton brutality; they were shot as active enemies of the Nazi state. Few of them bore arms, but the Germans were quick to realize the greater menace of a group of people standing together solidly, secure in their complete knowledge of the principles for which they stood, and menacing because of their ability to make those principles absolutely clear to themselves and to the people around them.

As exponents of the democratic cause the students of the University of Prague were a real danger to their conquerors, and there is no doubt that Hitler considered that the bullets fired on Nov. 17, 1939, were well spent. It is doubtful whether he would consider it equally worthwhile to use valuable lead in shooting down students of the University of Toronto.

We do not seek to minimize the part which this university—or any institute of higher learning in Canada—is playing in the nation's war effort. We do not forget the thousands of university men who are in uniform today, particularly those whose names appeared in yesterday's issue. We could not possibly overlook the steady flow of skilled technicians and professional men from the campus to vital posts in an industrial system which is being geared for victory.

But their position is not the same. Those in uniform do not fight as students; they fight as physical combatants and their academic background tends to become submerged on the battlefield. We will not soon forget them; but the qualities of a fighting man are not specifically to be acquired on the campus.

Nor are pure technicians dangerous as the Czech students were dangerous. They are efficient cogs in a war machine, but unless they have considerable intellectual backbone, they might quite easily be adapted to a new order, as have some of the unfortunate technicians of France.

Few universities on this continent have shown signs of becoming intellectual arsenals of democracy. By and large, while willing enough to fight, students are far less interested in discussions of what they are fighting for. Even in wartime, interest in debates and discussion groups has not yet begun to compete with interest in social events and athletic contests. In many courses, this is explained by the policy of stuffing the student's timetable so full of lecture hours that his brain can deal with nothing more profound than a football game or a popular dance record when off duty. It is scarcely to be wondered at, then, that he is not over-anxious to tackle the problems of the world outside of his own small and specialized field.

But next week we pause to remember students who found these problems sufficiently interesting to lose their lives as punishment for meddling in affairs which they considered of vital importance to themselves and their jailors considered none of their concern. It is ardently to be hoped that students throughout the world will make those affairs their concern in the years to come.

Undemocratic?

We are in receipt of a letter, reproduced below, from two students of the School of Social Work, drawing university students' attention to what is apparently an example of undemocratic procedure in the city of Toronto.

They have concerned themselves with the circulation of a petition among students to take the form of a "Statement of Opinion to the Toronto Police Commission." The notice to which student signatures are requested runs :Any discrimination against citizens on the basis of colour, we view as a direct threat to the democracy for which we are fighting. We strongly urge that the Commission recommend to the City Council that such discrimination be made an offence punishable by law.

Correspondence

Editor,
The Varsity.

Dear Sir:

Recently several university students were present at a local dance hall where they witnessed an incident disturbing enough to warrant serious public consideration. The incident amounted to the refusal of the proprietor to allow certain people admittance into the dance. The reason was not because of misconduct or disorderly behaviour on their part. He refused them admittance because they were "coloured."

The irony of it all was that a Negro band was featured. Apparently these Negroes were accepted because they contributed to the white man's entertainment. The whole affair must not be minimized. We have learned by bitter experience that a violation of certain fundamental rights anywhere constitutes a direct threat to our own liberty. This incident is particularly significant because it does not stand in isolation. It is the expression of the same Anti-Democratic attitude which refuses to tolerate the presence of Marian Anderson and Paul Robeson in the same place that receives hospitably travelling liquor salesmen and casual pleasure-seekers. It is this same attitude that prevents Negroes from using their full skill in contributing to the war effort—a war effort dedicated to the freedom of all peoples. It is the elements harboring these feelings that have repeatedly accused Negroes of failing to contribute their full share to the war effort.

The case is being taken up by a committee of those people who are affected; amongst whom is a young Negro graduate of the Law School of the University of Michigan. On Monday, he goes into the R.C.A.F. to fight—perhaps to die— for ethnic democracy. This Tuesday he appears with the committee to present their case before the Toronto Police Commission.

We hope that the recommendation that the Police Commission make will be dictated by a recognition of the ultimate purpose of our united war effort. The City Council has the power to make anti-democratic discrimination an offence. In British Columbia, the supreme court has ruled that discrimination of this kind is unlawful.

A statement of opinion is being circulated for signatures and will be presented to the commission on Thursday. It is our hope that those who recognize the importance of expressing their opinion on this matter will write to the Toronto Police Commission — Mr. Palmer Kent, Secretary, c/o City Hall.

Sincerely yours,

Walter Lyons,
II Social Work,

Bill Weinstein,
I Social Work.

ART and MUSIC

Opera Comes to Toronto

Rigoletto

With the presentation of Rigoletto last night, Toronto's ten days of opera opened at Massey Hall, and, surprisingly enough, if this offering may be taken as a criterion of the rest, this series should be well worthwhile. Of course, there were bad spots, first night calamities: chairs obstructed the lowering of the curtain and the audience saw still warm corpses rising; there were off pitch notes; but the general performance was good.

The best voice in the cast is that of the Duke (Mario Palermo) whose rich tenor shone forth splendidly among the sometimes buzzy baritones and addled altos. The heroine, Gilda of the long fair tresses (Luisa Coronina), did a sastifactory job as the sweet, timid coloratura. Rigoletto himself (Alfred Chigi) was a convincingly suffering jester and father, whose attemps to save his daughter Gilda from the rascally Duke and finally to avenge her, fail tragically. The supporting cast is quite adequate.

A good deal of the pleasure came, admittedly, from the recognition of well-known arias. Act IV for this reason, then, gave most delight since it abounds in bath-tub favourites, such as the lyrical La Donna e Mobile. The famous quartet is in this act, too.

By all means go to see at least one of these performances while this company is in town. It may not give you the talent or finish that the Metropolitan would, but it's a good substitute.

Dentists Toppled By Trinity 13-6

Artsmen Show 1941 Mulock Cup Form in First Win of this Season by Defeating Molarmen

BEATTY SPARKS VICTORY

The once-potent Trinity gridders stopped being the doormats of their group long enough to hand Dents a 13-6 drubbing yesterday for their first victory of the season.

Trinity scored on the first play of the game and were never in serious danger afterwards. Bill Hambly was rouged on Norm Beatty's kick-off after he had fumbled. Dents immediately came back fighting and made yards on three bucks. Then Hambly completed a pass to Bob Murray, but the Trinity line stiffened. Hambly's kick rolled to the Trinity 15. Dents attack weakened then until the end of the half. After Mills had intercepted a Dents' forward, Beatty made 35 yards on two plunges to move the ball to Dents' 25. Hambly intercepted an end-run lateral to relieve the pressure temporarily, but Aird and Beatty moved the markers three times in a row to bring the ball back to the Garnet and Blue 30. The quarter ended with Allman running Beatty's kick out of the end zone.

The second quarter brought the score to 7-1 as John Aird hit the line for Trinity's first major this season, converted by Beatty, and Mills was rouged in the Trinity end zone after two Hambly to Murray passes had brought the ball to scoring position. At the start of the second half Dents continued the style of play that had earned them their first point. From their own 30 yard line, on three consecutive first downs, Bill Hambly and Clay Cummings completed three of the most perfect passing plays this year. On the first successful sneaker this season, Cummings picked up 40 yards. Another completed forward and the ball went to Trinity's 23, and on the next play Clay Cummings crossed the line standing up with Dentistry's first touch this year. Dents elected to continue this dividend-paying system, but Aird intercepted a pass on Dents' 40. A penalty was given the Dentists here for a fake substitution which tried to conceal a sneaker play. From 15 yards out Beatty attempted a placement. Murray was rouged on the wide try to make the score 8-6. Trinity then pulled off the second sneaker of the day when Beatty loomed out of the 6 o'clock dusk to snare Tim Mills heave and gain 35 yards. Mills and Aird combined to move the ball to the Dents' 8 when the quarter ended.

Trinity gambled on an onside kick but Dents relieved the pressure by recovering on their own 4. After an exchange of kicks however, Tim Mills ploughed through centre for Trinity's second touch that was not converted after two attempts. The game ended with Trinity over Dents by 13-6.

For Trinity, Beatty was a standout both at plunging and running back kicks. Aird and Mills shared stardom with Beatty for their devastating charges through the Dents line which earned each of them a touchdown. Dents lacked the services of capable Bob Fergueson but in his absence, Bill Hambly and Bob Murray played one of their best games.

Trinity—Campbell, Mitchell, Stinson, Lockson, Lamb, Lawton, Cartwright, Gibson, Aird, Mills, Brooks, Beatty, Elliott, Davies, Spence, Smith, Sheppard, Somerville, Crawford.

Dents — Wood, Jenkins, Hugbon, Wright, Turner, Murray, Hambly, Green, Allman, Cummings, Irons, Corcoran, Nolan, Faulkner.

Speaking Of Sport

By Bud Smith

DID WE SAY SCHODL?

As our memory serves us, we recall that a few weeks ago in a desperate search for something to say, we hazarded a guess that Senior School would trot off with the Mulock Cup and all the glory and gravy that goes with it. That was all very well and all that. We have a habit of picking School to win things. And we might say that School has a habit of winning things. For a while all was quite calm and serene in our little dream world of football prognostication. School did quite well thank you. They overwhelmed Vic 6-5. They simply ran all over Junior School 7-3. And they blasted Meds 3-1. Which happenings were all very blasting and all very blasphemous and stuff. But then our little dream house collapsed about our tattered locks.

It seems that there is a part of the University known as Victoria College. Its whereabouts is strictly heresay. No one, to our knowledge, had yet survived a return trip to Victoria from the centre of college life, the Hart House poolroom up until a few years ago. In fact, it is rumoured that Capt. Scott was given the choice of either making an expedition to the South Pole or to Victoria College, and took his last fatal journey to the Antarctic as the easier of the two. Of course nowadays what with the aeroplane, etc., it is no trick at all to go to Vic and back in a couple of weeks; and Vic inhabitants are no longer occasioning the curiosity they caused when they first appeared on the back campus back in 1933. Even the fact of their having a rugby team, just like civilized colleges, is accepted as a matter of course by the average undergraduate.

Well to get back to the rugby league from which we have wandered far afield. The bunch of characters that make up the "Scarlet and Gold Aggregation" must have undergone a complete metamorphosis in the past few days. Perhaps queer things are happening in the unknown land of Victoria! Anyway, Monday the result of all this fell metamorphosizing by Vic took effect. Our dearly beloved Senior School team was "edged out" by Vic 13-0. Mind you it was a close game. Vic had to come from behind in the last four quarters to take the verdict! But nevertheless it was definitely a defeat for School, no matter how close the game may have been. As a matter of fact it was darn close to School's goal-line throughout practically the whole game.

Now we are wondering what is going to happen to our unprophetic predictions. Of course from a casual glance things seem fairly serene. School is still tied for first place. Vic is back in second place and will have to win the rest to get in the play-offs. But a closer inspection reveals that all is not serene. Vic is now playing up to last season's form and that's better football than any other team in the league can show. Their great margin of superiority on Monday was no fluke. And this margin of superiority is likely to continue. School is likely to become somewhat disorganized. There is no chance of Don Crosskurth coming back and he represented a lot of their offensive strength in our opinion. Jack Plaxton has one more game to play and then he also will pass from the picture to play for Navy. So things do not look very bright for the Engineers. Their defence is fairly steady; but outside of the plunging of McIntyre their offensive strength is certainly not tremendous. On Monday they were unable to get any sustained drive started. Their fumbling may or may not have been a local condition. They haven't had the benefit of a coach for quite a few days. So, all in all, we wouldn't advise anyone to bet on School too heavily.

Throughout this discourse no mention whatsoever has been made of any other looming contender for the glory and the gravy. Senior Meds are a very good team indeed, and are improving as time goes on. Well it should be a merry little scramble before the Cup picks its destination, and the forthcoming games will be well worth watching. We picked Senior School and we are sticking with them, but they have to improve over Monday's showing if our little dream world is going to become a reality.

Revolver Shooting To Be Featured On Renovated Rifle Club Ranges

By Don Kempthorne

Each weekday night, at 4 o'clock for some months to come, a group of earnest young men will be seen descending the stairway past the Hart House Key Office, filing by a heavy steel gate and going still lower, entering the "Little Maginot" of Hart House. The young men are members of the University of Toronto Rifle Association, and the fortress they enter is the Hart House Rifle Range.

During the following two hours, revolver shooting is practiced, with the twofold purpose of enjoying a competitive sport and more seriously, preparing a man to defend his life in combat.

Since its formation in 1920, the Rifle Association has provided instruction in the art of rifle shooting, but owing to the large number of club members who are potential officer material in the C. O.T.C. and who will carry only a revolver, it was decided this year to concentrate on the small weapon—how to shoot fast and first.

A feature which strikes the new member at once is the strong emphasis laid on safety. A weapon so easily tossed about and discharged as the revolver is bound to be dangerous, and thus a strict set of rules has been drawn up for the prevention of accidents. In addition the ranges, completely renovated this summer, are models of the newest and safest in target equipment—with bullet-proof glass for observing targets and concrete backstops.

At present, emphasis is being laid on the fundamentals of shooting. In a few weeks interfaculty competition will begin, with several valuable trophies at stake. Dr. Lucas, the club's leader and instructor, in a humorous moment put up for handicap competition a bust of a female of uncertain nationality, which he christened Kongo Kate. To qualify for this trophy, a man must shoot 90 out of a possible 150.

At long last the end is in view, and to think it even SNOWED yesterday. But, believe it or not, yesterday saw the semi-final match between Virginia McLeod and Jean Herwell played, with Virginia taking it 6-1, 6-2. The finals will be played tomorrow, the exact hour we will let you know anon. Virginia Kitto is the other finalist, so it should be a real fray, and one worthy of a good audience. So everyone who possibly can, should wander over to St. Hilda's courts and watch the gals bat the tennis ball around and we sincerely hope there won't be any snow-balls flying around.

Those who dropped into O.C.E. last night saw quite a mixture of basketball. The first game between O.T. and Vic Freshies ended in a 4-4 draw. Definitely the shooting was not all it might have been, and this, coupled with sloppy passing, resulted in a basket each half per team. Ruth Thomson played well for O.T. while Mary Coleman did her bit for Vic.

The second game saw last year's finalists, P.H.E., defeat St. Hilda's Srs. 28-6. A much better brand of basketball was displayed, probably due to the teams' greater experience. The smooth combination of Davis (9), Stinson (10) and Kitto (4) led the P.H.E. attack, while Jean Barnhardt stood out on the defence. Kitty Storey and Betty McLean were the best for the Saints.

For those of you who don't relish the thought of standing out-doors to watch the tennis, we recommend a visit to O.C.E. any time after 5:30. You will be sure to see some good basketball.

FRENCH CANADA DISCUSSED BY NEWMAN FRENCH CLUB

A meeting of the Newman French Club was held at Newman Hall last night.

Mr. Albert Fauchey, student in economics, led a discussion on the current article in Life entitled "French Canada." They agreed that it gave an entirely false impression of the Catholic Church in Quebec.

The choice of "O Canada" for our Canadian National Anthem as opposed to "God Save the King" was also discussed. "O Canada" was approved as the more purely Canadian of the two, but the subject was left open.

ONE OF OUR PROFESSORS, who always seemed to be such a nice guy, was dispensing pearls of wisdom concerning a certain disease—and he finished his remarks with these words: "But lately, the mortality has been terribly low."

Well, don't gloom about it old mon.

The Minnesota Daily ran a headline that told us this amazing news: "CO-ED DORMS OUT OF BOUNDS FOR SAILORS."

Aw, gee, every day new rules.

And in the same fine newspaper we read: "JUG'S AT STAKE IN WAR HOMECOMING."

This is worth fighting for!

This business of realism in air raid tests is a good thing, but when the Connecticut Campus tells us that "SIX BUILDINGS TO BE BOMBED ON CAMPUS SATURDAY" we feel that things are beginning to get just a little out of hand.

Perhaps some of our readers have their own pet names for C.O.T.C. drill or Camp Niagara—but the best we've heard yet is the U.S. Army Officer Candidates' name for the Engineer Officers' School at Fort Belvoir, Va., where saints curse and tough army sergeants cry at the end of a day's work—they call it, lovingly, "Alcatraz-on-the-Potomac."

A headline in the University of Washington says: "MAN ENTERS FROSH RACE."

S'matter, fellas, ain't frosh human?

One of our colleagues (and we used to think he was such a nice boy, too) wrote a headline for a story last week, that said: MEDICAL EXAMS BY NOVEMBER 14.

Don't say those things. They frighten me.

Down at Baylor University, in Texas, The Lariat runs a headline which says: "FORMER BEAR IS COWBOY."

Manpower shortage, eh fellas?

Our nomination for the meanest man in town is the person who labels all taps in the Hart House showers "COLD."

But (horrible thought) maybe he isn't kidding.

A student at Purdue pulled the prize publicity stunt some weeks ago when he sat, Yogi style, with his legs around his neck, perched on the iron railing in front of a building during most of one Saturday. An agreement had been reached that he would receive a dollar an hour for this advertising gag.

People will do just about anything to pay their fees.

PART I

(54) A.R.P. LECTURE

The sixth lecture of the course in Civilian Defence (A.R.P.) will be held in Room 101, BIOLOGY BUILDING, on Thursday, Nov. 12, at 4 p.m. Subject: Personal Protection against Gas. Lecturer: Prof. F. R. Lorriman. A white blackout practice will be held following the lecture under the University Section Warden, Mr. A. J. Butlin.

(55) FOOD ADMINISTRATION

The sixth lecture of the course in Emergency Feeding will be held in the Food Chemistry lecture room, Household Science Building, promptly at 4 p.m. on Thursday, Nov. 12. Subject: Protection of Food Against Poison Gas. Lecturer: Mrs. Ernest Lee, National Commandant, Food Administration Section, C.R.C.C.

(56) DRILL

Weather permitting, drill will be held under the instruction of R.S.M. Andrews, C.O.T.C., at the Trinity Field, on Saturday, Nov. 14, promptly at 11:45 a.m.

(57) UNIFORMS

Members who have not yet obtained their uniforms or who have not yet paid for same, will report to the S.A.C. Office, Hart House, as soon as possible. Members who were unable to obtain cap in correct size will also report to arrange for exchange.

(58) W.S.T.D. BADGES

Members in possession of old uniforms will note that W.S.T.D. arm badges are now obsolete. New badges will be drawn immediately from the S.A.C. office, Hart House.

(59) DRESS

All members will wear prescribed uniform, dress, tie, cap, and dark, low-heeled shoes all day Tuesday and Thursday, from this date, except when specially excused. Members whose Corps lectures or duty fall on other days, will wear uniforms only on those days. When in uniform, members will take particular care that hair is neat and secured so as to clear the collar.

In connection with the celebration of International Students' Day Mr. Pavlasek will give a short speech during the "Serenade for Strings" program, to be broadcast over stations CBL and CBY next Monday from 8:05 to 8:30 p.m.

Col. Hutnik, Czechoslovakian military attache in Canada, who witnessed the massacre, will also give a short speech. Both speakers will speak in English and French. The "Serenade for Strings" will also probably include some Czech music.

U.C. LECTURE

The first in the autumn series of University College Lectures will be delivered by Professor Ernest J. Simmons of Cornell University, in Hart House Theatre at 5 p.m. on Wednesday, Nov. 18. Subject: Tolstoy and Russia Today. Admission free. The public cordially invited.

enemy, who have suffered and are suffering at the hands of their oppressors.

I am glad to say that His Excellency, Dr. Pavlasek, the Minister of the Czechoslovak Republic to Canada, will be present himself and will deliver an address. This will be followed by an address by Professor B. Wilkinson of the Department of History, and a short address by Professor H. Wasteneys on imprisoned and persecuted students throughout the world. Thereupon there will be a recital of Czechoslovak and Polish music under the direction of Professor Healey Willan.

I earnestly hope that the members of the staff and especially members of the student body will attend in large numbers to show their sympathy with their martyred fellows and to pledge again their devotion to the ideals of freedom, justice, mercy and truth.

This was followed by further prayers and the National Anthem, during which all officers stood at the salute. When the benediction had been given, the March Past commenced.

The parade led west past University College, around the campus and north through the Memorial Tower. For the March Past, at which the salute was taken by the Lieutenant-Governor, the Brass Band, from its position in front of the platform, played "The Blue and White," Regimental March Past of the C.O.T.C., followed by "Colonel Bogey" and "Soldiers of the Queen."

The parade was led by the Pipe Band, which did not, however, begin to play until it had passed the Memorial Tower.

At the screen beside the tower a Guard was mounted in battle dress, greatcoat, skeleton web and steel helmets, under the command of Sergeant-Major J. Ironside (W.O. 2). With arms reversed and bowed heads it kept watch from 10:45 to 11:45 a.m.

Many of the large crowd of students probably noticed the uniform worn by the Brass Band. This service dress, with the white band on the forage cap is worn by all ranks of the C.O.T.C. in peace-time, but the last occasion on which it appeared in numbers (until the band was issued with it last month) was at the Remembrance Day service in 1939—the first year of the war.

Before and after the service the carillon in the Memorial Tower was played by J. Leland Richardson, university Carilloneur. Before the commencement of the service a single large bell was tolled.

Vic Parliament Opens Monday

"Resolved that Victory Abroad will mean Revolution at Home" will be the subject discussed at the formal opening on Monday night at 8 p.m. of the Victoria College Debating Parliament. John Dales, the Prime Minister, supported by Phyllis McKenzie, will uphold the affirmative side of the argument, and they will be opposed by Marg Dillon and Norm Sisco. The result will be based on the decision of the house.

Dr. W. T. Brown, Chancellor of Victoria College, acting as Lieutenant Governor, will deliver the speech from the throne. At this opening meeting the speaker for the year will be elected and invested in his robe of office. Officials of the Parliament revealed that the mace has been re-gilded and the speaker's hat artistically re-decorated for this special occasion.

The Minister of the Interior will provide refreshments after the session, which will be free for all who take part in the discussion from the floor following the debate.

New S.A.C. Committee To Consider All Petitions

Petitions to the Students' Administrative Council should be submitted in future to the chairman of the Students' Service Committee of the S.A.C., Council Vice-president Gord Bell, announced yesterday.

This committee, under the chairmanship of Jim Cawley, IV S.P.S., will consider petitions to the S.A.C., and act in an advisory capacity to student groups submitting such petitions, as well as reporting to the Council as to action recommended in each case.

Medical Student Group Elects National Officers At Meeting Of Delegates

Stu Robinson, IV Meds, Is CAMSI President for Coming Year; Hazel, Dalziel Are Also Elected

TO CONVENE AT TORONTO

The national executive of the Canadian Association of Medical Students and Internes was elected yesterday at a meeting of Toronto delegates to the national convention held two weeks ago at the University of Western Ontario. As next year's convention will be held at Toronto, the executive for the year is composed of University of Toronto students.

National president for the year will be Stuart Robinson, IV Meds, vice-president and secretary-treasurer will be Howard Hazel and Doug Dalziel respectively.

The new president was head of his high school student parliament, has been an interfaculty swimming and waterpolo champion and is the present treasurer of the Medical Society. Howard Hazel is described by the former chairman of the CAMSI committee as possessing an initiative and executive energy which will prove a great asset to Toronto and all medical schools in Canada. The secretary-treasurer, Doug Dalziel, was last year's chairman of the co-operative committee of the CAMSI and through a survey already made has elaborate plans for starting a Book and Instrument Exchange for medical students.

McGill Students Observe Nov. 17

Montreal, Nov. 12 — (CUP) — The student body of McGill will join the free universities of the world to commemorate Nov. 17 as a memorial for the Czech students who were massacred three years ago.

An open meeting under the sponsorship of the Students' Executive Council will be held at Moyse Hall at 5:00 p.m. Nov. 17. The speaker will be Colonel Hutnik, Officer Commanding the Czechoslovak Forces in Canada. Col. Hutnik was in Praha during the massacres and later managed to escaped to France and Great Britain. Messages on behalf of the faculty and students will also be given at the meeting.

Athlone to Visit McMaster Soon

Hamilton, Nov. 12 — (CUP) — His Excellency, the Earl of Athlone, Governor-General of the Dominion of Canada, will attend a parade and morning convocation on Friday, Dec. 11, it was announced by the Chancellor of McMaster University.

It is His Excellency's wish that his visit be mainly for undergraduates. Because of inadequate accommodation, it is possible that admission will be limited to those in the senior years. Although definite details of the parade have not yet been worked out, it is probable that the various units in the University, the C.O.T.C., the U.A.T.C., the C.R.C.C., and the Radio Technicians will appear in uniform on the occasion of His Excellency's visit.

UNIVERSITY OF WASHINGTON CUTS DOWN FORMAL DANCES

Seattle, Nov. 12 — A semi-formal "Varsity Night" has been announced by the University of Washington student council here for the evening of Dec. 4. This affair will take the place of this campus' formal Varsity Ball. The move is in line with a policy of replacing formal off-campus affairs with informal affairs on the campus.

Noted Doctor Is Saturday's R.C.I. Lecturer

The topic of the Royal Canadian Institute lecture, Saturday evening in Convocation Hall at 8:15 p.m., will be "The Life Blood." The lecture will be given by William Boyd, M.D., F.R.C.P., Professor of Pathology and Bacteriology at the University of Toronto.

Dr. Boyd is a graduate of the University of Edinburgh where he received his M.B. and Ch.B. in 1908, his M.D. in 1911 and his Diploma in Psychiatry in 1912. During the last war he served as Captain in the 3rd Field Ambulance, 46th Division of the Imperial Forces. He was Professor of Pathology at the University of Manitoba from 1915-1937 and also Pathologist at the Winnipeg General Hospital.

Dr. Boyd's lecture will deal with the blood in health and disease. He will point out the importance of blood in carrying water, food and oxygen to the various parts of the body and regulating the temperature. He will discuss briefly the questions of anaemia, of haemorrhage, and of blood transfusion.

Local Journalist Speaks on Soviet

Soviet Russia, as we are gradually beginning to know and understand her, was the theme of a talk given by Raymond A. Davies, co-author of Soviet Asia and foreign correspondent of Saturday Night, MacLean's, and the Star Weekly, at the fortnightly meeting of the International Affairs Club Wednesday afternoon.

Touching on the highlights of Russian life, Mr. Davies commented on the fact that complex as it is under the communist system, it is yet thoroughly organized in a manner characteristic of the people. The communities built around the factories are like small towns, and are responsible for their individual education, hospitalization, recreation, and so on. In the country too, Mr. Davies pointed out, collective farming has produced numerous "communities" which are in a sense self-sufficient.

"The leaders of the bolshevist revolution," stated Mr. Davies, "were far-sighted and began to give the young people a new, abstract ideal." This ideal grew up with them through education which was for the first time made compulsory. As far as universities go, the government offers free admission—though on a scholastically competitive basis—and allows a living stipend to the students. Before 1917, professional teachers and doctors were brought into the country, and were thus a limited accessibility. Now they are numerous, and Russia has improved as a result. Advanced research and experimentation is being carried on, Raymond told the club.

But Soviet Russia's success has not come easily, the speaker pointed out. Poverty has had to be contended with; and although the government guarantees a job for any worker and retirement with old-age pension after the age of 55, the standard of living has been low in general. "Morality," the speaker maintained, however, "has been developed in Russia and is high, despite impressions to the contrary. The church, because it was a corrupt part of the Czarist regime, was thrown out; but it is gradually being returned to by many people, though the majority are still essentially atheistic."

Willan Plays Own Work At Service

Dr. Healey Willan, University of Toronto Organist, has arranged his regular bi-weekly Monday recital in Convocation Hall to be a part of the International Students' Day memorial service to the students of Czechoslovakia who were massacred by the Germans.

Dr. Willan has arranged to have the Choir of the Church of St. Mary Magdalene assist him throughout his recital. Their first number will be a Motet, "O King Unto Whom All Things Do Live," by Dr. Willan himself, and the performance will be dedicated to the memory of the Czechoslovakian students.

RECITAL PROGRAM

Following is the program of the recital of Czechoslovak and Polish music to be conducted by Professor Healey Willan during the International Students' Day observance ceremonies in Convocation Hall Monday.

1. Funeral March — Chopin
2. Motet: O King unto whom all things do live — Willan
   The Choir of the Church of S. Mary Magdalene
3. At the Hero's Grave — Dvorak
4. Three Biblical Songs — Dvorak

Coeds to Serve At School Dinner

Bolstered by an emergency draft of 30 waitresses from on and off the campus, the annual School Dinner will be held next Thursday as planned, M. J. Aykroyd, Dinner Committee chairman, announced last night.

Threatened with cancellation on account of labour shortage, the dinner was saved when committee members issued a call for experienced waitresses from the student body. The 40 university girls applying were interviewed by Miss Ransom, chief dietician of Hart House and about half of their number was accepted. Others were obtained outside the University.

True to a promise made in their recruiting campaign, the committee plan to throw a party for the emergency waitresses in the near future. Details of this affair are still tentative.

Some of the girls have agreed to be on call in case of similar needs in the future, Hart House officials announced.

Armed Forces Exhibition In Hart House Art Gallery To Be Opened Tomorrow

Entries From All Branches of Service Total 227, Warden J. R. Gilley Reveals in Radio Address

WORK IN ALL MEDIUMS

The Canadian Armed Forces Exhibition will be opened in the Hart House Art Gallery tomorrow by H. O. McCurry, Director of The National Art Gallery, Warden J. R. Gilley stated last night in a radio address on the Exhibition over the CBC. As far as is known, this marks the first organized effort in Canada during this war to give members of the Armed Forces who draw and paint in their spare time an opportunity to show their work, he said.

The Warden revealed that 227 entries have come in from every branch of the services. There are paintings and sketches in every medium—oils, water-colour, pastel, tempera, pen and ink, crayon and pencil.

Speaking of the subject matter which will be seen, Mr. Gilley said that for the most part the pictures relate to the artists' experience on active duty. Apart from landscapes and portraits, they show troops in training, army manoeuvres, naval vessels, a sailing ship, a flying field, planes in formation, the interior of a soldiers' hut, and engineering worshop.

"Admirable work has been done by some who have had little or no training," Mr. Gilley added. "A few of these have expressed the desire that instruction may be made available to them. We hope, that as a result of this exhibition, a wide interest in this and similar activities in the Forces may be aroused and that such leisure time diversions may be recognized as making a valuable contribution to the morale of the services."

Armstrong Series Begins Monday

The fourth series of the annual Armstrong lectures will be held Nov. 16 and 17 at 5 p.m. in Victoria College Chapel. This lectureship, endowed in 1938 by the late Mr. George H. Armstrong, deals with educational and religious subjects.

This year the speaker is to be Professor John Hughes, head of the Department of Education at McGill University. The lectures will deal with educational values, under the titles "Heritages from the Past" and "Contributions of the University and the School."

In previous years, the speakers have been Professor A. J. Wace of Cambridge, Professor W. C. Hocking of Harvard, and Mr. Lester B. Pearson, Assistant Under-Secretary of States for external affairs.

Dentistry Graduate Killed at Dieppe

Major Thomas E. Hayhurst, 40, graduate in dentistry at the University, has been reported killed in action at Dieppe in a letter from a prisoner of war received here recently.

A resident of Windsor, Ont., Maj. Hayhurst took post-graduate work in New York before opening at practice in Windsor in 1930.

Major Hayhurst was senior in command of the 1938 rifle team from Canada which won the Rajah of Kolapore's challenge cup at the Bisley shoot.

He is survived by his widow and by a son, Thomas, Jr., born shortly after he went overseas.

Subject Of Final Victoria Bob Skit Cloaked By Directorial Silence

Four days home from the west, the Victoria College Bob Committee announces that the Bob will be held as usual in Hart House Theatre at 8 p.m., Tuesday, Nov. 17. Arrangements are complete, except for selection of a dance-floor, which has not yet been made definite.

The Bob is under the direction of Mac Taylor. The members of the traditional Bob quartet are Elmer Phillips, Rev Secord, Malcom Dederick and Peter Bryce.

The first skit will reveal the possibilities inherent in the exhaustive removal of manpower by national selective service. The second skit throws much light on the rumour that, as it seems, a number of Vic officials have been discovered in collaboration with the Nippon government. The age-old subject of fees and their ultimate destination adds further complications. The third skit turns on a current theme whose timely interest the director feels will be best preserved by silence.

In spite of the freshmen's superiority in numbers the Committee expects that the sophomores will out-sing, out-shout and out-perform them. After the show dancing will be enjoyed to the strains of Fred Evis' orchestra. Tickets will go on sale Friday morning at the V.C.U. office.

WYMILWOOD RECITAL

Pearl Palmason, violinist, with Frances Marr Adaskin as accompanist, will present the following program at the Wymilwood Musicale, Sunady, Nov. 15 at 9 p.m. Students of all faculties welcome.

I. Vitali—Ciaccona
II. Lalo—Symphonie Espagnole (1st mvt.)
III. Francoeur-Kreisler—Siciliano and Rigaudon
Pugnanin-Kreisler—Praeludium and Allegro
Rachmaninoff—Romance
Albeniz-Dushkin—Jota Aragonesa

CO-EDS AID STAMP DRIVE SELLING SYMPHONY TICKETS

Winnipeg, Nov. 12—(CUP)—A new method of boosting war stamp sales was introduced at the University of Manitoba here recently where the University Music Department allowed admittance to the bi-monthly symphony concerts only through purchase of one or more war saving stamps. Students brought tickets from pretty college co-eds dressed as Miss Canadas.

NEWSFRONTS

London — A combined British and American force struck last night by land, sea and air at approaches to Tunisia. Planes from Malta destroyed or damaged 38 Axis planes on an airfield near Tunis.

Cairo—British 8th Army plunged into Lybia yesterday in pursuit of fleeing Afrika Korps.

London—The French Fleet lay off Toulon last night, ready to resist any aggressive action.

STUDENTS' COUNCIL

The President has requested the members of the Student's Administrative Council to attend in a body the service on International Student Day on Monday, Nov. 16. Members should report at the main entrance, ground floor, Convocation Hall, where seats will be reserved, at 4 p.m.

The President has also requested that his dinner to the Council on Tuesday, Nov. 17, be kept informal.

University College Lit Plans Dinner Meeting

A new departure from the traditional Lit meeting will be the College Dinner of the University College Literary and Athletic Society at 6:30 p.m. on Tuesday, Nov. 17. Originally planned as a college luncheon, the meeting was changed to an evening function in order to allow time for Freshman nominations.

Big attraction of the occasion will be the waitresses especially recruited from the Household Economics course for the occasion.

Tickets, at 35 cents each, go on sale in the U.C. Rotunda this week.

Co-Ed Wardens Practice Duties, May Take Part In City Blackout

Student air raid wardens held their first practical demonstration yesterday afternoon on the campus. The new control room in the basement of Simcoe Hall was put to practical use as the co-ed wardens phoned in their reports from their various stations in and around the university buildings.

According to the A.R.P. system of Toronto, the area from Bloor to College streets and from St. George Street to the east side of Queen's Park is a Section of this city, with its centre in Simcoe Hall. Then within the Section there are 14 Sectors—each with its post-warden and deputy-warden. There is at least one person on patrol in each building of a sector, and one or two on watch outside.

When going on duty, each girl reports to her warden, who in turn phones in to the control room of her Section. Those who are stationed in the control room are busy keeping track of proceedings through their large map of the Section and their charts on the wall. Every member is accounted for by an intricate system of tags, and if help is required in any place, it can immediately and directly be sent out from the control room.

"It is possible," the girls were told by Miss Parkes and Mr. Butlin, the heads of the university A.R.P., "that some of you will be able to assist in the official blackout to be held here in Toronto sometime next week."

They Were Dangerous

In commemorating the martyrdom of the students of Prague University on Monday we are honouring the brave people of a nation for whom education was one of the most important things in life, if not the most important. Czechoslovokia was founded by a great scholar, Thomas Masaryk, who is venerated all over the world by those who care for liberty and justice and who was a professor of philosophy before he became a revolutionary and an exile in the cause of his country's freedom. When he came back to the newly created state of Czechoslovakia he gave his people a program of education and high democratic standards which they enthusiastically followed.

His successor, Dr. Edouard Benes, was also an academic teacher. Thus Czechoslovakia came to look to its schools and universities as the corner stone of the country.

"For the Czechoslovaks, the school," one of them has written, "was a 'workshop of humanity,' a hallowed place far above the influence of party politics and above the trivialities of everyday life. The national educational system was the crown of Czech democracy, a national possession of which we were all proud. After the armament expenditure forced upon us by the war lust of Prussianism, it was educational expenditure that formed the largest item in our national budget. . . . But what we most valued about our schools was the spirit of true freedom which educated our children to be free citizens of a democratic republic. The heroes of our children were the first President of the Republic, T. G. Masaryk, Abraham Lincoln, Wilson and other prominent fighters for right, justice and democracy. Our teachers confirmed their pupils in the belief that in the life of the nation and of the individual spiritual values are far more important than material goods; they taught them to hate soulless militarism, which believes that force is superior to justice."

The spirit of such a country is not easily quenched.

The Facts

It is easy to understand why the Germans so quickly liquidated the educational institutions of Czechoslovakia as soon as they invaded it. What is harder for us to visualize is the obscene brutality with which the liquidation was carried out. We have been too far removed from the scene of such crimes for their actuality to be vivid to us. The brief facts of the martyrdom of the Praha students are as follows:

On November 15, 1939, a group of university students demonstrated against the invasion of their country before the tomb of the Unknown Soldier in Prague. Ten were arrested and another killed.

In the early hours of November 17 Gestapo agents broke into both men's and women's residences and into student boarding houses, tied the pyjama-clad students together in threes and drove them off in trucks. Those who resisted were shot. Later students and professors were arrested in the university lecture rooms. Staff members and even the patients in the infirmary were arrested.

The bound prisoners were taken to the football stadium where they were stripped, drenched with cold water and made to lie on the ground through the raw November night. About one hundred and fifty were shot. The first nine to be murdered were presidents of the student associations.

Those still alive were tortured with all the sadistic ingenuity of the Nazi brain. Accounts of this orgy of slaughter are nauseating beyond words. Those considered possible to print are included in the Czechoslovak Blue Book, published by the Czechoslovak National Committee.

The victims of this atrocity who were still alive were transported to concentration camps in Germany. The universities technical colleges and high schools were ordered closed for three years. All the equipment of the universities and their libraries were destroyed.

Somewhat similar liquidation programs have been carried out by the Germans in Poland and in the other lands which they have desecrated. But the first and the worst purge of the universities was in Czechoslovakia.

The name of these heroic student martyrs of Prague will live in the long and bloody history of the fight of the nations of the world for freedom from aggression and for the right to democracy.

It is their name and their memory which we honour, as do the other democractic nations, in the memorial ceremony to be held on Monday afternoon.

International Day

When students gather in Convocation Hall Monday to pay tribute to the Czechoslovak student victims of Nazi brutality and hate, they will, naturally be for the most part of Canadian birth. They will be showing their respect to the men and women of a foreign University who died in defence of ideals for which we too are now fighting.

But there will be another group present whose feelings will be different. They will be the European-born students now enrolled at the University of Toronto—many of whom were actually driven from their home universities by German storm-troopers. To them will be given the opportunity of paying tribute not to remote allies but to neighbours whose fate they can well appreciate.

And so, to its suggestion yesterday that all students attend the ceremony of commemoration, The Varsity today adds a special word to the Czechs, the Poles, the Ukrainians, and representatives of other now-dormant nations now on this campus to come to offer their respect to the memory of the hideously tortured students of Prague.

Correspondence

Editor,
The Varsity.

Dear Sir:

We wish to protest against your attitude as shown in your editorial of Nov. 12 toward the courageous and much needed efforts made by two social work students to eradicate racial prejudice which is hindering our war effort. That you could question whether such discrimination is undemocratic seems incredible, particularly as you represent a college newspaper which should be the organ of enlightenment. Persons who think themselves worthy of a university education should be capable of understanding that citizenship and democratic privileges should not depend on the presence or absence of colouring in the skin. At a time like this when total unity for winning this war is essential, there is no place for half-hearted support of attempts to eliminate discord.

Yours sincerely,

C. W. Coleman,
VI Sociology,
J. C. Carter,
IV Sociology.
Toronto, Nov. 12, 1942.

To Messrs. Lyons and Weinstein—signators of the letter referred to above—The Varsity extends the most cordial and sincere wishes for the success of their attempt to outlaw such discrimination as they outlined yesterday.

To Messrs. Coleman and Carter The Varsity replies that the question-mark attached to the headline surmounting the editorial in point—which piece of punctuation is apparently the main basis of their protest—was placed there because we had no actual proof of the authenticity of the charges made by the two Social Work students. If the incident took place as they described it—and we now have reason to believe that their account is substantially correct—it definitely deserves the epithet "undemocratic."

Implication is made above that The Varsity is failing in its function as an "organ of enlightenment." We would point out that the Lyons-Weinstein letter was submitted to four Toronto daily newspapers and that to date only The Varsity has printed it.—EDITOR.

VARSITY WHIPS BRUINS

By J. Coleman Egbert

Varsity's unbeaten hockeyists scored their third straight victory last night, downing Boston Bruins, 3-1 to take over N.H.L. leadership.

Sparked by Jack McLean, I S.P.S., and Bobby Copp, V Dents, the Blues scored their margin of victory in the second period of a thrill-packed contest.

With Turk Broda, II Meds, kicking out Bruin shots in masterly style and the defence team of Vic's Bucko McDonald and Pharmacy's Reg Hamilton knocking Bostonians all over the ice in neatly-piled heaps, the collegians showed strength in every department. Billy Taylor, the U.C. speedster was dangerous around the nets at all times, and Lorne Carr stayed away from his slide-rule long enough to show the form that made him chief scoring threat of the School Thirds in his freshman year.

"They looked pretty good tonight," said Athletic Director Warren Stevens after the game, "but they'll have a tougher time with McGill next week."

Book fans will be shocked when they see how Hollywood script writers have jazzed up the plot of Tish. Marjorie Main does make an appealing characterization of the little old lady who persists in doing good no matter what anyone else thinks. Zasu Pitts keeps the incidenta humour going to make up for a thinnish plot.

UPTOWN DOUBLE BILL

Friendly Enemies wastes quite a bit film on the unimportant moves of the characters. The scene is laid in 1918 among some German Americans in New York. None of the east is particularly convincing, but Charlie Ruggles carries on to weld the plot together.

"Need Life Insurance— WHO - ME?"

The younger you are when you take out your first life insurance policy, the lower your premium will be.

So, you should start thinking about your life insurance when you get your first salary cheque.

Will you need insurance? Yes—unless you intend to live like a hermit without human contacts and responsibilities. One day you may have a home of your own to keep, a family to provide for. One day you may need security for a business loan; and, some distant day, you will certainly need money for your own retirement.

There are Mutual Life policies that can do all these things. When the time comes for you to buy life insurance, see a Mutual Life representative. He will help you to plan the right kind and amount of insurance protection to suit your special needs.

Senior School Triumph On Snow-Covered Field

Edge Juniors, 3-0 in Colourless Game at Varsity Stadium to Stay in Running for Mulock Cup Playoffs

PLACEMENT DECIDES IT

By Bill Nicholls

With Jack Frost making early promises of that "White Christmas," Sr. S.P.S. plowed through the fighting Junior Schoolmen 3-0 yesterday afternoon at Varsity Stadium.

Including the white field, obliterated white markers, and white jerseys of the Senior squad, the game was fairly colourless. The only score came close to the end of the third quarter when Ted Webb booted an icy ball for a placement after Vern Booth had been mobbed on a third down kick, five yards from his goal line.

The Seniors played a heavy game with "Weed" Quintenton squelching anything brilliant from the Junior backfield. Seymour's kicking kept the Seniors on the attack for most of the game and "Punchy" Parchello made numerous dents in the Jr. line. Lawrence to Walden passes made the game worth watching as the Juniors fought desperately all through the contest.

First Quarter:

After the first skirmishes Stafford went through for yards, but a fumble gave the Seniors possession on their opponents' 40. Seymour's booting and a 15 yard gain by McIntyre brought the heart of the Junior line found the Juniors tussling out to their five yard line. Successive bucks and a long bounding punt put the Junior team out of danger, with the Seniors on the Juniors' 40 yard line at the end of a scoreless quarter.

Second Quarter:

Holding well along the line, the Juniors kept their opponents at bay. A short end over end boot by Seymour almost ended in a rouge, but Booth ran it out. On the next exchange of kicks the ball went out on the middle touch line.

Lawrence got away a snappy pass to Walden for 25 yards. Parchello intercepted a second pass, and then dashed through for yards.

Third Quarter:

Breaking up plays, Senior School started to drive from the whistle, Graham diving through a horde of tacklers to the Junior 40. After the kick, Parchello nailed his tackle on the .five Booth attempted to kick out but the pigskin was blocked. The ball was placed near the uprights and Ted Webb lofted a placement.

Third quarter score: Sr. S.P.S. 3, Jr. S.P.S. 0.

Fourth Quarter:

With their backs to the goal line, Jr. School took to the air and continued to throw passes for the remainder of the play. Lawrence to Waldon on a shoe-string catch put the ball on the Junior 25. With the ball still deep in his end after the exchange of kicks, Lawrence threw another thriller to Lawrence. Parchello finally sounded the knell of Junior advances when he intercepted another Lawrence special with less than three minutes to go.

Speaking Of Sport

By Roger Conant

LOOK, MA, THEY'ER OURS

For the first time in Varsity's history we have professional hockey players attending the University—or we should say that for the first time there are undergraduates playing pro hockey. This is a memorable occasion—but even further we might add that these N.H.L. freshmen play like veterans first time out—in fact merit three star rating. For right winger McLean slapped in the first goal and assisted in both the others—and defenceman Copp did himself proud with his stone-wall defence work and aggressive tactics. And those brown and yellow stick-wavers that were taken down a peg or two weren't just the Junior "C" squad from Pudunk Corners. No sir — those were the Boston Bruins, oftentimes winner of the Stanley mug. And the men they had to get past were no greenhorns — Dit Clapper, Flash Hollett, Bill Cowley, the two Jacksons and some more all-stars. And then the guardian of the captured fort, Frankie Brimsek, hadn't just learned to skate, either. Which all shows to go you that hockey players are made, not born.

JACK McLEAN

And Jack McLean has had a life of sport—however few the years. He started big-time stuff with Western Tech where he stayed five years. Last season he went to Humberside and starred in practically all athletics. For instance he was chosen for the Globe's Western All-Star rugby team. Then he came down here this fall, there being no Blue and White squad, he had planned to burn up the ice lanes of the West Toronto Mercantile League with Stafford Industries. But Coach Hap Day needed some high-class material to fill some of the gaps left by the departed members and noting Jack's crack record with Young Rangers last season induced his signature to a nice little contract—well, we're not sure how little. But then the snag came for both Copp and McLean—no passports could be had for the students to go on the road trips with the team. So that necessitates participation in only games played in Canada—Toronto and Montreal. Thusly the business of hockey and the business of classes and lectures could both be taken care of expeditiously.

Its a bit early to go throwing anyone's chest out—and with only a game or so under the belt but we maintain these lads were travelling with good company—Taylor, Schriner, Apps—and held their own plus. If one stops to dream about peacetime and intercollegiate hockey one can imagine all sorts of things with these two as the nucleus for a really hot team — but stop us, Jackson, before we start on that subject. However, it was, and we are confident, will be, proven that even though these two perhaps don't turn out to a Shore and a Conacher, they'll give all-comers something to talk about.

We hope we are not being overly optimistic in saying that today will see the end of the longest tennis tournament in college history. At 1:45 Virginia Kitto and Virginia McLeod will meet, and Virginia ??? at the conclusion of the match will be inter-faculty champion. Both these girls have had wide experience in the tennis field, and two seasons ago Virginia McLeod won the tournament, so some really good tennis should be seen. So come, brave the wintry blasts, and stop by St. Hilda's this afternoon to give the girls a little support.

Coming indoors we have news for the bowling enthusiasts. Arrangements have been made with the Mid-town alley and we may play there any afternoon. A slight sum of one dollar entitles one to play 20 games. This should be paid to the bowling representative in your college or faculty. Barbara Rowe is in charge of bowling this year, so for further information we suggest your contacting her at St. Hilda's. Bowling is one game in which no great skill is required, and is a golden opportunity to have a lot of fun and be athletic at the same time. So just pay up, get your card and drop over to Bloor and Bathurst any afternoon.

Up at O.C.E. our co-eds are still playing basketball. The first tilt saw II P.H.E. defeat U.C. Jrs. 23-9. U.C. put up a good fight but in their eagerness were a bit rough and Jean Crawford, the referee, was kept busy calling fouls. It was P.H.E.'s second game in as many nights, and their playing seemed to indicate a natural tiredness. It is too bad that such arrangements are necessary in the schedule.

The play in the second game in which St. Hilda's Freshies "B" were crushed by the Physios, was more even than the 49-4 score indicates. The Freshies, sparked by Ann Corrigan who fought from start to finish and deserves a bouquet for a splendid game, did their best, but were no match for Barbara Metcalfe's height. She just stood under the basket and scored shot after shot, and was very ably supported by Betty Danard. The Physios have the makings of a good team and it would not surprise us if they take their group.

Having now put ourselves on the proverbial limb, we say thirty for tonight.

Two Varsity Undergrads Lead Leafs' Victory Drive

Two Varsity undergraduates, Bobby Copp and Jack McLean struck the Three Star Selection last night as they played hockey for Toronto Maple Leafs and sparked the Stanley Cup holders to a 3-1 victory over Boston.

Bobby Copp, fifth year Dents student, in his first season of pro hockey, played a masterly game as a rushing defenceman. Owing to the many gaps in the powerful Leaf team of last season a certain amount of pessimism was felt over this year's entry but the showing of the two Varsity lads was a tonic for this fever. Copp was tops and his praises rung. Bobby Hewitson said, "He played a good, sound game and rushed very well."

Jack McLean was the hero of the evening though. He scored the first goal of the game in the first pro game of his career. And on top of that he assisted in the other two Lefian tallies. Foster Hewitt exclaimed, "A speed merchant . . . a very aggressive player who will certainly take the fancy of the Toronto crowd."

Thus was Jack McLean praised on his first performance. Going to his first year lectures in S.P.S. every day one would wonder how he finds time to train and play such high class hockey in such high class company. In fact this is the first time in Varsity history that undergraduates have attended lectures and played pro hockey simultaneously.

Faded Green Ties To Reappear

The 11th reunion of the Engineering Alumni will be held on Saturday, Nov. 14, in the Royal York Hotel. The reunions are held every three years and are the occasion for extensive celebrations by former schoolmen. This year, owing to the need for engineers in industry, the program has been condensed into one day in place of the usual two or three.

Major V. E. Hahn of John Inglis Co., recently appointed director general of army technical development bases, will address the engineers at their stag dinner. A feature of the dinner will be a broadcast of greetings from 200 graduates in England. These men, now in the armed forces overseas, will gather at the Savoy Hotel in London, from which place greetings will be short-waved by the BBC and picked up by the CBC to be re-broadcast.

Flying Instructor Is V.C.F. Speaker

Pilot Officer Douglas Feaver, former Victoria College student, will speak at a Fireside Sing-Song Sunday evening in Student House, 624 Spadina Ave. The service, which takes place at 8:30 p.m., is sponsored by the V.C.F.

Coming to Varsity from Scarboro Collegiate on a language scholarship two years ago, P.O. Feaver left his academic career for the R.C.A.F., at the end of his first year. He soon became a flying instructor at Hagarsville, Ont.

Norwegian Flyers Join in Harrier

The Blue and White harrier team travels High Park way tomorrow morning in search of a second victory to wind up a highly successful season. The Niagara University team will arrive this evening and will spend the night at St. Michael's College. An added feature to the race will be the appearance of a squad from the R.N.A.F. at Little Norway, which is expected to provide more opposition than the Niagara troupe.

The Toronto team will be made up of the same runners who turned in the stellar performance against Buffalo State last Saturday. These men are urged to dress warmly because it looks like a rather chilly morning, and to arrange to meet the street car the same as before.

Although Niagara was badly defeated by the same Buffalo team which Varsity set back last week, Hec Phillips is taking no chances on over confidence and has had his team doing light work during the last week.

The time again is 10:30 tomorrow morning, and the place, High Park.

School, Dents Stickmen Whip Meds, Druggists

Dents eked out an overtime victory over Meds and Senior School walked over Pharmacy A with 7-6 and 21-3 scores respectively yesterday in a lacrosse double-bill.

Scoring in spurts the Meds stickmen kept ahead of the Dents until the final quarter when the Garnet and Blue banged in two to tie it up. After five minutes of overtime the Molarmen finally blinked the light for the winning tally. Meds scorers were Spooner and Rae with singletons and Nikaido with four. Dents counters were chalked up by Currie and McCartney with two and Murray with three.

Pharmacy had no chance at all against the strong Senior School squad. Leibowitz and Spence tried hard for the druggists and notched the three. School scorers were Hefferman and Crosby with one, Kent and Graham with two, Kellam with seven and Lewarne with eight.

Jan Peerce

Jan Peerce has a masculine tenor voice (which is a bit of a rarity) and he knows how to use it properly (which is perhaps rarer still). He presented at Eaton Auditorium last night the most interesting vocal recital this year has yet produced.

The chief quality of Mr. Peerce's voice is the beautiful resonance which he achieves. His voice fills his whole head, one feels as one listens. His enunciation is fairly clear; his feeling for the music he sings supreme; and his acting ability, in putting that feeling across, excellent.

The second group, by Schubert and Brahms, was the best music, and the most interesting. They are subtle in the relationship of music and lyric, and a good deal of the other music was not. Brahms' Sweet Cheeks to Me Turning is especially delicate, and Mr. Peerce brought forth all its delicacy in his best work of the evening.

The rest of the program was almost equally good.

Gwendolyn Williams did a remarkable job of last minute substitution for Mr. Peerce's accompanist who was suddenly taken ill. Just how last minute the job was, we were told, and it certainly was not evident. It seemed as if Miss Williams had been accompanying Mr. Peerce for years, so well did they team up. Truly, it was a remarkable feat of musicianship.

Mr. Peerce was unfortunate in his final encores. I can say this: he is the first man I have heard sing Oley Speaks' Morning (the thousand others were sopranos). I hope that he will be the last.

NEIL MACDONALD.

Bach

Lubka Kolessa

The first of Lubka Kolessa's five o'clock recitals was held in the Conservatory Concert Hall yesterday afternoon. This first concert of the series was on all-Bach one.

Madame Kolessa opened her recital with a Tauzig transcription of the well-known Toccata and Fugue in D Minor. Although it is impossible to achieve the majesty of this organ work on a mere piona, the recitalist succeeded in giving not just immense volume, but a performance in which musicianship and technique were supreme.

The Italian Concerto followed. Never have I heard it played so brilliantly! The artist took it at a speed which would have floored the amateur, if not many professional pianists, and never once did she lose sight of the beauty of any phrase or forget to give each note its proper value or touch. A truly great performance!

Two Preludes and Fugues (from Book II, in F Minor and G Major) came next. They were done impeccably. The program concluded with a Busoni transcription of the Toccata, Adagio and Fugue in C Major. This is another monumental organ work which Madame Kolessa performed with great artistry. In these transcriptions she does not so much attempt to imitate the tremendous power of the organ itself, as to achieve the atmosphere and brilliance of the original work.

Madame Kolessa is a great musician; fortunately for Toronto music lovers, she has decided to live here for a while. There are four more in this series of Thursday afternoon recitals. Don't miss them!

JEAN MCNEILL.

Aida

Secondo ot Massey Hall

Aida was the second offering of the Columbia Opera Company at Massey Hall last night. This company gives a fairly well-knit performance of this old war-horse. Costumes and sets are much more brilliant and appropriate than they were a few years back.

Gertrude Ribla was more than adequate in the title role. She infused the tortured character of the slave-girl with the pity and rebellion of the desert peoples. The bass and baritone parts were carried with distinction by Alfred Chigi and Arthur Anderson, as Amonasro and Ramfis. The latter in particular seemed to fit his dress and gait to the atmospheric background. Nice nighting and balance of decor were achieved in the second act; the two ballet sequences were done with enthusiasm.

Miss Ribla attained a true emotional climax in her aria Ah pieta che piu, and Miss Knapp did similarly by Amneris' A lui vivo in the last act. The two Ethiopians were splendid in physique, and interpreted to the hilt the tragic intensity of their duet in the banks of the Nile.

One is led to wonder how they chose the spindle-legged, moon-faced supernumerarics in ill-fitting helmets who disfigure the upstage area in the court scenes. But that is a minor defect in what was really a very creditable production. Faust is tonight and Traviata and Trovatore tomorrow.

ARE PROFESSORS HUMAN? DEPART.

This character is peacefully sleeping in a class when the prof informs him that he had been assigned an essay last class, which, of course, he had not attended. So, comes the half-hour and the chap strolls up to the desk to find out what he is supposed to hand in thousands of words on a week from hence. He copies down the assignment and allows as how he sure would appreciate a few references to work on.

Well, the prof scratches his head for a moment and then admits that he doesn't know of any—

"Tell you what, though," he adds, "when you get your essay done, would you mind giving me your biobliography? I'll need it."

THERE OUGHT TO BE LAWS . .

Some girls were lolling around in the common room of their residence one day when the phone rings. One of them trots out to answer it and comes back looking for Nancy. Seems that Nancy just isn't in at the moment, but one of the girls pops out with—

"That must be Joe calling . . . find out if it is, will you? I want to find out what we have to do for class tomorrow."

So, the first one goes away and comes back a moment later.

"No, it wasn't Joe."

"You sure?"

"Yep. I asked him."

SOMEONE IS GOING TO HAVE TO DO A LOT OF EXPLAINING!

YOUR GRUESOME THOUGHT FOR THE DAY DEPT.

A friend of ours had time-table troubles, so it was not until very recently that he was able to attend his biology lab. He told his tale of woe to the prof, who nodded sympathetically and made the necessary arrangements in his records. Then he handed him a rabbit—a very dead, extremely stiff and thoroughly embalmed rabbit—and said in a kindly tone—

"You'll have to hurry, you're already a liver, intestine and a stomach behind the class . . ."

IT HAPPENED in the stadium during a Saturday game. One of the ushers whipped up to another and asked him if he had seen T. A. Reed around that afternoon.

"I don't think so," replied the other. "WHAT SECTION IS HE IN CHARGE OF?"

PART I

Toronto, Ontario,
12 Nov. 1942.

No. 41/42.

1. WEARING OF UNIFORM

The attention of Other Ranks is drawn to Section 46 of the Militia Act which governs the wearing of uniforms as follows:

"No corps and no non-commissioned officer or man shall at any time, appear in uniform or armed or accoutred, except,

(a) when actually on duty;
(b) at parade or drill;
(c) at target practice;
(d) at reviews or on field days on inspection; or
(e) by permission of the commanding officer of the corps.

R.S., c. 41, s. 51."

Members may wear uniform throughout the day on which they are parading. They are reminded that they are subject to military law when in uniform.

2. DRESS

Other Ranks, at all times, when appearing in uniform outside University Buildings, must button and hook the neck of the battle dress blouse.

Under no circumstances will Other Ranks appear outside University Buildings with the neck of the blouse unhooked or unbuttoned, and at no time are Other Ranks permitted to wear collars and ties.

3. GREATCOATS

Greatcoats will be worn by all ranks, at all times, when appearing in uniform, expect on parade when otherwise ordered by Company Commanders, effective 12 Nov. 42.

Other Ranks will wear C.O.T.C. shoulder straps of the greatcoat, and will not wear them on the battle dress blouse while greatcoats are in wear.

When wearing greatcoats, the lower three buttons must be done up.

4. WATERPROOF COATS

Waterproof coats will not be worn by officers or Other Ranks appearing on parade after greatcoats have been taken into wear.

Recreation Leadership Course Will Benefit Welfare Agencies

Among the courses included under the Women's National Service scheme is one teaching the leadership of recreational groups for children and adults. The girls taking the course are taught party games, square dances and home and air raid shelter games. They learn to handle children in age groups from six to nine, ninet to 14 and adults of all ages. During the second half of the course, field work will be substituted for lectures. This outside work will be done in settlement houses, social welfare agencies, and nursery schools.

The course is being given in the Household Economics Building gym and at St. Joseph's School by Miss F. A. Somers and Mrs. Shirley McCatty.

Commenting on her course, Miss Somers said, "The group seem most enthusiastic. It will prove useful both in wartime and peacetime as the welfare agencies are short of group leaders."

Armed Forces Exhibition In Hart House Gallery Opens At Lunch Saturday

Director of National Gallery Opens Display of Paintings in Art Gallery Following Address to Contributors

CABLE FROM MASSEY

The Canadian Armed Forces Exhibition is for the fighting forces now and for the future of Canada, H. O. McCurry, Director of the National Gallery, said at a luncheon in the Great Hall Saturday, prior to officially opening the Exhibition now on display in the Hart House Art Gallery.

"The Exhibition is of interest to the National Gallery," McCurry said, "because there are a great number of contributions that are worthy of preservation as works of art, and would provide a basis for extensive war records should the government endorse the idea."

"In the United States artists are being employed in the Navy to record important moments — from Iceland to the Pacific, and now to Africa—and pictures are being painted which are only possible because of actual experience. It is good publicity for the armed forces," the Director explained.

"More aesthetics and less anaesthetics (not in a medical sense) would be better for the army. Opportunities for recreational necessities should be at least the same for boys and girls in the forces as for others of the same age who are permitted by their sacrifice to carry on in civilian life. Art is not to be despised, for it trains inward and outward vision, and has some advantages in being silent. This exhibition and the idea behind it will have great fruit for the future of Canada:" Finally Mr. McCurry announced that the Exhibition will go from Hart House to Ottawa, and that several applications have been received from elsewhere."

Representing the Armed Forces, Major-General C. F. Constantine said, "the experiment was taken up as something worthwhile," and was agreeably surprised at the "quality of the results." He continued by saying that, "our prime objective is to win the war, a job that

Service At 4:15 Today Will Honour Students Massacred By Germans

This afternoon at 4:15 in Convocation Hall, the University of Toronto will hold its International Students' Day services, presided over by President Cody, commemorating those thousands of Czechoslovakian students who were massacred in Prague on Nov. 17, 1939. Suggested by Dr. F. Pavlasek, Czechoslovak Minister to Canada, the service will be held in connection with similar ceremonies taking place tomorrow in free universities all over the world. Dr. Pavlasek will be the principal speaker.

Professor B. Wilkinson of the History Department will speak on Czechoslovakian contributions to civilization and Professor H. Wasteneys of the Department of Biochemistry will speak briefly on imprisoned and persecuted students throughout the world. There will also be a program of Czech and Polish music played by Dr. Healey Willan, which will include an original composition of his, and three biblical songs to be sung by Evaleen Kilby.

Among the dignitaries on the platform will be Dr. H. J. Cody, President of the University, Carl Printz, the Norwegian Consul, Dean Young, Chairman of the Friends of Poland, Capt. H. van Wart, the Czechoslovakian Consul in Toronto and Mr. Buzek, a Czech official.

The Student's Administrative Council will attend in a body and those members of the C.O.T.C. who attend may do so in uniform.

British and American universities will celebrate International Students' Day and Dr. Eduard Benes, President of the Czechoslovak Republic, will speak over a world-wide BBC hookup at 8:15 p.m., Nov. 17, from London.

Local conditions, however, made it advisable to hold the Toronto celebration in the 16th rather than the 17th.

First celebrated on an international basis last year, the aims of this display are three: a protest against the atrocities displayed against education, an

Banting Commemorated In Ceremony Saturday

A wreath was placed on the grave of the late Sir Frederick Banting Saturday in a brief ceremony marking the 51st birthday of the discoverer of insulin, who was killed in a plane crash in February, 1941.

Following the custom established annually on the birthday of Louis Pasteur, a delegation of university officials, representatives of the medical profession and of the three armed services attended. The wreath was laid in the name of the University by Sir William Mulock, Chancellor, assisted by President H. J. Cody. It is planned to make the ceremony an annual event.

Senate Honours Mulock For 82 Years' Service

Members of the University Senate met Friday to pay their esteem to Chancellor Sir William Mulock and to celebrate his 83rd year of connection with the University.

The 98-year-old Chancellor was one of the first students to register in University College. President Cody traced his career at the University as student, graduate, vice-chancellor and chancellor. His energetic espousal of the cause of the University and particularly the part he played in the federation scheme were recalled.

An illuminated copy of the address was presented to Sir William during the ceremony.

Colleges Should Brush Aside Trivia To Face Real Issues--R. C. Wallace

"Universities today should become lighthouses to brush aside the trivialities and get down to the real issues of the war," said Dr. R. C. Wallace, Principal of Queen's University, in an address to the Toronto branch of the Queen's Alumni Association Friday evening. Stressing the need for post-war reform and reconstruction, Dr. Wallace urged that "young people must be allowed to develop their abilities, if Canada is ever to become a great nation.

"We must do away with the idea that certain people get the opportunities for training simply because their parents are in a position to pay for them. We must provide the opportunity for young people to go ahead in the fields for which they are best equipped—perhaps through scholarships that are theirs by right."

Dr. Wallace also envisioned a post-war Canada in which there would be little unemployment, pointing out that great fields of construction, now only being mapped, will then be open. "We are very short-sighted with regard to our natural resources," he stated, "particularly with our forests and farm lands."

Giving great credit to the Government's plan for the rehabilitation of returned soldiers, Dr. Wallace remarked: "There can be no complete employment after the war without some measures of state control; but we should not sacrifice that part of democracy for which we are fighting. Private initiative should not be destroyed; and those who suggest straight socialism as a national policy, have not as yet thought their way through. If a financial system tries to dominate the producer, it must be abolished.

"I personally am better off with a large income tax and most Canadians employed, than with a large income and most Canadians unemployed. We may have to carry on heavy taxation after the war in order to keep our people working."

Dr. Wallace is also a member of the Government's committee studying post-war reconstruction problems.

Motion By Cody Defeated As Board Deadlocks 7-7 On Admitting Refugees

President Expresses Regret at Refusal; Principal Brown Suggests Decision Exceeds Powers Given by Federation of Colleges; By-law Dictates Tie Results in Negative Verdict

COLLEGE HEADS VOICE DISAPPROVAL

Eighteen "friendly aliens," recently released from internment camps in Canada, were refused permission to enrol in federated colleges of the University of Toronto by the Board of Governors at a meeting Thursday, C. E. Higginbottom, secretary of the Board, announced Friday.

(Students affected are German nationals, most of them Jewish, who were interned in England early in the war and were sent out to Canadian internment camps, from which they were released on condition that they pursue their studies under the sponsorship of Canadian citizens. All were originally exiles from the Nazi regime and cases were investigated individually by British and Canadian government agencies before they were recommended for release.)

The motion that such students be granted permission to enter the University, made by President H. J. Cody, was defeated when the Board's vote was tied 7-7. According to a Board by-law, a tie vote results in a negative decision.

Disapproval of the Board decision was voiced by Dr. Cody and the heads of the three Federated Arts Colleges, Dr. W. T. Brown, Principal of Victoria College, Father T. McLaughlin, Superior of St. Michael's College, and Dr. F. H. Cosgrave, Provost of Trinity College.

"Personally, I deeply regret the result," Dr. Cody said, following the meeting. "I did not agree with the decision."

Dr. Donald Bruce MacDonald, chairman of the Board, said he agreed with Dr. Cody in the matter, and also regretted the Governors' decision. "I was quite opposed to keeping these students from the University," he said.

J. J. Gibson, Vice-Chairman of the Board, was the seconder of Dr. Cody's motion.

Following a meeting of the Victoria Board of Regents Friday Dr. Brown said: "In the name of Victoria College, we have already written our protest

Blizzard Blankets House As Follies Staged Friday

Not all the costuming at Friday night's University College Follies was done back stage. Many latecomers arrived in distinguished white periwigs, thanks to a November blizzard which swirled down on the campus around 8:30. A campus policeman consoled himself for not being able to get in to see the show by laughing at the spectacle of gray-haired youth combing snow out of its hair in the West porch of Hart House.

Inside the house folliesgoers waited for the opening of their shows by watching the aquatic show in the pool, the magician in the debates room, or the jitterbugs in the common room below. In the big gym Bob Shuttleworth's orchestra played for dancers.

Meanwhile, in Hart House Theatre under the snow-covered quad University College dancers and comedians gave three shows to three packed houses. This year's review, "Everything's Okay," featured three skits dealing with opium dens and black markets, the harvest, and the dramatic technique of a gentleman named Noel Coward. Two choruses, a short and a tall one, supplied the dance and various entr'actes completed the bill.

WOMEN'S SERVICE GROUP TO REPORT ON ACTIVITIES

An open meeting of the Women's War Service Committee will be held at 2:30 today in the Women's Union, to which all students are invited. Reports of the Committee's activities will be given; the Red Cross work of the group will be on exhibition. Mrs. Peter Sandiford, Chairman of the Overseas Children Committee, and Mrs. W. E. Gallie, Chairman of the University of Toronto Red Cross Workroom, will discuss briefly the progress of their groups.

The Women's War Service Committee was organized in 1939 when war broke out. Composed of the wives of the heads of the various University departments and members representing numerous University groups including the Alumni Federation, its purpose is to co-ordinate the war service activities of the University. Three representatives of the undergraduate body, third year students, meet with the Executive Committee which works in co-operation with the Students' Administrative Council.

Although the annual meeting of the committee will be held next spring, in addition to the regular monthly executive meetings, the committee felt that an open meeting at this time of the year would give the students an opportunity to learn of the group's contribution to the war effort and its plans for the coming months.

The meeting will close in time for those present to attend the International Student Day Service in Convocation Hall.

BROWN OPENS PARLIAMENT AT VIC MEETING TONIGHT

Lieutenant-Governor Dr. Walter T. Brown, Principal and Chancellor of Victoria College, will open the Victoria College Debating Parliament's session for this year tonight at 8:00 p.m. Dr. Brown will read the Speech from the Throne, which according to custom will outline the policy of the Government for the coming year.

In the ensuing debate on the Address in Reply to the Speech from the Throne, Prime Minister John Dale with the assistance of Phyllis Mackenzie will try to prove "That victory abroad means Revolution at home." The negative will be upheld by the Leader of the Opposition Marg Dillon, and by Norm Sisco. Upon conclusion of the official debate, the house will be thrown open to speakers from either side.

The opening session of the Parliament has been delayed by the absence of many of the Cabinet Ministers in the West. Both the Prime Minister and Norm Sisco have just recently returned from the Saskatchewan wheat fields.

In referring to the topic of the opening debate, Premier Dales said, "I think the subject should be extremely interesting, especially in view of recent war developments. I hope that every Vic student who is able will attend this debate and bring along his opinions. There'll be lots of opportunity for every one to air his own views on the matter, and we're anxious to hear them."

"And by the way," added the First Minister in conclusion, "to prove that we really mean that, we're serving refreshments in Alumni Hall after the debate to all those who speak 17 words or more on the floor of the House."

Questionable Logic

A day on which the University intended to commemorate a group of students who died to protect the freedom of universities throughout the world has been rudely marred by announcement of the Board of Governors that 18 "friendly aliens" have been barred from registration at the University. In the light of this news, it will be with mixed feelings that students and staff members attend the service in Convocation Hall today.

News of the unfavourable decision came as a decided shock to most of those who had followed the case. It was known that the Board had been deliberating for some time and had been unable to reach a decision, but it was commonly believed that whatever difficulties stood in the way of these students would eventually be removed.

It is difficult to find a logical reason for the unfavourable decision. The students concerned are refugees from Nazi Germany, interned in England early in the war and shipped to Canadian internment camps. Many of them have relatives in concentration camps in Europe and some of them have bitter tales to tell of their own experience in Nazi prisons.

After being held in Canada for some time, these students were released under the sponsorship of Canadian citizens on condition that they continue their studies. Those released were thoroughly examined by agents of the British Home Office and of the Canadian Government, who satisfied themselves as to the absolute integrity of their anti-Nazi beliefs. The students were expressly forbidden to accept jobs; they are constitutionally unable to enter the army; nothing but study is open to them.

A number of refugees were accepted by the University in the last two years. They have shown themselves excellent students and good citizens. Their scholastic record has been excellent and some of them have succeeded in winning scholarships. They have clamoured for a part in the University's military training scheme as few Canadians clamoured when the C.O.T.C. was still largely voluntary. A few went west to help with the Canadian harvest.

In view of the excellent experiences the University has had with these students in the past it is all the more incomprehensible that the present ruling was laid down.

Other universities have admitted the alien students without deliberation. The Board's procrastination has further complicated the situation of the students affected as they are no longer able to register with another university. Accarding to the conditions of their release, the Board's ruling may have condemned them to renewed imprisonment, at least until next fall.

There is a brighter side to the situation. Seven of the 14 governors who voted on the question favoured admission of the students. It is known that these seven included the President, the Chairman of the Board and the Vice-Chairman, and all of these were quite emphatic in their stand. The heads of the federated colleges have also expressed their opposition to the Board's decision.

Considerable harm has already been done the University and the cause of free universties generally by the Board's action, but happily the harm is not completely irreparable. A prompt reversal of the decision would do much to dissipate the wave of discouragement that is felt over the campus today.

If We Break Faith

Today, however, this University will pay its tribute to the men and women of Prague University who fell in the struggle for freedom of thought.

We feel strongly that as many students of this University as possible should attend today's ceremonies in Convocation Hall. Here is an opportunity to offer our respect to fellow-students who died for our right to study what we want and think as we like; and here is an opportunity to rededicate ourselves to those ideals of academic and intelleetual freedom for which they died.

Armed Art

The Canadian Armed Forces Exhibition of art work is now on display in the Art Gallery of Hart House. It is well worth the half-hour or so members of the House should take from their daily round to view it.

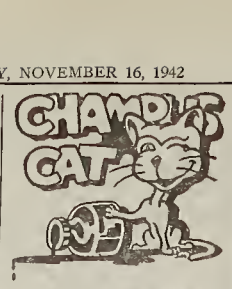
The standard of the work displayed, while far from uniform. is well above average. And interest in the exhibit is heightened by the fact that these paintings were done during the spare moments of men and women on active service—tired out after long days of training, often working in poor light and without the best of materials.

But apparently heads of the armed forces have done much to encourage such work, feeling that recreation of an aesthetic nature has a definite place in the lives of those under them. Major-General Constantine made this point clearly when he addressed Saturday's luncheon gathering in the Great Hall. While admitting that it is the first job of all of us to win the war, he went one to say that "the world will go on after the war," and that there would be room in it for "art, music, and other niceties of life." These niceties, he said, should not be allowed to fall victim to the consuming demands of the war, but should be preserved.

And even among the men and women most actively concerned in fighting the present war, they are being preserved as a visit to the present Exhibition will show.

The Varsity — always ready to offer a dash of august advice on almost any topic — suggests that its male readers take the first chance they get to see the show. And it reminds its female readers that the next two Sundays will be Visitors' Days in Hart House, and suggests that they cajole some member of the House to escort them on a visit to the Art Gallery.

---(CUP)---



Last night the editor of one of The Varsity's closest associates in the Canadian University Press—The Queen's Journal—helped supervise the publication of this issue.

Again we note with pleasure the closer and closer eo-operation existing among CUP's members. Such co-operation, finding its most firm foundation in actual personal contaet of the editors concerned, is the groundwork for the visionary CUP of the future—a newsgathering agency on a far more ambitious scale than the present able but under-staffed organization; an ageney for the dissemination of campus news from coast to coast which will provide members with up-to-the-minute leased wire service instead of the present "overhead" system, with nationally-syndicated advertising revenue, perhaps with station-to-station radio hook-ups.

Now one of the few pan-Canadian student organizations carrying on normal activities even in wartime, CUP may be one of the most powerful of such groups in the postwar years. Certainly, it if survives the period through which we are now passing, it will be in an excellent position to make a major contribution toward giving the Canadian student a larger and larger voice in national affairs.

Turning back to the present, then, with the shimmering vision of a truly great Canadian University Press relegated for the moment to the realm of ideals not yet fully realized, a word of welcome to the Editor of the Queen's Journal.

Here is a young and able journalist whose nose for news has supplied The Varsity with much of its front-page eopy during recent weeks. Already highly regarded by this newspaper for the coverage he has given us on spot news at Queen's, he has placed us further in his debt through his assistance last night. So an editorial handshake to one of our contemporaries for whom we hold a warm feeling of friendship.

The Varsity In Six Easy Lessons

Lesson Eight

Today's lesson is concerned with the writing of "ITHER 'N' YON."

"A good example is better than a thousand words," says one of our professors, so we offer today (just for a change) a well-written "ITHER."

● 'ither 'n' yon

with hexx nilssen

Some guy up at the Museum (you know, across from Annesley) said in a lecture at the Royal Canadian Institute last Saturday: "Ten millions years ago wild mastodons roamed around on the greensward of this campus."

Lately they have been replaced by wolves.

OUR SPIES at Whitney Hell tell us that they haven't sighted the lad who disguised himself as a she-male and went to the All-Varsity Dance. Apparently the girls have been lying in wait for "That . . . (Censored—Ed.) . . . who is aggravating the shortage of eligible men."

Aw, shucks, can't a fella have a little fun any more?

In the University of Oshkosh Daily Trumpet we read the followin funny (oh, excruciatingly funny) headline:

"WATERPOLO TEAM MEETS KALAMAZOO COLLEGE FISH TONIGT."

Manpower shortage, eh fellas, huh? (Oboy, this one will slay them!)

One of our professors (of Zoology) has the funniest sense of humor. One day he pulled a four-year-old Varsity out of his pocket and read about the goldfish-swallowing contest at Harvard. Then he went to a well-known restaurant and ordered a live lobster and swallowed it whole. "I can swallow anything," he explained in class the next day, "ever since the time I swallowed Miss S...'s excuse for handing in her insect collection two months late, and then drank some S.P.S. election beer the next day."

OBOY, ISN'T HE FUNNY!

And that selfsame professor is the guy who didn't like the idea of a co-ed sleeping during a lab one afternoon, so he stopped his lab-talk and snuck up and tickled her under the nose with a Balanoglossus.

U.C. Follies

The U.C. Follies Friday night reflects credit on everyone connected with it. The names you saw inside the first page cover worked long and hard to dream up the excellent humour which entertained everyone in the audience.

Comparisons are inevitable in the world of criticism. The whole show balanced pretty equally with last year's, but part of it were better, and parts worse. To get over the adverse comment and leave more space for the show's excellence, it might be pointed out that the first folly, Ye Little Poppy Shoppe, in spite of its excellent inherent ideas, was too uneven to be perfect. Also, I did not think that the lyrics or the music this year quite touched those of last year.

But, just about everything else was ok. The choruses were good and the chorines satisfyingly lovely. Their routines were smoothly done in spite

Tid-bits from the College Papers

To say that our war effort need pay no attention to public opinion is to overlook the basic consideration that many of us are continuing at college only at the sanction of the community. If we can show that our interest lies in winning the war, then people will more readily believe that our studies are designed to the same end.

Doctors Absorb Double Drubbing

Gloomy Friday The 13th For Whitewashed Medicos; Lucky For Vic, St. Mike's

Scarlet and Gold Gridders Win 22-0; Double Blue Runs Out 11-0 Victory Over Luckless Doctors

CUP-HOLDERS RESURGENT

Friday the 13th means something to Meds athletes—a total of 33 points were chalked up against them with nary a comebaek. In ease you are one of the few who haven't been notified in no uneertain terms by Vie and St. Mike's students, their respective rugby aggregations handed the aforementioned Medicos 22-0 and 11-0 whitewashings.

From the kick-off a resurgent Vie team showing the fight, stamina, speed, and all-round championship form of the Mulock Cup holders of last season, took command and completey outclassed the Doctors. There was simply no doubt about it as Messrs. Munro, Bundy, Fitzgerald and their steamroller aecomplices just swept the Medieos from the field. One touch might have been called a fluke when a Vie man fell on the ball behind the Meds line but apart from that one score the final tally card was a true indication of the game. As a rugby game it was far from high class as the cold took its effect on the wind-swept back west eampus ,so to hide the red faces of some Meds the game itself will not be elaborated upon. As one embryo Doctor spake, "I have nothing to say," unspake.

St. Mike's line's superiority over a weak Meds line was one of the determining factors of the game in the Stadium and resulted directly in their second touchdown. St. Mike's had an edge in the kicking which was increased by a high wind. The only Meds bright spot was their downfield taekling which held St. Mike's to short run-backs on the kieks.

But Odette lifted a punt to Bill Paterson who was rouged near the end of the first quarter. Meds fumbles caneelled the advantage of the wind behind them in the seeond quarter. Two attempted placements went wide and the half ended 1-0.

A Frank Dunlap to Joe Aegro pass brought the ball into scoring position for St. Mike's in the third quarter and Aegro eharged through centre for the game's first major. With the change of the quarter, Odette got away a kick that was carried by the wind and rolled for a total distance of almost 80 yards. Meds' kick was blocked by Segrew, and Tony Bruno fell on the loose ball behind the line while surrounded by St. Mike's players. The touch was unconverted and ended the scoring at 11-0.

For St. Mike's, Odette and Dunlap were the pick of the baekfield, while up front Frank Chirico was outstanding. For Meds, Paterson was the best of the backfield, who all had a bad day.

Lecturer Sees Canada Serving As Blood Bank

Blood is the most important thing in Europe today, stated Professor Wm. Boyd of the Department of Pathology and Baeteriology, in an address to the Royal Canadian Institute at Convoeation Hall Saturday night.

The use of blood plasma in transfusion has revolutionized the eare of the wounded overseas. Canada is not only important as a training centre and general food store-house, she also serves as a blood bank for our soldiers.

Prof. Boyd also showed by means of slides the different types of blood clotting and other pathological processes. Blood is not just something that flows in your veins, "It is the 'Life Blood'," he said.

Varsity Harriers Whip R.N.A.F.

The Varsity harrier team swept to an overwhelming 25-64 victory over the R.N.A.F. from Little Norway and Muskoka at High Park Saturday. Roy Foulis in 25.10 led the pack to grab top honours. Bob Delaney, also Varsity, nabbed seeond, while third went to a Norwegians, Sgt. S. Kjelsaas. Blue and White men plaeed first, seeond fourth, fifth and sixth for their team seore to win handily.

The race was run under the worst possible eonditions—snow, iey, slippery ground and a cool breeze to eurl around the bare legs of the runners. To add to the hazards, one Norwegian, being unable to find large enough shoes, ran five miles or so wearing only three pairs of socks.

The first eight finishers were: R. Foulis (V), B. Delaney (V), S. Kjelsaas (N), P. Shackleton (V), T. Barnett (V), F. Fordyee (V), Jeffries (V), E. Erla (N).

Coaeh Hec Phillips requests that all harrier men retain their equipment until such time as a photograph can be arranged.

FLASH . . . The Women's Interfaculty Tennis Tournament goes into its fifth week. But, wait, the final maeh is here; and what is more important, it is to be played today, weather permitting (good old weather), at 4:30 p.m. at St. Hilda's. If there are any changes or diffieulties in arranging the playing of this game today, it will be postponed until Wednesday.

Virginia Kitto, II P.H.E., plays Virginia Rappelle MacLeod, II Vic. These girls met last year in the semi-finals, and Kitto bested MacLeod and specialized in high lobs deep to the back of the court. The style of game this year may be quite different, as both players have another year of experience behind them. At any rate, the match promises to be a thriller, and we shant try our hand at predicting the winner.

In the basketball games played at O.C.E. on Friday, U.C. Juniors, playing their seeond game in as many nights, lost to a fresher team, St. Hilda's Seniors. Vie Juniors took a close decision from Physios, 16-15.

Freddie Baxter, up at the Lillian Massey swimming pool, reports that the bronze elasses in life-saving are all organized and are progressing niecly. There is still time for anyone wanting to try for the silver award to go up and see her and start working on it.

Miss Baxter has received the certificates awarded last year and would like those who passed their tests to eall for them.

The basketball games for tonight up at O.C.E. are: at 6:30, St. Hilda's Freshies "A" v. P.H.E.; at 7:30, U.C. Freshies v. Vic Freshies; and at 8:30, Nurses v. Vie Seniors. See you up at these games, eh?

Speaking Of Sport

By Roger Conant

DO YOU GET THE POINTS?

After a month and a half of competition throughout the campus the first communique in regard to standing for the T. A. Reed Intramural Trophy has been issued by the Athletic Office. Much argument and controversy has preceded the set-up of the point system for this year but the Athletic Directorate has seen fit to leave the system practically the same with the five different classifications for the faculties. The only major addition is the giving of certain bonus points to the Arts Faculties to compensate for the absence of the harvesters. But on the whole these points mean very little as only about two per cent of Trinity's total is derived from the bonus.

Indeed the Anglicans' high standing can be accounted for by a mere handful of athletes. A quartet of tennis players, namely Tseng, Worsely, Rusted and Jones got into the finals and quarter-finals of the tournament and netted over 25 per cent of all Trinity's points. Then Cam Burgess broke records, won all-University races and generally took command of the track situation. Practically all by himself he collected 822 of the Red and Black's points — over one third of the total. Thus the leadership is claimed by actual wins and championships. For entrance points only comprised a relatively small proportion of the total — only 40 per cent.

But when you come to analyze School's total you find the fully 50 per cent come from the mere entering of teams. Thus without those umpteen volleyball teams, the Engineers would be approaching the cellar. The Meds' positions is somewhat similar, with 50 per cent coming from entrance points, but besides this rugby and volleyball wins have kept the doctors up in the top flight in close pursuit of S.P.S. St. Mike's and Dents have done a good job on the number of teams, for both have garnered about 60 per cent of their totals through entrance points.

U.C.'s entrance points are about 55 per cent but her big drop in total is because of the small number of points earned through actual game wins. Vic's entrance points fall away down to 41 per cent of the total. Almost half of her total points were garnered through the efforts of four tennis players—Bryce, Waugh, Thomson and Saba, who between them copped the singles and doubles crowns. For the remaining faculties entrance points are practically the whole story. Percentages of the totals for them are: Pharmacy 92, Wycliffe 57, Emmanuel 64, Forestry 76, and Knox 69.

The foregoining reams of figures may be slightly boring but they seem to show a trend—and, we think, for the good. For it shows that you don't need to drag out every male in the college to cop the cup but simply go out and win a few championships.

of their complexity. The orchestra, too, played the music more accurately and its arrangements were more interesting than I have previously heard.

Folly three, luckily, was the climax of the show. Whether it was written after Private Lives had visited Toronto or not, I did not find out, but if it was, it showed no sign of the speed under which it must have been put together. Its reasons for not attending Trinity were extremely witty. The whole act was a perfect parody on Coward.

It is noticeable that this review has mentioned no names: it would be impossible to list them all, and to do so to some at the expense of others would be to give a false impression. Every person concerned seems to have done a job of which he could be proud.

Meds Seniors Attend Graduation Banquet

Members of the graduating class in medicine were addressed Saturday night by Colonel A. R. Hagerman, District Medical Officer, Dean W. E. Gallie, Dr. John Hepburn, Dr. J. H. McPhedran and Dr. Fletcher McPhedran. The occasion was the annual Graduation Banquet, held at the Roof Gardens of the Royal York Hotel.

Colonel Hagerman expressed great pleasure at the fact that the majority of the graduating year had already enlisted for active service, and outlined in the armed forces.

The banquet is usually the cause for much celebration and hilarity. The students were quite satisfied with the tenor of the evening, but members of the faculty commented that the banquet was remarkable for the serious attitude of the students attending it.

Trinity Holds 800-Point Margin In Fight To Retain T. A. Reed Trophy

Cleaning up in the tennis and track departments this fall, Trinity is away out in front in her bid for retention of the coveted T. A. Reed Trophy, emblematic of University all-round athletic activity. Bunched far behind come S.P.S., Meds, St. Mike's and Dents. Farther back the other faculties trail in the following sueeession: U.C., Victoria, Pharmacy, Wycliffe, Emmanuel, Forestry and Knox.

With 2122.5 points the Red and Black are over 800 points ahead of School. Coming out on top in four departments and with the aid of a small bonus for harvesters, Trinity is away out in front. Pointage: rugby 95, volleyball 125, soeeer 117.5, traek 822, swimming 50, harrier 294, tennis 425, golf 180, meetings 70 and 44 for the bonus.

School with 1280 is seeond in the raee, netting most with lacrosse, track, swimming and golf. Although in front in some leagues the points for the Reed Trophy are cut away down for them because of the high registration in the School. Pointage: rugby 65, lacrosse 137.5, volleyball 185, soeeer 72, track 374.5, swimming 97.5, harrier 75, tennis 87.5, golf 110, meetings 60.

Only 40 points behind are the Med challengers. The best in the rugby and volleyball departments, they have run up a seore of 1240. Pointage: rugby 140, lacrosse 50, volleyball 370, soeeer 65, track 343, swimming 85, harrier 12, tennis 100, golf, 5, meetings 70.

Fourth so far in the race is St. Mike's with 1018. Pointage: rugby 80, lacrosse 95, volleyball 315, track 100, swimming 70, tennis 230, golf 70, meetings 70 and a harvesters' bonus of 88.

Only three points behind in fifth spot comes Dents, aided considerably by their swimmers. Points garnered were: rugby 110, lacrosse 80, volleyball 195, soeeer 110, track 150, swimming 100, tennis 120, golf 100, meetings 50.

Considerably farther back in sixth position comes U. C. with 875. The bonus of 92 for the harvesters was a major aid. Pointage: rugby 70, volleyball 165, soeeer 65, track 143, swimming 65, harrier 80, tennis 95, golf 60, meetings 40, bonus 92.

Only a few points behind is Victoria in seventh spot. Rugby brought 70 points, lacrosse 65, volleyball 140, soeeer 65, track 10, swimming 25, harrier 16, tennis 362, golf 50, meetings 50, and a bonus of 86 to make a total of 839.

Pharmacy with 800 of which 240 were made through lacrosse, follows in eighth position; Wycliffe with 774 in ninth; Emmanuel with 652.5 in tenth; Forestry with 420 and Knox with 255 complete the standings. These figures are up to date as of Nov. 14.

Meds Arts-Letters Club Closes Till After Exams

Meetings of the Medical Arts and Letters Club have been discontinued temporarily, due to eloseness of examinations in all years of the Faculty of Medicine. There will be no meeting tonight. The next meeting will take place on January 12, 1943, when the speaker will be Dr. Roseoe R. Graham, Assistant Professor of surgery.

Officials of the Club announee that the meetings held thus far have been a decided sueeess. There has been an average turnout of 100, with faculties other than Medicine well represented.

the world's pulse

By W. J. Bramah
Secretary, League of Nations
Toronto Branch

In view of recent Allied successes, there appears to be a possibility of concluding the conflict within the next few years. Accordingly, the discussion of post-war issues is assuming a more predominant position in the focus of public attention. One of the most controversial subjects is that of India, which the C.C.F. party maintains is a problem which has been beclouded by censorship and misrepresentation.

On Oct. 27, the National Executive of the C.C.F. issued a statement requesting the Prime Minister to take the necessary steps to further negotiations with India without delay. It suggested that such negotiations be carried on by a United Nations committee, since Indian and British leaders now distrusted each other. Moreover, Indian Congress leaders should be released from prison and invited to participate in diplomatic discussion. Finally, the principle of self-government for India, linked with the aim of an Axis defeat, should be the basis of negotiations.

As illustrated in "The New Commonwealth," official C.C.F. newspaper, Britain primarily refused to supercede the Cripps proposals because relinquishing control to the Congress party would endanger Indian minorities, and expose India to Japanese attack.

When the Cripps mission failed, the Congress party initiated a civil disobedience campaign and on Aug. 9 the leaders were subsequently detained without trial; in September British Tories cheered Amery's statement that British planes were being used to machine-gun rioting mobs in Bihar province, and were delighted to hear that "We are not quitting India on anybody's orders."

The reprecussion of the Indian affair exists in the fact that it is still unsettled, and leaves a repellent taste in Lin Yutang's mouth for instance, when he says, "If justice is not given to India now, the world will refuse to believe that justice will be given to the world at our peace conference,"

It is undoubtedly important that the United Nations take some action so as to illustrate to the conquered countries, as well as to the Indians themselves, that the principles of the Atlantic Charter are to be fundamental in the distribution of post-war justice. Meanwhile there are various difficulties in bringing about an immediate settlement to the Indian question, but it is to be hoped that some of our Canadian leaders will be instrumental in establishing a means of re-opening negotiations.

Realizing the persistency of the C.C.F., and the ability of the present government to postpone an issue most successfully, it will be interesting to view the developments in this important controversy.

If you can get free passes, and have an afternoon off, go to see Mickey Rooney's latest picture. Furthermore, if you get someone to go with you, so you have a niee conversation, you will probably enjoy yourself very much. Otherwise, do something more constructive, like getting into a crap game, or, as a last resort, go to the library and sleep.

LOEW'S "A YANK AT ETON"

It seems a pity that just now, when British-American solidarity is being forged, Hollywood has to try to wreck it by releasing such pictures. All we can hope is that the production will be put on an obsolete vessel and, halfway across the Atlantic, the ship will be carefully and methodically scuttled.

We won't try to tell you the plot—we haven't figured it out ourselves, as yet. We have vague and painful memories of a healthy American boy whose one ambition is to play football for Notre Dame, being sent to England, much against his will, and then absorbing penny novelette morals and wisdom through several scenes.

This one is just about what you expect — nothing sensational, but then again not bad entertainment. The tall redwood country shows to advantage in technicolor as do Paulette Goddard and Susan Hayward. Fred MacMurray is one of the stars too — I think. Paulette, a tenderfoot from the cast, poaches on Susie's preserves and marries the guy. Susie does not appreciate this and proceeds to get nasty. Familiar, isn't it? — Well toss in a couple of dandy fires, some racy dialogue, and a lot of interesting info about the forest ranger and the lumbering business and you have a fair evening's entertainment.—S.T.

We'll oppose this action and continue to oppose it.

"The Victoria College board decided to refer the question to the executive committee with power to seek further legal advice and action. We think the action is ultra vires to the federation agreement in law, and that the Board of Governors of the University acted illegally. The executive committee will meet at Victorial College early next week."

"Two of these students wish to be admitted to St. Michael's," Father McLaughlin explained. "They are excellent students. They were exiles from Nazi persecution in Austria before the war broke out. They were in England for about a year and sent to school there. Then, when war broke out, they were interned with the other refugees. Later they were released for the purpose of atending university in Canada, and for that purpose only.

"It seems to me that the Board of Governors of the University of Toronto in refusing to admit them is assuming the obligation of forcing them to return to internment.

"On the general question of admission, we consider that the Senate of the University of Toronto has the right to determine the conditions under which students are to be admitted. We interpret the terms of federation to the effect that the colleges have the right to admit students in conformity with the regulations governing the Senate on which body the colleges are represented.

"We're keenly interested in the question of the admission of such students. For over 50 years federation has functioned according to that interpretation, and we dislike very much to see these regulations disturbed."

Trinity College is "very much concerned" in the situation Dr. Cosgrave said Saturday.

"We have no students of that type asking for admission at the present time," Dr. Cosgrave explained, "but on the general question of the refusal by the Board of Governors of the University of Toronto to admit these students, we are very much interested. We feel that the relations of the Board of Governors and other elements in the university might be strained if there is a clash of this kind. We are very anxious that this should not occur."

"Unless the students are admitted," Dr. Cosgrave said, "I foresee a great deal of difficulty."

As for the question of whether such students should be admitted he said he agreed with Dr. Cody. "I understand other universities in Canada are admitting such students," he said. "I know a neighbouring university has admitted a number of them this year. I'm told they are anxious to co-operate in every way, and no difficulty of any kind has arisen."

Dr. Cosgrave said he was sure that it was not from any question of danger to the war effort that admission was refused here. "The objection was taken on entirely different frounds," he said.

"It was that, even though these students were refugees, they actually belong to races and nations at war with us, and that in being given entrance to courses at the University they would be receiving treatment that couldn't be given to some of our own students.

"Our Colleges will undoubtedly want to consider its regulation in regard to the general question," he said.

Mr. Higginbottom traced the Board's deliberations on the matter in a interview with The Varsity Sunday. He said that a committee composed of two members from each of the three Federated Colleges, and certain members of the Board of Governors, had been formed to make recommendations to the Board regarding action to be taken concerning application of the "friendly aliens" to enrol at the University, and also regarding three applieations from men of Japanese citizenship.

The committee recommended to the Board that two of the Japanese, who were born in Canada and had applied to enter arts courses, be allowed to do so, and that decision in the case of the third—born in Japan and applying to enter the fourth year of the course in Mechanical Engineering—be deferred until decision was reached in the case of the "friendly aliens."

The Board acted upon this recommendation, Mr. Higginbottom said. At a later meeting, following correspondence with Ottawa authorities, the committee recommended that the aliens be permitted to enrol at the University. But when Dr. Cody made a motion to that effect, it was defeated by the tie vote.

"The racial question never entered into the Board's discussion," Mr. Higginbottom said. He added that among arguments advanced against admitting the aliens to this University was the thought that they might find themselves in an embarrassing position among students here who disapproved of their admission, and also the suggestion that when Canadian students were fighting overseas it was unfair to admit foreign-born students to the universities from which the Canadians had been withdrawn.

PART I

(60) BASIC LECTURE

The Basic Lecture on "Organization of National Defence—Air Force" will be given on Tuesday, Nov. 17, at 4 p.m. in Room 331, O.C.E. Lecturer: Instruction Officer, R.C.A.F. (W.D.)

(61) MEDICAL CHECK

All members who have not reported to the Medical Adviser for a medical check this fall will do so immediately. Appointments will be accepted from this date. Victoria residence students who have been examined must obtain a certificate to this effect and file same with the University Women's Medical Adviser, 44 Hoskin Avenue, unless they have already filed such a certificate with the Commandant.

(62) SECTION LEADERS

Section Leaders Evans, Schondelmayer, Galbraith, Leigh-Mallory and Hart-Smith will file with the Commandant before November 20 a complete record of attendance in their respective sections to date. Volunteers Beatty and Ash will also submit record of attendance at their respective classes in First Aid and Typing.

requires hard, vigilant training. But relaxation is essential too. I am glad that many of our Allies are associated with us in the Exhibition. I understand that many of their works of art have been exhibited also. The world has to go on—music and art too."

Speaking for the University, President H. J. Cody said, "We are glad in the University to foster the fine arts, and we are very proud that the first Armed Forces Exhibition to be held in Canada is to be exhibited in Hart House."

The Acting Warden, J. R. Gilley, expressed warm thanks for the co-operation of all those concerned with the Exhibition: the war services organizations, the Canadian Broadcasting Corporation, the Citizens Committee for Troops in Training, business firms, the Art Committee, and many others.

Mr. Gilley prefaced his remarks by reading the following cable from Rt. Hon. Vincent Massy: London, England: "Please have following message read at luncheon: Greetings on the occasion of the formal opening of the Forces Art Exhibition at Hart House. The Warden, my wife, and I unite in sending our warmest congratulations to all those concerned in this fine undertaking, and our warmest good wishes for its success. (signed) Massey.'

Two hundred and twenty-seven entries were submitted for the show, of which 218 were accepted. Main theme of most of the paintings and sketches is life in and around the various camps in which the contributors have trained.

The exhibition was open Saturday from 3 p.m. until 6 p.m. On Sunday more than 1,500 people crowded into the Art Gallery in the afternoon. For the next two Sundays the gallery will be open in the afternoon to the general public and all during the week to members of the armed forces and members of Hart House.

STUDENTS ASK RECONSIDERATION OF BAN

PLAN WAR SERVICE DRIVE

Books For Training Camps, Funds For Allied Students To Be Collected On Campus

In Biggest Campaign Since "March of Dimes," I.S.S. and War Services Committee Collaborate Under S.A.C.; Blue and White Ribbons Will Be Sold; Better Type of Books Wanted for Armed Forces

DEC. 2 TO BE BIG DAY

Authorized by the Students' Administrative Council and staged for the assistance of International Student Service and the War Services Committee of the University of Toronto, the War Services Campaign—biggest war charity drive on this campus since last year's "March of Dimes"—will be staged Wednesday, Dec. 2.

The drive—two-fold in intention—will raise money to aid students in countries where normal educational facilities have been disrupted by the war, and gather books for sailors, soldiers and airmen in Canadian training camps.

Money will be raised for I.S.S. through the sale of blue-and-white ribbons to be worn by contributing students. Original ribbons will cost 25 cents. A competitive flavour will be added with the sale of ribbons in the donor's college or faculty colours to any contributing more than this amount.

Sale of the ribbons will take place Dec. 2, and will be carried on in university buildings and on the campus by co-ed salesgirls.

Meantime members of the S.A.C. will appoint faculty and college representatives to handle the collection of books students are to contribute for the armed services' camps.

Types of books desired will be defined by the War Services Committee

War Services Reported

At the open meeting of the University Women's War Services Committee yesterday in the theatre of the Women's Union, the various sub-committees reported on their year's work. The treasurer of the Committee announced a bank balance at present of $1,170.51, and the secretary reported that through the efforts of the Committee and J. M. McBeth, a provincial charter had been obtained. Mrs. H. J. Cody gave the opening address.

The sub-committee on the Blood Donors' Clinic reported the opening of the women's clinic. Women between the ages of 21 and 50 are asked to telephone the Red Cross headquarters at 50 Bloor Street E. to make arrangements for contributing blood. The clinic is open to women on Tuesdays. The clinic serves men who wish to donate blood on Mondays and Thursdays at the rate of about 250 in a single morning.

The chairman of the sub-committee on Refugees outlined the work of the group in moving refugees who were not well suited to farming, off the land and into industries where they could better assist Canada's war effort. Books are being collected, with the assistance of the public school teachers of the province to build libraries for refugees, and each family in one western town is supplied with two magazines a month. The condition of refugee settlers in another town in the west has been improved, with the aid of the Canadian Pacific Railways. The committee is anxious to assist refugee students in the University with their problems.

Sub-committee on British Overseas Children recommended that subscribers give at least 60 per cent of the amount pledged that the work among British women and children continue to increase. The committee is housed in the Institute of Child Study, and has its support. The British government has allowed the release of a certain amount of money for the work.

Two hundred and fifty students have completed their basic training and 32 their advanced training in the past two years, the Canadian Red Cross reported. This year there are 150 students taking their basic training and 41 advanced. Eight graduates of the course are in the Air Force, two in the Women's Royal Naval Service, and undetermined numbers in the Canadian Women's Army Corps and serving over-

Hughes Talks On Education

"Education Values, the Heritages from the Past," was the topic of the first of the Armstrong lectures, delivered by Professor John Hughes, head of the Department of Education at McGill University, in the Victoria College Chapel yesterday afternoon.

All Western civilization is derived from two main sources, Greece and Palestine, said Professor Hughes. The ancient Romans valued the literary and artistic heritage of Greece and extended it in the fields of law and government.

Education has at various times been centred upon various conceptions; there have been theories of state-centred systems of education. In recent decades there has been a movement towards child-centred education, which in some cases produced an undesirable self-centredness as a result. "Better than this," said the speaker, "is self-realization by self denial. But sounder philosophy than either of these is a God-centred philosophy of education."

The current situation reveals at least one urgent need in our educational values. We should seriously try to formulate a theory of educational values which would be applicable to all religious denominations.

Professor Hughes will speak on "Education Values—The Contributions of the University and of the School," in the second lecture of the Armstrong series this afternoon in the Victoria College Chapel at 5 p.m.

Czech Student Martyrs Honoured By Nations

The Czech students perished that university students all over the world might know the price of freedom and of free thought—might know the price of education untrammeled by the heel of oppression, Dr. F. Pavlasek, Czechoslovak Minister to Canada, stated at the International Student's Day service held yesterday at Convocation Hall to pay tribute to the Czechoslovakian students massacred by the Nazis on Nov. 17, 1939.

As long as Czechoslovakia was free and strong, the way to the domination of Europe and to the world hegemony was closed to Hitler. Therefore, Czechoslovakia had to be annihilated and in order to make that hegemony a permanent one, the Czechoslovak nation destroyed.

What happened in Prague on Nov. 17 was a part of this design. Before Hitler launched his attack upon the world, he succeeded at Munich in destroying the political organization of the nation embodied in the Czechoslovak Republic. But he knew that he had failed to destroy the life of the nation and its will to resist; that to break it, he had to deprive the nation of its spiritual leaders and culture; to conquer the soul of the nation before attempting to destroy its body, Dr. Pavlasek said.

The speaker explained that by their heroism the Czech students gave voice to the spirit of their downtrodden people, assuming thus, the most honourable role intellectuals can play in a community. The flame of their sacrifice burns on to inspire the student youth of the democratic world not to stop the fight until evil is destroyed and freedom restored everywhere. For liberty is threatened in every country as long as it is trampled down in one country he said.

Today we know with certainty that they did not die in vain; that their sacrifice has strengthend the hearts and hands of all who fight in freedom, Dr. Pavlasek concluded.

Prof. B. Wilkinson, of the Department of Biochemistry, reviewed the of Czechoslovakia and of its contributions to civilization. Czechoslovakia gave us an example of modern democracy at its best, in its most courageous, most constitutional form. She was a leader in the fight for collective security, and in the negotiation of pacts of non-aggression—nothing had been left undone that intelligent honesty could do to preserve the independence of that nation.

Prof. H. Wasteneys, of the Department of Biochemistry, reviewing the history and functions of the International Students' Service. Some of the refugees driven out by the Nazis have come here and I can testify to the warm welcome given them by their fellow students in this university, he said.

President H. J. Cody who introduced the speakers stated that he looks forward to the day when the universities will play their part in the rehabilitation of Europe. In conclusion, Dr. Cody stated, "I am especially glad that you as students have welcomed those who through the brutality of others have cast themselves upon our hospitality."

RESOLUTION
SENATE
UNIVERSITY OF TORONTO

Adopted on the thirteenth day of November, nineteen hundred and forty-two.

Be it resolved:

THAT this Senate place on record its deep sense of the great services that THE RIGHT HONORABLE SIR WILLIAM MULOCK, P.C., K.C.M.G., M.A., LL.D., Chancellor of the University of Toronto, has rendered to the University over a long period of years.

SIR WILLIAM MULOCK'S connection with the University of Toronto goes back to a day in September, 1859—eighty-three years ago—when he came to Toronto from his home in Newmarket to write his matriculation examinations in old Moss Hall; and he was one of the first group of undergraduates to enter the portals of University College when the College opened for instruction a few weeks later. Since that time, as undergraduate, as graduate, as a member of this Senate, as vice-chancellor, and now as chancellor, he has played an almost continuous part in the history of the University, and, to a large extent, may indeed be said to have been its architect.

AS AN undergraduate, it was he who suggested, at the time of the Trent affair in 1861, the formation of the University Rifle Company (later "K" Company of the Queen's Own Rifles), which began the long military tradition in the University of Toronto; and at the time of the Fenian Raid of 1866 he saw active

Ask Refugees Be Admitted In Resolution Passed On International Student Day

President of University S.C.M. Proposes Resolution That Board of Governors Reconsider Decision, at Close of International Student Day Service; Resolution Will Be Forwarded to Board of Governors at Once

STUDENTS UNANIMOUSLY IN FAVOUR

Several hundred University of Toronto students unanimously passed a resolution yesterday requesting the Board of Governors to reconsider its recently-announced decision to refuse admittance into the Federated Arts Colleges to 18 former internees.

The resolution, proposed by A. J. Norquay, I Emmanuel, President of the University of Toronto Student Christian Movement, and seconded by Gordon Bell, VI Meds, was passed in Convocation Hall, immediately following observance of International Students' Day.

Bell, vice-president of the Students' Administrative Council and President of the Medical Society, told The Varsity that he had acted in no official capacity but as a private student in seconding the motion.

As President H. J. Cody left the platform accompanied by visiting dignitaries and faculty members following conclusion of yesterday's ceremonies, John Coleman, Executive Secretary of the U. of T. S.S.M., asked students present to remain in their seats. He acted as chairman during the brief meeting which followed, at which the resolution was passed.

Text of Norquay's resolution follows:

I move that this representative body of students in the University of Toronto go on record as suggesting the motion of Dr. H. J. Cody in the recent meeting of the Board of Governors that 18 friendly aliens released from internment in Canada be allowed to enter the University of Toronto. Already we know many who have made a splendid contribution to the University and we will do all in our power to make others feel at home in our midst.

Vic Debaters Ask Repeal

In its opening session last night the Victoria College Debating Parliament went on record "That this House strongly recommends to the Board of Governors that they admit to the University the 18 internee students refused admission recently." Carried by a vote of 108 to 4, the motion was disapproved by the four only because they felt it was not sufficiently emphatic.

On the topic of the evening, "Resolved that victory abroad means revolution at home," the government was defeated by a vote of 48-37. Prime Minister John Dales will now resign, to be succeeded by the present Leader of the Opposition, Marg Dillon.

Speaking first for the affirmative, Dales said, "Revolution is very possible and quite imminent, for our existing institutions have outlived their usefulness."

The Leader of the Opposition remarked that revolution more often follows defeat than victory, and that revolution was not sociologically possible.

Phyllis Mackenzie, the second speaker for the affirmative, stated that the only possible solution to the muddle in which we find ourselves today is economic revolution and the socialization of industry.

Speaking for the negative, Norm Sisco observed that Canada is greatly influenced by the United States which is overwhelmingly conservative. In addition, the French Canadians in our country and the conflict between agricultural and industrial interests preclude

The Student Voice

A scene without precedent in recent years was the one in Convocation Hall yesterday afternoon when students approved a resolution urging that the Board of Governors reconsider the stand they have taken on the matter of admitting friendly aliens to the Federated Colleges.

Apparently the students of this heterogeneous University — or at least that fairly representative group which attended yesterday's International Students' Day observances—for once found themselves united in opinion on a question which is currently agitating this campus.

The result of their brief but decisive deliberation on the S.C.M.-sponsored motion that the Board be asked to reconsider is to be forwarded to the Secretary of that body. And when it comes up for the consideration of the Governors, they would be advised to give it serious consideration. Because, even though it was actually subscribed to by only a relatively small section of the student body, it accurately represents, in our opinion, the reaction of the majority of students and staff to the recent Board ruling.

The Governors should bear in mind that the decision to refuse admittance to the 18 students in question was reached only after a split vote and the invoking of a by-law of an unusual nature. (Usually, in cases of tie votes, a chairman casts the deciding vote—but under the by-laws of this organization a tie vote is considered negative.) They should remember that heads of the Colleges concerned have expressed regret at their decision, and in one case at least, doubt as to the legality of the measure. They should consider that while their move may be pleasing to certain reactionary sections of the press and public, it places this University in a singularly poor light in the eyes of other academic centres where the decision to admit such students was readily made. They should give thought to the question of whether their action is fully compatible with the ideals of freedom and justice for which this University is supposedly training its students to fight.

And considering all these points, they might remember that their decision is possibly not irrevocable. Even Boards of Governors have the right to a second thought. Today The Varsity respectfully adds its voice to those of students in Convocation Hall yesterday, as it urges the Board of Governors to reconsider.

I.S.S. Appeal

As a fitting sequel to last year's sensationally successful "March of Dimes" a War Services Campaign will be held on this campus on December 2 in aid of International Student Service and the War Services Committee of this University. This year the drive will take the form of a sale of University and College ribbons: one's first contribution of 25 cents will entitle one to wear the blue and white colours of the University. A further contribution will be rewarded by the colours of the contributor's college or faculty. The sale of the latter ribbons is expected to stimulate inter-faculty rivalry, with beneficial results for the campaign.

The drive is sponsored by the Students' Administrative Council and as such is an official University student function.

International Student Service would appear to be merely a name to most of the students on this campus, a name perhaps connected with last year's "March of Dimes" and dimly with European students in concentration camps and with Chinese students. Working with the co-operation of students in all free countries from its head office in Geneva the I.S.S. does indeed work with European and Chinese students but its work is wider in scope than this.

In the hope of clearing up a few of the controversial points about I.S.S. at this time when the students are being asked to contribute to its beneficial work we are here reprinting part of an editorial published in our columns on October 16 and written by Bob Miller, graduate student in philosophy at this University and head of the local student executive of I.S.S.:

"International Student Service is a world organization with the purpose of creating a better understanding among student bodies. With the advent of the war its work has become chiefly that of relief—raising money in those countries which still have free universities to provide books, food and clothing, medical supplies, recreational equipment and so on for students in war prisons, internment and refugee camps, and for students attempting to carry on in occupied or war-torn countries.

"But the I.S.S. is also concerned with the effect of the war on the intellectual life of students, and strives to promote intelligent thought on questions of international significance to students.

"The Red Cross and the Y.M.C.A. co-operate with I.S.S., referring student cases to it and sometimes helping to distribute food and comforts purchased with I.S.S. funds—as was done recently at the University of Athens. The European Student Relief Fund and the United China Relief Fund are the two large administrative bodies of I.S.S.

"Last year committees on Canadian campuses raised funds amounting to $4,770; this year's goal has been set at $8,000. I.S.S. appeals only to students and faculty members for financial support but its committee feels that more than $8,000 should be forthcoming from these sources."

Book Harvest

The Book Harvest on behalf of the men in the training centres of the Canadian armed forces which is to be held on December 2, as the second part of the War Services Campaign, has the laudable purpose of providing our forces-in-training with reading material of university calibre. Complaints have come from a large number of the training camps that the books sent them by well-intentioned organizations have failed to include many volumes above the intellectual level of Westerns.

The call for books which is being sent out at the present time is to fill a gap in the recreational needs of a substantial number of men in the services, and the Universities are, quite logically, the first place toward which this appeal should be directed. It requires not great mental effort for students to place themselves in the position of these men, and, most certainly, they will need no advice as to the books needed.

It is to be hoped that the students of each faculty of the University will respond generously to this appeal.

ART MUSIC Drama

This Is IT

Arsenic and Old Lace

If you miss the madness of Arsenic and Old Lace, you are crazy. More than that, you are stupid. The advance billing quotation, calling it "the funniest play ever written," or something similar, is not far off.

From the first moment of the action until the very last line which heads this review, the play is one long laugh, interspersed with a few, short intervals of silence. The play is funny because it exploits the incongruity of two apparently sane old ladies, sweet and gentle, who act casually about what society considers one of the more horrible crimes, murder by poison.

That doesn't give away anything more about the plot than everyone knows. I won't go any further because nothing more can be said without spoiling some effect of the best written play that has come to Toronto since I started to University, anyway.

The actors are extremely good. Cecilia Loftus as Miss Abbey and Walter Hampden as Jonathan Brewster are the top stars, and there is no one in the cast who is not perfectly capable in his part.

In short, for an evening of perfect entertainment, at no time throughout the year will you be able to do better than this play. If a better play comes along, I will eat a metaphorical hat.

Even the curtain calls are brilliant.

SECRET WEAPON UNLEASHED

New Use Found For Freshmen; Commando Unit Strikes Terror All Along German Coast

FROSH FOIL FOE

Somewhere in Elsewhere, Nov. 17—(HUP—2—3)—Information has just been released about the newest thing in Commando tactics, by Lou Sarmswing, well known Varsity gymnast and leader of an experimental Commando troop. According to Mr. Sarmswing, these new soldiers, called PAFs (Pass Arts Frosh), dressed in their new uniforms and armed only with mosquito lotion, landed at dawn along the bleak coast of Northern Gymnasia and successfully destroyed German morale for many miles inland.

"The new tactics are intended mainly to induce an acute and severe state of mental shock in the inhabitants of enemy coastal areas," Mr. Sarmswing explained. "The PAFs are outfitted with a complete two-piece uniform, closely resembling the Hart House regulation P.T. uniform. Even the strongest-stomached and best-controlled Nazi will turn a delicate shade of green when confronted with a husky freshman garbed in a trim white and indigo shirt and royal blue shorts.

"The idea," he continued modestly, "was not my own, but was copied from the custom of the ancient Britons who used to paint their bodies with woad in order to terrify their enemies. The horrible blue color of woad is matched in the modern world only by a weapon banned by the Geneva convention of 1927. This weapon," he whispered with a shudder, "is sometimes spoken of as 'Mascara'."

An unconfirmed report from Bremen states that an entire shipyard was thrown into confusion for three hours by the sudden appearance of a solitary PAF, hopping along the concrete wall. He was reported to be slapping mosquitoes vigorously. The terror-stricken workmen stampeded, and by the time the Heimwehschutzarmiesgegenluftbombengesellschaftdients platoon were able to train an anti-aircraft battery on the wall, the lone PAF had disappeared, after having smeared his legs with mosquito repellent.

Another PAF, thinner and hairier than the standard model, was reportedly observed on a wharf, doing pushups at sunrise. Following this gruelling incident the populace of the whole coastal area had to be evacuated to an undisclosed inland rest-cure centre.

Officials of the Nazi Party were busy commanding firing squads, but an authorized spokesman permitted himself to be quoted thus: "It's inhuman, that's what it is. Fresbmen are too horrible to be real. We will be forced to sue for peace if this does not stop at once."

ONE OF BEST IN SERIES

A freshman, fresh from Saskatoon by way of Toronto (Varsity harvester), amazed all onlookers at the Blue Bowl yesterday afternoon. Franky Dunlop of the Irish spearheaded a fighting team to a very tight 2-1 decision over U.C. The game could have gone either way, and was very hotly contested. Tempers flared, and elbows flew at half mast all through the fray.

First quarter. U.C. received Jacob's kick-off; from this point everyone, even the spectators, felt the tension. U.C. scored early, when Bitove kicked a rouge. He then amazed the Gaels with some beautiful passes to Cutler and Nesbitt. At this point "Bud" Odette entered the game along with Dunlop. Odette's powerful kicks held the Red-and-White from then on.

Second Quarter. Jacob's plunging, and Dunlop's leaping passes kept U.C. with their backs to the wall. But the latter held very well, mainly because of a staunch line composed of "Elbows" Nichol, "Berry" Goodman, "Bucky" Zierler and Dunean. Their tackling stood out in this quarter. Near the end of the quarter Odette let go a towering punt, and the U.C. back was rouged to tie the game 1-1.

Third Quarter. The Double Blue took to the air again, sparked by Dunlop. U.C. retaliated with powerful plunging by Stellman, Smith and Bill Wade. Wade was brilliant around the ends, and had the Double Blue plenty worried. Finally St. Mike's line stiffened, and Odette kicked the pay-off point. He had two chances, when U.C. were offside on the kick. The U.C. back had made a brilliant 50-yard run-run-back to no avail.

Fourth Quarter. The Irish, hemmed in by a tenacious U.C. attack led by Bitove, Morton and "Jake" Wade, fought very hard to hold their slight advantage. St. Mike's charging wing-line, led by "Tubby" Karl of Oneonta High, "Cherry" Cherico and Ray Finan, saved their skins for the Irish in this quarter. But at the last minute, Bitove rallied his men to a brilliant finale. The Red and White swept from their own goal-line to the Irish 40 via the Annie Oakley method. The whistle closed out one of the best Mulock Cup games of the year.

Although Ina De Martino, as Marguerite, seemed a little awkward, the listener soon forgot her apparent inexperience in acting when she used her expressive but natural and unforced voice.

It is perhaps unfair to expect the same singer to be equally convincing as a doddering old alchemist and a reincarnated Faust. Patrick Henry, with his flashing teeth, wavy hair and Hollywood smile, fitted the dashing young version of Faust perfectly, but not even the flowing beard and mantle and the crooked stick could conceal these features in the first scene.

The tall, dark and forbidding Mephistopheles in the person of Arthur Anderson was especially well cast. He has a good baritone voice, but he could have made more of the famous mocking Serenade in the second act.

Valentine and Siebel did a good job, both acting and singing.

The weakest link in the performance was the chorus, which was rather wobbly, especially in the first act, and seemed to have difficulty with the words. This can probably be attributed to the company's large repertoire.

The overture suffered from the numerical weakness of the strings in the orchestra, but in the rest of the performance the orchestra was quite adequate. The conductor, Fritz Mahler, should be given special mention for holding the orchestra and chorus together through some rather difficult situations.

1. DUTIES

(i) To be Orderly Officer, Tuesday, 17 Nov. 42:
Lieut. C. M. Jephcott

Next for Duty:
Wednesday, 18 Nov. 42—Lieut. N. F. Mallon.
Thursday, 19 Nov. 42—Lieut. W. Todd.
Friday, 20 Nov. 42—Lieut. T. G. Irwin.

Orderly Officer for the day will report to the Adjutant at the Bn. Orderly Room before 1100 hrs. on the day he is warned for duty, and report to the senior officer on the floor of the Armourics at 1540 hrs. the same day.

(ii) Duties—C.Q.M.S.

Coy. Comdrs. will detail for duty a C.Q.M.S. for the day as follows:
Tuesday, 17 Nov. 42—"O" Coy.
Wednesday, 18 Nov. 42—"S" Coy.
Thursday, 19 Nov. 42—"Q" Coy.
Friday, 20 Nov. 42—"T" Coy.

The C.Q.M.S. detailed for duty will report to the Orderly Officer at the University Avenue Armouries on the day so detailed, at 1540 hrs.

2. COMPANY PARADES—17 NOV. 42

Training for the 2nd Bn. will commence at the University Avenue Armouries, for all Companies, the week commencing 16 Nov. 42.

Members of this unit will go independently to the Armourics in time to fall in with their Coys. at 1550 hrs.

A ten minute break in training will be held from 1640-1650 hrs.

Members of the Unit will enter the Armouries by the South door and will keep the entrance passage clear. All ranks will keep along the wall in proceeding to their Coy. falling in areas so as not to interfere with any other Units that might be forming up or training.

Coys. will parade on the same days as heretofore.

3. DRAWING OF RIFLES

Rifles will be drawn from the 48th Highlanders of Can. Stores.

4. DRAWING OF L.G.M.'s

L.G.M.'s will be drawn from the Queen's Own Rifles (Can.) Stores.

5. DRESS

(i) Members of this Unit will attend all Coy. and Bn. parades in uniform.

(ii) Greatcoats will be worn, buttoned to the throat and buttons clean.

(ii) Other Ranks will wear C.O.T.C. shoulder badges on the shoulder straps of the greatcoat, and will not wear them on the battle dress blouse while greatcoats are in wear.

6. CANTEEN

Members of this Unit using the Canteen in the "break" period must so regulate their time that they will be back on their Coy. parade area ready to fall in promptly at the beginning of the second period at 1650 hrs.

7. NATIONAL REGISTRATION CARDS

All ranks must be at all times in possession of their NATIONAL REGISTRATION CARDS. Without this eard no one will be admitted to the Armouries.

8. REGIMENTAL FIRST AID COURSE

The Regimental First Aid Course will continue on Wednesday, 18 Nov. 42 (instead of Monday, 16 Nov. 42).

Place: Main Lecture Hall, 119 St. George St.

Speaking of Sport

EDITOR'S NOTE: Continuing in our series of Tuesday guests we have today Tom Barnett—chief push of the Wycliffe athletic program. Excelling in volleyball, basketball and especially track, of which he is one of this campus' best, our Theologian guest is the main reason for the smaller college's holding its spot in the Reed Race.

By Tom Barnett

It was a rash moment when I said "Yes" to the bright lad who asked me to write the S.O.S. The honour was appreciated, and is appreciated, but . . . when it actually came down to brass tacks, what could one say? For one thing, the clergy, including the junior stage known as theologs, are expected to be forever drawing morals. Again, in every walk of life there are those who are opposed to the established order of things. Representative of the latter group are the Irish—at least, so tradition says, and who knows but that tradition may be right—for once. Faced with these two facts—being both a clergyman (in the Aristotelian sense that everything is what it can become), and an Irishman, it was a choice of breaking with tradition or of pointing out some moral maxim.

The professional bias nothwithstanding, there remains a problem in my mind which calls for a few remarks of a moral nature. Most of you are not concerned, but the few who are can very well spoil things for the majority. It all hangs upon the question "Why do we participate in sport?" If you do so because you like to play, my remarks are probably irrelevant. Other motives are known to exist. There are those who want to keep in shape, who seek honour and fame for self or for College, or who have been conscripted (more politely—strongly urged) to play.

All of these are excellent motives, more or less, but unless the sheer love of sport prevails, the game in question is liable to suffer. For example, there is no harm in being conscripted, in the better sense, provided one does not enter the field with a half-hearted attitude. Your manager has to get up a team, so you are urged to play, but unless you have, on can develop, a liking for the sport, it were better to be AWOL and take the consequences. It may be a thread-bare maxim, but what profit is there in winning a race, or a game, or a match, unless "The game is the thing"?

So you ask, as you may well do, what is that guy talking about? I know, you've heard that same thing dinned into your ears at every athletic banquet you ever attended. Sure. But I warned you that I was only interested in a few people. I am not addressing may remarks to all the "real sports," the "good guys" I've met in the half-decade around here. The fact remains that referees often have a very uncomfortable session when one or both teams which they are judging decide that his decisions should be protested. It makes it very hard on the nerves and on the hair of certain gentlemen who are trying to give us a square deal. And incidentally, such protests, especially when accompanied by loss of temper, spoil everything for those who are interested in the game, win or lose.

Admittedly, it is a GOOD THING to win. Admittedly referees can make mistakes. Admittedly, the office staff can get things mixed up. But they are mistakes which the best of us can make. Why lose your temper? What if there was an offside which the ref could not see? Suppose the ref did happen to be looking the other way when someone touched the net? You may lose an advantage for the time being, but next time it may be your turn to get the better of it. The decision was not made to cramp your style. The referee's job is not the easiest.

Meanwhile, the Intra-mural sport program rolls along. Mac McCutcheon has had plenty of bouquets thrown in his direction, but I make no apology for throwing another. Any fellow who is willing to carry his work home from the office, and spend long hours over it, is an exception. Mac is just such an exception. When all good little students are in bed—or ought to be—he has been known to be working out the schedule for the coming week. Again we must point to a moral—think twice before asking for a postponement of a game just because one or two men can't be there. Everybody is having trouble this year, and we all have to take a rap once in a while. And it seems to be the time to cut down on the number of defaults. We can't afford to let Mac die on our hands from lack of sleep!

Finally, if anyone wishes to find me guilty of breach of my own maxims, he and the Sports Ed. are invited to lunch at the Arcadian Court—on me.

Formerly Varsity Puckster, Copp Now Stars For Leafs

Leafs New Defenceman Played Defence Under Ace Bailey in '39-40; Before that, Centre for Mount Allison University

ADMIRES DRILLON

By Gordon Mack

Playing a position once occupied by such redoubtable figures as Bert Corbeau, Hap Day, King Clancy, Red Horner and Wally Stanowski is a Fifth Year Dental student at the University of Toronto—and he's convincing Toronto hockey fans that the Maple Leafs haven't suffered irreparable damage behind the blue-line with the departure of these and other stalwarts in recent years.

Bobby Copp, who sparked Ace Bailey's Varsity Blues to the intercollegiate title in 1939-40, is continuing his sprightly tactics in the more rarified atmosphere of Maple Leaf Gardens, and sportswriters, fans and players are already learning to regard the Leafs' rookie defenceman with respect.

Bob started his career 23 years ago in Port Elgin, New Brunswick, a small dot on the map across the Northumberland Strait from Prince Edward Island. Until he finished high school, Bob played goal for the local shinny clubs and one of them, the Amherst St. Pats, carried off the Maritime Junior Championship with his assistance. At 16 he went to Mount Allison U. and abandoned the net to play left wing. The next two years he played centre, and the Mount Allison sextet were crowned Intercollegiate champs both years. Graduating with his B.A. from Mount Allison, Bob entered Dentistry and an important five years at Toronto.

Back in the pre-war days, the Varsity hockey team played exhibition games with the U. of California, U. of Southern Cal., Loyola (Cal.), U. of Los Angles, and Gonzaga U. (Spokane, Washington). In the '39-40 season, Bob made the trip with the team out to sunny California and was a potent factor in the team's success of winning all five games. On the trip back, they played and defeated handily such eastern teams as Princeton, Yale, Dartmouth, and the McGill Grads. The team that year won Toronto's first Intercollegiate championship in eight years and during the season won 20 games to a single defeat at the hands of the strong Goodyear club that included such future professionals as Don Metz, Hank Goldup, Red Heron and Johnny O'Flaherty.

In an interview last Friday, Bob was quick to give credit to the Varsity coach "Ace" Bailey. It was Bailey who shifted Bob back to defence and gave him the training that has resulted in Bob attaining the ambition of 90 per cent of hockey-minded Canadian youth. Bob's experience as forward and goalie makes him a threat as a rushing rearguard, and a second goal-tender, à la Lionel Conacher, when the team is being hard pressed.

Bob is not big for a defenceman, his 170 pounds being almost 20 pounds lighter than his defence mate Reggie Hamilton. When he first came to Toronto he played English rugger one year and also rugby for Dents, but when he reached the upper years he realized that he only had time to specialize in one sport, and fortunately chose hockey (opinions of Messrs. Ross, Patrick, Irvin, etc., nothwithstanding). After the collapse of intercollegiate sport two years ago, Bob joined up with Marlboro Seniors and was instrumental in their winning two O.H.A. championships. The year he joined the Marlboros Bob got married.

His team-mates Syl Apps and Billy Taylor are the trickiest he has played against yet, but he has great respect for fellow-Maritimer Gordie Drillon whom he met down east several years ago.

Like all fifth year Dental students, Bob's immediate future seems planned for him. Whether he will miss the playoffs after he graduates sometime next March is uncertain as yet, but Bob is not the worrying type. Like S.P.S.'s Jackie McLean, Bob's studies prevent him from playing in the games across the border, but he will be able to take the Montreal trips and they're going to be among the toughest on the circuit this year.

Bob admits he wouldn't consider playing for the Leafs if he were in first, second or third year Dents, but in the upper years the requirements are only a definite number of hours in laboratory and infirmary work, and by abstaining from sinking "eight" balls in the side pocket every other day, Bob can manage to keep the upper band with his studies, C.O.T.C., and hockey.

The Port Elgin star has never played on a team that hasn't won a championship, and by recent performances it looks a good possibility that this year the Leafs might "Copp" the flag too.

He Still Wears Blue

Bobby Copp, Toronto Maple Leafs' newest defenceman, is a veteran of Ace Bailey's Varsity Senior Intercollegiate champions of 1939-40. He's a Fifth Year Dents man.

Reconsideration Asked By Victoria Debaters

a revolution at home.

The Speech from the Throne was delivered by the Lieutenant-Governor Dr. Walter T. Brown. Outlining government policy for the coming year, it stated that the purpose of the University is to pursue Truth, and that university students must realize their responsibilities in creating a better world.

The new Royal Commission on Grievances is to meet next week to discuss the current campus issue as to whether or not the internee students should be granted permission to enter this University.

EDITORIAL COMMENT

Reprinted from the editorial columns of The Daily Star, Monday, Nov. 16:

The Governors Should Reconsider

Seven governors of the University of Toronto have succeeded for the time being in barring 18 friendly alien refugees from the university's science courses. Seven others voted to admit them, but the tie vote had the effect of a negative decision.

Whether it is a legal decision in view of the agreement between the university and its federated colleges remains to be seen. The aliens are enrolled at Victoria College to take science courses at the university, and Dr. Walter T. Brown, Victoria's president, has already made formal protest against what appears to be a violation of the federation agreement. Legal advice on this point is being secured. But apart altogether from that aspect of the decision, the barring of these refugees is a serious mistake. Those responsible for it have done the reputation of the university a disservice. It is a regrettable thing when narrowness of outlook, rather than liberalism, dominates the governing body of a great educational institution.

It is encouraging to find that Dr. Cody, president of the university, moved the resolution to admit the aliens, a motion which was seconded by John J. Gibson, vice-president and general manager of the Chartered Trust and Executor Company; that it was supported by the chairman of the board of governors, Dr. Bruce Macdonald; that Dr. Brown, of Victoria, has determined that everything possible will be done to upset the decision to bar these refugees from the science course.

They were among those sent to Canada by Britain early in the war when friendly as well as unfriendly aliens were rounded up. Their release from internment is conditioned upon their finding sponsors—this has been done—and taking university courses which seven 'Varsity governors are apparently determined to deny them. Other universities and colleges have admitted some of these friendly people. Victoria, an integral unit of the University of Toronto, has done its part in that respect. The governors of the university should reconsider their adverse decision. It would be unfortunate if a resort to legal proceedings should be necessary in order to secure university privileges which should be available to Victoria students as a matter of course, and without which the unfortunate refugees may be forced to submit to re-internment.

Reprinted from the editorial columns of The Evening Telegram, Monday, Nov. 16:

Not A Time For Enemy Aliens To Seek Admission To Varsity

Enemy aliens are not to be admitted to the University of Toronto during the war. The motion for their admission presented to the Board of Governors by President H. J. Cody has been defeated on a tie vote. The statement issued later by the secretary of the Board spoke of the motion as one for the admission of "friendly aliens," but it was felt by at least some of those who opposed the suggestion that none of the applicants could be regarded as coming within that category.

Opposition to the motion had logical support in the injustice of placing these aliens, however they might be described, in a perferred position to young Canadians who have left the University's halls to discharge duties which the times have placed upon them. They would be given the advantage of university training to prepare themselves for positions after the war and to take the places of our own students who have given up not only their studies but their careers to fight in defense of all that we hold dear.

If these aliens are at a loose end, there are ways in which they can find occupation. If they really are friendly to the cause, they can help in our factories and elsewhere and thus contribute their own share to our war effort. Paradoxical as it may seem if they are deserving of admission to our provincial university, they should not be seeking admission there at this time.

CORRESPONDENCE

Editor,
The Varsity.
Dear Sir:

In view of the fact that a wrong impression might be deduced from interviews re the action of the Board of Governors in respect of internees, I should like to point out two facts.

1. It seems to be taken for granted that the Senate of the University is in favour of admitting these students. As a matter of fact the general question as to the advisability of admitting these students has not been up for discussion, as far as I am aware, either at any Council or at the Senate itself. I feel that the Senate will not be so unanimously in opposition to the stand of the Board of Governors as seems to be taken for granted in these interviews.

2. It is not right to say that the Government has picked out these candidates to be given their freedom provided they attend a university. As I understand it their sponsors asked to have them released in order that they might attend a university. When there is such a need of men to work in various lines why do these people not ask for the release in order that they may help with war or other necessary work. I know there are quite a number of these released internees now in our factories.

Personally I thoroughly agree with the action of the Board of Governors mainly for the reason given in the last sentence of your article.

E. F. Burton.
Toronto, Nov. 16, 1942.

Regarding the second point brought up by Dr. Burton, The Varsity has learned from informed quarters that all prospective sponsors for interned boys were told on applicotion to the Department of Immigration through the Canadian National Committee of Refugees that the internees were being released to complete their educotion only and that engaging in any work not authorized by the conditions of their release would make them lioble to reinternment.

Recently, o number of internees who were considered better fitted for industrial work thon for higher educotion were permitted to toke jobs in foctories, but most of them are still unoble to take jobs.—EDITOR.

Editor,
The Varsity.
Dear Sir:

I was very much interested to read in yesterday's Varsity the reasons advanced by the Board of Governors in refusing to admit the 18 refugees. These reasons as quoted by Mr. Higginbottom were two-fold. In the first place "it was thought that they (the refugees) might find themselves in an embarrassing position among students who disapproved of their admission." Secondly, "it was unfair to admit foreign students to the universities from which Canadians had been withdrawn."

I should like to point out that as a friend of almost all the ex-internees admitted to the University last year, and as an intimate of several, I have never known a single instance of their being embarrassed by an unfriendly attitude on the part of either students or staff. On the contrary, they have impressed upon me the fact that the students went out of their way to be friendly to them and that the staff likewise had taken special interest in them. Furthermore, although I have talked the refugee question over with many Canadian students of the most divergent political views, I have yet to meet one who disapproves of the presence of refugees at Varsity.

Regarding the Board's second point, viz., that it was not fair to admit foreign-born students to universities from which Canadians had been withdrawn, it was pointed out in yesterday's editorial that the ex-internees are forbidden to accept jobs and are constitutionally unable to enter the army. An intimate friend of mine has sought repeatedly a technical loophole in the law to enable him to enlist, but he has been consistently refused.

My experience with refugee students at Varsity would indicate that the reasons submitted by the Board are of questionable validity. I would urge that, since the decision was not made on racial grounds, the Board reconsider its decision.

Yours faithfully,
James D. M. Weld, IV Vic.

The Editor,
The Varsity.
Dear Sir:

The Varsity, Nov. 16, 1942, carries the headline "Governors Ban Eighteen Internees," and a special headline "Rally Today in Honour of Martyred Czech Students."

The spirit of the former is entirely alien to that of the latter.

The student body (through the S.A.C.) and many of the staff choose to express by means of the rally, their solidarity with anti-Nazi students the world over. They affirm their belief in the fundamental value of a university, and its handmaidens, tolerance and truth. Now, more than ever, because of the war, must we fight the Nazi technique of discrimination according to birth, colour, creed and the irresponsible use of power.

Our government, the President of our University, and many of the Governors would have these students continue their studies.

If we are giving our lives for petty politics, group discrimination, callousness to the needs and sufferings of others, I regret being in uniform. But the truth is we are fighting Nazi tyranny, ruthlessness and disregard of human values.

Therefore we students, singly, through our college executives, through the S.A.C. and The Varsity, must urge immediately that this grave decision be reconsidered, and that our fellow-students be not martyred by a tie vote.

Yours very sincerely,
Stanley Best, B. A.,
IV Medicine.

University Senate Honours Mulock

service with this Company. While still an undergraduate, he joined with a number of recent graduates of the University in resisting the proposals of the royal commission of 1861-63 to distribute the endowment of the University among all the institutions of higher learning in the province; and it was because of the efforts of himself and his associates that the University, as Sir Daniel Wilson put it, "escaped extinction."

ELECTED a member of this Senate 1873, Sir William became in 1881 vice-chancellor of the University; and he remained vice-chancellor for almost twenty years. During this period he exerted a profound influence on the development of the University. It was he who in 1881 persuaded St. Michael's College to affiliate itself with the University; it was he who in 1883 first urged the principle that the University, which had become in 1867 the provincial university of Ontario, was as much entitled to support from the provincial exchequer as were the primary and secondary schools; and it was he who in 1884 approached the authorities of Victoria University at Cobourg with proposals looking toward the federation of the universities and colleges of Ontario. As Chancellor Burwash has testified, in his History of Victoria College, "Just at the close of the old year, like a bolt from the blue, there came that which completely changed the direction and character of the whole movement. This was a letter from Vice-Chancellor Mulock addressed to a member of the Board of Regents of Victoria University, the Hon. Senator Macdonald of Toronto, who forwarded, I believe, Mr. Mulock's suggestion to President Nelles at Cobourg." It was largely his energy and foresight that brought about in 1887 the federation with the University of Toronto of Victoria University, St. Michael's College, Knox College, and Wycliffe College—a federation that paved the way for the inclusion of Trinity University in 1903, and that has provided an example for the federation of institutions of higher learning both in Canada and the United States. It was he also who in 1887 brought about the revival in the University of the Faculty of Medicine (which had been abolished in 1853), and thus transformed a federation of Arts and theological colleges into a modern university, with the first of a series of professional faculties and schools which have been added since that time. Finally, it was he who in 1887 brought about the affiliation with the University of the Ontario Agricultural College at Guelph — followed later by the affiliation of the Ontario College of Pharmacy and the Ontario Veterinary College.

SIR WILLIAM'S duties as a member of the Dominion government made necessary his resignation of the office of vice-chancellor in 1900. But in 1924, on the death of Sir Edmund Walker, he was elected chancellor of the University by acclamation; and he has happily been spared to serve as chancellor of the University from that day to this. During his chancellorship, he has taken a leading part in the various developments in the University—as, for instance, in the establishment in 1925 of the Banting Researeb Foundation, the object of which was, and is, to commemorate and further the work of that great and much-loved member of this University, Sir Frederick Banting. It is a fortunate circumstance that during these years the graduates of the University of Toronto have been privileged to receive their degrees from one whose relation to the University goes back to its early days, and of whom it may be said that in the history of the University he was magna pars.

IT IS with great respect and deep affection that we record Sir William's services to the University. May he long continue to flourish velut arbor aevo!

seas in Occupational and Physiotherapy. The sub-committee for Training Courses has trained 119 students in Civilian Defence and a First Aid Course will be given in the spring.

An appeal for overcoats for students who because of their work in the C.O.T.C. have been unable to take jobs outside the University to better their financial position, was made by the military sub-committee which was formed to assist men in the C.O.T.C. The committee has supplied sox and mitts.

The Red Cross Committee has exceeded last year's effort. Over 600 more knitted garments were made than last year. Forty-six students work in the sewing rooms, four to six each morning and each afternoon, making articles for sailors and British housewives. The S.C.M. room adjoining the Red Cross room has been taken over. Many students are working at home to save space in the workrooms.

Senate Asked To Reconsider

We respectfully request the Board of Governors to reconsider its decision.

The resolution will be forwarded to the Secretary of the Board of Governors immediately, S.C.M. officials said last night.

(Announcement of the Board's decision to refuse entry to the 18 students was made Friday by C. E. Higginbottom, Board Secretary. He said the decision had been reached Thursday when a tie vote on Dr. Cody's motion that such admittance be granted resulted in the motion being defeated.

(Following announcement of the negative result of the vote, heads of three Federated Colleges—Dr. W. T. Brown, Principal of Victoria College; Dr. F. H. Cosgrave, Provost of Trinity College; and Father T. P. McLaughlin, Superior of St. Michael's College—expressed disapproval of the Board's decision.)

Books, Funds Are Wanted

later, but members hope that a higher type of reading than that usually provided by members of the public will be drawn from university staff and student sources. A list of representatives in charge of gathering the books will be announced shortly. Collection will probably begin Monday.

The books will be kept in each college or faculty until Dec. 2, when the book-drive will culminate with processions from each of the university buildings in which books have been gathered to the front campus, where they will be turned over to the War Services Committee.

At this point the two separate drives will fuse into one unified display of university spirit, committee members predict, as street-dancing and other forms of entertainment recall last year's sensational "March of Dimes."

Futher impetus to the raising of I.S.S. funds will be given, the committee hopes, through the sale of scrolls to various campus groups — student executives, fraternities, clubs and so on. These scrolls will be given to all such organizations which contribute to the I.S.S. from their treasuries.

U.C. Students Pass Resolution For Governors To Reconsider Alien Student Decision

Resolution Passed at Dinner; Lit. Executive Says U.C. Students Bear No Ill-Will Against Friendly Aliens

CAPT. HOOD GIVES ADDRESS

A resolution urging the Board of Governors to reconsider its refusal to admit 18 friendly aliens into the Federated Arts Colleges was passed by vote of 52 to one yesterday at the close of the University College dinner in Hart House where representative U.C. students had gathered to nominate first year officers and the Athletic Director of the U.C. Literary and Athletic Society.

The resolution, proposed by Harry Katz, IV Law, will be forwarded directly to the Board of Governors by Don Rowat, President of the U.C. Lit. and one copy will be delivered to the S.A.C.

The Lit. executive also went on record as voicing the opinion that "U.C. students bear no ill-will or prejudice against friendly aliens and would allow them University education which other students have left in order to join the armed forces."

Captain M. McIntyre Hood, former editor of The Oshawa Times and The Quebec Sentinel, guest speaker at the dinner, told students that after spending two years with the Canadian Army Corps in England he was shocked by Canadian war apathy which could be likened to "Britain's smug indifference in 1940."

Declaring that Britons "had not only rolled up their sleeves but were stripped to the waist working at war," Capt. Hood said that tales by European refugees of atrocities inflicted on conquered nations had boosted British war spirit.

Prof. R. D. C. Finch, Honorary President of the Lit., thanked Capt. Hood for his address, and spoke briefly on the "true meaning" of the Literary and Athletic Society.

W. J. McAndrew, U.C. Registrar, told students he believed University College to be a true home of liberality and tolerance, and said that proposal for the construction of a University College residence after the war was supported by the Board of Governors

There are still some male students who have not settled accounts with the Student Christian Movement Book Exchange. Remaining accounts will be settled today between 12:30 and 4:00 p.m. in Room C, Hart House.

School Auction Precedes Dinner

The sound of cannon-fire from the south end of the campus today will not be Nazis nor war maneuvers but merely School's traditional Auction Sale, a sort of medicine show advertising the School Dinner which is to be held tonight in Hart House. At the sale, where everything in sight is sold to the highest bidder, the engineers take the opportunity to air their collection of unprintable jokes picked up at survey camps and mining towns in the summer.

The guest speakers are Dr. W. E. McNeill, B.A., M.A., Ph. D., Vice-Principal of Queen's University, who will speak on the subject, "Have You Anything to Declare?" and Mr. S. R. Frost from the Wartime Bureau of Technical Personnel, who will discuss the work of the Bureau as it applies to Engineering students and graduates.

This will be the 53rd consecutive School Dinner since the first one held in 1980 by a comparative handful of 54 Schoolmen. The Dinner of the present day is a quiet affair when contrasted with the lavish entertainments of forty or fifty years ago when such main dishes as roast quail and braized pheasant were offered, followed by boxing bouts, skits, or as many as 15 speakers. The committee this year had so much difficulty getting rationed food and waitresses that there was some conjecture as to whether there would be any School Dinner at all next year.

NOTICE

Certificates of attendance in connection with the payment of the second instalment of University of Toronto Scholarships (not including College Scholarships) may be obtained at the Registrar's Office, Simcoe Hall.

POLISH REFUGEE STUDENT TELLS OF LIFE AT WARSAW

Winnipeg, Man., Nov. 17—(CUP)—Theodore Schwartz, a refugee from Poland, now a student in Engineering at the University of Manitoba, in an interview with The Manitoban recently, told of life at the Warsaw Academy where he received a degree in 1938.

The Academy of Warsaw was government subsidized and students who had no financial backing and who sought culture and knowledge attended it.

Schwartz said. "The students wanted knowledge, so that as enlightened people they might use it to break a definite trail for society through and out of this chaos." Their life was hard. Black bread was their food. White bread or any liquid other than water was an almost unthought of luxury. Most of the students worked their way through college as teachers or watchmen. Schwartz carned his way by teaching.

In politics students of Europe are not as complacent as they are in Canada. "They did not trust politics to politicians, nor their political economy to their professors," Schwart said. The greatest friction on a European campus was caused by the diversity of student politics. Even their fraternities were influenced. They were not labelled by Greek letters but rather by a political platform.

As antagonism occurred against political groups in Poland signs of unrest were first seen among the students. Riots were not uncommon and lectures became battle scenes with knives, clubs and steel-gloved hands impressing views. Not an exam was at stake, but lives were put in the balance daily.

To Canadian students, this travelled young man says: "The enemy is destroying culture in Europe; the intelligentsia are being eliminated. In this new world, a haven for the scholar, students must strive to maintain the knowledge and culture provide in a free land. 'Knowledge comes, but wisdom lingers'."

Water Topic Of Lecture By Leggett

Canadian Reconstruction Must Include Administration Measures for the Preservation of Our Water Resources

NOW HAVE LARGEST SUPPLY

Water is the "primus inter pares" of our resources, said Professor R. F. Leggett, assistant professor in Civil Engineering in the University, speaking on "Water and Power" yesterday. Professor Leggett's lecture was sixth in the present series on Reconstruction being given in the Economics Building each Tuesday afternoon.

"Without water no form of life could be sustained," said the speaker, "of all our resources, it demands the most attention and receives the least."

The area of fresh water in Canada is considerably greater than that of any other country in the world, continued Professor Leggett. Several of her rivers are over one thousand miles in length and Lake Superior is the world's greatest fresh water lake. Too many people accept the lakes and rivers as a part of Canada's dowry, and consider that their use needs little control.

In addition to the natural role of water in the growth and maintenance of vegetation and the maintenance and preservation of wild life, it is the provider of eight major services, including water supply for domestic and industrial uses, transportation, power, irrigation, disposal of waste, drainage, logging and recreational facilities. There is a great interdependence in these services, as no one of them ean be considered without giving thought to several others.

In his discussion of the hydrological cycle, Professor Leggett said that since the flow of rivers throughout the year is generally dependent on ground water, the latter must be considered in association with the surface water provided by rain and snow.

Commerce Banquet To Be December 1

The Commerce Club will inaugurate its activities this year with its annual banquet Tuesday, Dec. 1 in the Great Hall of Hart House.

Guest speaker will be North Winship, United States consul-general at Toronto. His subject, "United States and Canadian Co-operation in this War," is particularly timely because of the unprecedented interlocking of the war effort of the two countries.

In his duties as a foreign service officer, Mr. Winship served successively as consul at Tahiti, Petrograd Milan, Bombay, Fiume, Cairo, Copenhagen and Warsaw. He was Counsellor of Embassy at Warsaw at the time of the German invasion of Poland. His knowledge of Canadian-American relationships, together with his many years experience in the foreign service, should ensure an address that is both informative and colourful.

Tickets for the banquet can be obtained at the Economic Building, or from any member of the Commerce Club Executive. Although the Commerce Club is an organization for the students of Commerce and Finance, and Political Science, it has been decided that because of the general appeal of the address tickets will be made available to anyone interested.

Hughes Speaks On Education In Vic Series

Stresses Importance of Christianity in Education; Says Student Learns at Uni. that Truth Is Greater than Facts

2ND ARMSTRONG LECTURE

The second and last of the two Armstrong Lectures was given yesterday by Professor John Hughes in Victoria College. Pro. Hughes is the Head of the Department of Education at McGill University, and the subject of yesterday's lecture was "The Contribution of Schools and Colleges."

The lecture was open to undergraduates, graduates and the general public, and the two last named categories were in a decided majority.

Prof. Hughes stressed the importance of Christianity in education. "Every branch of study and activity of a school should contribute to further knowledge. Good education is an infection, not an injection," he said. "A passive acceptance of our heritage is not enough."

Prof. Hughes sketched briefly the various departments of eduction; science, the arts and the fine arts as an aid in religious education. An appeal for more hero worship on the part of students was made.

"The University makes the best contribution to the community by being

Trunk of Lady Brock Presented to University

Colonel E. B. Worthington, LL.B., C.M.G., of Sherbrooke, Quebec, has presented to the University of Toronto a small wooden travelling trunk, at one time the property of Lady Brock, wife of Major General Isaac Brock, the hero of Queenston Heights, President H. J. Cody has announced.

The trunk measures 14 inches by 10 inches and is bound with small brass bands. It has a brass handle and a brass plate on top inscribed, "Mrs. Brock No. 3." The British Coat-of-Arms is on the front and the trunk also carries the trade name, "Handyfords Patent Trunk, St. James Sq." Age of the trunk is said to be about 140 years.

President Cody proposes to place the trunk in either the Royal Ontario Museum or in the Headquarters of the C.O.T.C. at 119 St. George St.

P. Philip Of New York Times To Speak On War Situation, Tomorrow, Convocation Hall

VISITORS' DAY

Sunday next, Nov. 22, will be a visitors' day at Hart House for the general public, in order that they may have an opportunity of seeing the Canadian Armed Forces Art Exhibition which is on the walls of the art gallery. The House will be open for inspection from 2 to 4 p.m.

For 25 Years Head of Times Paris Office; Left Paris Two Days Before Arrival of Germans

INTRODUCTION BY CONANT

Percy J. Philip, present Ottawa correspondent of the New York Times and for 25 years head of the Times Paris bureau, will speak at Convocation Hall tomorrow night on "The Fourth Year of the War." Hon. Gordon Conant, premier of Ontario, a University graduate of 1905, will introduce the speaker. The meeting is under the auspices of the University of Toronto Alumni Federation.

Mr. Philip left Paris on June 10, 1940, two days before the Germans arrived. He then stayed at Vichy until he had "such an acute difference of opinion with M. Laval" that he found it necessary to leave France.

Born in Scotland, Mr. Philip was educated at Edinburg University and Oxford. A war correspondent for the London Daily News during the last war, after being rejected for active service, he saw the German invasion of Belgiuf and was in that city when it surrendered. He spent the winter of 1914 with the British forces in France and stayed in Paris througout the rest of the war and the Peace Conference.

In 1920 Mr. Philip joined the Paris staff of the New York Times and during his stay in the French capital he came into close contact with important political figures from Clemenceau and Poincare to Georges Bonnet and Pierre Laval.

Tickets for Mr. Philip's address may be had free of charge on application to the Alumni Federation at 43 St. George Street. The doors of Convocation Hall will be thrown open to the public at 8:15 p.m., 15 minutes before the start of the meeting.

Soviet Series Commences Today

The first in a series of three lectures on Russia will be delivered in Hart House Theatre at 5:00 p.m. today. The other two will be given at the same time on Nov. 25 and Dec. 2.

Professor R. D. A. Finch, Chairman of Public Lectures Committee for University College said, "This is a timely series because everyone is interested in the development of Russia. The three speakers are experts in their fields and are very vigorous and enthusiastic lecturers. Each has spent a great deal of time in Russia and has written books and articles about this subject."

The first lecture, "Tolstoy and Russia Today," will be delivered by Ernest J. Simmons. The speaker is professor of Slavic Languages at Cornell University. At present he is compiling a biography of Tolstoy and bis influence on Russia.

The second lecture, "The Soviet Theatre and Cinema" (illustrated), will be given by Mr. Henry Wadsworth Longfellow Dana of Boston, a leading authority on Europcan Drama, and a grandson of the poet Longfellow. He taught in many European universities where he made a study of the theatre, especially in Russia.

'The Canadian Student' To Resume Publication

Publication of The Canadian Student, Christian student magazine edited monthly at Queen's University, has been revived, it was learned here today.

For 20 years published by the Student Christian Movement of Canada until its death in 1938, The Canadian Student has been taken over by a Queen's editorial board composed of faculty, graduate and undergraduate members, whose policy will be to collect "the best thinking" on every Canadian campus.

First copy, Volume XXI, will be available at university book stores and libraries. The magazine may be purchased in single copies or by subscription.

Meds Elections To Be Tomorrow

The annual elections for the Medical Society will be held tomorrow afternoon in Hart House Theatre, it was announced by S. C. Robinson, IV Meds.

The elections will be preceded by a parade from the Medical Building and then election speeches by the candidates.

Following this the students will vote and the casting of ballots will be followed by a tea dance—arranged by the Medettes of 1st and 2nd year. All co-eds are invited to attend this tea dance in the rehearsal room in Hart House Theatre.

TEXT BOOKS ESPECIALLY, WANTED FOR BOOK HARVEST

Types of books students will be asked to contribute for the coming "Book Harvest" set for Dec. 2 were outlined yesterday by Mary Taylor, Newman Club representative on the local War Services Committee. Collection of the books will start next week, she said.

One type in great demand at training camps — to which the books will be forwarded by the Imperial Order of the Daughters of the Empire—is text books. Technical, scientific, lingual, historical and other kinds of texts will be acceptable.

Magazines of recent date, especially those such as Fortune and National Geographic, the interest in which does not diminish as rapidly as magazines dealing with current news, are sought.

Books of fiction and biography will be of interest to the men in training, Miss Taylor said, provided they are of "a somewhat higher calibre than the usual kind of 'Rover Boys' fiction usually provided."

Pamphlets on current affairs will be of interest also, if they are of fairly recent date.

Books should be in fairly good—or at least repairable—condition, she added. "This is a Book Harvest: not a salvage drive."

The Defence Rests

Students are currently concerned over the Board of Governors' recent decision to debar 18 "friendly aliens" from this University. Question of the advisability of admitting these students to our institution is admittedly one on which there are two sides; and The Varsity has chosen to agree with those who hold that the recently-released internees should be admitted.

But we have made an effort to assess the chief arguments of those who oppose our stand in the matter. Broadly there seem to be four such lines of thought.

One: The students concerned are shirking the responsibility of accepting United Nations' shelter in not volunteering their services to the armed forces.

To which we reply that, since there are no Pioneer forces in this country, there is no branch of the armed forces in which men of their nationality are eligible for enlistment. That they are eager to make a military contribution to our united war effort will be vouched for by local C.O.T.C. authorities who have been forced by official ruling to refuse repeated applications from them.

Two: If they cannot serve in the armed forces they should at least be serving in war industries or agriculture.

To which we reply that these internees were released on specific conditions: some to return to England; some to enter industry; and some—about 10 per cent of the approximate 1,500 who were sent here originally from Great Britain—were released to continue their education, because, in the opinion of Home Office and Canadian Government authorities, they would thus be of the greatest value to the community. Under the terms of their release they cannot enter any other occupation than that of student without obtaining official permission; and we understand that such permission has been forthcoming in very few of the cases in which it has been sought.

Three: Because Canadian boys have been drafted into the armed forces and are now serving on all the world's battlefronts, it is unfair to replace them with foreign-born students who will benefit by priviliges denied to our own students.

To which we reply that it is false to speak of admitting the 18 men in question as "replacing" Canadians on active service. If they were permitted to enter, they would in no way crowd out students of our country. Certain courses, such as some in the Faculty of Applied Science and Engineering, and the early years of the Faculty of Dentistry, are now filled to capacity, and no more students of any nationality can be admitted to them this year. Other courses still have accommodation for further enrolment. If we admit 18 men to these courses—men who have been released by the Government for the express purpose of study—there can be no valid charge laid that we are offering our educational facilities to a foreign-born group at the expense of native students.

Four: German students should not be admitted to Canadian Universities at a time when we are at war with the Germans.

To which we reply that these students cannot be classified in the same category as those Germans with whom we fight. In many cases they have had first-hand knowledge of the horrors of Nazi oppression; in nearly all cases their near relatives have suffered torture or death. They are not the people upon whom we have declared war; they are the victims—and consequently the enemies—of those people. We must remember that no internee has been released without stringent examination of the individual case by officers of the British and Canadian Governments.

Therefore we are satisfied that the arguments advanced to uphold the Board of Governors' decision will not withstand logical examination. But, perhaps, in our survey of them, we have overlooked certain arguments of greater validity. To date, we have received no student-signed letters agreeing with the Board, but have had several—many more than we have space to print—condemning it. It seems, however, almost impossible that campus opinion can be absolutely undivided on such a major issue. As we have welcomed letters supporting our stand, we will welcome letters opposing it. If any of our readers care to tell us that they support the decision to debar the former internees from this University, and if they will append further reasons—or even the same reasons framed more convincingly—we will be glad to open our columns to them.

Correspondence

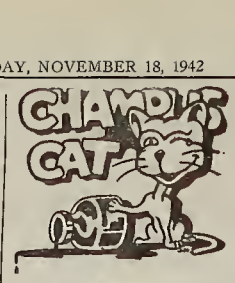
Editor,
The Varsity.

Dear Sir:

When I learned that Pro. Burton had written a letter to The Varsity giving his views in connection with the case of the refugee students, it seemed to me that I ought to write an accompanying letter, to guard against a possible mis-reading of his. He states that up to the present the question has not been discussed in any of the Faculty Councils or in the Senate. While this is the case, it might leave a wrong impression, since it fails to emphasize the fact that for these bodies the question has not been thus far a general one. The only action has been that the appropriate committees recommended their admission at the outset, some seven weeks ago. Nothing further could have been expected. From now on, however, it becomes a general question, in the Senate at least.

Prof. Burton feels that the Senate may divide fairly evenly on the matter. Should this prove to be correct, the Board of Governors would, no doubt, feel that they had spoken not for themselves alone but for the chief academic body as well. Should the Senate, however, declare overwhelmingly in favour of the admission of these students, the Board of Governors might feel that the matter should be re-opened by them.

Much as I respect the right of Prof Burton to express any opinion honestly held, I have to say that I disagree with him entirely. His view rests on considerations of practical expediency. The President's view is based on the idea of freedom for all, in particular for victims of Nazi oppression.



S. Beatty.

Reprinted from the correspondence columns of The Daily Star, Tuesday, Nov. 17:

To the Editor of The Star.

Sir: I am writing as one who has undertaken jointly the sponsorship of a refugee boy recently allowed to leave a refugee camp to continue a course begun in architecture. I am writing to express my bewilderment at the decision taken last week by the Board of Governors of the University of Toronto to exclude these released students from enrolment in the University. This heartbreaking and humiliating form of discrimination and persecution has fallen upon young people—most of them only in their late teens—and young people who have had to endure so much already in the way of sorrow and insecurity that the thought of more is unbearable. At the same time I read of a service being held on Monday, Nov. 16, in Convocation Hall, a service addressed by President Cody and others to commemorate the massacre of Czechoslovak students by the Nazis in 1939. This boy whom I am sponsoring was once a student in architecture at the University of Prague. At the time of Munich he was forced, because of his anti-Nazi sympathies, to leave Prague and flee from the path of Hitler. Though of Czech family and sympathies, he became, technically, a German national when his father took a position in Germany; for this reason he is excluded from the University of Toronto. Surely it is inconsistent for the University to mourn the fate of European students, on the one hand, and refuse to enrol them, on the other?

Bettina Vegara

Last night in Eaton Auditorium, Bettina Vegara gave a violin recital of a remarkable range of style. In the first composition played, Mozart's C Major Sonata, Miss Vegara showed a slight nervousness by faulty intonation and anticipatory entrances, but in the first two movements of the Bach G Minor unaccompanied sonata she played confidently, with full tone and remarkable expressive power.

Miss Vegara seemed at her best in the two modern groups. The Debussy sonata was played with delicacy and contrasts of tone-colour. The tour de farce of the program was the Ravel Tzigane. Here Miss Vegara exhibited great fullness of tone on the lower strings, and a dazzling left-hand pizzicato.

The accompanist, Leo Barkin, seemed to lack lightness and variety of tone in the Mozart, but his performance of the impressionistic compositions left nothing to be desired.

Paul H. Serson.

Operas

Othello

A good baritone covers a multitude of sins, and Alfred Chigi is an extremely good baritone, but even his superb performance of Iago wasn't enough to cover the shortcomings of last night's performance of Verdi's Othello.

Othello is an excellent opera, perhaps the most interesting in the company's repertoire. But among the basic requirements of the opera is a reasonably good soprano to take the role of Desdemona, which, any Shakespearian scholar will tell you, is a role of some importance. This basic requirement was lamentably lacking.

Harold Lindi did a fair job with the difficult title role, which isn't Shakespeare's Moor by a long short, and the supporting cast was quite adequate. And Chigi got everything possible out of one of the juciest parts in all opera. Anyone interested in operatic stage technique would do well to wander down to Massey Hall sometime this week and see him in action.

Edgar Simon.

La Traviata

Saturday afternoon's performance of "La Traviata" was another mediocre one in this series of opera. Mario Palermo as Alfredo was the member of the cast whose tenor voice saved this opera, as it did in his characterization of the Duke in "Rigaletta" on Wednesday night. Frank Richards as Germont the father, was a close runner-up, with a good baritone voice, and, too, his "acting" was not as obvious. The leading lady, Virginia Pemberton, as Violetta" was la traviata (the misguided one) in more than one sense of the word. Need we say more?

All in all, however, it was a fairly convincing presentation. It took the cast all of Act I to get "warmed up" to their acting. The atmosphere, too, was conveyed much more successfully from Act II on, until it reached a climax in the death scene in Act IV.

The quintet in this scene, Ah! gran Dio, was quite effective. There were several other well-known arias, too—Alfredo's Di miei ballenti in Act II, and the rather touching duet with Alfredo and Violetta in Act IV, Parrigi Caro.

It's rather a pity that the role of the consumptive demi-monde, Violetta, should always be made rather ridiculous (even at the Met.) by a too-stout prima donna.

Jean McNeill.

Il Trovatore

Verdi's Il Trovatore, performed Saturday evening, was a sueeess in spite of the chorus, the costumes, and the scenery. The principals were excellent in voice, and reached a satisfactory climax in the last act. But generally, they were unconvincing dramatically.

The one exception was the old gypsy Azucena, sung by Louise Caselotti, who over-shadowed the others and left Manrico bewildered by the fire in her passion. Her greatest moment was in the second act, when she sang the famous aria, Stride La Vampa. She was like one enchanted, living in a real part. Again, in the last act, her portrayal of

SCHOOL BLANKS MEDS 8-0

Seymour Scores Touchdown In Final Seconds Of Play

Play Is Steady Until Scoring Spurt By School in Last Quarter; Meds' Good Line Work Keeps Score Down

GIVES MEDS DEFINITE LEAD

By Sydney Paikin

Relatively unexciting was last night's Meds-S.P.S. game except for the final five minutes of play when a triumphant School team ran the demoralized Meds ragged. Important, was the score of 8-0 for School, for it practically assured the end of football for Meds Seniors while keeping School ahead by a comfortable margin. A fair crowd watched the teams battle under the dull sky. It saw good line work on both sides and was thrilled at Hal Seymour's kicking for School.

The Engineers kept their best rivals within their own territory for most of the game but good line work for the Doctors kept them from scoring more often.

First Quarter. Meds kicked off and White ran the ball down to School's 30 yard line. From here the game settled down to good, solid play, but nothing spectacular happened. The Engineers made four first downs, the Meds, only one. Just before the whistle blew a 50 yard run by Parchello for S.P.S. brought the crowd to its feet ready to cheer the touchdown but a lucky tackle brought him down.

Second Quarter. The second quarter saw Meds deep in their own territory and lots of kicking. Webb tried a placement but it failed. Hal Seymour's kicking kept the Meds desperate. They kicked short and left the Engineers in a scoring position but at the crucial moment Arnup intercepted the School pass and ran it to his own 15, giving Meds a breather. The game again settled down but "Beefy" MacMillan's performance for Meds and Graham's tackling for School were a delight to watch. The whistle ended the half at a scoreless tie.

Third Quarter. Arnup caught the Engineers' flyer and was settled down deep in his own end where School's vicious tackling kept the Meds. A tense moment came when Meds lost 15 yards for roughing and School had the ball on Meds' 30. A possible touchdown was cancelled when Beattie intercepted for Meds and brought the ball into a safe postion. McMillan again starred in this quarter and a solid School offense led by Hal Seymour couldn't get past the tenacious Med line.

Fourth Quarter. The game definitely became livelier. Brilliant bucking by McIntyre and Parchello brought the Engineers into scoring position—an opportunity availed when School kicked a point. Meds were kept busy every second and their line work saved them a worse licking. Virtue tackled Hal Seymour on a 45 yard getaway on Meds four yard line. Again School fumbled, Meds recovered and a dash by Spence kept them momentarily safe. But Hal Seymour kicked another single, putting the game in the bag for School. Then, with seconds to go, Hal Seymour intercepted a Meds pass and ran it down for a touchdown which Webb successfully converted and the whistle blew on a 8-0 score.

Engineers to Build Emergency Power Plant

Fredericton, N.B., Nov. 16—(CUP)—In order that the University of New Brunswick may not be without essential lighting facilities at a critical time, Dr. Baird, Professor of Electrical Engineering, has assigned four of his students to the task of building an emergency power plant in the former gymnasium. This work was begun at the end of October and should be completed by March.

The four students are doing this service instead of writing theses required of them at the end of their fourth year. In addition to installing the equipment they must make full reports on their proceedings and drawings to explain their methods.

When the plant has been set up, U.N.B. will have power even if the general current is cut off. The new plant will not be able to light the entire campus, but it will be able to provide electricity for the laboratories and other important departments.

Speaking of Sport

By Bud Smith

MOSTLY INCIDENTAL

A glance at the standings in the rugby league shows that Senior School has first place well under control with a grand total of ten points. Deep down in the second slot we find Senior Meds and Vic tied with six points each. Vic has one game remaining, that being with Junior School this coming Friday, while Meds have finished their schedule. Therefore the only hope Meds have of getting into the Mulock Cup squabble is for Junior School to beat Vic. And Junior School, of course, have a good chance of doing so. (Put away that straight jacket — we'll come quietly!) So the campus should by every indication see a strange sight next Saturday. There will be Schoolmen playing on the field. There will be Meds on the sidelines. And the Meds will actually be cheering on their arch-enemies. Instead of their usual practice of shouting "Real Live Schoolmen" and drawing their deadly scapels, they will actually be screaming "Come On School"—of course pausing after each blasphemous oration to thoroughly cleanse their throats with a strong antiseptic! The strain on young minds trained from birth to think only in terms of "Dirty School" will perhaps be too great in some cases. Irreparable harm may be done to the tender reasoning cells of the brain, which in the case of Medical students are know to develop about the period of their fourth and fifth years.

LOOKS LIKE ST. MIKE'S

Down in the Second Group we find that St. Mike's have been just tearing along "unwept, unhonoured and unsung" as it were. They were very impressive in their victory over U.C. last Monday and look to be the team to take the verdict. At present the standing in the group is:

Team	Won	Lost	Points
St. Mike's	2	1	4
St. Mike's	2	1	4
U.C.	2	1	4
Dents	2	2	4
Trinity	1	2	2
Jr. Meds	1	2	2

In the remaining games U.C. take on Junior Meds while St. Mike's tangle with the rejuvenated Trinity team. After the exhibition Frank Dunlop put on last Monday we think that St. Mike's will have the necessary strength to conquer the Anglicans who figure to be plenty dangerous if they play up to the level of their last game. U.C. may have trouble with Junior Meds but should struggle through. However, it would pose a nice delimma for Mac McCutcheon and Co., if Trinity and Meds should win. The standing would then be all tied up, and the entire Athletic Office staff would probably quietly commit harikari. However, we are looking for either St. Mike's or U.C. to come through and save our efficient Department of Intramural Athletics. We can visualize the scene now. With moments left to play and St. Mike's trailing Trinity, word comes through that U.C. has lost. Silently Mac McCutcheon leads the little procession onto the roof of the grandstand, preparatory to jumping off at the final whistle!

"He who laughs last, laughs best" or so the wise old maxim goes. In this case, it was dear old Vic who laughed last and best—for, one of her fairest daughters — Virginia Rapelle MacLeod by name — topped off our long beloved tennis tournament in rare form when we just weren't there to cheer her and her opponent—Virginia Kitto—on. But, at any rate, we are happy that Vic won this favourite of events, because now she and Nurses, of golf fame, will give U.C. and any other College a bit of competition in the Interfaculty race of the points later on. So its laurels to Vic—and particularly to Virginia MacLeod—to accompany our travelling correspondent's words of wisdom and our beatiful picture on this h'yar page!

Basketball is still booming up O.C.E. way. Tuesday night saw a triple-header in full swing. P.H.E. tied St. Hilda's Freshies A team, 22-22, whilst displaying a lot of good plays and plenty of zip. Pat Flynn certainly deserves mention for her eight points, as does Mardie Adamson for her nine, accompanied by a necessary amount of staunch playiug. Connie McConnie was very good on the defence. Joyce Cobban and Nesta Chapelle were St. Hilda's strong forward and defence players. Altogether, the spectators agreeds that the gals stirred up quite a bit of good basketball.

The second game was a bit less enlightened, but was good freshie basketball—which should prove a lot better with some more games for practice. The score was 18-11 for U.C. freshies over Vic freshies and the stars were Peggy McDougal for Vic and Spence for U.C.

The last game was a bit more profitable for the Nurses since they won by the score of 10-4 over Vic Seniors. Eleanor Cooper starred for Nurses, displaying a lot of neat passing and shooting; whilst Isabelle Gemmill stood Vic in good stead. This game was a lot faster and better all around than the second game—but just wait a bit—our freshie teams always come around and win games further on in the season—yes, yes.

Last evening, starting at 6:30, we were favoured with a good deal more of that elusive game—basketball. The first tilt ended with a 21-9 victory for III P.H.E. over Vic Srs. It was a good game, despite the wide margin, with speed and good passing much in evidence. Betty Allen and May Sinclair, as well as the guards, starred for P.H.E.; Isabelle Gemmill again scored for Vic, as did Helen Stewart, with precision indeed.

7:30 saw another game well played, with a big score to show for it—26-18 in all. P.H.E. were the victors and rightly so. Doris Clark and Pat Flynn did most of the scoring for P.H.E.; Natalie Staron starred for Meds. The first half was packed with action, and Meds were extremely enthusiastic, which helped make this a good game for anyone's time—which is even more important now than common lucre. If you have a bit of it to spare, however, we would appreciate more spectators at tonight's games—O.T. v. St. Mike's at 5:30; Vic Freshies v. U.C. Freshies at 6:30; and St. Hilda's Srs. and U.C. Jrs. at 7:30. Don't forget us, please!

V. MacLeod Ousts V. Kitto To Become Tennis Champion

Tennis Finalists

—Staff Photo

Virginia MacLeod and Virginia Kitto who played in Women's Interfaculty tennis finals yesterday.

Players Evenly Matched But MacLeod's Steadiness Gives Her Victory in Straight Sets 6-3, 6-4

Despite its prolonged delay, the finals of the interfaculty tennis were eventually fought out on St. Hilda's courts yesterday afternoon when Virginia MacLeod, II Vic, defeated Virginia Kitto, II P.H.E., 6-3, 6-4.

The match was continued from the preceding day owing to dusk and inclement weather. The first set revealed that both players merited their former laurels—Virginia Kitto being Ontario Ladies' Champion in 1940; while Virginia MacLeod was the victor of the interfaculty tennis two years ago.

The steadiness of MacLeod was a match for Kitto's puzzling but efficient ambidextrous ability as each placed their drives and serves with definite discrimination. Both sets were keenly contested and comparatively evenly matched to the middle of the set, where MacLeod with her consistency gained the lead so precious to tennis finalists.

Last year's results proved Shirley Geldert, III U.C., to be the winner when she defeated Virginia Kitto who in turn had defeated MacLeod in the semi-finals. Hence the relative rise of the new 1942 champion can be viewed with interest.

Club Offers Prize For Radio-Play Scripts

Entries in this year's Literary Competition sponsored by the Women's Canadian Club of Toronto will take the form of plays suitable for radio presentation, Mrs. S. R. Wilkins, convenor of the literary committee has announced. The subject matter must concern Canadian History or some definite phase of Canadian life. The prize is $100.

The contest is open to professional and non-professional writers throughout the dominion and the play must be capable of acting within one half hour. Plays already produced or published will not be accepted; nor are contestants who have already received the club's prize eligible. All manuscripts are due before February 15, 1943.

Full statements of the contest rules may be had from the Secretary-Treasurer of the Women's Canadian Club of Toronto, 69 Bloor Street East.

BIOLOGY CLUB TO HOLD FIRST MEETING MONDAY

The Biology Club, one of the oldest organizations on the campus, will hold its opening meeting next Monday at 4:30 to elect officers and decide on a program for the year.

The Biology Club was founded in 1914, met throughout the Great War, and has continued up to the present time.

It has been the poliry of the Club for some time to hold a Conversatione every third year. However, due to war conditions, which have sadly over-burdened the staff, it will be impossible to do so this year.

The members feel that much benefit has been derived from the meetings and it is hoped that the Club will carry on with guest lecturers as it has done in the past.

S.C.M. AND AVUKAH PLAN JOINT DISCUSSION NIGHT

The role of the Jew in modern society will be discussed at tomorrow's joint meeting of the Avukah and the Student Christian Movement at eight o'clock in the evening in the theatre of the Women's Union. Representatives of each organization will carry on a brief round-table discussion, after which the meeting will be thrown open for general discussion of the topic.

Eli Cass, Maths and Physics student, and Emil Fachenheim, a graduate student in philosophy, are the Avukah representatives. Fachenheim comes to the University after three months in a German concentration camp and internment in England in 1940.

S.C.M. representatives will be Ted Best, IV Meds and Mary McCrimmon, Classics.

Following the open discussion refreshments will be served.

Queen's Mission To Hear Vic Grad

Kingston, Ont., Nov. 17—(CUP)—The University Christian Mission to be held at Queen's University Nov. 19-22, will introduce among its speakers Miss Gertrude Rutherford, prineipal of the United Church Training School for Women, and Wing Commander Gerald Gregson, R.A.F. Anglican Senior Chaplain.

Miss Rutherford, a graduate of Victoria College, is well known to student groups across the country because of her long association with the Student Christian Movement, of which she was assoeiate secretary for many years.

The Mission, lasting for four days, will feature a program including speakers from as wide a range of professions as possible, in order that at least some part of it may appeal directly to every student on the campus.

The Christian Mission idea was formed by a group consisting largely of faculty members who felt that in the present world erisis, the aims and ideals of Christianity were not being given due prominence in the thoughts of the students. These men and women felt that since the principles of the Christian faith formed such a vital part of the concepts which the Allies are defending in this war, some thought and discussion ought to be devoted to these principles, their extension and clarifieation in the minds of the students.

Accordingly, next week-end will be set aside when prominent persons in various fields will come to give lectures and to take part in discussion groups, of which religion will be the main theme.

LITTLE SCENES OF HUMAN INTEREST DEPT.

The Varsity office of a Saturday after drill . . . reporters are sprawled about in uniform and varying stages of exhaustion. . . . People are feeling sorry for one another. . . . I was to the follies last nite. . . . I only got three hours sleep. . . . My back hurts. . . . etc.

Enters a sports reporter . . . tiredest old sports reporter you ever did see. . . . He stamps. . . . No one has the right to be that tired. . . But he is. . . "I wouldn't mind the route march, only I was in a five-mile cross-country race this morning. . ."

IT HAPPENED IN a lecture. . . . The prof is giving out with the Ligbter Side of Thirteenth Century Student Life. . . . Seems that these fellows used to carry daggers around with them, and they didn't use them to open letters, either. . . . The prof tells of one gory lil incident wherein some students took umbrage at a prof and neatly polished him off in one of two simple slashes. . .

It was about then that a student in the rear rose, whipped something out of his pocket and advanced on the prof waving yards of naked steel in his general direction.

It was a tense moment until the student explained that he collected that sort of thing and this was one of the weapons they were talking about.

WIMMIN ARE LOGICAL DEPT.

Three sweet young things are standing in a group discussing something or other, as women are apt to do.

"Gee, but there was an awful racket there," says one.

"Yeah, there sure was a lot of noise," agrees another.

The third, not to be outdone, chips in with—"Why, it was a regular pantomime!!!"

YES, SOMETIMES you do wonder about people. Take, for instance, the ease of the bright young lad who was being taken to task by his C.O.T.C. sergeant because his buttons weren't.

"Didn't you polish these buttons?" demanded the three-striper in a "you're a bad boy" tone.

"Well, sir," blushed the offender, "I breathed on them."

THEN TOO there was the case of another chap in karkie who was broached by his sgt. major on the subject of the coy. picture.

"Are you in the company picture?" demanded the s.m.

"Yes sir," he snapped back in determined tones.

The s.m. then did a double-take on the roll which he was carrying.

"But you were absent that day," he said in bewilderment.

"Yes sir," said the pvt. in tones equally determined.

AND SPEAKING of things military, there was that recent lecture in the care and feeding of small arms when the officer was discussing what happened inside the weapon when the trigger was pulled. Seems that there is a terrific amount of pressure developed and something has got to go somewheres which is why bullets go whizzing around. However, every so often, the innards of the rifle will go in the opposite direction, just to keep things interesting.

"In the old Ross rifle, the striker used to fly out every once in a while and put someone's eye out," he explained. "This was a bad feature of the Ross rifle."

ORDERS IS ORDERS DEPT.

There are various characters on campus who are Potential Officer Material assigned to Brockville. Very natty these fellows look with white tabs on hat and shoulders and swagger sticks in hand—so natty that many a suddenly accosted recruit has been known to salute them either beeause of ignorance or caution. However, the powers-that-be have forsawn this situation and the P.O.M.'s are not permitted to return any salute. They must, instead, say "Fine day."

All well and good, but here is this raw recruit who is progressing along with a snappy crawl stroke during that recent wet afternoon and salutes this "officer" only to hear him reply—"Fine day." the old woman's wandering mind was entirely convincing.

Confusing, to say the least.

Melodramatic is the only word to describe Gertrude Ribla, who sang the role of Leonora. Her voiee was splendid, she sang effortlesaly, but obviously she was too much carried away by the spirit of her role. She did, however, appear more to advantage in her duet with the Duke in scene one of the last act.

Di Luna, sung by Alfred Chigi, was by far the best male characeter. And if we had been the Leonora of this performance, we would have preferred him to the unhappily inadequate Manrico she chose.

As we have said, Manrico sung by Harold Lindi, was poor as an aetor; but as a singer he was very fine. It was to bad he was sueh a lukewarm lover.

BETSY DODGE.

La Baheme

The immortal story of Mimi and Rudolfo, and their fellow Bohemians of the Latin Quarter, set to music by Giacomo Puccini, was Monday's fare at Massey Hall. The Columbia erew was really in the groove with this one.

Lanny Ross did Rudolfo, and sang the part with verve and clarity. What a pleasure to see a tcnor who doesn't measure a perfect fifty-six around the equator. The Mimi of Ina de Martino was a bit theatrieal, but her sonority of tone and surety of attack neutralized that defect. Frank Richards, the gambolling baritone of Marcello, rioted through his scenes with Musetta (Luisa Corinina). Sets and costumes were unusually effective, the seene at the Cafe Momus being memorable.

The orchestra, under the direction of someone who looked (and acted) like Salvador Dali, was in fine fettle, and did full justice to chorus and soloist alike.

Victorian Ballet

The Bob

Thanks to what is billed as "a disgustingly allegorieal ballet" on the subject of the recent harvest expedition, last night's Vie Bob, the 70th, far outshone anything that could possibly have been produced in the other 69.. Taking the form of a symphonie composition, the Bob opened with an Allegro ad Nauseam the title of which was unfortunately appliеable, followed by Adagia Sostenata de Shapira, which partook of the same quality—but then eame Presto Agitata Con Borscht, in which the Ballet Rustique presented "La Lutte Eternelle."

Premiere Danscuse, Tamara Orthenexday, turned out really to be Ralph Hicklin. Miss Orthenexday is perhaps less graceful than others practicing her art, but there ean be none more energctie.

Among those Bobbed in the first two skits (which did have their good points) were the Vie faculty, the Frosh, Dr. Cody, Sir William Mulock, Elliott Little, Director of Selcetive Serviee, and William Lyon Mackenzie King, a gentleman of some prominence in Ottawa.

have not changed with the opening up of the land, clearing and cultivation of the territory has caused changes in the cycle, with the result that certain rivers are flooded in some seasons and dry up in others, wells and springs have dried up, and ponds in some instances have disappeared.

Something must be done, and done soon, to conserve Canadian waters, said Professor Leggett. Typical of what can be done is the building of the Shand dam, in an attempt to undo damage already done.

Little has been done, however, in water planning, due to the lack of the required facilities for co-operation between the various interests involved. The boundaries of Canadian provinces and of the country itscif do not coincide with the boundaries of the drainage areas which must be considered in any planning scheme.

The co-operation of scientists, engineers and legislators is neeessary if Canada is to husband the resources at her disposal, repair damage already done and prevent further destruction.

Canada must make plans now for reconstruction in administration of water resources, as in allother fields, in order to be ready to utilize the energies and enthusiasms which will be available for such projects at the elose of the war.

MANITOBA U. PLANS A.R.P. ORGANIZATION

Winnipeg, Nov. 17—(CUP)—Plans are under way to ereate an Air Raid Preeautions organization at the University of Manitoba. University authorities requested Professor J. F. T. Young to prepare a memorandum on the subject which was discussed at a meeting on Nov. 14.

The Broadway Buildings and the Fort Gary Buildings, both possible targets, will be the only ones affeeted by this plan.

Arrangements will be made with the Manitoba telephone department to have a priority alarm phoned through to the university before a general alarm is sounded throughout the eampus.

To The Graduating Year:

If you haven't yet returned your proofs to the photographer who took your graduation picture—surely it doesn't take more than a day to pick out which is the most glamorous—please return them PROMPTLY.

FIRES FEATURE BLACKOUT

Gas And Incendiary Bombs Busy Wardens, Aid Posts In Last Night's Blackout

Efforts of Wardens Commended by University A.R.P. Head; Several Cases of Violation of Lighting Rules and Lack of Co-operation from Residences Reported During Hour-Long Blackout

"CASUALTIES" TREATED BY FIRST AID CREWS

By Doc Savage

The explosion of incendiary bombs, a gas bomb, 21 "casualties," scattered hypothetical incidents, and the wolf-like howls of students roaming the streets in violation of blackout regulations highlighted the hour-long blackout that took place last night.

The sirens sounded at 8:45 p.m., and the campus was plunged into almost total darkness, except for at least four lighting violations, general smoking on the part of students and men in the service, brilliant lights in Exhibition Hall and the Physics building, and a large white moon.

Incendiaries at U.C.

At 9:05 an Air Raid Damage report was received in section headquarters, the nerve-centre of the campus A.R.P. organization, from sector 110—"Incendiaries . . . Southwest side of University College . . . being dealt with."

Two incendiary bombs were set off on the front campus slightly south of the main entrance to U.C. The Red Cross fire-fighters rushed to the scene, and being unable to obtain water in University College, threw dirt upon them. One of the bombs was a dud, burning not too brightly, but giving off large clouds of smoke. The fire-fighters were assisted by three students who appeared on the scene and trampled on the bombs, extinguishing them within five minutes.

An incendiary bomb was also set off in front of Wycliffe College, and was extinguished with water.

Gas Attack

A tear-gas bomb was exploded on the west side of U.C. at 9:10, and 21 "casualties" were reported. A large group of students standing nearby narrowly escpade a real gas attack when an air raid warden shooed them inside just before the fumes reached them. There was one "victim" a Varsity reporter.

A de-contamination unit was sent for, arriving in a truck at 9:30 and the area was cleaned with chemicals.

A "bomb hit" on the east side of Whitney Hall was reported, with the supposed damage of a large crater and several shattered windows.

First Aid Available

There was a doctor and a stretcher crew on duty in Hart House and a first aid station in the Health Service to care for any casualties, real or simulated. Due, perhaps, to the brightness of the moon, there were not serious accidents reported. Two A.R.P. girls came into the control room with eyes inflamed from gas exposure, but they did not require treatment.

Two Varsity reporters volunteered to act as "casualties." One was "treated" in Hart House, and the other, a gas victim, was awaiting the arrival of the stretcher-bearers in the Library when the all-clear sounded. Two air force men also proferred their services, going to the Health Service with "broken" limbs.

Vic Requests Board Discuss Legality of Ban

A meeting of the executive committee of the Board of Regents of Victoria University was held yesterday to discuss legal aspects of the recent Board of Governors' decision to refuse admittance to this University of 18 recently released internees.

Following the meeting, Dr. W. T. Brown, Principal of Victoria College and Chancellor of Victoria University, said that he had no statement to make on the matter until after the next meeting of the University of Toronto Senate, scheduled for Monday.

Abbott and Costello are back again at the Uptown this week between a murderer and the long arm of the law. "Who Done It?" is a murder mystery which doesn't try very hard to mystify, and Abbott and his fat friend are two would-be detectives from behind a soda fountain. They get in the way of the police, each other, and the plot, but the latter wasn't important anyway. "TOLSTOY AND RUSSIA" DISCUSSED BY SIMMONS

"Sympathetic understanding of Russia's social, political, and industrial aims might have prevented the disastrous consequences of its invasion," Ernest J. Simmons, professor of Slav and English languages at Cornell, declared yesterday.

Speaking at Hart House on the topic "Tolstoy and Russia Today" Mr. Simmons announced that his stand was one of urging greater friendliness with the Soviet Union. After 1918 and even as late as the Russian entry into the war with Germany our countries have persisted in indicting and ignoring the Russian people—an attitude which has proved singularly unfortunate. Now each nation realizes its mutual distrust must give way to a free interchange of national cultures.

The spirit of Russian literary culture is symbolized in the Renaissance of such classical writers as Leo Tolstoy. "The Soviet has erected a magnificent monument to him by their enthusiastic and exhaustive compilation of his works," said Prof. Simmons. He went on to tell of the perservation of Tolstoy's estate as a visiting place and museum. The Soviets have traced his historical contribution to their doctrines through his wide sympathy for the peasants and his uncompromising hostility to the Czar.

Concluding, Mr. Simmons said, "Tolstoy will still be a force in Russia when the Nazis are so many pages of dismal history. We must get to know the Russians better; a great people from whom a great culture can emerge."

This was the first of a series of three public lectures on Russia presented by University College.

U.C. Soph-Frosh Party To Follow Banquet

A U.C. Soph-Frosh party will be held on Monday night in the Women's Union at 8:00 o'clock. The dance is to follow the annual U.C. Soph-Frosh Banquet which will take place in Hart House on Monday evening.

The dance is something new this year, and is being arranged by the First Year Executive of the Women's Undergraduate Association and the Second Year Executive of the U.C. Men's Lit.

The old slogan, "Come single, go home double," will prevail and all men and women in the College are invited to attend the dance.

Tickets will be on sale in the U.C. Rotunda from 9:30-1:30 on Thursday, Friday, Saturday and Monday morning.

Student Labour Club Asks Reconsideration

A resolution was passed unamimously by the Student Labour Club last night supporting the stand taken by President Cody and other members of the staff on the student refugee question and urging that the Board reconsider its decision and permit these students to continue their studies as they were released by the authorities for that purpose.

The 53rd Annual School Dinner and the traditional noon-hour auction sale which accompanies it will take place TODAY, Thursday, Nov. 19, not yesterday as erroneously announced in yesterday's Varsity. Important campus building, etc., will be auctioned off at the sale at 1 p.m. today in front of the S.P.S. building to the sound of cannon-fire in the traditional manner. Tradition is being made at the dinner tonight in Hart House where co-eds will relieve the labour shortage by serving the meal.

Diamond-Nixon Motion Carried Without Dissent In Special Council Session

Resolution Asking Reversal of Recent Decision Barring Admission of "Friendly Aliens" to Be Forwarded to Board of Governors Together With Other Student Organizations' Resolutions

CAWLEY REFERS DECISION TO ENGINEERING SOCIETY

A resolution, placing the Students' Administrative Council on record as expressing the wish that the Board of Governors reverse its recent decision in refusing admittance to the University to 18 "friendly aliens" recently released from internment, was passed in a specially-convened meeting of the Council in University College yesterday.

The resolution, moved by Jerry Diamond, Pharmacy representative to the S.A.C., and seconded by Tom Nixon, President of the Victoria College Union, will be forwarded to the Board of Governors following next week's regular Council meeting.

In the meantime, through a motion proposed by Nixon, and seconded by Neil MacDonald, Editor of Torontonensis, resolutions of a similar nature, which have already been passed by various campus groups or may be passed during the week, can be submitted to the S.A.C. so that all student opinion on the matter may be forwarded to the Board of Governors through the Council.

"Students on this campus are looking to the S.A.C. for leadership," Nixon said. "We can give this leadership by making our decision here public through The Varsity and by appending all student resolutions to our own when we approach the Board of Governors."

All voting members of the S.A.C. present registered favour of the Diamond-Nixon motion with the exception of Jim Cawley, President of the Engineering Society, who stated that until the students he represented met on the matter he felt that he should refrain from casting his vote.

"But I am pleased to back up whatever is decided here, and present the decision of the Council to the Engineering Society Executive," he said during preliminary discussion of the matter.

(Cawley said last night that a formal declaration of the Engineering Society's stand would be forwarded to the Council within the week.)

R. D. Reid, vice-president of the Emmanuel College Students' Society, told the S.A.C. that the men of his College had decided earlier yesterday unanimously in favour of such a resolution being forwarded to the Governors.

In proposing the resolution, Diamond suggested that to admit the 18 students in question was the only course open to a democratic university. "I am wholeheartedly behind the move to admit them, " he said.

Voting members of the Council present at yesterday's meeting were: Eileen Acton, associate president of the Victoria College Union; Jim Cawley, President of the Engineering Society; Jerry Diamond, representative from the Pharmacy Senior Executive to the S.A.C.;

S.A.C. asks Resolution Be Given to Council

All expressions of opinion from student organizations on the present question of admitting 18 aliens friendly to the United Nations to this University should be forwarded to the Student Administrative Council Office, Hart House, Council members said following yesterday's meeting of the S.A.C.

It is intended that as many as possible of such resolutions will be appended to the S.A.C. resolution on the subject when it is forwarded to the Governors.

Roving Reporter Air Raid 'Victim'

By Edgar Simon

I was an air raid casualty.

Standing about on the front campus, watching a decontamination squad deal with a tear gas bomb, I became a gas victim by agreement with a delighted sector warden.

Solicitously escorted to shelter by two wardens who walked with hands on my shoulders and talked vaguely of stretcher-bearers, I arrived at a carefully blacked-out room in the depths of the Library which turned out to be the Warden Post, Sector 110.

"Of course you can't remember your name, can you?" my escort inquired with the anxiety of men suffering from acute writer's cramp. I assured them I hadn't the slightest idea, and they gratefully led me inside.

Inside the post I was enthusiastically welcomed by the post warden and a group of Canadian Red Cross Corps members attached to the post. While the warden telephoned headquarters and the Hart House First Aid Post, her staff busied themselves making me comfortable on a chesterfield in an adjoining room.

As we waited for the First Aid-ers to arrive from Hart House, there was mild debate over the advisability of giving me something to drink, of turning the light on or off and of leaving me alone or accompanied. (I held out stoutly for a reviving beverage and lots of company but was gently vetoed.)

Nine minutes after the call went through, a First Aid man arrived, deserted by his crew when the All-Clear sounded. He eyed me doubtfully, felt my pulse and guessed I could go

Students to Broadcast On Harvest Expedition

The recent harvest expedition to the west will be discussed over station CBL on the Canadian Round-Up program at 10:45 p.m. Monday, No. 23.

Representing the student opinion of the University of Toronto will be James McCardle, leader of the St. Michael's College group, who will speak from Toronto. Rolande Mercier, leader of the Laval group, will broadcast from Quebec, while a CBC announcer in Saskatchewan will air the views of the farmers themselves concerning the trip.

Scholars' Haven

In the light of the present much-discussed question of admitting or not admitting the 18 friendly internees to this University the interview with Theodore Schwartz, Polish refugee student in Engineering at the University of Manitoba, which was published in the columns of The Varsity yesterday, is of particular interest. After describing student life in Warsaw with its great interest in politics, Schwartz concluded:

"The enemy is destroying culture in Europe; the intelligentsia are being eliminated. In this new world, a haven for the scholar, students must strive to maintain the knowledge and culture in a free land. 'Knowledge comes but wisdom lingers.'"

Everyone but a confirmed Nazi recognizes the truth of the statement that European culture is being destroyed. They will also agree that all students who can must do all in their power to maintain the knowledge and culture provided in a free land.

The focal point of Schwartz' statement lies in the phrases, "In this new world, a haven for scholars . ." After the decision of the Board of Governors not to admit a group of highly talented internees to the status of students, the question may very well be asked, Is this new world the haven for scholars it is reputed to be?

It would appear that haven is given to those who have already become world figures: Nobel prize winners like Einstein and Thomas Mann, and Dr. R. Brauer, who came to the Mathematics Department at University College from Germany. Such world-renowned men are understandably welcome.

The 18 refugees from Nazi brutality now asking to be admitted to this University as to a "haven for the scholar" are not yet internationally famous figures, but, from their record in their home universities and as scholars in England, some of them might very well go on to positions of fame if they were allowed the opportunity to continue their studies. The British Home Office and the Canadian Government have released these boys expressly so that they may continue their education and so in time be able to contribute far more to our war effort than they could at the present time in any capacity.

The records show that the German invasion of each European country has been immediately followed by suppression of the country's educational centres and by the slaughter or imprisonment of professors and students. The learning and culture of any conquered country is one of the greatest potential dangers to the conqueror. Therefore it is eliminated.

The students fortunate enough to escape to a country which prides itself on its liberty should be allowed to contribute their talents to help their new country or to work toward that end and toward the rehabilitation of their own country when the war is won. Quite apart from the strong motives of giving fair play to the oppressed, these students should be allowed to do the job to which the Government has seen fit to allocate them in order to provide insurance for the future.

No Joke

The rules of blackout procedure have been laid down for a specific purpose—that of saving lives under certain war conditions. Where those conditions prevail, blackouts are, to put it mildly, regarded seriously.

Those conditions do not exist in Toronto yet, but that is no reason not to be prepared. And we owe it, if not to ourselves, to the rights due to law and order that regulations set forth for our own protection be followed.

Last night's exhibition, was not the sort of thing expected from intelligent hyenas, much less from university students.

Everyone is supposed to seek cover — the only cover being sought last night by many was the women's residences.

We are not suggesting the suppression of the innate spirits that mark us as a nation—but we do object to making carnivals of war-time precautions.

A Delightful Custom

The Varsity takes pleasure today to find itself in an old-fashioned journalistic joust with its ancient friend and rival, The Evening Telegram. Our contemporaries who dwell on Melinda Street have once more demonstrated their peerless genius for misconstruing perfectly plain statements. And they have had the magnificent sense of satire to term us "intolerant."

We hugely enjoy squabbling with The Telegram, but have little space to devote to that pleasure today. The "front page headline" referred to (in 11-point caps) was fully explained in the line of type immediately beneath it, set in type three points (or approximately one-thirty-secondth of an inch) smaller. We think most of our readers managed to understand what we meant.

With regard to the suggestion that students should shift their protest from the Board of Governors to the "crass stupidity of a departmental ruling," we believe that our old friends have forgotten that not only is the departmental ruling in question authorized by the Liberal Government—always fair game for the Tory Tely—but also authorized and approved by the British Home Office, for which we would have thought The Telegram would have had more reverence.

A similar piece of misconstruction seems to have been placed upon Mr. Weld's letter, meaning of which, we venture to say, was quite clear to all except the editors to whom it was addressed. Mr. Weld, by the way, is not a sophomore, but a senior.

The Varsity and The Telegram have had many of these delightful little contretemps before; we hope to enjoy many more of them.

Among Our War Aims

Anti-Semitism, one of Hitler's first and best-selling policies, has very properly been dwarfed by the larger issues which have developed as his war against the rest of the world grew in scope. The Jews were the first victims of fascism, but they have since been joined by men of almost all races and creeds.

But the survival of racial and religious freedom is still one of the major issues for which we fight, and the existence of anti-Semitism within the ranks of the United Nations and particularly in Canada tends to becloud the clarity of our war aims.

Tonight a joint meeting of the Student Christian Movement and Avukah will discuss the role of the Jew in modern society. Among the speakers will be Rabbi Emil Fackenheim, graduate student in philosophy, who became familiar with the Nazi idea of the role of the Jew in modern society by spending several months in a German concentration camp.

Jews and non-Jews of all shades of opinion can benefit from participation in tonight's discussion, if they care to check their prejudices at the door of the Women's Union.

ART · MUSIC · Drama

Two To One

Hart House String Quartet

I suppose, taking everything all in all, last night's recital by the Hart House String Quartet was good. Certainly the second and third selections on the program were, and so the ratio of good to bad turns out to be two to one.

But, before turning to pleasanter topics, there should be some commiseration for the evil which was wrought against Haydn, the more particularly since the evil was of a kind that might almost past unnoticed. Haydn, writing as he did long ago before technique had developed to its present level, wrote music which admittedly is easy to play, as far as the notes are concerned. But the playing of the notes is not enough.

The Problem presents Itself: should the quartet playing Hadyn be satisfied with the notes, or should it try to add more, and try to interpret the music it plays? The Hart House Quartet is evidently satisfied with the notes, and does not even attempt to play them perfectly. Haydn needs precision, too.

The reason for the defect in the Haydn was obvious when the Brahms Piano Quartet in A Major appeared. It was done perfectly, and, being difficult, it was obvious that the practice which should have gone to the Haydn had been placed on it. The work itself is minor, and, while it should be played now and then, is scarcely inspirational. It was played competently, and the assisting artist, Cyril Hampshire, showed a brilliant technique.

The other quartet, Smetana's Aus

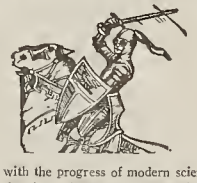
BARBER DECLINES PROFESSORSHIP



"I Stand Where I Stood," Says Manager of Barber Shop, Refusing to Become a Surgeon

CHAIR STILL VACANT

It was learned authoritatively late last night that Earmark J. Clippem, popular manager of Hart House Barber Shop, had refused to accept the post of Professor of Surgery which had recently been offered to him by the Faculty of Medicine. The chair of surgery has been vacant* since the resignation of Sealpel O'Sawbones, Dean of the faculty and well-known authority on Surgery, to assume a position in the armed forces. The nature of this new position was not disclosed but certain well-informed sources close to the faculty suggested that it might be concerned with surgery. This could not be confirmed.

"In olden days," said Mr. Clippem, explaining his refusal of the position, "barbers were also the town's surgeons, but with the progress of modern science that has been changed. Barbering is an accurate procedure, and we can't afford to waste our time on trivialities like surgery. Why," he continued, "there's one Professor in the Faculty of Medicine who says that any good plumber can be a surgeon . . . and you know what plumbers are . . . some of them have no education other than four years in S.P.S."

"I wish we had a few good plumbers," moaned the spokesman of a surgical ward in one of the better known teaching hospitals.

"I wish we had a few barbers," complained a half-shaven member of the C.O.T.C. from the depths of a chair in the barber shop.

"Surgery always comes to a standstill in wartime, because there is no one to practice on," explained an official of the Faculty of Medicine. "So it really doesn't matter whether we have surgeons or not."

Moe M. Down, popular superintendent of the Civic Abattoir, refused to comment on a report which claimed that several of his assistants were leaving to join the staff of the University.

Med Stickmen Win Close Game Over S.P.S. III

A stocky medical student romping through the School stickmen for a total of five goals, was the chief reason that S.P.S. III ended up on the short side of a 10-6 score sheet. Harry Nikaido was the player who repeatedly broke through the School checkers to score. Close on his heels was Doug Rae who chalked the score board twice. Bartlet counted twice for School. The remainder of the goals were evenly divided with singles for Toogood and Gould of Meds and Ferrier, Machum, Anderson and Yenchiarutti of School.

The Engineers took a three-goal lead in the opening minutes but the Doctors, after feeling out their opponents, came back to tie and then go ahead for four goals by half-time. School was held scoreless in the third quarter while Meds scored twice. The last frame reversed proceedings while School scored twice. The last half, as a whole, was close hard-checking lacrosse, play swinging from end to end and little scoring resulted.

lege men's residence. Lights were also burning in Examination Hall and in the Physics Building where the army and air force, who were exempt from blackout regulations, were holding classes.

Throughout the blackout students roamed the campus at will, and innumerable cases of smoking and lighting up cigarettes outdoors were reported. Attempts were made to "crash" nearly all of the women's residences. Bands of students wandered up and down St. George St., howling in the approved wolf manner and shouting at the women's residences and passersby.

Several women were reported outside of the Women's Union, one with a flashlight and many smoking.

Wardens Efficient

The A.R.P. system functioned fairly efficiently, with section 110, centred in the Library, outstanding.

The all-clear was sounded at 9:45 p.m. but the control room did not stop operating until 10:10, when all wardens had reported in and the switchboard was closed.

"On the whole, the wardens did very well," stated A. J. Butlin, head of University A.R.P. "The sectors that didn't report had everything in hand. Co-operation from the residences, however, was rather slack."

TAKE IT OFF

This doesn't refer to Tangerine Firpo, the Queen of the Andes, but to the bushel basket concealing the light of the local interfaculty rugby coaches. Very few people around ye olde campus realize the ability of the fellows behind the team. Leading the first group we have the powerful Sr. School team coached by one of the all-time greats of Canadian rugby. Namely and to wit, Ab Box! As everyone knows, Abner was a star quarterback for over a decade with both Argos and Balmy, and in a recent issue of a certain magazine, he was picked by Lew Hayman as the outstanding quarter in his experience. The Mulock Cup champs from Victoria are being put through their paces by a playing coach in the personage of Glen "Tubby" Munro. Munro's achievements are too well known to need further mention here—his work in last year's final was classical and his play in the present campaign has been the important factor in Vic keeping its head above the foam. Sr. Meds, who are waiting with shaking scalpels for the results of Friday's tustle, are being handled by high school teacher Don Graham. Don has had plenty of experience coaching teams around the campus, leading the old Varsity intermediates to several championships. He originally studied under Duke's Wieman and has been attending summer coaching schools across the border ever since. The fourth team in group I, is the unlucky Jr. School squad. Although still winless, the young Engineers have yet to play a poor game under the guidance of the old master, Mike Rodden. Mike has been associated with rugby ever since he started to play for Dirty Queens away back in 1910. He coached the local U.T.S. teams for 17 years, and piloted the once-mighty Hamilton Tigers to their greatest successes. This is Mike's first year with School (he handled U.C. one year back in the past), and he was handicapped by not knowing his material and added to that, because of infrequent practices, some of Mike's plays which need perfect timing have been backfiring.

The closely packed second group is being led by three teams, with either St. Mike's or U.C. having about equal chances of copping the title. St. Mike's coaching chores are being handled by a combine, with Father Warren, a linesman back in the moustache-cup days when St. Mike's had a team operating in the O.R.F.U., drilling the nine men up front, while Father Regan and player Tom Jacob look after the backfield. This trio are replacing Father MacIntyre, who was rated as one of the best coaches in the country a few years ago, and still retain his style of play. U.C. is being coached by kicking star Jim Folwell, who led O.A.C. to two intermediate championships and was a regular with the Argos for the past two years. Folwell would probably be with an O.R.F.U. team this year except for drill regulations. Two other teams in the league are being tutored by student coaches. The Garnet and Blue Dents backfield is headed by Bill Hambly while the line is taking suggestions from ex-Indian and Beacher John Millen. Jr. Meds are fortunate in having the services of Cuddy Faber, a star quarterback last year with U.C. but injured during the summer. Cuddy finds it tough to get the players out with the accelerated course and exams halfway through, but he has succeeded in throwing a scare into the other teams on several occasions. Trinity is being coached by Sub. Lt. G. D. Woods of the R.C.N., who has a month's furlough from the torpedo boats and is turning it to the advantage of the Red and Black. Last year's finalists are being guided by a man with rugby and coaching experience. Before receiving an injury that ended his rugby days as an active player, he played end for the Varsity intermediates, and in '39 he coached the Trinity hockey team to the interfaculty cup.

Well, there they are, folkses. There aren't many leagues in Canada that can boast of that type of talent. A lot of their ability is lying dormant due to the inability of the individual players to practice the same amount as the top teams in senior competition elsewhere, but even still some coaches reflect there abilities in their team. Mike Rodden stresses a wide-open attack with plenty of end runs and trick plays. Jr. School as a result have not been shut out this season. On the other hand, St. Mike's and Dents are being coached by ex-linesmen, and Dents registered shut-outs their first two games, while St. Mike's line have only allowed three points in three games—not a major score as yet.

U.C. Freshies defeated Vic Freshies 18-9 in a rousing game refereed by Varsity's own Helen Guerney at 6:30.

Before dinner, St. Mike's and O.T. met each other and the double blue emerged victorious to the tune of 29-6.

The spectators seemed zealous and happy — which is a good sign — and what's more, even a few fellows came out to cheer us on and rouse the spirit of the game. Which reminds us—there are three games tonight up at ye olde O.C.E.: 5:30—Meds and U.C. Srs.; 6:30—II P.H.E. and St. Hilda's Srs.; 7:30—Physics and Vic Jrs.

I do not want to give a false impression of what was, after all, a really enjoyable recital. But likewise, it would be wrong to say that everything was perfect. It is only because I know of what heights the Hart House Quartet is capable, that I stress the fact that they can do better. NEIL MACDONALD.

Meds and School Winners in Swim

Junior Meds had little difficulty in swamping Trinity 22-11 and Junior S.P.S. made a possible over Vic, 30-3, in the Hart House splash room yesterday.

The Medicos had little trouble in taking firsts in all events except the free-style. The relay also went to the Meds.

150 relay—Rubenstein, Hardman, Greer (Meds)—2:6.4
50 back—Rubenstein (M), Miller (M), McHattie (M)—40.6
50 breast—Rosen (M), Smythe (T), Hardman (M)—41.4
50 free—Baillie (T), Hardman (M), Rosen (M)—31.4
220 relay—Greer, Rubenstein, McHattie (Meds)—2:24.8

Led by the two Sharpe boys and another Sansom the Junior School natators swept to total victory—taking every event.

150 relay—W. Sharpe, K. Sharpe, Ferrier (School)—1:53.1
50 back—W. Sharpe (S), Whittingham (S), Graham (V)—36.2
50 breast—Gilbert (S), K. Sharpe (S), Graham (V)—36.6
50 free—Sansom (S), Martin (S), Tillston (V)—26.3
220 relay—Gilbert, Martin, Whittingham, Sansom (School).

PRESS COMMENT

Other Universities Cooperate

In July of 1940 a large number of alien refugees were sent to Canada from Britain without their cases having been examined with any care. In 1941, after thorough inquiries at the internment camps and in Britain, "it was found that many of the occupants might safely, and in fact should, be released." The number thus dealt with has been, up to the present, 658. The majority have been released to go into industry or to take up farm work, but others have been released as students. Many have tried to enlist, but the national defence department considers this inadvisable for a number of reasons. For one thing, it is feared that their foreign accents and the fact of their having been interned might cause trouble in military camps where they would possibly be objects of suspicion.

Refugees released as students have been accepted by at least nine Canadian universities: McGill, Queen's, Acadia, McMaster, Dalhousie, Montreal, Manitoba, Ottawa and Saskatchewan. But the University of Toronto has, by a tie vote of the Board of Governors, failed to accept for university courses 15 of these friendly aliens who are enrolled at Victoria College. As to their friendliness, Lt.-Col. Fordham, commissioner of refugee camps, has written: "No stigma attaches to these men, and they are now regarded as friendly, and not enemy, aliens. Every refugee released from internment has had his case reviewed by three sets of officials, and thus there need by no doubts on the question of integrity. No internee is released in Canada until a full report from the Home Office has been added to whatever information has been gleaned about him while interned in this country."

As to the desirability of college courses for groups of these friendly refugees, Lt.-Col. Fordham writes: "The government of the United Kingdom sent a representative over here early in 1941 who asked particularly that such an educational scheme be countenanced by the Canadian authorities, if possible." Further: "A few days ago I returned from a six weeks' official visit to England. While there I was taken to see the Honorable Herbert Morrison, M.P., home secretary, at Whitehall. He was loud in praise of the way the interned refugee situation had been administered in Canada and asked me to convey his thanks to our secretary of state. He referred particularly to the refugees attending the universities and to the excellence of the educational scheme. In the light of this, it would seem unfortunate if further progress in this direction became impossible. It is hoped the Board of Governors may feel able to view the question more favorably with this information at hand."

There are many reasons for giving technical training in Canadian universities to friendly refugees. They then become of more value when ready for employment in war industries—all are expected to take such employment during vacations and when graduated. They learn to speak English more fluently. They become used to Canadian ways and better fitted for life in Canada. Again to quote Lt.-Col. Fordham: "The Home Office authorities were always anxious to build up among released refugees as high an opinion of our democratic system as possible. The thought was that they would publish their views far and wide, and aid, to that extent at least, in the general support of our cause. It was to this end that released refugees were encouraged from these offices to enter Canadian universities."

It will surely not have to be said that Toronto is the one University which will not participate in this program which the British and Canadian authorities alike approve. To those who argue that the refugees in question should be in the army or on the farm or in war industry instead, the answer is that they have been refused entrance to the army, that there are far more of them in industry and on the farms than are seeking educational courses, and that those chosen for university training have been singled out as particularly fitted for this. The Toronto Governors should reconsider their decision and bring 'Varsity into line with the other universities of Canada.

Shouldn't Dragoon Aliens Into The University

In another column on this page appears a letter from James D. McLaurin Weld, who takes up the cudgel on behalf of enemy aliens whom the Board of Governors of the University decided, on a tie vote, should not be admitted to the University during the war. Mr. Weld is, we understand, a second year student in Victoria College, and his point of view is that of a number of students who, by an impromptu vote following International Students' Day observances, asked the Board of Governors to reverse its decision.

The Varsity, the undergraduate newspaper, has taken up the crusade with a certain intolerance for all who hold contrary views. It refers to the decision of the Board of Governors as "pleasing to certain reactionary sections of the press and public." Advocating a reconsideration of the ban, The Varsity says in its front page headline, "Students Unanimously in Favour." Editorially, however, it admits that the request for consideration "was actually subscribed to by only a relatively small section of the student body," but expressed the opinion that it accurately represented the reaction of a majority of the students and staff to the recent Board ruling.

In his letter, Mr. Weld states that none of the 18 aliens involved are regarded by the authorities as persons of whom any suspicion is to be entertained. He adds that they have used every possible opportunity to show their willingness to take up arms against the Axis, and to do everything within their powers to contribute to the war effort, but that their release was conditional on their studying at Canadian Universities. "None of them," says Mr. Weld, "want to study at the University in order to evade military duties or any other work useful to the war."

If what our correspondent says is correct, it must appear that the students' agitation is directed against the wrong objective. Instead of clamouring for the admission of these youths to University activities which are for the duration of minor importance, the students would be more in accord with the reputed wishes of the youths most concerned if they directed their endeavours towards removing the ban which prevents the lads entering the armed forces or engaging in useful war work.

According to an editorial note in The Varsity, it was a ruling of the Immigration Department that "the internees were being released to complete their education only, and that engaging in any work not authorized by the conditions of their release would make them liable to reinternment." That is a ruling which would be a normal restraint on the entry of aliens to accept work in peace time, but the Department of Immigration should awake to the fact that there is a war on.

The students would have an excellent target if they attacked the crass stupidity of a departmental ruling which denies the right to work to those willing to do so at a time when labour is in demand. They have a poor case when they ask the University to provide cloistered immunity to aliens when so many of its own sons have abandoned not only their university training but their careers to fight in defense of all we hold dear.

Young Men Desiring to Enter Varsity Are Said to Be "Friendly Aliens" Released from Refugee Camps on Condition That They Attend University.

Editor, Telegram:

Sir,—I would like to point out a number of misunderstandings apparent in your editorial of Monday night.

1. The aliens affected by the recent decision of the Board of Governors of the University of Toronto have officially been described as friendly aliens by the Commissioner of Refugee Camps, Lt-Col. R. W. S. Fordham. The authorities responsible for their release from internment have made the most careful investigation into the individual cases, and the British and Canadian Governments, before allowing their release, had made quite sure that these boys are genuine refugees from Nazi oppression. There is no justification whatever for the assumption that these people are to be treated with suspicion. If that had been the ease, neither the British nor the Canadian Government would have run the risk of authorizing the release of potential enemies.

2. These ex-internees, many of whom have bitter tales to tell of Nazi persecution, have used every possible opportunity to show their willingness to take up arms against the Axis, and to do everything within their power to contribute to the war effort. If they were allowed to join the Canadian Army in the same way as refugees in America are allowed to join the American Army, they would be only too happy to do so immediately, and incur all the hardships of war which Canadians have to face in this struggle. None of them wants to study at the University in order to evade military duties or any other work useful to the war. They were released on condition that they study at Canadian universities, after having been sponsored by responsible Canadian citizens. They are not allowed to accept jobs, and if they had not been released to study, they would still be behind barbed wire.

—James D. McLaurin Weld.

S.C.M.-Avukah Resolution Asks Aliens Be Admitted

Joint Meeting of S.C.M.-Avukah Asks Board of Governors to Reconsider Recent Decision on Ex-Internees

COLEMAN IS CHAIRMAN

Approximately 150 students attending a joint meeting of the Student Christian Movement and Avukah in the Women's Union last night unanimously passed a resolution requesting that the Board of Governors reconsider its original decision refusing admittance to the University to 18 "friendly aliens" recently released from internment.

John Coleman, secretary of the S.C.M., was chairman of the joint meeting and presided over the panel discussion on "The Role of the Jew in Modern Society." The purpose of the meeting, he said, was to clarify some of the basic causes of anti-semitism and their remedy.

Ted Best, IV Meds, speaking on the position of the Jews in Canada, said Canada was the first member of the British Commonwealth to grant emancipation to the Jews. Contrary to popular belief, he said, there is a smaller percentage of Jews in the professions than Canadians.

Eli Ceass, III M. and P. traced the economic history of the Jews and the factors that have restricted their economic activities to limited fields. He concluded that the ultimate solution to anti-semitism is economic.

Mary McCrimmon, III Classics, declared that anti-semitism gives people

Queen's Admits Friendly Aliens

About 20 "friendly aliens" such as the 18 recently refused admittance to the University of Toronto, are now enrolled at Queen's University, Dr. R. C. Wallace, Principal and Vice-Chancellor of Queen5s said recently.

"They were released specifically by the British government in order to attend Queen's University," he said. "The British government does not release them unless they are anti-Nazi."

Dr. Malcolm Wallace, Principal of University College said:

"I regret very greatly the action taken by the Board of Governors. I think the purely humanitarian argument is final in the case of the internees. Some of them have already experienced Nazi concentration camps. I am perfectly convinced they are genuinely anti-Nazi, and would prefer, above all, to fight against Nazi forces. Since that is impossible, and since they are forbidden to accept work in industry, I certainly think they should be admitted to university. We are urged by all academic traditions of the past, as well as by common humanitarian sentiment, to be generous."

VIC SOPHS TO HAVE PARTY

Sophomore students of Victoria College will meet at 8:30 p.m. Saturday evening for their fall party, which will be held in Alumni Hall in the college building.

Dancing will be to the music of Vic Oakley and his "sweet swing" orchestra, with other special attractions during the intermission. Decorations will probably follow a "harvesters' theme."

Jack Paterson, president of 4T5, announced that admission will be by year card,

Meds Election Is Riotous Affair; George Culman Chosen President

Waving banners plastered with such classics of campaigning corn as "Not Complete without Pete," Medsmen yesterday marched en masse from the General Hospital to Hart House theatre, to conduct their annual elections. The parade was led forward by two drums, a bagpipe and the spirit of Scalpel O'Sawbones.

Incoming voters found the staid old theatre littered with 57 varieties of home-made posters and placards. Sections were set aside for each year and the women (yes! there were women!!) with ballot-boxes at the side—for those who really wanted to vote.

The air was acrid and dense with the smoke of two-for-a-nickel cigars tossed at prospective voters by campaigners. Everybody in the place seemed to have a handful of gumdrops or humbugs or Camels.

Cheers and cat-calls attended each announcement, with frenzied pleas of "Joke! Joke!" Each candidate was limited to two minutes, theoretically, in which to outline his program (to calls of "Throw him out!") and tell at least one "funny" story. One candidate brought along a duck which quacked appreciatively before its owner had even reached the end of his gag.

Before the proceedings were over, the boys managed to elect a few officials for each year's executive, the Medical Society Executive, and the Medical Athletic Association.

President Culman (by acclamation) of the Medical Society executive, opened the meeting by announcing that the $1,000 bursary was to be invested in war bonds for the benefit of future needy students, and that the at present defunct Daffodil show will stage a come-back next spring.

S. Best also managed to explain the significance of the Canadian Association of Medical Students and Internes and to announce the new officials before he was shooed off the stage for refusing to come out with a joke.

After the riotous meeting, the men trooped out to enter a dim grotto behind the theatre known as the Green Room, submerged way back in the cavernous depths of Hart House. For a nominal cover charge of 15 cents they danced amid the Green Room's beautiful cardboard palms and exotic beaverboard landscapes to the music of Glenn Miller. The room was hot and smoky, but there were some 30-odd lovely co-eds to dance with and plenty of room.

ANNUAL SCHOOL DINNER HEARS McNEILL OF QUEEN'S

The engineers listened spellbound last night as Dr. W. E. McNeill, Vice-President of Queen's University, lifted their minds above their everyday engineering world to things spiritual and aesthetic. Dr. McNeill was speaking on the subject, "Have You Anything to Declare," at the 53rd annual School Dinner held in Hart House.

His text was taken from a recent book by Maurice Boring of the same title. The writer dreams he has died and has reached the borders of the next life. He asks himself what he has brought with him in the way of spiritual enrichment as qualifications for the next life.

Dr. McNeill enjoined the engineers to keep with them the finer things in philosophy, poetry, humour, that they came across day by day by means of memory, books or written notes in order to adorn their living and thinking, their writing and speaking, with worthwhile things.

Deploring the present-day prejudice against memory work and emphasis on thinking, he asked, "What thought can be done with an empty mind? . . . Thought almost automatically occurs in a full mind."

He told the engineers to make sure that when they reached the end of their lives they had something to declare out of the great books of the race—"that light the heart, touch the mind, set the imagination aflame."

Dean Young, replying to the toast to School proposed by J. N. Dickie, fourth year president, said: "We are doing our very best to implement our promise made to the government to train every qualified man we possibly could in Engineering. It will be your share to do what you can to shape the world for lasting peace and security." He said, "In contrast to the idea held some years ago that the work of the engineer in Canada was finished, the career of the engineer is really just beginning."

President Cody, coming straight from the address by Mr. Philip in Convocation Hall, replied to the toast to the University proposed by G. R. Heffernan. He said that though many Schoolmen must be on fire to get into the thick of things it is most important that they spend time for an adequate preparation.

Explaining why the Engineering course had not been speeded up like the Medical and Dental courses, he pointed out that it is necessary that the engineers should have their summers free to learn to apply in industry the theory they had learned in lectures, and that it would be inadvisable to graduate engineers with only a theoretical training.

Other business of the evening was the presentation of scholarships, the presentation of gold keys to the executive of the Engineering Society, information on the workings of Selective Service by Mr. S. R. Frost, and entertainment by K. Van Wyck and Joe Murphy.

A.R.P. Women Try Gas Chamber

Thirty-one aspiring young air-raid wardens underwent a novel experience when they tried out a gas chamber at Manning Depot last night after the regular Thursday afternoon lecture in A.R.P.

Conducted Manning Depot-wards in cars supplied for the occasion, the post-wardens and the section centre staff of the University student-warden organization decided that it wasn't such a bad sort of expedition. But they almost changed their minds about that when they met the sergeant who was to take them through the chamber. He forewarned the party of the drastic and gruesome effects of the various gases to which they were about to be exposed.

However, the girls were so alarmed at the prospect that the sergeant let them off with just the tear gas operation. After donning their respirators in the way in which they were instructed, the 31 were led into the chamber where capsules were burned to fill the room with tear-gas. They then removed their respirators and remained unprotected for 60 seconds before leaving.

"Our faces, eyes and nose burned and smarted, and we wept profusely, but I think the worst effect was to scare us thoroughly." one of the 'victims' told The Varsity.

Miss A. E. M. Parkes' asthma prevented her from accompanying the would-be wardens into the gas chamber. But the majority of the group declared the expedition worthwhile and "lots of fun."

Vic Board of Regents Elects W. James as Head

chairman of the Board of Regents of Victoria University, succeeding J. R. L. Starr, it was announced yesterday. He will hold office until 1944.

A graduate of the class of 1916, Mr. James served overseas in the first Great War and has been a member of the Board of Regents for the past 12 years.

Women Debate Fun vs Studies

The opening debate of the Women's Interfaculty Debating Union between U.C. and St. Michael's was held in the Women's Union Wednesday afternoon, with the President, Lillian Callaghan, III Arts, acting as speaker.

The resolution: "There are too many extra-curricular activities for the good of the student," was successfuly defended by Marion Sirdevan, IV Medserns, and Jean Vale, II Eng, Lang. and Lit., speaking for the Government.

"The primary aim of the students is the attainment of knowledge," stated Marion Sirdevan, Prime Minister, speaking for St. Michael's. "The average student entering the University has only his own taste to guide him. When the student takes away time that should be spent in the pursuit of academic knowledge in order to devote to the extra-curricular activities, he is endangering and injuring his own good."

Betsy Mosbaugh, II Philosophy, leader of the Oppostion, argued, "To speak of too many extra-curricular activities is basically erroneous. These activities are intended to round out practically and culturally the efforts of the University curriculum, They are the result of a definite plan. Extra-curricular activities en masse appear appalling, yet each is part of some course." She emphasized, "They must be looked at relatively, not quantitatively."

Jean Vale, II St. Michael's, second speaker for the affirmative, outlined the quantitative character of the clubs, societies and unions on the campus. "From the Students Handbook we can trace as many as 100 different organizations to claim the attention of the student. There is much overlapping, so that no unified angle emerges from the whole picture."

Choosing a debating club to exemplify her argument, she stressed the point that there are too many clubs with too few members, meeting at too rare intervals. These might be united efficiently, so that individual capacity and outstanding merit be directed into one main

P. Philip, N.Y.. Times Scribe Sees Stern Tests To Come

Percy J. Philip, Times Correspondent, Analyzes Need For a Second Front; Discusses French Morale

EXPERIENCED BLITZKRIEG

The worst thing to do is to have too little, too late; but it is equally bad to do it too soon, Percy J. Philip, correspondent of the New York Times, said with regard to the clamour for a second front, when he addressed the annual meeting of the University of Toronto Alumni Federation, at Convocation Hall last night.

Mr. Philip explained that this has been the attitude of the British government. As an illustration, he referred to the Dieppe expedition, which he said, was valuable in that it served as a promise to the French people which would show them that we are in earnest and in that it distracted the attention of Germany from our intentions in North Africa.

The destruction of Germany's industry, ports and communications is by every means as valuable a contribution to success in Germany as anything we could do on land in Europe, he said, referring to his own experiences during the blitzkrieg in Great Britain.

Mr. Philip stated that in his opinion, what is important now and after the war is the preservation or return to individual freedom, rather than political freedom. In Europe, there will be an extraordinary clamour for it, he continued, especially in the occupied countries which have had too much of state control. A revolutionary state of mind has developed there which will be difficult for us to understand because we haven't gone through the same emotional experience.

Speaking of France, Mr. Philip said that if ever we land in France with any prospect of staying, the population will rise and help us—more than we helped them. They know now that eventually we will win the war—although they didn't know it for 18 months

The general public will be admitted to Hart House on Visitors' Day next Sunday (Nov. 22). The hours have been extended from 1:30 to 5 p.m. in order that the large numbers who wish to see the Canadian Armed Forces Art Exhibition in the art gallery may have an opportunity of doing so.

Meds Announce New Executive

Medsmen gathered in Hart House Theatre yesterday for their annual election of year and Medical Society executives.

The new Medical Society Executive is as follows: George Culman, president; H. J. M. Barnett, vice-president; E. J. Wilford, treasurer; Alex McIntyre, assistant secretary-treasurer; L. Roberts, Toronto CAMSI representative.

The 6th year executive is: G. W. Fitzgerald, president; S. W. Leung, vice-president; M. O. Zerebko, secretary; C. O. Dyer, treasurer; Max Alexandroff, CAMSI representative.

The 6th year permanent executive is: Tom Dixon, president; E. B. Campbell, vice-president; Wilma Affison, secretary; J. B. Armstrong, treasurer.

The 5th year executive is: Harry Bain, president; John Darte, vice-president; Ellen Ogried, secretary; J. D. Lovering, treasurer.

The 4th year executive is: D. E. Hutcheon, president; W. K. Lindsay, vice-president; Agatha Tait, secretary; R. M. Bremner, treasurer; E. C. H. Lehman, CAMSI representative.

The 3rd year executive is: Doug Rae, president; F. E. Byrans, vice-president; Marg Rae, secretary; J. P. H. McHenry, treasurer; W. H. Fielding, Athletic representative; Morris St. Aubin, CAMSI representative.

The 1st year CAMSI representative is Roy Howarth.

The Medical Women's Athletic Association elected: Jane McLeod, president; Mary Hollington; vice-president; Charlotte Hahn, secretary-treasurer; Marion Gray, 3rd year representative.

The Medical Women's Undergraduate Association elected: Elizabeth Harrison, president; Joan Farquharson, vice-president; Dorcas Beaton, secretary; H. G. Banting, treasurer.

The Medical Athletic Association elected: T. H. B. Boyd, president; Robert Delaney, vice-president; D. C. Lewis, secretary-treasurer.

Victoria Harvesters Will Speak at Service

Following up the harvest excursion which saw an exodus of students to the west to help save the Saskatchewan wheat crop, 34 harvesters from the Victoria College class of 4T5 are to tell some of their experiences at a special "harvest" church service and fireside at Bloor Street United Church next Sunday evening.

According to plans announced last night by Jack Paterson, sophomore president, students will share the pulpit with Rev. George Pidgeon at the regular church service also. Geoffrey Julian will assist in the service, and Eric McIlwain will give a ten-minute pulpit talk.

At the fireside, Helge Hongisto will lead the singsong, Bert Moriartey will be chairman. Refreshments will be served by girls of 4T5. An open invitation has been extended to all students to attend both the regular service and fireside.

KETCHUM VISITS TORONTO

Professor J. D. Ketchum, formerly of the Department of Psychology, was in Toronto yesterday in connection with his work for the government. He is now employed in the Department of Public Information in Ottawa.

Professor Ketchum left the University in September and has since been in Ottawa working on morale problems. Among other things, he has been computing questionnaires designed to gauge public opinion. This branch of his work is based on research he commenced while still at the University. While in Toronto yesterday, he interview several students.

The Spirit Of School

Last night in the Great Hall of Hart House the Engineering Society of the University of Toronto staged the 53rd Annual School Dinner. It was an occasion upon which one felt keenly the traditions of a great school of engineering; traditions which have welded the student body and alumni of the school into an integral and dynamic whole.

There were speakers of surpassing ability at last night's Dinner, notably the Vice-Principal of Queen's University, the President of our own University, and the Dean of School. There was excellent food. There was professional entertainment. But it was none of these things which distinguished last night's Dinner from hundreds of similar, enjoyable campus functions. It was the spirit which prevailed of camaraderie among the Schoolmen and bospitality for their guests.

Engineers pride themselves, sometimes, on their rough-and-toughness, their disregard for life's niceties. But the pose is a thin one. They are keenly alert to the fine points of a University education, and the fact that their courses are not expressly designed for the production of "culture" in no way destracts from the innate excellence of their taste.

This editorial emphatically does not seek to patronize the Schoolmen, or to register surprise that they know not to eat with knives alone. But it seeks to offer—from a newspaper which, for a variety of reasons, is predominantly edited by Arts-men—a salute to the Spirit of School.

We Are Not Alone

Yesterday we had occasion to break a jocular editorial lance with our friends of The Evening Telegram.

Today a word about another of our contemporaries, The Daily Star. Writing on the same issue as was The Telegram when it evoked our criticism—that of the wisdom of the Board of Governors in refusing admittance to 18 aliens friendly to the United Nations—The Star has displayed throughout the current controversy clarity of thought and generosity of opinion in striking contrast to the editorial policy of its competitor.

We have followed the practice for the past week of reprinting everything both these papers have had to say on the present issue. Thus we need not here quote from Star editorials to prove our point.

But we thank The Star—and we think that in this we voice the opinion of those many students who believe the "friendly aliens" should be allowed to enter this University—for the fair-minded stand they have taken.

Another word about our contemporaries: The Globe and Mail has not yet declared itslef editorially on the present issue. It would be interesting if that newspaper would clarify its stand on the matter.

Gifted Graduate

From our campus last year went Dr. Jean Davey, Medical Adviser for the women students, to become Squadron Officer Jean Davey, head of the Medical Branch of the R.C.A.F. (Women's Division) and first woman doctor to wear uniform in Canada. After three years of tending the health of the women of the University at the Women's Medical Office, 44 Hoskin avenue, Dr. Davey had become so popular that the many girl students who had come to know her were sorry to see her leave, but they were also pleased at the new honour which come to her when the R.C.A.F. called on her to become bead of its Women's Division Medical Service.

Dr. Davey is one of the many alumnae of this University of whom we can be especially proud for the part she is playing in the present war and also for the work she had done for women in the field of medicine. Intent on following her doctor father's footsteps ever since she was five years old, she studied medicine here and did her interne's work in Toronto hospitals. In medical work she is a pioneer woman, although you might not suspect such sturdy qualities on meeting this very attractive young doctor.

In her new work she drafts the policy for the physical standard of enlistment and other medical problems and sees that every R.C.A.F. station has adequate medical care for each airwoman. She reports that the work is not so difficult as she had thought it would be. She expected twice as much sickness among the women as the men and has been gratified to find that it is only 25 per cent more.

The Canadian Women's Division of the Air Force is ahead of its counter-part in England where about six per cent of the W.A.A.F.S. is hospitalized. In Canada the average is less than three percent, perhaps partly due to the unceasing work of Dr. Davey and her staff.

Correspondence

Editor,
The Varsity.

Dear Sir:

After reading The Varsity, Nov. 16, 1942, concerning an article under the headline, "Governors Ban Eighteen Internees," together with the comments and correspondence of Nov. 17—I add these remarks.

The students concerned in this refugee problem are "Aliens," this is self-evident. As aliens they naturally are not subject to Canadian allegiance, and under normal conditions these refugees might return to their original countries—those countries to whom the refugees bear true allegiance.

Why should this country undertake to educate "Aliens," when true Canadians are turned away from our halls of learning? Dentistry barred 24 Canadian students from entering that course. Medicine barred a greater number. Engineering courses are said to be over-crowded.

Why should "Alien refugee students" be allowed the benefits of a Canadian education, when Canadian students are barred from such an opportunity?

Yours very sincerely,

John F. Anderson,
I Medicine.

Toronto, Nov. 18, 1942.

In our Nov. 18 editorial we attempted to set forth the arguments advanced by those who backed the Board of Governors' decision re the 18 aliens and to reply to those arguments. We do not believe the letter reprinted above adds any real weight to the arguments we repeated and refuted. We suggest its author turn to argument THREE and our reply to it in that editorial,

But our columns are still open for student opinion on the matter—EDITOR.

AR-MUSIC Drama

Climax

Marian Anderson

It is false to bill Marian Anderson as a contralto. She is no more a contralto than a diamond is merely brilliant, or hard. Her soprano range is equally good, and the brilliant muscianship with which she performs everything she attempts is also completely characteristic.

From the first notes of the Purcell to the last of the Negro Spiritual, Marian Anderson presented what undoubtedly will be the finest evening of music this season. It is impossible to describe her voice, the richness of its tone, the perfection of its pitch, the nuances of meaning with which she endows all she sings.

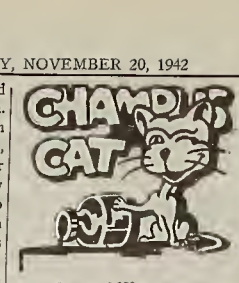
The usual lack of space, more than ever evident, make a just review of Miss Anderson's marvellous work impossible. Especially memorable was Faure's Le Voyageur. Her French enunciation has to be heard to be imagined.

The rest of Miss Anderson's program might have been done conceivably by someone else, but it is impossible to think of anyone else and the Negro spirituals producing the combination that they did. The climax of everything was Crucifixion, an emotionally supercharged spiritual. It would have been better sung unaccompanied, but that is all one can offer.

Miss Anderson is the ultimate of perfection. Her encores were fresh and original, models for others to follow.

NEIL MACDONALD.

Operas



Lucia di Lammermoor

After a rather unconvincing and slow-moving first act, the Columbia Opera Company staged a very enjoyable performance of Donizetti's Lucia di Lammermoor yesterday afternoon. The part of Lucia (Luisa Coronina) was well done throughout, but was especially effective in the "Mad Scene" in Act III. Mario Palerno was particularly brilliant as her lover, Edgardo, while Frank Richards, as Lord Henry, and Arthur Anderson as the Chaplain, were close runners-up.

The supporting cast, however, were only mediocre, especially the timid, poorly costumed hunstmen at the beginning.

The highlights were the famous Sex-

In Six Easy Lessons

Lesson Nine

We interrupt our regular series of lectures on good journalism, to bring you some editorial comments on the profession as it is practised in some quarters. We therefore take great pleasure in discussing today Toronto's other great daily newspaper:

THE EVENING BELLY

Our sense of journalistic propriety was deeply offended the other night by the 144-point headlines of The Evening Belly as follows:

One Side of Journalism

We know this fits the width of the page but its ambiguity and admission of editorial ignorance is unpardonable at a time when clear thinking is necessary since it throws into utter confusion the minds of its already sufficiently befuddled readers.

Furthermore in column one of the same page they state in bold type:

"Here is the incomplete list of Japanese losses . . ."

What do they mean by giving us incomplete news? Is this part of their editorial policy?

In a series of editorials this week this paper suggests that certain enemy aliens should be admitted to the armed forces of this nation. We might ask whether there is an ulterior motive behind this ardent desire.

Then, bracing ourselves, we delve further into the pages of this journalistic masterpiece. Sur enough, on page 20, we find the following headline, right in the upper left corner:

"End of Private Ownership Seen in High Land Taxes"

All of which makes us wonder whether they have a Communist writing their headlines—and that brings to mind the comment: "Tim Buck have spent three years hiding on the editorial page of The Belly—nobody could ever find anything there."

"Need Life Insurance—
WHO - ME?"
The younger you are when you take out your first life insurance policy, the lower your premium will be.
So, you should start thinking about your life insurance when you get your first salary cheque.
Will you need insurance? Yes—unless you intend to live like a hermit without human contacts and responsibilities. One day you may have a home of your own to keep, a family to provide for. One day you may need security for a business loan; and, some distant day, you will certainly need money for your own retirement.
There are Mutual Life policies that can do all these things. When the time comes for you to buy life insurance, see a Mutual Life representative. He will help you to plan the right kind and amount of insurance protection to suit your special needs.

Speaking of Sport

By Roger Conant

THESE ARE THE MEN

Oh for the good old intercollegiate days! Thus do we so often bemoan. Oh for the Queen's-Varsity epic encounters up in the stadium. Oh for the McGill-Blues struggles in the arena. And, Oh for those track meets with the other colleges. For, not that Hec Philips ever fielded a slouch of a squad, but this season appears to be the peak of the cycle in the way of track talent. For the speedsters who were just shaking out their freshman legs and awaiting the day they could make the first Blue team are now at their peak of development. Most have not enough time to spend on conditioning due to drill and long work hours so are perhaps not in intercollegiate trim. But they train enough to win interfaculty championships and if the time could be found we would wager a greenback or so that these lads would cop many an intercollegiate title.

Not since the days of the great Dave Creighton, and Forest, Hogg, Kiblewhite and Goodwin—if you can recall them—has there been such a gathering of track talent and prospective talent around old Varsity. Just about one of the best distance men in some time is in the person of Roy Foulis, fourth year Schoolman. Coming from Creighton's hometown — Georgetown — he is tops as a miler and distance. Winning the mile interfaculty and excelling in the harriers, he nabbed first spot, among many, in last Saturday's meet with the Norwegians. Bob Delaney, from Meds, has found enough time to get in the best form he has enjoyed here. He showed great promise in his freshman year but this year he really came into his own—winning the 3 mile interfaculty and doing well in the outside meets; for example, taking the 2 mile event against O.A.C. Tom Barnet, the veteran Wycliffian, has rounded out considerably in the past year and become one of the top all-round distance and cross-country men.

The old reliables being taken care of, we can now turn our spotlight upon some of the younger mail carriers and coming top-flighters. One of the first is Jack Feldhans, the Sudbury speedball, who shows excellent promise in cross-country work—beating Roy Foulis in the mile event of the dual meet. Gord. Dorimer, third year Schoolman, coming to U. of T. with a good record at U.T.S., where he featured in the high jump, has become a stout distance man. Geoff. Parke-Taylor began his running at Varsity and is progressing very rapidly. Phil Shackleton, I U.C., bringing a brilliant collegiate record of city championship in the mile and three mile events, is looked upon as the freshman of the year. Doing well in all meets and harriers, he captured the Junior Harrier handily. Frank Fordyce, first year S.P.S., brings a collegiate record and promises big things. Dave Kirkwood, Trinity sophomore, began his running here and has come right along. Jim Brown, I S.P.S., coming from U.T.S., is another good prospect. Jack Jeffries, 2nd Wycliffe, makes up the eleventh member of our mythical intercollegiate squad who we feel sure could well maintain the high standard of Blue and White trackmen.

But few people realize the position of the track program, and especially the harriers, on the campus. For we might call these athletes unsung heroes—they are running far away from everyone and everything—getting scant publicity. But this quenches not the ardour of some. And for these, and to stir up more interest, some faculties—Dents, Meds, Wycliffe—run off their own meets. This practice is very commendable and it is a wonder that more of the other colleges don't follow the example. What about School, with all the hordes! or what about U.C. and Vic, for instance—wouldn't that be a good way to get a track and harrier team going? For besides the enjoyment of the meet, the college reaps dividends—some blame Meds' copping of the interfacutly relay upon this very fact.

Wycliffe Downed By Trinity 5-4

Trinity downed Wycliffe 5-4 in a free scoring epic on the front campus yesterday afternoon. The score stood at 1-1 for the major part of the game on goals by Parke-Taylor of Wyc. and Max Clarkson of Trin. But with ten minutes left to play the game opened up and five snappy goals were whipped past the goalkeepers, the last and deciding one going to Trinity. Ed Abbott scored Wycliffe's second goal with a "header" from a corner kick by Harris.

Artificial Respiration Subject of Lecture

Despite the announcement in yesterday's Varsity, the Artificial Respiration classes will start this coming Monday at 4:45 in the upper gym, announced Warren Stevens yesterday.

The three lectures of the course will be repeated each following day to give those tied up by the C.O.T.C. a chance. Thus lecture 1 will be given on Monday and Tuesday, No. 2 will be given Wednesday and Thursday and the last on Friday and Saturday. The examination for the candidates will be held on Monday and Tuesday of the following week.

Wills MacLauchlin, from the Hydro, one of the foremost authorities in Canada, perhaps of America, will deliver the first lecture.

Meds Take Emmanuel In Swim Meet 26-7

Meds natators submerged a valiant Emmanuel splash squad 26-7 yesterday but Pharmacy defaulted their end of the double-header to Knox. This default gave Knox double points because the previous encounter of these teams was postponed from Oct. 29.

R.A.F. Soccerites To Play Varsity

Tomorrow at 11 a.m. an R.A.F. soccer eleven from No. 31 Air Navigation School, Port Albert, Ontario, will invade the Varsity back campus. The airmen will undoubtedly provide plenty of opposition for the Varsity all stars as their line-up includes many soccer greats of the old country. A few weeks ago the fliers walked all over a University of Western Ontraio team to the tune of 11 goals to nothing but that can't happen here — so say our boys. And they might be right. In their first game two weeks ago they shut out an exceptionally good army team.

The game should be a good one to watch as the Blue and White favour a long passing game which is also the style of the better English professional teams and no doubt the fliers will feature the same. The following players will represent Varsity:

Goal: Hugh Thompson, S. P. S.; Backs: Don Clee, Dents; Joe Fyfe, Meds; Halves: Ed Johns, Dents; Hal Seymour, S.P.S.; Russ Self, Knox; Forwards: Dave Hibbard, S.P.S.; Art Boyd, Meds; Art Riguero, S.P.S.; Jim Paton, Vic; Art Creswell, Emmanuel; Alternates: Tommy McIver, St. Mike's; Ed Abbott, Wycliffe, Ian Currie, S.P.S.

"Figaro . . ."

Being one of those who would give up all of Wagner and Brahms for a single opera by Rossini, I went to the Columbia Opera's performance of the Barber of Seville in a very expectant state of mind, and fortunately was not disappointed.

There are six important parts and all were sung with adequacy. Alfred Chigi as the Barber was particularly good, even if, along with the other members of the east, he overdid the slapstick. Luisa Coronina as Rosina used her soprano leggieri without attempting to force the tone and with a voice as light as hers this is necessary. Arthur Anderson as Don Basilio had a hollow sepulchral voice . . and a ghastly face. Indeed the make-up of all the comic characters was positively hair-raising. And the orchestra was good considering its size and makeshift character.

MILTON WILSON.

Carmen

The Columbia Opera Company last night presented a sparkling performance of Bizet's Carmen at Massey Hall. The whole thing — choruses, duets, solos, orchestra—showed a polished smoothness that far outshone any performances in this series to date.

Carmen (Louise Caselotti) fitted the role of the fickle, vivacious gypsy to perfection. Her acting was excellent (but not obvious), and her voice suitable. Don José, the tragic hero (Patrick Henry), played his part nobly in all respects. Escamilla, Carmen's other lover (Douglas Reiff) did well in a smaller, thought important role. The supporting cast was perfectly adequate.

This very popular opera (it has been performed well over two hundred times at the Met.) just bubbles over with well-known arias. Douglas Reiff's Toreador Song (Votre toast, je peux vous le rendre), and Carmen's Habanera, L'amour est un oiseau rebelle, to mention only two, won prolonged applause from the audience.

Amazingly enough, the French diction was quite understandable throughout. And three cheers for the Corps de Ballet.

Bach's Contemporaries

Lubka Kolessa

The second in this series of piano recitals by Lubka Kolessa took place yesterday in the Conservatory Concert Hall. Again Mme. Kolessa displayed her phenomenal technique in a recital which seemed almost a collection of pieces de resistance.

Her interpretation of the Vivaldi Concerto Grosso was filled with her characteristic vigour, and was technically admirable. The florid Handel Chaconne in G Major, with its difficult staccato octave work followed.

Among the shorter pieces were three well-known Scarlatti Sonatas (in B flat major, C major, and D. major), each performed flawlessly. In fact, it is almost futile to attempt to criticize adversely anything which Mme. Kolessa has played in this series to date. It isn't only that her technical command places her in the virtuoso class, but, being a true artist, she performs everything, even the least important phrase, in a highly musical way.

A suggestion—it would be a good idea, perhaps, if Mme Kolessa would accommodate the late-comers, or vice versa.

Yesterday's paper carried many stories of the blackout, but failed to tell that up at O.C.E., U.C. Jrs. and St. Hilda's just didn't get their basketball game finished. The warden asked them to turn out the light. The way things are now it is unlikely that the game will be replayed.

Last night's scheduled game between Meds and U.C. Seniors will be played tonight at 7:30. In the other games St. Hilda's were defeated 35-9 by II P.H.E. The game was a bit slow and was marked by bad passes. Jean Stinson (21) was the best for P.H.E., while Betty McLean played a fighting game for St. Hilda's.

Tonight at 5:30 U.C. Juniors v. II P.H.E.; 6:30, St. Hilda's Juniors v. Meds. We would like to see a few more spectators. So come on—give the gals some support.

In conclusion, we should like to say in this connection that Vic Seniors—not Nurses—were the victors in Tuesday's game.

Blakeslee to Lecture At Convocation Hall

The Royal Canadian Institute will sponsor a lecture by Dr. A. F. Blakeslee, former director of the Department of Genetics, Carnegie Institution, Cold Springs Harbour, N.Y., in Convocation Hall, Saturday, Nov. 21, at 8 p.m. The lecture topic is "Controlled Development of Plants."

Dr. Blakeslees is best known for his contributions to the physiology of development and reproduction in plants and to the special science of plant genetics.

A native of Geneseo, N.Y., and a graduate of Wesleyan University, he received his Ph.D. at Harvard in 1904. After two years of study in Germany, he returned to teach at Harvard and Radcliffe and became professor of botony in what soon developed into the Connecticut Agricultural College at Storrs. In 1915 he entered the Department of Genetics of the Carnegie Institution at Cold Springs Harbour, became the Director in 1935 and has just recently retired from this position.

His lecture on Saturday night will be illustrated not only by lantern slides but also by coloured models of the plants discussed.

PRESS COMMENT

Reprinted from the editorial columns of The Toronto Daily Star, Thursday, Nov. 19:

The Governors Should Reconsider

A joint special committee reporting to the Governors of the University of Toronto considered applications for admission from 15 friendly aliens who were among the refugees sent over by Britain to Canada in 1940 and since held in internment here. By 9 votes to 3 the special committee recommended their acceptance for university training. It did so upon the assurance of Lt.-Col. R. S. W. Fordham, commissioner of refugee camps, that "no stigma attaches to these men, and they are now regarded as friendly and not enemy aliens."

He pointed out that they were sent to Canada in July of 1940, "without their cases having been examined with any care." They have since been invesigated by three sets of officials with all the information obtainable in England and in Canada at their disposal, and have been given a clean sheet. The Home Office in Britain is anxious that they should be technically educated so as to do useful war work, and they have been selected with that in view. Most of the released refugees have been sent direct to farms or war industries (they are not accepted by the army), but some have particular capacities for technical development, and these are the ones allocated to universities.

The nine on the special committee of the University who voted to accept these friendly refugees are understood to have been Dr. Bruce Macdonald, chairman of the Board of Governors; Sir William Mulock, the Chancellor; Dr. H. J. Cody, the President; Dr. John J. Gibson, the Vice-Chairman; Hon. Chief Justice Rose; Provost Cosgrave and Mr. Gerald Larkin, of Trinity College; Rev. Father McLaughlin and Rev. Father Bondy, of St. Michael's College. Representatives of Victoria College, where some of the refugees are enrolled, stated they were in entire agreement with accepting the refugees, but had no authority from their board to vote.

The favorable recommendation of the committee went forward to the University Governors, but in that body the division was 7-7, and the resolution of acceptance was therefore lost for lack of a majority. In addition to governor-members of the special committee who again cast a favorable vote at the board meeting, the following additional governors are said to have made up the seven who wished the refugees admitted: Hon. Judge Kelly (retired), Dr. H. B. Anderson, and J. S. Duncan, president of the Massey-Harris Company. Taking this in conjunction with the committee vote, it is apparent that the group in favor of admission was an impressive one, with eminent scholastic and legal opinion particularly well represented.

It is important that the refusal to admit the 15 friendly aliens to the University of Toronto should be reconsidered and the mistake rectified. Nine other Canadian universities are admitting such refugees. Moreover some of the applications come via Victoria and St. Michael's Colleges, and there is grave doubt whether these applicants can be legally refused university courses under the federation agreement. The principle involved in this has implications far beyond the immediate issue, and a refusal, if persisted in, would strike at the very root of federated university unity.

UNIVERSITY EDUCATION

To the Editor of The Star.

Sir: Your editorial of Nov. 16, re the governors of the University of Toronto barring from the science course a few friendly refugees who found sponsors to get them out of internment, suggests a great injustice has been done. I fail to feel the same sympathy, and I think yours is sadly misplaced also when there are thousands of gifted Canadian boys and girls who, through lack of finances, are unable to gain university training. In fact, many of them can't even finish high school. I believe the Canadian people would appreciate your editorial a little more if your plea were for free education for every boy and girl from kindergarten, through to the university for every one of them with the ability. If such were the case then I think your editorial would be in order, but with the education system as it is at present, I believe the governors are to be commended.

Exemplary behavior was shown by a group of schoolmen in their conduct during Wednesday's blackout. Becoming righteously enraged at a number of lights left on in the Physics building some agitator counselled, "Let's go over and smash every window in the place!" The cry was taken up and stones were gathered, but some cooler head intervened. "Let's go over there, fellows," he said, "but let's just throw little stones."

Cacophonous is the adjective to describe the cavernous metal workshop over in University College. One day last week when its many inmates were doing a particularly loud imitation of a third string road show of "Il Trovatore" fallen on parlous times, a passing Varsity staffer of experimental bent stuck his head in the door and, with a voice long accustomed to making itself heard above the monotypes at the Press, shouted:

"QUIET!"

—and are ready to help us the moment we help them. He pointed out that at the time of the fall of France, "fidelite" was the keynote of the attitude of 60 per cent of the population and that the other 40 per cent were disgusted because Russian and America hadn't come into the war. He referred to the estimate of the French Socialist deputy, Andre Phillippe, that 99 per cent of the people in occupied France and 90 per cent in the formally unoccupied part, are in opposition to Germany.

When the war ends, none of us will be able to claim to have won it, because none of us could possibly win it against the Germans and the Japanese. We had to pool all our resources in war and now we must be careful about pooling the credit, Mr. Philip said. Referring to criticisms which have been made of our empire, he pointed out that it is that conception of empire which has come through three years of war, united by a common loyalty to that idea of union which is the anticipation of what he hopes may be in store for human society in the years to come.

Mr. Philip said that while he doesn't exclude the possibility of the war ending soon, it is certain that before the enemy gives up, he will come at us with every flaming piece of might with which he can strike—that there are going to be fearful battles and that we are going to need every man and every pound of energy we can give to battle.

Frances Allen, I Law, second speaker for the opposition, declared: "Residents have Deans and Dons, non-residents have their parents to check on too many outside activities. But the student must have training in cultural poise, which he can duly acquire from experience in executive leadership. Each activity works hand in hand with a corresponding cultural activity."

Outlining the necessity for this all-round training, she strongly urged that the University should turn out "men whose social life has been as developed as their funds of information."

STUDENTS, STAFF TO CONFER ON UNIVERSITY IN WARTIME

S.P.S. Students Back Governors

Don't Want 'Friendly Aliens' In Overcrowded Faculties Says Engineering Society

President Jim Cawley of Engineering Society Releases Executive's Statement as Sequel of Open Meeting Thursday at Which About 300 Schoolmen Voiced Varied Opinions. No Actual Vote Taken at Meeting

WON'T OBJECT IF ADMITTED TO ARTS COURSES

Students of the Faculty of Applied Science and Engineering have gone on record as being not in favour of admitting to the crowded courses of S.P.S. the 18 "friendly aliens" whom the University Board of Governors recently refused to admit to the University, Jim Crawley, President of the Engineering Society, said last night.

A special meeting of the Engineering Society voiced their disapproval of the possibility of admitting such students to their own Faculty, although it was stated that they "bear no ill will towards the victims of Nazi aggression and realize their seemingly hopeless position." They added that "there is no place for them in the crowded faculties during the course of the present war," but said that "if the University authorities saw fit to permit them to enter the Arts Colleges they had no argument with such action."

About 300 students were present at the meeting but no formal vote was taken on the matter.

Following is the complete text of the official Engineering Society executive statement, released by Crawley last night:

On Thursday, Nov. 19, at an open meeting of the Engineering Society, the question of admitting friendly alien students to the University was discussed. From a crowded assembly of some 300 students, opinions were voiced freely. To express formally a majority opinion, a meeting of the officers of the Society was called for 11:30 a.m., Saturday, Nov. 21.

Here it was decided: "If student opinion meant anything on the question of "Friendly Aliens" they would go on record as not in favour of admitting them to the crowded courses of S.P.S."

It was pointed out that if the University authorities saw fit to permit them to enter the Arts Colleges they

McGill Begins One Unified Charity Drive

Montreal, Nov. 21 — (CUP) — The McGill Amalgamated Charities Drive will begin on Monday, Nov. 23, and will continue for one week. Every student is expected to contribute one dollar. In order that every student may be contacted, chairmen have organized their assistants to canvass a dozen or so people each.

Each Faculty has been alloted its quota, and the total for the body of McGill students will be expected to reach $2,060.

The charities have been amalgamated since it has been found that one drive is easier on the student's pocketbook, and therefore more successful.

The need for charities in war time as well as in peace has been emphasized and attention drawn to the fact that the government has been forced to cancel many of its charity grants for the duration.

The executive committee in charge of the drive has issued an appeal that students recognize the urgency of the need and contribute accordingly. It is hoped by the Chairman that the success of this year's drive will exceed that of last.

The new University College yell will be introduced during the evening, and Vic Oakley's orchestra will provide the music for dancing in the Women's Union.

Toronto Group Says Alien Ban Undemocratic

It is possible that the recent ruling that 18 "friendly aliens" may not enter this University "may give rise to feeling on the part of many Canadians that the Board of Governors of the University of Toronto is not wholly free from Nazi ideology," a statement issued Saturday by the Civil Liberties' Association of Toronto said in part. The statement asked that the Board amend its recent decision.

The statement added. "A portion of the press which supports the Board's action suggests that these students, if admitted to the University, would be given an unfair advantage over Canadians now engaged in military service or in industry.

"We submit that the correct solution of the problem is to provide generous facilities after the war for those whose studies have been interrupted, not to deny education to any who are potentially useful citizens. We are unable to believe that he supply of educated persons in Canada after the war will be in excess of the demand."

O.T.C. Course Altered To Fulfill New Demands

Saskatoon, Nov. 22—(CUP)—Since the Officers' Training Schools at Gordon Head and other such points throughout the Dominion have raised their standards of training for entry and have requested that other ranks sent there for commissions in the future be as nearly on a par with Active Service members as possible, the University of Saskatchewan's C.O.T.C. has expanded to embrace a new organization — the Packet.

Parade ground drill will be reduced to 20 periods of 45 minutes as opposed to the regular C.O.T.C. program of approximately double the amount. The main subjects to be taught will be battle drill, advanced weapon training, section leading, fieldcraft and a great deal of practical map reading. The members of the Packet will get toughening exercises and be taught the gentler commando subtleties. Great stress will be placed on mutual instruction periods.

All-University Conference On Function Of University To Be Held December 12

Sixty-Five Students and 35 Staff Representing All Faculties in University Are to Assemble in Order to Thrash Out Uncertainties About the Place of the University in Wartime and the Extent to Which that Place is Being Filled

PRESIDENT DEFINITELY FAVOURS PROPOSAL

Representatives of both students and staff of all faculties of the University will assemble at an All-University Conference Saturday, Dec. 12 to discuss and investigate the problems of the University in wartime, the Convening Committee of the Conference announced yesterday.

The Convening Committee, which has been sanctioned by the Students' Administrative Council, has been Working out details of the proposed conference for the past two weeks. College and Faculty student executives have been advised of the Conference and will arrange for the appointment of their delegates during this week. Altogether some 65 students and 35 members of the staff are expected to attend.

IMPORTANT NOTICE

Members of the Student's Administrative Council are reminded that each faculty and college executive has been asked by the Book Harvest Committee to appoint a representative to supervise collection of the books. Name of the representative, together with address and telephone number, should be handed in to The Varsity immediately, so that the complete list may be published as soon as possible.

The purpose of the Conference was described by Tom Nixon, president of the Victoria College Union, as follows:

"The Conference will consider what the function of the University in wartime should be, and whether or not this function is at present being fulfilled. In view of the fact that the Government is now considering its policy regarding higher education, the conference will seek to provide it with a crystallization of student-staff opinion on the matter.

"More specifically, the Conference will discuss such problems as conditions governing admittance to the University, the advisability of speeding up courses, and of adjusting courses to wartime needs, the role of military training on the campus, and the possibility of establishing a University Selective Service Board, etc.

"Although the Conference by its nature can speak only for the University of Toronto, it will seek to co-operate with similar conferences in other Canadian Universities, to promote a nation-wide expression of opinion on the matter."

Mr. Nixon discussed the matter with President H. J. Cody yesterday and the President received the idea of a Staff-Student Conference with enthusiasm.

Dr. Cody stated that he would be glad if he could discuss a report from the Conference at the Convention of University Presidents which will meet in Ottawa during the Christmas vacation.

The Convention Committee, elected at a meeting of students on Nov. 10,

GROUP OF ENGLISH AIRMEN VISIT CAMPUS ON FRIDAY

Fifty English Royal Air Force Pilots came to the campus on Friday to make a tour of Hart House. The group was under the guidance of Squadron-Leader Baskerville, who, with Mr. Gilley, acting warden of Hart House, led them through the various rooms of the building.

The tour started in the Great Hall where Mr. Gilley gave the boys an outline of the historical background of the buildings. Mr. Gilley talked briefly on the architecture of the buildings on the campus. Many of the Englishmen were interested in the design and general looks of the University College building and of Hart House.

One man, a graduate of Oxford, said: "You Canadians have done a much better job of Tudor designing than we have in England. Even though we have alot of this type of building in England. I noticed right away, that it was an exceptionally fine building."

The fifty men arrived in Canada last week from U.S. training stations in Alabama and Florida. One of the men asked this reporter, "Are the universities in Canada and the States really co-educational? We didn't get a chance to see very much down south." Five others asked the same question and when taken to the door of the library, the six men heartily agreed with their spokesmen that "Toronto girls are about the nicest ones we've seen yet!"

Pilot Officer N. J. Dusson, who graduated from Keble College Oxford in 1941, was interested in the decision of the Board of Directors to refuse admission to 18 "friendly aliens." When asked his personal opinion, P.O. Dusson said, "There are so many things that have to be taken into consideration on a question like that. I think that the most important consideration would be ta have proof of their loyalty and faith." When shown the Friday issue of The Varsity, he read the report on the S.C.M.-Avukah meeting and said, "That looks as though you are making it a question of anti-semitism. I'm rather surprised at that; there wouldn't be any doubt over home."

I.S.S. HELPS MAINTAIN PRISONERS' MORALE AS WAR DRAGS ON IN STRIFE-TORN LANDS

By Doc Savage

Exactly what is the International Students' Service doing in this war? Much has been heard of this organization in the past year, but few have a really good conception of its aims and purposes. Students will be asked to contribute to the I.S.S. during the War Services campus drive, Dec. 2, and they will be interested in the uses to which their donations will be put.

Perhaps the best answers to our question may be found in the cards and letters received daily in the headquarters in Geneva from British prisoners in Germany and Italy. These messages are of necessity, brief, and there is little room for comment after the "business" of the letter has been dealt with. It requires, however, little imagination to read between the lines and get an idea of what this organization means to these lonely men, penned in camps with little or nothing to do to while away long hours of despair and wretchedness.

Rather than attempt to editorialize, we will quote verbatim from a few of the messages received.

"There are 41 tutors on the staff and we ar dealing daily with from 1,000 to 1,3000 men in the classes, and we pass through the classes approximately 10,000 men per week. Apart from this we are dealing with the working parties, which number 18,000. . . . Thanks to the efforts made by the different societies, we are now able to hold many examinations. . . ."

"Wishing to revise and pursue further my former studies, I have written to my parents for books. . . .They are experiencing difficulty in finding these. . . Would it be possible for you to send me . . ."

"I am most grateful to you for your kindness in sending me four notebooks on two occasions recently. . . . These are of much assistance to me in my work. May I further indulge your kindness by asking for additional supplies. . . . If it is possible to provide a fountain pen, I will gladly repay after the war. . ."

". . . I am very much interested in the history of different countries, and as at the moment I am in Germany, I would be much indebted to you if you could supply me with German History books . . ."

Books are not the only think that the I.S.S. supplies. Resident students know what it is like to go perhaps a week without a letter; imagine the feelings of the man who sent this—

"I am entering my seventh month of imprisonment, and yours in the only mail I have received. . . ."

The Future Of Others

Today the Senate of the University of Toronto will meet, and presumably will discuss the question of admitting 18 "friendly aliens" to this University. Outcome of these deliberations will be awaited keenly by all the students who have interested themselves on either side of the present controversy, and with special interest by the 18 men most closely concerned.

Because opinions voiced at today's meeting may conceivably have considerable bearing on the eventual result of the whole present furore, the Dean of the Faculty of Arts has written, ". . . Should the Senate . . . declare overwhelmingly in favour of the admission of these students, the Board of Governors might feel that the matter should be reopened by them. . . " And certainly representatives of all four of the Arts Colleges have made it plain that they favour such admission. Of course this attitude cannot be said to be typical of all the Senate's members. The Head of the Department of Physics, for example, has written. ". . . I feel that the Senate will not be so unanimous in opposition to the stand of the Board of Governors as seems to betaken for granted. . ."

Thus the decision which the Senate will reach regarding advisability of admitting this group of foreign-born students cannot be predicted with any degree of accuracy. But one prediction which might safely be made is that already put forward by Dean Beatty: if the Senate voices "overwhelming" approval of admitting the students in question, the Board may reopen its diseussion.

Further reason for such reconsideration may lie in the number of student resolutions in favour of admitting the aliens being passed at meeting after meeting during the past week. It is planned that these resolutions will be appended to the Students' Administrative Council's resolution asking the Board to reverse its decision, when that document is forwarded to the Board Secretary. And if campus opinion on the matter is strong enough, it is possible that it will not be disregarded by the Governors.

But a rude jolt to the solidarity of campus thought on the matter came last night with publication of the Engineering Society's decision on the question, carried elswhere in this issue. One cannot help feeling that the decision of the Schoolmen rests on selfish rather than generous, expedient rather than humanitarian grounds. But it is not our place to sit in judgement on the motives which prompted the decision of the Engineers, although we may feel little personal admiration for such motives.

Incidentally, a word of grudging commendation for the men of the Engineering Society's executive who have taken considerable trouble to correlate and analyze the opinions of their constituents on the question probably more thoroughly than have any other student officers. We respect the conscientious manner in which the Engineering Soeiety has made investigation of School opinion; but we deplore the majority of such opinion.

Nevertheless we do not regard School's vote as a deathblow to the possibility that the aliens will be admitted for we believe that the most crucial of this week's opinions will be that voiced at today's Senate meeting. We sincerely hope that the academic heads of this University will see their way clear to uphold one of the finest of liberal traditions—that of freedom of admission to the halls of higher education for all who are worthy of such education—by asking that the Board of Governors reconsider.

Our Own Future

Early next month, students and staff of the University of Toronto will come to close grips with a series of problems with which The Varsity was struggling for a time earlier in the term before the present "friendly aliens" controversy and its predecessor, the Queen's "harvest leave" incident, pushed them out of our pages. During the days—and they seem a long time ago now, although they were really only about o month back—when we were dealing with the address which L. Austin Wright was scheduled to deliver at Kingson, we tried to arouse student interest in the broad problems arising out of the possibility of stepping up even further the part which university men and women are already playing in the national war effort, with the attendant questions—even broader in scope—of the proper definition and demarcation of the functions of a University.

Campus groups debated the issue of the relative value of the Artsmen and the Technician in relation to the eountry's well-being both during the war and in the period of reconstruction. Students discussed advisability of rumoured changes in government regulations which would curtail enrolment in the non-technical courses for the duration. Leading educationalist at this and other Universities commented on the remarks made by government spokesmen hinting that such regulations were projected.

All these problems constituted a very live issue a month ago; and although more pressing campus news has captured the momentary attention of many of us, we are still keenly interested in them, and feel, more strongly than ever, that now is the time to reach a definite understanding of them.

It is a huge job that the Staff-Student Conference on the position of the University in the war, which will culminate Dec. 12fi has laid down for itself. The problems are broad; many-sided; difficult; complex; and the most apparently wise decisions there reached may have unforeseen implications of a surprising nature. We cannot hold forth the hope that one conference will go very far to settle finally the problems which now confront us; but we are hopeful that much of lasting value will arise out of the consideration of these problems by a representative group of student and staff leaders gathered from all sections of this many-sided campus.

The ground will be broken; and at least we will all emerge with a far clearer conception of the questions with which we are faced.

Nor de the possibilities of the Conference stop there; if we take this opportunity to apply some really constructive thought on these problems, we may well be in a position to make at least partial solution of them. And we will have stimulated the latent giant of student thought. If students—potentially the most sharply conscious of any group in the community — ean be brought to think about their present and future functions as students and graduates, they will be doing themselves and their country a great service. It is not sufficient to do; it is also essential for complete efficiency to know why we do.

But the Conference, although it will treat with the most broad and at times abstract questions which concern university students, is not planned as any ivory-tower venture. Suggestions for the improvement of university status and the increase of university participation in the war effort will be gathered up and correlated; then an energetic effort is planned to see that these suggestions are put into practice.

Students back of the Conference hope that it will be possible to forward a brief to Ottawa, outlining to Government heads the suggestions embodied in the Conference report. And it may well be that these suggestions will carry real weight.

Thus The Varsity strongly urges students of this University to take an active interest and part in the doings of the forthcoming Conference. It cannot but be of value to us all.

Hart House Concert

The Hart House Sunday evening concert featured Charles Jordan, baritone, and Johanne Moreland, soprano. Twenty-six songs were sung, most of them extremely lovely, and both artists did them justice. In the first group Charles Jordan revealed a warm voice of small range, but considerable sweetness. He began with the delightful Il Pensier of Haydn and continued with two songs by Peter Warlock and two English folk-songs arranged by Cecil Sharp. They were all extremely fine, and in partcular one might mention Sleep, the first of the Warlock songs, whose harmony eonsisted of an extension of Elizabethan praetices. Mr. Jordan's enunciation in Bridgewater Foir was very clear.

Johanne Moreland is a lieder singer of striking gifts. Her voice is small and intimate, while her phrasing displays a subtlety not to be found in many singers of great reputation. She sang a song by Handel and four lovely lieder by Schumann. It was in the Schumann that she achieved her greatest success. I was astonished by the variety and sublety of her aecentuation and the clear contours of her phrasing. The second song of Schumann, Er Ist's, was quite miraculous.

Then Charles Jordan sang a French group. Faure's Les Berceaux was lovely, the Debussy Romonce less so, and the two Franch Canadian Folk-songs were delightful. Mr. Jordan, I am glad to say, did not get coy in these, as one might perhaps be tempted to do. Miss Moreland's voice is not as well suited to Charpentier's Depuis Le Jour, and as the aria with its slack post-Wagnerian harmonies is quite worthless, she might have omitted it.

Mr. Jordan's greatest success was in three Schubert songs. His interpretation of Wohin does not coincide with my conception of the song. There is a touch of dramatic poignance in it whieh Mr. Jordan did not give us. But there can be no doubt as to the charm of the work as he presented it, and the equal justification of his view which such success would suggest.

Miss Moreland's last group contained some delightful things such as La Forge's Cupid Captive and Les Filles de Codiz by Delibes. It als contained such a poor thing as Miracle by Malotte with its progressions of chromatie chords as an introduction, and weak ballad harmony at the clixames. Finally the two singers sang some excellent Gershwin together and left amid much applause. Weldon Kilburn accompanied with delicacy, but also with a few questionable details of nuancing. I would like to say more about Miss Moreland's superb performance, but space forbids.

Operas

Cavolleria Rusticona ond Pogliacci

Musicians will tell you that Pietro Mascagni had to dip into his slim savings to purchase an alarm clock so he could awake before dawn and write his opera, Cavallieria Rusticana. At Massey Hall Friday night a full-house audience needed no clock to keep them aroused; for the Columbia Oper Company's production of Mascagni's opera—which was short on sweetness and long on volume—served the same purpose.

The male cast, whose mildewed appearance was evidence of how manshortage has hit the travelling show business, trilled through their operatic paces with solid pantomime, but vocally they should have been more subdued. As the volcanic Santuzza, Gertrude Ribla seemed fairly adequate, though her performanee lacked the sparkle injected into the same role last year by Ethel Barrymore Colt.

Looking more like fugitives from a Hallowe'en masquerade than mountebanks, the overly-greasepainted company carried their vigour over into Paggliacci, giving a loud and handsome performance. It was second rate business, with the exception of Harold Lindi (Canio) who combined voice and theatrics in a pleasant fashion.

FRANK RASKY.

Honsel ond Gretel

Saturday afternoon's performance of Humperdinck's fairy opera Hansel ond Gretel, at Massey Hall was a strange contradition. The cast seemed to be perfectly adequate, but the pit orchestra was the vilest thing I have ever heard! It was consistently must too loud, and succeeded throughout the whole performance in drowning out with the brassy blares almost every vestige of sound from the singers. At last I know why singers in companies like this often have bad voices: they've ruined them by having to strain them for years, trying to make themselves heard above orchestras like this!

As for the east itself, Luisa Coronina, as Gretel, was the best in the show. What could be heard of her voice seemed to suit the part and her actions were disarmingly child-like without being silly. An excellent bit of acting! Eleanor Knapp, as Honsel, seemed to have a slightly better voice, but her acting was not as convincing. Douglas Reiff, as the Father, combined a good baritone voice with a good presentation of his role. The "angel" Corps de Ballet was sweet but extremely amateurish.

One of the most outstanding bits of saerilege was the performance of the Children's Prayer in Aet II. The poor singers would probably have done it well, but the blatant orchestra forced them to sing it, not softly as it was intended to be done, but at fff, and even then they couldn't be heard above the orchestral din! The orchestra and their stupid conductor may congratulate themselves on having completely ruined an

Seasoned Old Country Stars Barely Outclass Varsity Team Play in Final Rugger Game of the Year

L.A.C. BISHOP SCORES TRY

At noon on Saturday the Varsity rugger squad closed the season with their most impressive game of the year. On the muddy back campus which soon made the players' uniforms indistinguishable, the undefeated R.A.F. team from Mount Hope edged the Blue and White out 3-0. The game was very close and undecided until the final whistle. The only score came from a try by L.A.C. Bishop midway through the first half when he crossed the homesters' line standing up as end man of a field-wide extension play. The convert was attemted from a long distance out and fell short. Several times Mount Hope forced the oval across the line but it was always recovered by a Varsity man to save a score.

The flyers were considerably lighter than the team from Picton and their superiority in the scrum was much less marked. Like Picton club, the majority of their players were stars in the old country. Among those who caught the eye of the largest crowd of the season was Sgt. Thompson who shares 5 ft. 2 in., who played the position which corresponds roughly to quarterback in American rugby. His play was reminiscent of Fritzie Hanson's in last year's east-west final and he was the individual star of the game.

For Varsity, their success is attributable to the fact that there was no individual star. The team played as an efficient unit and all shared equally in their fine showing. Holding the powerful Mount Hope squad to such a narrow margin provided a fitting climax to the local rugger careers of a quartet of the Varsity stars. For Ian Todd, Max Clarkson, Eric Roberston and Hugh Ford, it was their last game for the Blue and White. The last three mentioned were 'T' winners on the intercollegiate champs of '39 and the four of them have formed the nucleus of the team the last two years.

Mount Hope R.A.F.—Sp. Ld. Thompson, Sgt. Hill, Sgt. Thompson, P.O. Greville, P.O. Sweeting, L.A.C. Bishop, L.A.C. Dunbar, Sgt. Weber, L.A.C. Clark, Cpl. Mills, Cpl. Salter, P.O. Edwards, A. Armour, L.A.C. Townend, Sgt. Roscoe.

Fast Breakaways for Blue and White All-Stars Smother Passing Attack and Control of R.A.F. Squad

TEAM PLAY FEATURED

Saturday morning on the back campus Varsity's all star soccer squad surprised an R.A.F. team from Port Albert with a 5-2 upset. Not for many years have soccer enthusiasts on the campus been treated to such a fine display of the old country game. Despite muddy playing conditions the game was played at a terriffic clip and featured brilliant team play. The English lads demonstrated the rare art of perfect ball control and an intricate passing attack but on the whole they were overshadowed in height and weight by the Varsity team and on the slippery pitch the long swinging passes of the Blue and White kept them on the run. The entire game was very closely fought and Varsity walked off victors by cashing in on lightning break-aways.

Like the Blues the Air Force was a team in the real sense of the word but the work of Stevens at centre and Locke at right half stood out, and althought goalkeeper Timms had a rather rough passoge, he showed some real style on the shots he could get.

First half—Both teams opened cautiously more or less feeling the other out and acquainting themselves with the treacherous field. After ten minutes of play the Varsity forwards broke loose and in short order had Timms, the R.A.F. goalkeeper, sprawling around in the mud to make several nice saves. On one of these stops he was tricked out of position and Jim Paton lifted the ball into the yawning net for the first Varsity goal. Several minutes later, Art Creswell, who later suffered a severe ankle injury, gathered a long pass from his half line and raced in fast giving Timms no chance on a hard drive. A.C. Martin, R.A.F. inside left, notched his teams first counter from a melee in front of the Varsity goal. Just before half time Varsity carried the play to the Airmen and forced a corner kick. Jim Paton took the kick and Art Boyd scored with a neat header to make it 3-1 for Varsity at half time.

Second Half—The fliers stripped three new players that they had been saving for an afternoon game with the R.A.F. from Picton in an attempt to check the fast travelling college boys and for a time they succeeded. A hectic fifteen minutes kept the Varsity defence on the jump but it came through nobly. Full Artificial Respiration, Are You Prepared?

The University of Toronto Athletic Association is offering to men students a combined lecture and practice course on Resuscitation, starting Monday, November 23rd—Upper Gym—Hart House—4.45 p.m.

All men enrolled in Life Saving Courses must take this Course to qualify for their awards.

To eliminate time-table difficulties the lecture period and the practical work will be duplicated as indicated below. This will give all interested students an opportunity to take the complete course in three periods. P.T. credits for attendance will not be granted. If interested kindly leave your name at the Athletic Office or see Mr. Griffiths or Mr. McCutcheon.

All male students in the University are eligible to enrol and take the course.

Men who satisfactorily complete the course will qualify for the Resuscitation Service Badge of the R.L.S.S. Students may secure the official badge if they desire. Fee 60c.

Bowling privileges under the Athletic Fee are available to women students on payment of the additional $1.00 fee for 20 games.

Arrangements have been made as last year with the MIDTOWN BOWLING ACADEMY, 503 Bloor St. West (West of Brunswick Avenue) for rental of alleys any weekday afternoon before 5 p.m. and Wednesdays before 4 p.m.

Prospective members may begin to bowl this week or early in January (one session a week, consisting of two games). Applicants should register with their respective faculty or college representatives.

Victoria	---	Ruth Gregory	--- Ki 3957
U.C.	---	Mary Savage	--- Mi 2015
Trinity	---	Barbara Rowe	--- Mi 8451

Other faculties wishing to enter bowlers, call B. Rowe.

In return for the $1.00 fee the applicant will receive a numbered card, which must be turned in at the bowling alley before the student can bowl. The applicant should indicate the time she prefers to bowl and an alternate time; also indicate any groups desiring to bowl together. Five or six is the best number for a team.

MEDICOS HOLD U.C. FOR 1-0 TRIUMPH

Holding on tenaciously to a first quarter point, Jr. Meds. whitewashed a fighting U.C. squad in a stadium tussle, Friday afternoon. In the dying seconds, it looked like a tied score, when Bill Wade kicked deep behind the Beds' goal line. But Patterson returned the boot to save the game.

A consistent north wind was the principle factor in the play, for yardage differences were gained by punting. According to Cuddy Faber, the Med line played the game of their lives. Sammy Stellman, the U.C. plunging threat, was halted in his tracks, with Jimmy Bitove alone standing out on the Red and White offensive. Clement for the winners played an ispired game, and honours of course go to Spooner who was responsible for the only point of the contest.

These Physical Education teams are all playing well and are well in front in their respective groups. In group two, P.H.E. III have yet to be defeated, and there appears to be little chance that they will lose their section as they have piled up impressive scores against Nurses and Vic Seniors. Many of these girls have seen action in previous playoffs, including Kay Cunningham, Zoe Christie and Betty Allen, all of U.C.'s champion senior team last season. We go so far as to predict these people will again be in the finals this year.

P.H.E.'s second year team are experiencing no difficulty with U.C. Juniors and St. Hilda's Seniors. This team also has a number of stars on it, Joan Davis, Jean Stinson, and Jean Barnhart, and under Bobbie MacDonald's able guidance will prove a big threat to any other team's hopes for a final spot.

First year P.H.E. in group one, although lacking the experience of the other two teams of this faculty, is also making a good showing. They have won all their games except one which they tied with St. Hilda's Freshies A. But U.C. Seniors in this group are also undefeated, although they escaped this fate often by rather close scores. Out of the four teams Meds, St. Hilda's Freshies, U.C. Seniors and P.H.E. I, the last two mentioned are the ones which will bear watching as the semi-finals approach. Perhaps this issue will be decided when U.C Seniors and P.H.E. I meet up for the first time on

VIC EDGE JR. S.P.S. IN WILD GRID TILT

By Phil Shackleton

One of the wildest, most wide open games of the current season saw Vic take a really narrow decision from the Junior School stalwarts. The final score, 8-6, was the result of four quarters filled with long passes, vicious plunges, and hard tackling. Vic's scoring chores were handled by Glen Munro, who delivered a long kick to the far side of the School goal post where Tom Waldon was rouged by Thompson, who plunged over for a touch in the first quarter, and by Munro again in the second quarter, when Lawrence was rouged on a kick.

Junior School collected their touch in the final frame when a series of forwards, interceptions, and end runs culminated in a lateral from Lawrence to Jack Stafford who crossed the line standing up.

One of the brightest stars shining from the constellations on the field was Verne Booth, who consistently booted well, besides doing a beautiful job in the running department. To overlook this Schoolman's males, Lawrence, who handled the passing duties with finesse, and Jack Stafford, who did some very creditable receiving, would be nigh unto treason.

Vic's scoring power was 80 per cent Glen Munro. The mighty punter didn't Tackling stand-outs were McComiskey and Burwell for Vic and Bromley and Evans for School.

PRESS COMMENT

Reprinted from the editorial columns of The McGill Daily, Thursday, Nov. 19, 1942:

Alien Students

Considerable controversy has arisen this week on the Toronto Varsity campus over the question of admitting 18 alien student to the University. Although the Board of Governors' vote was split evently, the decision went to the negative. A strong protest was registered at a student meeting, and several college heads and other authorities also indicated their disapproval of this rather narrow attitude.

The very fact that the student body itself disagreed with the Board's decision, is indicative of the policy which should be followed. If the contemporaries of these wartime guests are willing to permit the continuation of their studies in Canada, little else need be said. The responsibility which the University authorities have assumed in forcing these students to return to internment is considerable.

There are other factors to be considered: All of these students have been residents of the British Empire for several years, and have been attending English schools and colleges. The British Government has released them only after a detailed examination of their records, and with the deliberate intention of allowing them to carry on their work. In view of these facts, the attitude of the Toronto authorities seems presumptuous to say the least.

On ethical grounds, there is admittedly room for argument. Whether European students should be permitted to continue their studies which Canadians are fighting overseas is debatable, as a purely academic question. But arguing on the grounds of practicality, it seems only reasonable that their entrance to University be permitted. Weighing the relative value of these 18 students as an infantry platoon against their value as trained minds, for war and peace, it is easily seen that their greatest utility lies in their acamedic work.

There is one further point to be considered, which is of no small importance. The acceptance of these students in a Canadian University would be a material demonstration of international goodwill on the part of students and staff, about which many pious declarations have recently been made. The significance of this interchange of ideas across the Atlantic should not be under-estimated. The McGill authorities have been most helpful and broadminded as regards this problem, and are to be congratulated for the policy which they have pursued.

It is to be hoped that Toronto will fulfill the wishes of its student body, and support a plan which has been eminently successful on this campus.

Aida

The Columbia Opera Company put everything they had into the last performance of their Toronto series Saturday evening. Aida, with its colourful scenes and magnificent music, was just the right opera for this occasion.

It is difficult to single out any of the singers for special praise—all of them gave inspired performances. However, Gertrude Ribla should be mentioned for the expressiveness of both her singing and her acting as Aida. Arthur Anderson gave a fine performance as Ramfis, and Amonasro, sung by Alfred Chigi, was especiallly dramatic in Act III. The leading tenor, Harold Lindi, after a wobbly high note or two in the first scene, settled down to good singing for the rest of the opera. Amneris, sung by Louise Caselotti, was rather unimpressive until the last act. Here, however, she came through with flying colours.

Saturday evening's Aida was the most satisfying performance by the Columbia Opera Company this writer has seen.

In group three U.C. Freshies are in the lead at present with two wins. O.T. is next with a win, a tie and a loss. St. Mike's are in third spot with a win and a loss, and Vic Freshies are trailing with two losses and a tie. The teams to watch here are U.C. Freshies and St. Mike's, and these meet tonght at O.C.E. at 7:30 in what promises to be an exciting game.

In group four Physios and Vic Juniors are having a close race for the playoffs. They have both defeated St. Hilda's B with ease. There will probably need to be a sudden death game in this section to decide the winner.

The semi-finals present a problem, but the plan is that the five teams will draw lots to see which two will meet in a two-game series first. This will eliminate one of the teams, and the remaining four will be paired off and play a two-game series, total points to count, to decide the teams for the finals Here those for this evening up at the O.C.E. gym: 5:30—Vic Seniors v. SHEA'S "PIED PIPER"

France in the spring of 1940 was no place for an olderly civilian Englishman, especially was it no place for one who disliked children, as Mr. Howard found out. Played by crochety, bewhiskered Monty Wooley, Mr. Howard found himself the leader of an ever-growing caravan of war waifs, as he made his way toward England. The appeal of the story is strong, but it does not give away either to over-sentimentality, nor sensationalism. Roddy MacDowall, whom you will remember from "How Green Way My Valley," turns in another fine performance as the pop-eyed little English boy who knows all the answers and recruits for the unwilling Mr. Howard's battalion.

Of course they all get to England safely, but at one point when the issue is technically in doubt some interesting ideas of the Nazi mentality are demonstrated.—R.W.

backs Don Clee and Joe Fyfe were as cool as the proverbial cucumber and were unbeatable, likewise Hugh Thompson, Varsity's rookie goalkeeper. Ed John, Hal Seymour and Russ Self repeatedly broke up R.A.F. rushes before they got properly started and gave many break-away passes to their forwards. (It looks like we're mentioning the whole team as stars but they played so well together that it has to be done.)

has drawn up the following scheme of representation:

The various colleges and faculties have been assigned delegates according to this list which is based on actual enrolment figures, except in the cases of S.P.S., Meds and Dents, where the problems are either partically solved, or not so complex as they are in other faculties, especially in Arts.

U.C. 9, Victoria 8, Trinity 4, St. Michael's 4, House Sci. 1, Education 2, Forestry 1, Music 1, Grad. Studies 3, Dentistry 2, Law 1, Phys. Ed. 1, Social Work 1, O.T. 1, Pharmacy 3, Physio 1, Emmanuel 1, Wycliffe 1, Knox 1, S.P.S. 5, Nursing 4, Medicine 5.

Nominations for legcates, signed by the nominee, a nominator and a seconder, are to be submitted to the college or faculty executives on Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday of this week. From the names submitted the requisite number of representatives will be elected or appointed by the executives. The names will then be submitted to G. H. Johnson, IV U.C., chairman of the subcommittee on Membership, together with an equal number of runners-up as possible substitutes to avoid duplication of courses, where necessary.

The Varsity, in an interview with Johnson, was told of some of the practical difficulties that confront the Committee in attempting to devise an equitable scheme of representation at the Conference.

"We realize that since much of the discussion would center around revising the Arts courses, the ideal method of representation would be to have each course elect its own delegates," said Johnson.

"However, the practical difficulties involved in this method were too great, and the Committee decided instead to make use of the machinery provided by the student governments at each of the colleges. It will be necessary to see that all courses are represented, but as far as possible the names submitted to us by the college executives will be accepted as the official voting delegates to the Conference.

"The Committee representing the Teaching Staff of the University will be asked to see that the staff is adequately represented as far as possible by department heads.

"The whole scheme has arisen from various rather futile attempts during the last six months to discuss these problems at large joint meetings of staff and students," said John Wood, IV U.C.

"The scope of the issues involved, however, necessitated much more detailed and intensive discussion than is possible at single meetings; and it was realized that the solution was such a conference as has been planned, where every aspect of the matter will be discussed in a small caucus of the students concerned."

During the Conference the official delegates will act as liaison between the students and the Conference officials; they will chair and represent subcommittees dealing with particular aspects of the problem and will decide by vote issues which may be raised.

In addition, plans are under way to accommodate as many additional students as possible at the Conference, possibly as spectators.

"In order to secure a truly representative cross-section of student opinion, without which our purpose is meaningless, it is imperative that every student in the University make sure that the men or women who can best represent his faculty have been nominated as delegates," stated Mr. Johnson. "The procedure necessary to being nominated is merely to go to the office of the student governing body in your college or faculty with a nominator and seconder and sign there the lists that your executive has prepared.

Further information or clarification of any point may be obtained from any member of the convening committee, listed below."

Communications are now in progress with other universities across Canada in an effort to carry out similar proceedings on a national scale. It is hoped that the result of such a powerful consensus of opinion will be of inestimable value to the officials of National Selective Service in Ottawa.

Mr. Wood announced that any suggestions as to topics for discussion or as to program in general should be submitted without hesitation to the office of the S.A.C. in Hart House, to be appended to the already rather lengthy list, which will be published soon in a forthcoming issue of The Varsity.

The Convening Committee is as follows:

T. W. Nixon, Chairman, IV Vic.; C. Birchard, Vice-chairman, II Soc. Sci.; D. Chafetz, Secretary, II Soc. Sci.; G. H. Johnson, Credentials, IV U.C.; J. D. Wood, Publicity, IV U.C.; J. Weld, Program, IV Vic; G. Rosenbluth, Finance, IV U.C.

NO ROOM FOR ALIENS SAYS ENGINEERING SOCIETY

had no argument with such action but if they were permitted to enter such Faculties as those of Medicine, Dentistry or Engineering some Canadians might be indirectly affected, since these Faculties were filled to the point of overflowing.

To supplement this it was stated that there are many young Canadians in the armed forces today who, due to their financial position, were unable to attend University. In all fairness to these lads, it did not seem reasonable that aliens should be allowed a privilege denied to Canadians.

Students in Engineering bear no ill-will towards the victims of Nazi aggression and realize their seeming hopeless position, but feel that there is no place for them in the crowded Faculties during the course of the present war.

Convening Committee Urge Adequate Representation At Staff-Student Conference

Staff Asked to Be Present at Staff-Student Conference on University and War to Be Held Dec. 12

C.O.T.C. HEADS TO ATTEND

Adequate staff representation at the forthcoming Staff-Student Conference on the University and the War was requested in a letter to R. F. Leggett, chairman of the Committee Representing the Teaching Staff sent by the Convening Committee of the conference yesterday. Attendance at the conference on Dec. 12 of the whole committee plus 23 other representatives of the staff was asked.

A meeting of the Convening Committee which was attended by Dr. H. Wasteneys, Professor of Biochemistry, and Dr. Barker Fairley, Professor of German, University College, faculty advisers to the committee, was held in Dr. Fairley's office yesterday afternoon. A tentative program for the conference was drawn up.

The program now includes the addition of a caucus on military training to which officers of the C.O.T.C. and Major M. B. Watson, head of the Department of Military Training, will be invited.

The Convening Committee, which has been sanctioned by the Students' Administrative Council, has been working out details of the proposed conference for the past two weeks. Altogether some 65 students and 35 members of the staff are expected to attend.

IMPORTANT MEETING

Students' Administrative Council committee members of the War Services Campaign are asked to meet in Room 82, University College, at 4 p.m., Wednesday, Nov. 25.

The field of plant genetics, how living forms develop and modify, is of extraordinary complexity and is a field least understood by the layman.

Asks Resolutions Be Given to Council

Executive officers of student societies and clubs which have passed resolutions regarding the recent Board of Governors' decision refusing admission to 18 "friendly aliens" are reminded of the Students' Administrative Council's request that copies of the resolutions be forwarded to the S.A.C. so that they may be appended to the Council's own resolution asking for a reversal of the decision, when it is forwarded to the Board. Such resolutions should be turned in to the S.A.C. Office, Hart House, not later than 12 noon, Wednesday, Nov. 25.

Resolutions Passed by Senate

By Michael O'Mara

Although comments were guarded after last night's meeting of the Senate of the University of Toronto, and officials would not release texts of the resolutions adopted at the meeting before they are forwarded for the consideration of the Board of Governors, it was believed early this morning that the Senate had voiced approval of recommending that the group of "friendly aliens" now deharred from this University be granted permission to enter.

Belief was hased upon editorial correlation of remarks made by Father T. P. McLaughlin. Superior of St. Michael's College, and Dr. S. Beatty, Dean of the Faculty of Arts.

"The result of tonight's meeting was perfectly in accord with my previously-puhlished opinion on the matter," Father McLaughlin said late last night. (He has been quoted recently as expressing regret at the Board of Governors' decision which ruled that the aliens in question could not enter the University.)

Dr. Beatty said at midnight that the Senate had shown "remarkahle unanimity" in its deliberation last night.

Considered together, these two statements would seem to indicate that the Senate resolutions to the Board of Governors may call for reopening of the question of admitting the "friendly aliens."

Dr. Beatty added. "We hope that the whole matter will he settled amicahly," and said it was "one of the most interesting Senate meetings I have ever attended."

He said that "The President put the case very impartially and very well, giving the facts and the complete history of the case." (Dr. Cody was the member of the Board of Governors who made the motion at its last meeting that "friendly aliens" he admitted to the University. The motion was subsequently lost when the Board vote on it resulted in a 7-7 deadlock.)

The Varsiy was unahle to reach any other Senate members for comment, following last night's meeting.

Following sparsely-detailed report of last night's Senate meeting was released hy Dr. Cody:

"A special meeting of the Senate of the University was held last evening to consider the situation created through the witholding, hy an authority other than the Senate, of admission to the University from certain applicants whose academic standing qualifies them for admission.

"At this meeting. which was largely attended. resolutions were adopted which will he forwarded to the Board of Governors for their consideration. A further announcement regarding these resolutions will he made after they have been presented to the Board."

Presumahly this announcement may come shortly after the next Board of Governors' meeting, scheduled for Thursday.

Vic Encourages Reversal of Board of Governors' Decision; Motion to Be Submitted to S.A.C. Meeting

THREE AT MEETING OBJECT

With only three of the approximately 120 members present voting against it, the motion, "Resolved that this body go on record as encouraging the Board of Governors of the University to reverse their decision concerning friendly aliens" was passed at a special noon-hour meeting of the Victoria College Union yesterday. Moved by John Coleman and seconded by Eileen Acton the motion will be submitted to a meeting of the Students' Administrative Council to be forwarded to the Secretary of the Board of Governors following Wednesday's meeting of the Council.

A similar motion was passed last evening by students residing in Wycliffe College.

Wycliffe Urges Reconsideration; Considers Such Students Essential for Post-War Reconstruction in Europe.

SPECIAL MEETING HELD

A resolution passed last night at a special meeting of the students in residence at Wycliffe College — including men from the Faculties of Arts, Medicine and Applied Science as well as Theologians—asks the Board of Governors to reconsider its recent decision relative to the admission of "friendly aliens" to this University.

Text of the resolution follows:

"We, the student body of Wycliffe College, desire to go on record as urging the Board of Governors to reconsider the question of the '18 friendly aliens' in order that those men be admitted to the University."

Resolution was passed following general discussion of the subject, during which Rev. John Flagler, Senior Student of Wycliffe, acted as chairman.

Following the meeting, Rev. Thomas Griggs, member of Wycliffe's graduating class, made the following statement:

"As we take a long view of the situation in the world today, it is apparent that when victory is eventually achieved there will be needed in the countries of Europe men of edueation who are friendly to the British Empire and her allies, to help in the establishing of a new world order which is desired by all

Manitoba Students Visit Minneapolis

Winnipeg, Man., Nov. 21—(CUP)—Macalester College in St. Paul, Minn., was the destination of a delegation of United College students who left Winnipeg on Thursday, Nov. 19. There were several professors and 34 students making the trip. The program under consideration for the visit includes discussions, banquets, a dance and a sightseeing tour of St. Paul and Minneapolis.

The discussions will be centered around three main topics. The first is "The American Revolution and why we are two separate nations," and will include a discussion of the political differences between Canada and United States. The second topic in concerned with the maximization of war production, as to the efficiency and speeding up of the war effort. The third is "Post-war Reconsteuction. ' This is to include a study of Pan-American Union, World Federation and other forms of future organization of world polities.

CAMPUS DRIVE THIS WEEK SEEKS BOOKS FOR FORCES

By Doc Savage

Throughout this week the War Service Committee of the University of Toronto is conducting a "book harvest" on campus in conjunction with a city-wide drive to provide reading material for the men in the armed forces.

Though the final ceremonies of this campaign will coincide with the I.S.S. drive, and they both will be incorporated in a "War Services Day," the program is quite distinct from the I.S.S. appeal for funds. The purpose of the I.S.S. is to provide educational facilities for prisoners of war; the War Service Committee is gathering books for the men in the army.

It is needless to point out to students the value of the printed word. With men in the army living under unaccustomed conditions, their entire mode of life changed, away from home and friends, the need of books to keep up morale and to act in an eseapist fashion is vital. Novels and magazines are even more vital to the wounded in hospitals, where they are the only possible means of recreation.

The men want to find out about the enemy whom they are fighting, and they can do this through books. Their thinking has taken a serious turn and it must

Leader of St. Mike's Harvesters Discusses Trip West Over CBC

Speaking on the CBC "Canadian Roundup" program last night, Jim McCardle, fourth-year Modern History student and leader of the St. Michael's College harvest delegation, described to a Canada-wide listening audience the recent jaunt of University of Toronto students to the Western Canada wheat fields.

"We all had an experience and we learned much that will help us understand a great section of the Dominion," McCardle said. Jim described the scenic trip out, the hospitality of the University of Manitoba staff and students when the students reached Winnipeg and the generally favourable reception in Saskatchewan and Alberta.

Roland Mercier, student of Laval University speaking from Quebec, said that the Laval students had been "charmed and delighted by the spirit of friendliness that we met everywhere we went." He remarked that President Cody of the University of Toronto had said, "If the two races do not understand each other it is because they do not meet each other often enough."

Mr. Mercier stressed the spirit of goodwill that existed between the English and French speaking students. "If it were left in the hands of Canadian Universities, the problem of Canadian unity would be solved," he said.

"By and large the scheme from the Prairie farmers' point of view was a success though not a complete success," Hugh Boyd, speaking from Edmonton, declared. He said that there had been extremes of "Simon Legree" farmers and "kids out for a lark," but that the great majority of students had worked hard.

"The boys will be welcomed back next year if they wish to come," Mr. Boyd stated.

Dr. S. Lautenschlager, who has worked as a missionary and educationalist in China, spoke on "Colleges, Co-operatives and Communism" and their relation to the development of China through the war years, at the Victoria College S.C.M. Open House at Wymilwood last night.

Dr. Lautenschlager stressed the vital importance of the war in Asia, "and the destiny of Asia depends on China."

He pointed out that China has made greater sacrifices in men and territory than any of the other allied countries, and that effects of the war there have been equally great. New democratic movements in China ar making for better national and international understanding, he added.

New Directory Shows Decrease In Total University Registration

A slight decrease in total registration was shown by the University of Toronto Directory, published last week. The registration in the University's faculties and departments is 6,784 for the session 1942-43 as compared with a total of 7,147 last year. This figure excludes approximately 140 students enrolled in the various federated theological colleges.

Registration in S.P.S. has risen to 1,386 as compared to last year's total of 1,146. An increase in the first year enrolment from 470 to 588 accounts for much of this difference. In the session 1940-41 S.P.S. had 982 students including 338 freshmen.

Total figures in the Faculty of Medicine show a decrease in numbers from last year, probably due to the fact that this year fewer students were admitted to first year, and there are fewer graduate students.

Enrolment in the Faculty of Dentistry has risen from 297 to 324.

Registration in the Ontario College of Education has dropped from 348 to 230, and in the School of Graduate Studies from 413 to 354.

While increases are seen in the enrolment in the School of Law and the School of Social Work, enrolment has decreased in the Faculties of Household Science, Forestry, and Music and in the School of Physical and Health Education, the School of Nursing, Occupational Therapy and Physiotherapy.

Although the total enrolment in the Faculty of Arts has only dropped from 3,113 to 3,102, changes are seen in comparing the registration in the different colleges and years with that of last year.

In all four Arts Colleges, registration in the first and second years has risen, while in the third and fourth years it has dropped. The drop in the upper years is largely accounted for by men leaving the University to enlist in the armed forces. Total registration for all four years has risen in University College from 952 to 1,008 and in Victoria College from 832 to 869. In Trinity College, total registration for all years has dropped from 378 to 355, and in St. Michael's College, registration has dropped from 372 to 361.

In Dollars And Cents

With the editorial in today's Globe and Mail reprinted on the opposite page, all of Toronto's major journals have expressed an opinion on the alien-student question. While their influence is not necessarily a deciding factor in any further action which may be taken, it is of interest to note that their vote, like that of the Board of Governors, has ended in a tie. The Globe and Mail has joined The Evening Telegram in support of the Governors' action; The Daily Star and Saturday Night are opposed.

With the reasoning of The Globe's editorial we have no quarrel except that we are unable to understand how the premises stated lead to the final conclusion. If, as The Globe suggests, the aliens are willing to accept the obligations as well as the privileges of citizenship, it would seem that no useful purpose could be achieved by sending them back to an internment camp pending the removal of restrictions which forbid them to assume these obligations.

Thrusting aside other considerations, The Globe says, "The question is whether they (the Governors) should authorize the spending of public funds to educate men who are placed in a preferred position with respect to those who would be their fellow-students." We believe it unlikely that the State would be at greater expense by allowing these men to sit in on lectures being given to Canadian students while their living expenses are shouldered by private citizens, instead of requiring them to spend their time internment camps maintained by the Government.

Thus we believe that, even on purely materialistic grounds, no valid case can be made against allowing these aliens to enter the University.

Possibly changes in Government policy regarding the status of the men in question are not The Varsity's immediate concern. But we believe in the present circumstances — even while professional journalists debate the wisdom of the existing policy —that the alien students will be less burden to the community now, as well as being of greater service to it in the future, if they are permitted to enter the University, rather than ordered to return to an internment camp.

Correspondence

Editor,
The Varsity.

Dear Sir:

Regarding the S.C.M.-Avukah joint meeting held last night in the Women's Union, there is today in The Varsity a statement attributed to me which should be corrected.

"Contrary to popular belief, there is a smaller percentage of Jews in the profession than Canadians."

This should read: "In Canada the percentage of Jews engaged in the profession is smaller than among the total population of all origins, being only five per cent among Jews as compared with six per cent among the total population."

Sincerely Yours,

E. R. Best,
IV Meds.

Toronto, Nov. 20.

Editor,
The Varsity.

Dear Sir:

The report of the statement of the Engineering Society executive in today's issue of The Varsity, which was headlined "S.P.S. Students Back Governors," gives rise to misrepresentation of the general attitude of the majority of S.P.S. students on the question of admitting the 18 refugees to the University. It should be noted that:

1. The statement says that the Engineering Society is "not in favour of admitting them to the crowded courses of S.P.S."; i.e., this does not apply to the University in general;

2. It further states that they are not opposed to their entering other courses that are not so crowded;

3. At the meeting of 300 S.P.S. students referred to, which I attended, there were about as many students speaking in favour of admitting the refugees as there were opposing it, and it was obvious that most of the students in favour did not speak up;

No vote was ever taken by the Engineering Society.

Furthermore the argument used beclouds the real issue: whether any more students can be admitted to S.P.S. is not a matter of opinion but one of decision by the Faculty. To my knowledge the Faculty has not so far barred any students because of overcrowding, and they might perhaps even be willing to admit one or two more without prejudicing any other student's position. Be that as it may, this is not an issue involved in the decision of the Board of Governors which denies the refugees the opportunity of entering any Faculty of the University.

Thus it is evident that the majority of S.P.S. students are not backing up the Governors but are actually discussing irrelevant issues. They do not fall out of line with majority of student opinion on the campus. This was confirmed to me by all the S.P.S. students I have talked to.

B. Charlett,
IV S.P.S.

Toronto, Nov. 23.

Our correspondent apparently is taking issue both with the Engineering Society executive for the report of their transactions which they released to The Varsity, and with The Varsity for the way in which we headline the story based upon the official release.

We take no part in the former discussion, except to suggest that if the executive has misinterpreted the attitude of School students it would be a public service for Mr. Charlett to rectify the impression their report has left. We intend to cast no doubt by this remark, however, on the integrity and sincerity of the executive.

Regarding the latter point, we admit that the sub-streamer in question was to some extend misleading, although we submit that the paragraph of the executive statement ending: ". . . it did not seem reasonable that aliens should be allowed a privilege denied to Canadians." may be considered some basis for the inference the sub-streamer drew.

ART and MUSIC

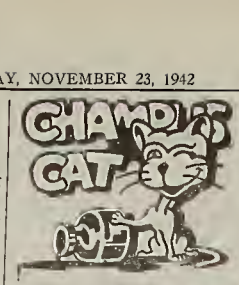
War Art

Armed Forces Exhibition

The Canadian Armed Forces Exhibition, the first show of its kind to be held in Canada, is now on the walls of Hart House Art Gallery. The work, all done within two months specified time, by men and women in the Armed Forces, is a reflection of life in the services. In addition, there is a group of pictures from the United Nations' training in Ontario.

Generalization on the contributions must make mention of the amazingly good quality of the art—whether professional, or first time amateur. Catherine Blackley, a private in the C.W.A.C., in her first attempts in oils turned out Decontamination Squad and Commandos, both products of her active imagination. Private Paul Rutledge, R.C.O.C., probably the youngest contributor, painted War, a portrait of a trooper, which subtly illustrates the intensity of duty.

Wayne Martin, a corporal in the C.M.S.C., heads the works done by experienced or professional artists, with Hom Foster's Place. Martin lives for greens and the cluster of buildings along an indented shoreline gives him ample scope. Among the portraits, a strong impressive Wyn, by Sid Stein, a sapper in the R.C.E. is the most effective.



Candidate "Commando" Kidd arrives at Hotel B.M.A., by Captain E. Sager of O.T.C. Brockville, shows there is still humour in the forces. The one pip wonder arrives, trunk, portable radio, girlfriend's picture, tennis raquet, and all, to show Brockville what to do. Another example is The Story of Gremlins, by Loranger, an L.A.C. with the R.C.A.F. He has decided to stage a one-man campaign against Gremlins —the bugaboos of flyers.

In the Polish section, Lieut. M. Natowicz, in black and white shows the determination of an 'over the top' attack of a Polish Hylander Regiment. Sapper D. Betteridge exemplifies in Anti-Tank lesson some of the smoother work of the exhibitors. He gives ruddy flesh tints, sharp outlines, and healthy apperance reminiscent of better-type Esquire ads.

Private H. E. Leyland, a private in the C.D.C., is the only undergraduate on active service, who exhibited in the show. First guess, says the picture is a King John helmet with noseguard, but it really turns out to be Mesial Aspect of the Upper First Molar. The Confusion of War, by L.A.C. A. S. Roberts, is a surrealistic attempt to portray the horror of battle—and it succeeds!

to the University "friendly aliens" recently released from interment was held in Convocation Hall following a meeting honouring the martyred students of Prague on Monday, Nov. 16. At that time a unanimous vote passed a resolution requesting that the Board of Governors reconsider their adverse decision.

The next day the University College Literary and Athletic Society passed a similar resolution 52-1 and appended a second stating, "U.C. students bear no ill will or prejudice against friendly aliens and would allow them education which other students have left in order to join the armed forces."

On Wednesday of last week a specially-convened meeting of the Students' Administrative Council passed a resolution expressing the wish that the Board of Governors reverse its decision refusing admission to the University to the "friendly aliens" recently released from internment, and passed the motion that all similar resolutions which had been or might be passed by various campus groups be submitted to the S.A.C. to be forwarded to the Board of Governors.

The same evening, the Student Labour Club unanimously passed a resolution requesting admittance of the aliens.

Thursday night a joint meeting of the Student Christian Movement and Avukah passed a similar resolution.

Only dissenting campus organization to date was the Engineering Society, which went on record Saturday as opposing admission of aliens to their own faculty. However, a statement issued by Jim Cawley, president of the society, added that "if the University authorities saw fit to permit them to enter Arts colleges, they had no argument with such action.

"The men best fitted for this task will obviously be those who have been born in those countries and who know the feelings and the conditions of their peoples. Insofar as we desire men friendly to the Allied cause, we must seek them amongst those who are obviously opposed to the Nazi regime. Such men are those who have been interned by our government for the past two years but who now, after investigation of their individual cases, are being released and enabled to start life afresh.

"Some of these internees, the Government apparently considers as most suited for higher education that in future they may become leaders in their own nation. We should abide by such a favourable opinion on the part of our Government and allow them to enter our University."

PRESS COMMENT

Reprinted from the editorial columns of The Queen's Journal, Friday, Nov. 20:

--- ? ---

While most of the students of Toronto University were preparing to commemorate those hundreds of Czechoslovakian students who were brutally murdered by the Nazis in Prague on November 17, 1939, their Board of Governors was turning down a resolution allowing 18 "friendly alien" students to receive education at the University. This is one of the finest examples of irony that has come to our notice in a long time.

We have wondered sometimes whether a great many people in this country quite realize the ideals and aims for which we are fighting this war. It seems to us that we are fighting to save the oppressed races of this world from aggression as much as for anything else. It also seems to us that we are fighting for all the freedom-loving people of this world, and not just for those who happen, by an accident of birth, to conform with our own standards of colour, race, and creed. We think that we are fighting for the 18 alien students—some of whom are Germans, some of whom are Jews—just as much as for anyone else. Consequently we feel that these students should receive the same courtesies as those which are extended to men and women in this country. The entire student body at Toronto appears to feel the same way. The principals of several affiliated colleges and President Cody have also voiced disagreement with the Board of Governors' edict. We hope and believe that they will continue to voice their disapproval until this unfortunate incident is cleared up.

The Seven Governors

Seven members of the Board of Governors of the University of Toronto, voting in opposition to the President of the University, the Chancellor of the University, the Chairman of the Board (the Rev. D. Bruce Macdonald, an experienced educationist) and the Vice-Chairman of the Board (J.J. Gibson, B.A. LL.D.), have passed a ruling which appears to have the effect of excluding from the university all persons who fall under the technical designation of "enemy aliens." This includes all persons who were claimed as its subjects by the German Reich at the outbreak of the war, among them being all Jews and Czechoslovaks who had escaped from under the Nazi yoke at that date but had not yet had time to acquire other citizenship. Some 16 such persons who were refugees from Nazi tyranny, living in England, at the outbreak of the war, who were sent to Canada by the British government in 1940, who have been in internment, whose antecedents and opinions have been thoroughly investigated, who have been listed by both the British and the Canadian governments as suitable for release if anybody will assume responsibility for the cost of their education, and who have secured sponsors, have all been applicants for courses at the University of Toronto since the beginning of the term, and are all barred by this ruling.

The Board of Governors meets in private, and does not have to render any account for its actions. There is therefore no official statement of the reasons for this decision. The Toronto Telegram, which may be taken as accurately reflecting the mentality of this section of the Board, defends the ruling on the ground of "the injustice of placing these aliens, however they might be described, in a preferred position to young Canadians who have left the University's halls to discharge duties which the times have placed upon them." The seven Governors, in other words, regard the education over which they have control solely as something which confers a competitive advantage on those who can get it over those who cannot.

The Board of Governors consists of 23 members. Eight of these according to the list in the current Canadian Almanac, do not possess any academic degree. All eight of them are highly successful men, whose careers suggest that the lack of a university education is far from being a fatal handicap; indeed we should not have supposed that any of them would admit that their fellow "young Canadians" of the same generation had been placed in a "preferred position" as compared with themselves because they never entered the University's halls until they became Governors.

This Telegram concept of education is not the concept which was in the minds of the founders of the University, and certainly not the concept which was in the minds of the men who endowed it so richly with noble buildings and well-supported professorships. Men like the Masseys do not give millions for institutions like Hart House, in order that in future years one class of "young Canadians" selected by some ruling of the Board of Governors may attain a "preferred position" over other "young Canadians" who are not so lucky. They endow educational instututions in the belief that the existence of an educated element is essential to the healthy life of the community and nation, and in the hope and faith that the future administrators of those institutions will use them to draw into that educated class the largest possible number of young men who have the intellectual and moral qualities which the scholastic discipline requires. The history of education in Canada has been one long record of the struggle to make and keep it open to all such young persons without exclusion on any other ground than that of inability to make good use of the offered instruction.

The Telegram and the seven Governors hold that this country is going to have so many educated persons after the war that Czechoslovaks must be kept uneducated for fear they will compete with educated Canadians and keep them out of "places" —which means places where you can make money. That is the plain meaning of this editorial. There are ample facilities in the University of Toronto for educating far more students than are at present attending, for the number of possible students is being cut down by the demands of military and other service; but Czechoslovaks who cannot perform military service must be kept uneducated. We do not believe in the theory of a surplus of educated persons in Canada; we believe that what Canada will suffer from after the war is an excess of uneducated persons (in journalism and elsewhere); and we believe that Canada and the University of Toronto will be bitterly sorry for this action of the seven Governors.

Reprinted from the editorial columns of The Toronto Globe and Mail, Tuesday, Nov. 24:

Case Of The Alien Students

The Governors of the University of Toronto have rejected by a tied vote a recommendation to admit "friendly aliens" to the full privileges of the University. These "friendly aliens" are young men of military age who were born in enemy countries but fled their home lands before the war to avoid Nazi persecution.

Since the decision of the Governors was made, a campaign has been carried on to reopen the case in the hope that the decision will be reversed. It has been made to appear that the Governors who opposed granting admission to the University were actuated by feelings of prejudice and intolerance, while those who advocated registering the students were possessed of that liberality of mind and tolerance of spirit which befits the governing body of a great centre of learning.

If the question were one of academic freedom alone there would be nothing to debate. Institutions of learning should foster no prejudices and bar no one from the fountain of knowledge because of the accidents of birth. But there is a question of public policy involved in the present case which must not be obscured by irrelevant considerations.

Every Canadian-born student of military age is compelled to enrol for military training with the C.O.T.C. Every student may be compelled upon completing his studies to serve either in the armed forces or in some vital war service. In other words, every one, save only the applicants who have been released from internment camps, is forced to accept the obligations of citizenship which go with the privilege of a State-financed education.

It is not suggested that the aliens who have been released from internment so that they may pursue their studies would be unwilling to accept the responsibilities undertaken by their fellow-students. But they are not permitted to. The Department of National Defense will not allow them to be enrolled in the C.O.T.C., despite the fact that the Department of the Secretary of State has released them from internment and stated that no stigma attaches to them. Enrolment in the C.O.T.C. is compulsory for all male students of military age entering the University. The friendly aliens who are applying for admission are precluded by order of the Department of National Defense from complying with this stipulation.

It is not reasonable that the Governors of the University of Toronto should be asked to decide the status of these applicants for admission to the privileges of a Provincial university. That is the responsibility of the Dominion Government. The Dominion Government has failed to clarify their status. One department says that they are free of all stigma, having been vouched for by the British Home Office and investigated by the Department of the Secretary of State. Another department, the Department of National Defense, has said by inference that they cannot be trusted with a gun, and may not bear arms in defense of the country from which they are seeking the privilege of an education which is partly State-financed and partly financed by the generosity of Canadian sponsors.

The issue is not one of liberalism versus prejudice, and the Governors should not divide on these lines, if indeed they ever did. The question is whether they should authorize the spending of public funds to educate men who are placed in a preferred position with respect to those who would be their fellow-students. As matters stand at present, these friendly alien students would pursue their studies at the State's expense without obligation to join the armed forces or serve in vital war industries. They would therefore proceed to graduation and to the choice of a profession while the sons of those who are paying the bills would be sent into the field of battle or the vital war industries, at the discretion of the authorities in Ottawa.

It is only fair to state that many aliens of similar status released from internment camps have chosen some form of service in Britain, and there is nothing to indicate that the present group of applicants would not be perfectly willing to accept the same obligations which now fall on the shoulders of Canadian-born men of similar age expecting to enter the University. The fact remains that they are debarred from doing so because they are viewed in a different light by two departments of the same Government.

If this paradox were solved and the Department of National Defense could be prevailed on to accept the judgment of the British Home Office and the Secretary of State in the Dominion Government as to the political fitness of these men to serve, there would be good grounds for reopening the matter and permitting the Governors to review the case on the basis of the altered circumstances.

This newspaper could find no justification for denying all the privileges of citizenship to any man because of German parentage. But he must be a free man in every respect, willing and able to accept the responsibilities, as well as enjoying the privileges. These men who have applied for registration at the University are not free men. They have been released from internment only for the purpose of pursuing their education, and are debarred from serving shoulded to shoulder with free Canadians in the war against their own arch-enemy. Let these restrictions be removed from them, and we would advocate that all the other privileges of the State be accorded them.

have weighty material to feed upon. But the most important function of the printed word is plain ordinary amusement. There is a great demand for novels, love stories, the latest magazines and periodicals, and above all, western stories.

It is obviously impossible for the government to handle things like this, so it is up to the civilians to provide the reading material for the boys in uniform. That is the reason for the "book harvest."

This is not merely an opportunity to clear the family library of the musty tomes of grandma's day that no one has ever gotten around to throwing out. If you would not read them yourselves, would you expect the soldiers to? The need is for recent books and magazines —the best sellers and the better classics —the normal things of interest to a modern reading public.

Students in the science faculties can make a specially needed offering by donating old texts.

The drive is now on and will continue until Monday, Dec. 2, being handled by factulty representatives in each of the colleges.

Artificial Respiration, Are You Prepared?

The University of Toronto Athletic Association is offering to men students a combined lecture and practice course on Resuscitation, starting Monday, November 23rd—Upper Gym—Hart House—4.45 p.m.

All men enrolled in Life Saving Courses must take this Course to qualify for their awards.

To eliminate time-table difficulties the lecture period and the practical work will be duplicated as indicated below. This will give all interested students an opportunity to take the complete course in three periods. P.T. credits for attendance will not be granted. If interested kindly leave your name at the Athletic Office or see Mr. Griffiths or Mr. McCutcheon.

All male students in the University are eligible to enrol and take the course.

Men who satisfactorily complete the course will qualify for the Resuscitation Service Badge of the R.L.S.S. Students may secure the official badge if they desire. Fee 60c.

Speaking Of Sport

EDITOR'S NOTE: Although squeezed out yesterday by the intrepid news staff along with an extra quantity of advertising—believe it or as you wish, gentlemen—the S.O.S. has not taken a permanent black-out. To prove it we are continuing our policy of Tuesday guest columnists. Today we have the Athletic Director of Trinity College, Bill Rawlinson. In case you are one of the few who do not know the redoubtable Bill, he could be classed as an athletic cosmopolite who has made a real job out of his position.

By Bill Rawlinson

OUR PRIVILEGE

Do you ache when you bend over after a bout with a P.T. class? do your heels drag for the next two days? Have you enough energy to look into her eyes in the morning and say "Let's go out tonight"? If you experience any of these feelings what is going to happen to you during that first month at Brockville or in the air force when their ininstructors put you through your paces? It certainly will be tough for some of us. So, gentlemen, we should all prepare now for the day we "go active." It is our duty and privilege to build ourselves up to the highest degree of physical fitness. Hart House is full of gadgets to assist us in this effort. However, without a doubt it is more enjoyable to get in condition by participating in Intramural sports. Therefore, for the good of yourself, your faculty, and your poor athletic director, turn out for a team-a-season or more.

I believe that winning championships and events is not the only goal for which the factulties should strive in athletics. In time of war at least, the main consideration should be to induce as many men as possible to take part in sports and thus create a higher state of physical fiitness throughout the University. It is for this reason that the T. A. Reed Trophy point system heavily stresses entry points for teams and individual tournaments. With more men turning out for the teams many fine athletes will appear who up to this period had never participated, and in the long run the faculties which do send out greater numbers will win additional cups and awards.

The Athletic Association itself, is making a determined effort to increase the physical fitness of every man in the University. P.T. Credits are being given only for bodily contact sports such as rugby, soccer, hockey and basketball. Note, basketball as played in the upper gym involves a great deal of "bodily contact." In line with this policy, boxing and wrestling are included in the P.T. classes. If anyone ever walked through the middle of one of those wild-punching boxing groups he would certainly die a violent death.

THEY ALSO SERVE

If your medical category is such that you cannot actively participate in sports, go to your athletic director and ask him to give you a team to manage. If he recovers from the shock—which is doubtful—he will gladly see that you are accommodated. Managing a team does not require a great deal of work and will certainly reward you for your time given with good experience in organization.

All managers can obtain from the Athletic Office a handbook setting forth the rules of eligibility and participation in intramural activities. The High Point System of the T. A. Reed Trophy is fully explained, too, in another book. It will help both your director and yourself if you secure these.

AND A SUGGESTION OR TWO

First, why doesn't somcone donate an award similar to the T.A. Reed Trophy to the fair ladies of the campus, to organize their sports and keep them in good shape—for the war effort, of course.

Secondly, could we not have a tug-of-war contest between the faculties. It would give us heavy men a chance to pull our own weight around here.

Maybe the Medical Society felt it necessary to stress the fact that the At-Home was informal this year, but at the University of Washington somebody or other was running a dance, and they found it advisable to reiterate several times:

"It should be emphasized that saddle shoes must definitely not be worn."

Them's horsh words, pardner.

The Western Gazette tells us that there is a professor at McGill who is really more than human—even humane. "I don't want you to have to sit in the same seats all year around. After all," he twinkled understandingly, "alliances formed in October don't always last the year out."

Guess he musta gone to college once himself.

The mon is obviously no zoologist.

A co-ed at the University of Washington decided to call one of the lads who took some classes with her to discuss an assignment—so she dialed a number she had written down in her textbook, and then spent a cheerful 30 minutes gabbing with the fella about things in general—but HE turned out to be the professor.

We didn't catch all of this conversation but we did hear four co-eds carrying on an animated conversation on the back campus one day. One of them seemed markedly perturbed about something—"but you don't really have to be tattooed," one of the others consoled her, "all ya gotta do is slap some paint on your arm."

The Minnesota Daily tells us that "U HAS 12 MONTHS' SUPPLY OF COAL."

Ah has not.

In another issue of the same newspaper one finds the following headlines on opposite sides of a page: "UNIVERSITY SPIRIT TO BLAZE TONIGHT" . . . and . . . "TWO STUDENTS BURNED IN CHEMISTY LAB FIRE."

Group Champs, Gaels Win 16-1

Convincing Victory Over Anglicans Is the Third Straight Win for St. Mike's, Giving Them Group Championship

TRINITY RALLY BEATEN OFF

Recalling Fr. McGahey's Mulock Cup champions three years ago, the Gaels of St. Mike's rolled to a convincing 16-1 win over Trinity to win their group championship. Drive by Frank Dunlap, power by Tom Jacob and Odette, plus fair passing and kicking on a muddy field gave the Bay Streeter's their third straight victory.

Receiving Odette's kickoff Trinity proceeded to set up a rouge on two first downs. Halted, Beatty booted the Anglican point to the deadline. The rest of the half was all Double Blue. Tom Jacob's powerful plunging cut the Trinity line to ribbons for a sustained march of 80 yards. Frank Dunlap was payoff man and crossed the line on an extension play.

The second quarter saw the Gaels still plowing into enemy territory. Then Dunlap fumbled the muddy pigskin, retrieved and rifled a touchdown pass to Jacob. The convert was booted by Jacob. Gaining possession on the kick-off, Trinity was hemmed in their own territory due to the tackling of Jack Karl and Fran Foley.

Coming back in the second half, Trinity, led by Mills, Aird and Brook, came to life and threatened a St. Mike's team that had noticeably cased up. They drove to the Gaels' five—setting the stage for the most spectacular play of the game. As the ball slithered from the Trinity carrier, Tony Bruno snagged the pill and galloped 105 yards to the Trinity line. The convert, however, was blocked.

Going into the last quarter the leaders continued to keep the Anglicans under pressure.

Sportswoman

By Betsy Gowan

Last night was a very busy one up at O.C.E., dcar co-eds, and basketball is really starting to move along towards the semi-finals. III P.H.E. came through with another win, 31-8, over Vic Srs. The score really didn't indicate the type of playing, for Vic kept up the high speed of the game all through. The guards, who far too often do most of the work and get little of the credit, played admirably for P.H.E. and were well supported by Betty Allen, who tallied quite often for her team. Vic's forwards did a fine job of passing and worked together very well.

St. Hilda's were the victors in the second game—and they look like a good team to us. The score was 25-23 and the heroes were their forwards who, in sooth, were quite the gals. Toward the end of the fray a mishap occurred to one of the Meds' players—we do hope she is feeling better now—and a St. Hilda's player filled in for her and finished off the game.

U.C. freshies won again in the last game of the evening—and the girls of the double blue were defeated to the tune of 22-11. Things happened a bit quickly and No. 13 for U.C. was definitely not unluckly as a forward. We pick Florence Cooper as the star of St. Mike's; but the guards played a very good game as well. Bery Pollock and Helen Guerney did the honours of refereeing the games and were kept busy for the evening.

Let's not forget about our lone game tonight — even if it isn't one of the superstitious three. It will take place at 7:30 at the usual time and the contestants will be none other than I P.H.E. of far-flung fame and the U.C. Seniors of equal fame. What do you say?

Artificial Respiration Lectures to be Continued

The name of Wills MacLachan attracted 85 men to the Upper Gym yesterday and so large is the class that further lectures will be given in the Debates Room. The program of lectures will remain the same with the three being repeated for benefit of those taking drill. Exams will still be held next Monday and Tuesday.

All Faculties And Schools Now Choosing Delegates For Staff-Student Conference

Trinity Elections Already Held; Vic and U.C. Still Receiving Nominations; St. Mike's and Meds Yet to Pick Delegates

CONFERENCE IN DECEMBER

All faculties, schools and departments on the campus are today busy nominating and electing representatives for the Staff-Student Conference on the University in wartime, to be held next December.

At Victoria College, names of nominees have been coming into the Union office in a steady stream since nominations were opened on Monday. Tom Nixon, chairman of the Conference and president of the Victoria College Union, said, "The nominations will be open till Friday at noon. After that, the V.C.U. executive will choose the representatives from the nominees so that we will have the best representation from the courses and the best cross-section of student opinion on the matter." He also stressed the importance of first and second year classes getting in their nominations. "They don't seem to be getting their names in," he said.

At Trinity College, six men and five women were nominated at an open meeting held last Monday. Trinity is acting in conjunction with St. Hilda's College; and two men and two women were elected in a ballot election held all day Tuesday. Results were not available late Tuesday night.

The U.C. Literary and Athletic Society posted lists up in all the residences for nominations. If there are only a few names, the Literary executives will choose the nine representatives on Friday.

Elections will be held on Friday at St. Michael's College to choose two representatives from St. Michael's and one each from St. Joseph's and Loretto Colleges. For this Conference, the latter two are considered with St. Michael's.

The newly-elected Medical Society will, on Thursday, make plans for the choice of students. The Meds' situation is further complicated by examinations for all years beginning at this time, and the graduation of the sixth year class. The executive said they would have four representatives from first and second year and one from fifth or sixth, It was stressed that the Medical students have an interest in the coming meeting; but that it would be almost impossible to have a representation from all years.

Young Emphasizes Role of Industry

In his address in the series on Reconstruction lectures, Dean C. R. Young of the Faculty of Applied Science, expressed the view that private industry will play the important part in resisting post-war unemployment.

He explained that due to the advance in technological research the world of 1940 is already an antiquity. New industries will spring up after the war, and pre-war industries will revert to production of the goods for which there is now a pent-up demand.

In the field of construction, the St. Lawrence Seaway was cited as an example of how a government project would give employment to a large number. However, a lack of skilled construction workmen and apprentices, due to the depression and the present war, makes it improbable that the construction industries will provide the answer to problems of post-war unemployment.

"The main reliance for filling the void in income that will be caused by demobilization will have to be placed on private industry, which should be allowed to build up the necessary financial reserves," he asserted.

Vic Harvesters Assist in Service

Student harvesters from the class of 4T5, Victoria College, assisted in the evening service at Bloor Street United Church and were responsible for the after-church fireside gathering Sunday night.

Eric McIdwain, in a short pulpit talk, emphasized the inter-dependance of the east and west that was felt by the harvesters. The trip, he said, had strengthened the conviction of the students that they must assist in increasing the sense of national unity, and in deepening the spiritual values of the Canadian people.

WOMEN'S VARSITY STAFF

Will all members of the Women's Varsity Staff please come to a meeting in U.C. at 12:30 today. See the Women's Newsbook for the room where it will be held. A Vice-President of the Press Club of the University is to be elected.

Campus Plans For Book Drive Crystallize

Preparations for the Book Harvest, to be held Dec. 2 under the sponsorship of the University War Service Committee, are being made by several faculty organizations, it was learned last night.

At Victoria College, where Harry Birkenshaw, Third Year, is in charge, a decorated box is being put in Alumni Hall and signs will be posted on all bulletin boards.

The Engineer's campaign is in charge of the chairmen of the various clubs that make up the Engineering Society, while the Society executive will coordinate activities. Streamers and banners produced by the publicity department will be put up today or tomorrow, an Engineriney Society official announced. Arrangements for the collecting of books have not yet been made.

Ed Nickerson and Johnny Eremko are in charge of the campaign at the School of Social Work, where the card of admittance to a school social will be a book for the armed forces. Cecil Brenn heads the drive at Emmanuel College.

Trinity Athletic Dance To Be Held Friday

The Annual Trinity Athletic Dance is to be held Friday, Nov. 27 from 9 to 1. The place is Strachan Hall; music by Bob Shuttleworth's orchestra. In keeping with campus custom it is informal.

A new innovation is that of having the Athletic Dinner precede the dance.

Sask. C.O.T.C. Defaulters Conscripted

Saskatoon, Nov. 24 — (CUP) — Twenty-five students have been defaulted officially from the ranks of the C.O.T.C., and have been requested to report for active duty. This decision was reached by the National Selective Service Board of the University of Saskatchewan, because these 25 students had failed to fulfill their military obligations, by not attending spring camp without being given leave of absence.

The Board considers that unless the students do fulfil their obligations, they are necessarily no longer in the student category. The Board also announced that it will meet from time to time to consider the academic and military records of students attending the university.

Toronto Daily Star Reports Senate Favours Admission Of 18 "Friendly Aliens"

Senate Declares It Has Sole Constitutional Right to Govern Student Admissions; Hold Governors Have No Jurisdiction in Academic Matters; Toronto Said Only University Not Admitting Aliens

STAR SAYS VOTES "PRACTICALLY UNANIMOUS"

In a newspage story carried yesterday, The Toronto Daily Star said that the special meeting of the Senate of the University of Toronto Monday night resulted in passage of resolutions that the Senate alone has the constitutional right to decide who shall be admitted as students, and that 18 "friendly aliens" qualified to enter should be admitted.

(The Evening Telegram carried a similar story in later editions. It is believed that these newspapers obtained their stories from private sources. The Varsity respected University officials' request that no attempt be made to learn the exact texts of the resolutions carried at the meeting.)

The Star story continued that the early part of Monday's meeting centred on discussion of the constitutional powers of the Senate, in relation to admitting students to the University.

Dr. W.P.M. Kennedy, Chairman of the Faculty of the School of Law, read sections of the University Act whereby Victoria, Trinity, and St. Michael's Colleges, all founded on denominational bases, had federated with the University of Toronto, and is understood to have upheld the view that power to admit students lay with the federated Colleges and Universities and the Senate.

The Star reported Dr. Kennedy maintained that while the Board of Governors held authority over such matters as University property, the Senate is the only body which has jurisdiction in academic matters, setting the standards of admission and ruling on all matters pertaining to admission.

The upshot of this first part of the meeting was the passing of a resolution affirming the constitutional right of the Senate alone, and not the Board of Governors, in setting academic standards and admitting students.

The resolution was carried by a unanimous vote by a show of hands. A few did not vote, but it was pointed out that failure to vote opposition constituted a unanimous vote.

The meeting turned to a discussion of the rights of the federated Colleges and various Faculties to enrol students, subject to the standards and regulations set only by the Senate on which the Colleges and Faculties have representation. This part of the meeting culminated in a second resolution that Colleges and the Senate alone possessed this right, and not the Board of Governors, and that in particular the 18

Dana to Lecture On Soviet Drama

Mr. Henry Wadsworth Longfellow Dana of Boston will give an illustrated lecture on "The Soviet Theatre and Cinema" in Hart House Theatre at 5 p.m. today.

This is the second in the series of three public lectures on Russia sponsored by the Public Lectures Committee of University College under the chairmainship of Professor R. D. Finch.

Mr. Dana, a leading authority on the European Drama, is the grandson of the poet Longfellow. He has been on the staff of several universities, teaching at Harvard University from 1918-1920, at the Sorbonne from 1920-1922, and at Columbia University from 1922-1927. Later he organized the Cambrige School of Drama at Cambridge, Massachusetts.

Intermittently during the past 15 years Mr. Dana has been in Russia studying Soviet drama and cinema, and collecting material for books, articles, and illustrated lectures. Those interested in the theatre and dramatics especially should attend this lecture.

The next lecture of this series on Russia will be given on Wednesday, Dec. 2, in Hart House by Mr. Corliss Lamoit, whose topic will be "Soviet Russia and the the United Nations."

Montreal, Nov. 21 — (CUP) — The McGill Radio Workshop announced last Tuesday that arrangements have been made to record their weekly productions given on Saturday afternoons over Station CKAC. All future productions at this station will be recorded.

Duties of Our Governments Discussed by CCF Leader

"The responsibilities of the Dominion and Provincial governments," said Mr. E. B. Jolliffe, provincial leader of the C.C.F. party, in addressing the University C.C.F. Club at Wynnilwood last evening, "came under four heads: planning and organization of production; organization and effective use of the armed forces; adaptation of existing facilities and exploitation of untapped resources for war work; and the good and welfare of the people. The former two, Mr. Jolliffe pointed out, were largely duties of the Federal, the latter of the Provincial, governments.

As far as the first item is concerned, there has been little planning, with a consequent waste of materials in production, the speaker continued. Mistakes and delays the government has been making will cause the war to stretch out much longer than necessary, and can hardly be inspiring to the men who are fighting for their country. Post-war history is going to be coloured by these same policies unless a government with ideas suited to the modern 20th century is put into effect.

The present government at Queen's Park, the speaker remarked, by putting off elections, and making other such mistakes, is digging its own grave, and, he added, doing a very good job of it.

During the evening a resolution was passed deploring the action of the Governors in refusing to admit 18 "alien students," and petitioning them to reconsider their decision.

Pessimistic Peanut Vendor Bemoans Shipping Difficulties

It may soon be peanuts, peanuts everywhere, but nary a one to eat—so predicts Mr. G. Dialtris, campus peanut vendor.

When approached by The Varsity Mr. Dialtris was pessimistic about the future of peanuts at the University. "There are lots of peanuts," he said, looking wistfully at his little white cart, "but there are no ships to get them here. Already the price of peanuts has risen, almost doubled, and only old customers can buy them." There will always be plenty of popcorn he assured us, but the peanut may soon be a thing of the past.

Students, on the whole, have not impressed Mr. Dialtris as being particularly fond of his product. On rainy days they buy huge quantities of peanuts and popcorn, but usually for each student who buys there are hundreds who merely stare hungrily at his wagon as they pass.

When football games were mentioned Mr. Dialtris brightened, and smiled reflectively. "I still sell a lot at football games, but, ah, not like the old days. Then people used to throw peanuts around, but all they do now is eat them." Campus soldiers find that popcorn helps give them stamina for those gruelling route marches. They eat very quickly, and waste a good deal as they gallop off to get to their drill on time.

Co-eds do not find peanuts much to their liking, perhaps because they have heard rumours of a high calorie content. Nor do the campus airmen go in for peanuts as a general rule. "They are always rushing somewhere," volunteered Mr. Dialtris. "Either they are hurrying very fast to their lectures, or else they are hurrying back still faster for their dinner."

Instructions for Nominating Representatives to the Staff-Student Conference on the University at War

Warrior of Hart House Dungeon Stands Sentinel in Checkroom

Down in the bowels of Hart House, operating the checkroom, is bristly-moustached Edward Jones. Mr. Jones must smile to himself when he hears C.O.T.C. lads talking as though they knew everything about battles and wars, for most of his life history has to do with the Army.

Mr. Jones, who was born in Wales, enlisted with the Royal Field Artillery in 1897 and fought in the South African War for three years. He contracted enteric fever twice while in the Transvaal.

After the war he returned to Great Britain and completed his service in the army. He then came to Canada and settled down. When the Great War broke out, he enlisted with the Canadian forces and fought in France where he was wounded in 1918. He remained in France until the Armistice was signed and then returned to England for a year. He came to Canada again in 1919 and started in Hart House on Oct. 19, 1919, three weeks before the House opened.

Mr. Jones made friends immediately with many students, and is still doing so. He is referred to affectionately as "The Old Man" or "Taffy."

In 23 years in the House, Mr. Jones has had many memorable experiences, but one he especially likes to recount is when he offered to speak Welsh with the Prince of Wales when he visited the House. The Prince had a little chat with Mr. Jones but confessed that he could not speak Welsh.

No Ivory Tower Here

One of the healthiest results of the current controversy over the present and future status of the 18 foreign students who have been released from internment camps here in Canada is the wide interest and comment the case has aroused, especially on this campus. This controversy proves that students here are very much interested in what is going on, that they are far from being interested solely in "the familiar round of lectures, books, and dances" as one student writing on the question to The Varsity has feared. The many meetings and resolutions put forward by campus bodies is a heartening contradiction to those who have feared that university students live in an ivory tower.

The ideals for which the University stands: the spreading of knowledge and, by no means least, freedom of thought and discussion, are here being put to the test. No one has denied, in words at least, that the University's first obligation is to spread knowledge.

The question which now arises is whether this University is to give its knowledge only to those favoured by birth by being Canadian, and not to those who had the misfortune to be born in a country which has now been annexed by the would-be world conqueror whom we are fighting. This question has been answered in the negative for the time being, and will stay so answered at least until the Board of Governors hold its next meeting tomorrow.

In the meantime the students have voiced their opinion in almost every possible way, by meetings, resolutions and lively discussion among themselves. We cannot always agree with their opinions which have run all the way from complete approval of the Governors' decision to absolute disapproval, but the sight of students rising together to argue the question cannot be anything but pleasing.

The many excellent and well thought out opinions which are being put forward give an emphatic "No" to any accusation that we live divorced from the world of reality.

Trained In Healing

One kind of necessary training in which Canada leads the world and in which this University is prominent is the almost forgotten course of Occupational Therapy in which 80 women undergraduates are at present enrolled. Eleven graduates of the course are now overseas working in civilian hospitals in Scotland and more are expecting to be sent in the future.

Dr. Goldwin W. Howland, president of the Canadian Association of Occupational Therapy, recently criticized the failure to send therapists to the Canadian military hospitals in Britain, when he spoke at the twelfth annual meeting of the Association held here in Toronto recently. This failure to let the therapists do their work in the overseas military hospitals where they are most needed seems strange when one realizes the fact that Occupational Therapy is no experimental course. It is a tested and established form of healing, highly regarded the world over and especially in Britain. A school for therapists in Edinburgh is training its pupils for work in Scottish hospitals, and the opinion in Britain is that occupational therapy is one of the three main factors in the physical treatment of disease. The other two are physiotherapy and rehabilitation.

Canadian military hospitals employ therapists on their staffs. Colonel C. McMaine, superintendent of Christie Street Military Hospital, has expressed himself as particularly pleased with the results of the therapists' work in giving back health to returning war wounded. "We are emphatic that following this war there is not going to be the wastage of time that occurred at the end of the last war." Colonel McMane stated at the Occupational Therapy Association meeting. To this end the Department of Pensions and National Health intends to have occupational therapists at work in Canadian hospitals across the Dominion. It is planned that the present staffs will be increased where necessary and that new staffs will be installed in the hospitals where none are working at present.

The 80 girls now training at this University will take an important place in the future health of the nation, and especially in that of returned soldiers, sailors and airmen who are disabled. The object of their work is to help patients to overcome physical disabilities which are aggravated by mental shock and fear of using the injured limb. The healing work is based on crafts like weaving, which exercises the muscles of the upper part of the body, and the foot loom which gives necessary exercise to hip muscles and helps a patient with injured legs to walk again.

The course is not only one of physical rehabilitation but also of mental readjustment. Graduates are qualified to help convalescents from such diseases as war neurosis, shell shock, and prolonged war strain. In physical treatment the work deals not only with shattered bones but also with cases in which nerves have suffered actual damage.

The two-year course includes study of anatomy, psychology and psychiatry as well as recreation, health education, and the theory of occupational therapy. In addition the girl students take instruction in crafts: cord work, raffia work, reed work (baskets), needle work, rug making, weaving, carpentry, and general machine shop work such as welding.

The second year adds leather work, book-binding, metal work and pottery making as well as special lectures in the application of these crafts in physical and mental diseases. When the students finish the two-year course they spend six months' internship in a hospital before they become full-fledged occupational therapists.

This is another of the vital war courses being offered by the University.

Correspondence

We print the following letter from Harry A. Clinch, as a thought-provoking challenge to the students of the University to take an active part in the forthcoming Staff-Student Conference on the war-time status of the University, which will be held in the week beginning December 12.

Nov. 23, 1942.

Editor,
The Varsity.

Dear Sir:

I was interested to read in Monday's Varsity the announcement that something is at last going to be done to settle the part which the University is to play in the war effort. The fact that the initiative was taken by students makes me not a little proud to be at this University. The public is becoming somewhat sensitive on the subject of University students, and one hears the word "draft-dodger" used more and more frequently. It is only fair that we who feel that our duty lies in continuing our education rather than immediately joining the armed forces should be given some chance to explain our reasons. I believe that will be one of opportunities presented by the forthcoming Staff-Student Conference on the University and the War.

There is always the danger, of course, that the average student — "the man-on-the-campus" — will politely shut the door of his ivory tower and retire to the familiar round of lectures, books, and dances with a muttered, "Oh, shucks, let someone else worry about it. I'm only one of 8,000, so what's it matter what I think." If that happens, heaven help the Conference!!

Are we going to stand around like a flock of sheep, "letting George do it," or are we going to take this opportunity—all of us—to display a little of that leadership and initiative which presumably justifies our being here at all?

It seems certain that, if the manpower shortage is as serious as is claimed in some quarters, the Arts courses are not going to be allowed to remain on the present footing much longer. For politieal reasons, if for none other, the Government will sooner or later take a definite stand on this question, and the decision, like most war-time decisions, will be sudden and drastic. An overworked National Selective Service Bureau is not likely to give much study to the potential contribution of students some years hence, when it is faced with an acute need for men—and women. For the problem is just as certainly going to face the women students as the men.

But if Selective Service has on hand a complete and detailed study of the whole problem by those who presumably know most about it—the students and the staff—it is far more likely to reach a reasonable and satisfactory solution. It may be that the Conference will decide that the University cannot be further adapted to war objectives than it is at present, and that it must continue to function as it is or else close up altogether. But I am confident that it will unearth as yet unthought-of ways in which the University may make far greater contributions, and still not lose its essential character as a University.

But however the Conference decides, its report will clear up once and for all a problem that has concerned every one

PROFESSOR INVENTS FLYING MACHINE

New Invention to Revolutionize Modern Warfare and Post-War Civilization; Will Solve Gasoline Problem

WRIGHT BROS. SPEECHLESS

A new invention, which is expected to revolutionize modern warfare and civilization in general, was revealed last night by Downdraught N. Windtunnel, professor of Mechanical Engineering, in an airmail letter to Ottawa. The professor's brainchild is a flying machine, and the perfection of this invention is expected to prove once and for all that it is possible for man to fly in the air, contrary to the theory propounded at the Royal Canadian Institute lecture last Saturday, by a certain Major de Seversky. "Flying machines," said de Seversky, "are figments of the imagination of impractieal dreamers and should not be considered seriously. Even if somebody should manage to build one, which I doubt, they will never be more than toys."

"Some toys!" an unnamed source called Mussolini was heard to mutter.

In an interview with The Varsity, Prof. Windtunnel stated: "I imagine that we will be forced to use gasoline motors in these machines and thus we will overcome the tremendous surplus of gasoline which has been built up in this country, and for which there is no other use at the present time."

"That little matter might require some deliberation," said a man who claimed to be G. R. Cottrelle.

"Quite an idea," was the opinion of one George Beurling, a youthful resident of Montreal.

The new invention has not yet been named, but Dr. Windtunnel stated that, of all the names that occurred to him, the one "Link Trainer" seemed to describe the machine most accurately. The principles by which this machine is able to fly were not clearly grasped by the reporter, a fact that may be ascribed to the fact that neither did the professor.

The wider implieations of the invention will be discussed by the Professor in an address next week. However, he permitted himself to be quoted to the effect that he believed the new machines will very likely be used in the war, and that Sherman was right. He believes also that his invention may be adapted for transport of passengers and parcels.

The Wright Brothers were reached at their bicycle shop in Dayton, Ohio, but refused to comment on Dr. Windtunnel's statements.

Local Talent

Toronto Symphony Concert

I wonder how many people in Toronto realize how lucky they are. This was the thought that occurred last night at the concert of the Toronto Symphony Orchestra. When the local music of the city is under the direction of Sir Ernest MacMillan, whose musical personality has become so well identified with the orchestra, and the guest artist of the program is Ernest Seitz, well-known Canadian pianist, there doesn't seem very much lacking.

The richness and the complex depth that is Beethoven was brought out excellently in the composer's Seventh Symphony, the first number on the program last evening. It portrays the tempestous times in which it was written with an exuberant first movement, a lively second—though with the introduction of a sad little theme here and there—a racy Presto for its third, and a powerful sweeping fourth movement for conclusion.

The second number of the program was a modern sort of contrast to the "great master." It consisted of Three Movements from "The Planets," by Holst. All kinds of wonderful and colourful effects brought out the old age of Saturn, the magician on Uranus, and the mystic Neptune; and swung this listener, at least, into quite the uplifted state. Beautiful minor themes and discordant clashes were the principal features of this selection.. And the assistance of the Mendelssohn Choir in the background of the performance added another unusual but good quality.

The concluding portion was Rubinstein's Piano Concerto No. 4 in D Minor, in which Mr. Seitz "gave" with brilliant technique, and lovely flowing melodies, and the orchestra part was done no less pleasingly.

Canada on Canvas

The Art Gallery of Toronto

Presented as a unit, the sixty-third annual Royal Academy Exhibition at the Art Gallery of Toronto, demonstrates effectively that Canadian artists in every field of art, have attempted successfully to keep the continuity of past and present intact.

Now that we are in the third year of the war it is reasonable to expect that there are a number of paintings pertaining to the war. There are some dynamic scenes like Rowley Murphy's Convoy in Rough Weather, but the greater part of the show, as in previous years is composed of portraits, landseapes and still life pictures,

Canada's Reaction to War 1939-42, by Frederick Taylor, immediately arouses interested analysis for three views of the same Canadian all give different expression; one seems to depict determination,another, personal fear and surrender, and the third portrait eloquently cries: "Well, I didn't start it!" A study in greys and blues gives a friendly protection of a destroyer to surrounding submarines as they muzzle alongside the hull, in Mother Ship and Submarines by Lt.-Comm. H. Beaument. Down east, where rail ears and grain elevators disgorge the products of Canada interior, Parrsboro, Nova Scotia, by Henrietta Britton, gives a graphic winter picture of what industry means to the navy and air force.

From West to East, Academy painters have portrayed Canadian landscapes, in all moods, seasons, and regions; in action, repose and novelty; in various colours, designs and structures. J. W. G. Maedonald paints 8,000 Feet Up with circus colours in clear circus-clouded air, a structure of jagged rocks and mountain-peak terrain. From the prairies comes Lush August by Nook Jackson, St. Lawrence Market, an oil by Tom Roberts, gives this subject no more glamour than it has, but emphasizes the peculiar phenomenon of sunlight playing through the large windows that bridge the street. Down in the Maritimes Stanley Royle presents Fisherman and Girl as they walk heavily along the seashore carrying a panful of fish and a net.

Among the portraits, Cadet Sergeant Sinclair by Archibald Barnes, has caught the expression of clear blue eyes and the pose of a person who is quite conscious of people looking at him; incidentally he seems quite proud of himself. Goeffrey Greer has painted a likeable portrait in The Green Suit, which skilfully makes the most of the model's auburn hair.

It is difficult to give the impression of the wide range of the Academy artists — in subject matter, particular skills and effects. In addition to the painting there is some sculpture that merits attention. Simple yet cold, a mass with patient expression and no action is Eskimo Mother and Child by Frances Loring. And finally, by way of contrast two pieces called Negress, one in stone by Florence Wyle, and one in plaster by Emmanuel Hahn. In the former, a Negress looks appealingly to something which seems beyond her. In the latter, a huge green prognathus head demands our respect.

Junior S.P.S. Outswim Seniors

First of Best-of-Three Finals; Juniors Heavily Favoured to Take Title After 22 - 11 Victory

NORTHWOOD SENSATIONAL

Sr. School bowed to Jr. School 22-11 yesterday in the first meet of the final series for the swimming championship. Their convincing triumph installed Jr. School as odds-on favourites to take the best-of-three series.

Jr. School won their way into the finals with a 30-3 victory over Dents. Sr. School turned back School Thirds 21-12 in the other semi-final on Monday.

Individual star of the meet was Sr. School's sensational Johnny Northwood, who was one of the leading figures on Winst McCatty's Varsity swim team last year. Johnny took firsts in the 50 yard breast-stroke, the 50 yard back-stroke, and did his best in a losing cause in the medley relay.

Fred Sansom paced the Jr. School natators to their victory. Besides winning his specialty, the 50 yard free-style, Fred put on a terrific stretch drive to nose out Bill Moffat in the last lap of the medley relay.

150 yard medley relay—Jr. S.P.S. (W. Sharpe, Gilbert, Sansom); Sr. S.P.S. (Northwood, Payne, Moffat)—1:33.6

50 yard back-stoke—Northwood (SR), Whittingham (JR), W. Sharpe (JR) —34.8

50 yard breast stroke — Northwood (SR), Gilbert (JR), K. Sharpe (JR) —33.5

220 yard relay—Jr. S.P.S. (Marteri, Ferries, Lockart, Whittingham); Sr. S.P.S. (Graham, Rimmer, Payne, Muller)—1:54.5.

Speaking of Sport

By Roger Conant

THE BEGINNING OF THE END

After weeks of travail on the part of many, the numerous schedules are being completed and the respective playoffs beginning. In fact the Swim League finals were completed today. The soccer finalists are practically decided with the next few days' games telling the tale. The lacrosse schedule will be completed this week. The rugby first division is all settled but the second group is tied up for second spot and that has to be unravelled before playdowns begin.

The Swim League has been all School's with all three teams winning their groups—in fact no Engineer swim team has been beaten in its league this year.

Final standings of the Swim League are:

Group I

	won	lost
Jr. S.P.S.	4	0
Vic	0	4

Group II

Sr. S.P.S.	4	0
U.C. B	0	4

Group III

Jr. Meds	4	2
Emmanuel	0	6

Group IV

	won	lost
Dents	4	1
Knox	4	2
Pharmacy	0	5

The soccer situation will be cleared in the next few days. In the first group School I has copied the leadership but the other finalist from the group has to be decided by a match-off between the tied second-placers. The second group is complete—School II taking first and Dents second place. The third group has Trinity and Emmanuel tied for points. However, the finals began yesterday with Dents and Emmanuel slipping around in the mud in a tie game.

Group I

S.P.S. I	4	0
Vic	1	3

Group II

	won	lost	tied
S.P.S. II	4	0	2
Dents	3	1	1
Pharmacy	0	5	0

Group III

	won	lost	tied
Trinity	3	2	1
Emmanuel	2	0	3
Wycliffe	0	2	3

With Victoria's win on the gridiron Friday afternoon the first division—and two of the three finalists for the Mulock Cup—was decided. So Sr. S.P.S, who completed the schedule with only one loss, and Vic, who has finished the season with four straight wins, will probably clash in the finals. But Vic's opponent in the playdowns is very uncertain because at the moment three teams are tied for second spot in the second division.

	wins	losses	points scored for	against
St. Mike's	3	1	29	3
U.C.	2	2	11	3
Dents	2	2	9	25
Jr. Meds	2	2	15	18
Trinity	1	3	15	40

On the basis of statistics, however boring they might be, it can be seen that St. Mike's well deserve to take the group championship. On facts also it stands that they will probably be the representative of the group to meet Vic in the semi-finals. But it also appears that if anyone in the second group is going to beat the great Double Blue machine it will be U.C. The Royal Blue College, although appearing weak on the offense, has shown great defensive work—indeed has had as few points scored against them as the group champs. But for U.C. to get in the semi-finals it will mean a long, hard pull. Dents will be out with everything today on the back campus. Then if that hurdle is navigated Junior Meds will be the next obstacle—and a very formidable one at that—on Friday. Then St. Mike's will have their challenge on Monday. So according to figures, it would augur that if U.C. pulls out of its slump of the past two games it will go on to make its bid for the semi-finals. However, rugby has its breaks and anything can happen to anyone—and there are five games to be won and lost before the Mulock mug is disposed of.

A WORD TO THE OTHERWISE

And just in case you're not going to spectatorate on the back campus tomorrow, through the co-operation and kindness of the Athletic Office and the O.R.F.U., everyone in possesion (legally) of a registration card will be admitted to the big O.R.F.U. finals between Balmy Beach and the Hurricanes at the Stadium.

Ban on Alien Students Favoured by School Men

Following are a few reactions from students in the Faculty of Applied Science and Engineering to the statement issued from the Engineering Society, Saturday.

Neil McMurtries, a first year Electrical student, felt that the friendly aliens should "be let into the University in the Arts courses; but not into S.P.S. or Medicine. In Engineering, they wouldn't contribute much to our war effort because the war will probably be over before they graduate. As far as Germany is concerned there is no need for any technical training; but there is a need for training in the humanities, for the same reason Canadian students are studying the arts, namely to build up the country morally."

Jack Ward of Mechanical Engineering III said: "There isn't room for them in S.P.S. Give Canadians the first chance to train in Engineering. Next year the University will have to discriminate between honour students and those with average grades. If these aliens are good scholars, they'll take those chanees away from Canadians."

Don Oldrieve of Fourth Civil asked, "Would the Jewish people give us the same right to advanced education in a foreign country if we were in a similar position?"

This opinion was echoed by Jack King, Metallurgy III, who said: "I don't see why we should give support to Jewish people. Why should the University be a haven for them when they aren't allowed into a munitions plant or the army?"

Jim Henry of Fourth Engineering and Physics said: "I would rather see 18 deserving Canadians who are unable financially to enter University, receive this privilege."

Junior School Rout S.P.S. III In Lacrosse Tussle

In a hectic lacrosse tussle yesterday evening on the main gym floor of Hart House Jr. S.P.S. easily defeated their fellow engineers and rivals, S.P.S. III, by a score of 13 to 4. From the start the game promised to go in favour of the victors with Turner, Moorehead and Keary at the controls. This trio alone accounted for 10 of their 13 goals. McDonough, Scott and Upper accounted for the other three.

However grossly outplayed, S.P.S. III proved to be a fighting team, tenanciously clinging to the hope of eventually coming through with a win. Howard of S.P.S. III frequently twisted through the entire Junior team and thereby often dangerously threatened to upset the Junior lead; but, thanks to the skilfull goal-tending of Steel, he only managed to net the ball twice. Bartlett and Machum also scored for S.P.S. III.

Junior S.P.S.—Steel, Turner (3), Scott (1), Moorehead (4), Keary (3), McDonough (1), Hull, Upper (1), Graham.

S.P.S. III—Venchiarutti, Anderson, Bartlett (1), Cooke, Ferrier, Machum (1), Webster, McBride, Howard (2), Kallio.

There was only one game last night up at O.C.E. but in it was displayed basketball at its best. The final score, 17-15 in favour of U.C. Seniors, is only half the story. It tells us just how close the game was and how eagerly it was contested right up to the finishing whistle. All the players enjoyed the game heartily and Verna Christie, the evening's referee, was kept very busy indeed. P.H.E. played better ball in the last half. All through the game. "Doris" their astonishing forward—who is fast as well as tall—kept up her pace and played beautifully with her team mates. U.C.'s staunch forwards, Eleanor Sinclair, Jean Holt and Joan Carter, deserve a lot of credit—but forwards always need the help of their guards to get the ball—so we take off our proverbial hats to Marg Stock and her cohorts in that line. All told, this makes three wins out of three for U.C., which is mighty fine basketball in our language.

Tonight at 5:30 O.T. and U.C. freshies will meet and match baskets; and at 6:30, we have Vic freshies and St. Mike's Srs. slated to play. So come on, you spectators—we like to see you all—and hear you.

Before closing, we should like to apologize to the girls from Vic for minimizing one of their games. It's just one of those things that will happen and while we know there weren't many hard feelings—yet we would like them to know that we weren't showing anything like favouritism in this mishap —so help us.

Father Daly to Conduct Newman Club Retreat

The annual spiritual Retreat of Newman Club will be held this Thursday, Friday and Saturday, and will close with Mass and a Communion Breakfast Sunday morning. The Retreat will take place at Newman Chapel at the corner of St. George and Hoskin. Mass will be at 7:30 a.m. daily, and the Conference at 7:30 p.m. each evening. On Sunday, Mass will be at 10 o'clock, followed by a Communion Breakfast in the clubhouse.

Reverend Father Hector Daly, S.J., of Loyola College, head of the Canadian Catholic Youth Union, is to conduct the Retreat. Father Daly is well-known as a Retreat Master as he has lectured recently at St. Joseph's College, Loretto College, and Bresha Hall. Because of Father Daily's vast knowledge and experience with young people, the Newman Retreat should be very informative and interesting.

ADMISSION OF ALIENS FAVOURED BY SENATE

friendly aliens possessed the qualifications for enrolment and should be enrolled. The vote on this resolution was practically unanimous, The Star reported.

While not specifically challenging the right of the Colleges to enroll such friendly aliens, the Board of Governors by their vote had banned such students from the science courses which are not taught in the separate Colleges, but to which all students in the federated Colleges requiring science courses are admitted by the terms of federation. The action of the Senate in this second resolution affirmed the right of these students to entrance to the science courses.

It was decided that the two resolutions should be sent to the Board of Governors, who meet Thursday night.

Dr. H. J. Cody, President of the University of Toronto, outlined the case of the friendly aliens and the wish of the British and Canadian governments that they should be admitted to universities here. He quoted correspondence with government representatives, and emphasized from it that the governments were anxious that this course should be followed in cases of students qualified to enter, as a proof of democratic principles, and as a contribution to the war effort.

It was stated that the University of Toronto stands alone in opposing the entrance of the aliens and that they have been admitted to the other Canadian universities, Queen's, for example, having admitted 20. It was said that because of the action of the Board of Governors in delaying entrance of these men several had applied and been accepted at other universities. One, it was said, had entered Universty of Manitoba, and a couple have already been enrolled at McGill. Others have gone to Dalhousie and Queen's.

As a matter of etiquette, it was pointed out by A. B. Fennell, Registrar of the University of Toronto and Secretary of the Senate, that the text of the resolutions or any official statement could not be given to the press before they were presented to the Board of Governors. Mr. Fennell said he knew the results of the meeting could not fail to be made public at once, but that official procedure would not allow of making the resolutions and action of the Senate public officially until the meeting of the Board of Governors on Thursday.

We've heard of parties that ended in what is colloquially called the cooler, but we didn't think it would happen on this campus—but it did. It was late the evening of a local residence formal when a well-known dean of women went to the refrigerators for her bedtime milk-and-cookies and found instead a shivering couple who'd got locked in.

WHAT TO DO TILL HELP ARRIVES—KEEP COOL.

That same night one lad, trying to make the curfew after a mad hunt for a lost scarf, failed in his attempt and, on going out the residence door, set off the burglar alarm. Availing himself of the better part of valour, he fled precipitately, followed by shrill feminine screams.

THIS SORT OF THING MUST STOP!

Because it makes things difficult for other people. For instance, one lad was returning home from a date a while ago in the pre-dawn hours when he was stopped by a policeman who, under the pretext of a routine checkup, there having been a robbery just committed in the area, asked the lad to explain his being abroad. He had to tell where he'd been and even the name of the girl he'd been out with.

THIS IS CARRYING THINGS TOO FAR.

And while we're in a plaintive mood we might as well scream about WIMMEN. Much as they appal, bewilder and confuse us, we at least thought they'd stick together, but the latest piece of slang we've run into is HAG LINE—a female stagline, and it comes from the VASSAR Miscellany News!

WOMEN'S INHUMANITY TO WOMEN!

Librarians over at the University of Minnesota have recently been reporting many amusing trivia in the way of bibliotechnical boners. For example, many students insist on asking for a book by a guy called Ibid.

From the College Digest we learn that Texas College of Mines at El Paso is the only mining school in the United States to admit co-eds. It also claims to be the only mining school with a mine of its own right on the campus—although lots of colleges are in a hole.

Club to Present Spanish Comedies

Two one-act comedies will be presented this evening at the Women's Union at 8 o'clock by the members of the Spanish Club. These comedies depict the customs prevailing in Spain in a somewhat humorous fashion.

"Vamonos" deals with the firm but unsuccessful attempt of a hungry man to suggest to his wife's visitors that they should leave. These persist in being verbose and in ignoring him just as a group of women can. The dinner hour in Spain is any time from 9:30 p.m. The second comedy depicts the more romantic element. It concerns the confusion arising from a fencing teacher taking his daughter's fiance to be a pupil who is to fight a duel the following day.

The rest of the evening will be taken up by popular songs and dances of Latin America.

THE BARRED STUDENTS

To the Editor of The Star.

Sir: I noted with interest the letter of Hortense Haines in last Thursday's Star. The writer describes The Star's interest in the plight of the 18 refugee students barred from the University of Toronto as "misplaced sympathy." She suggests that because many Canadian-born students have had their educational career cut short by lack of finances, that the Board of Governors' action is to be commended. It is quite true that our inadequate economic system makes financial resources, rather than academic aptitude, the chief qualification for the privileges of higher education. But I think it only fair to point out two pertinent facts. First, the barring of these refugee boys will not permit one deserving, but financially deficient, Canadian-born student, to enter the University. Second, these students were chosen from a much larger group of refugees in consideration of their specific academic qualifications. By all means let us lend a hand to replace financial position by academic ability as the basis for the privilege of higher education. But to add to the already existing financial discrimination, that of race and national origin, is a step in the opposite direction. Two wrongs do not make a right.

Joseph Grant.

Note and Comment

The question of admitting the 15 friendly aliens to the University of Toronto is being considered by both the Board of Governors and the Senate of that institution. The Board consists of the Chancellor and the President as ex-officio members and 22 members appointed by the Provincial Government. Of these 22, the alumni federation of the University may nominate eight. The Senate consists of the Chancellor, the Chairman of the Board of Governors, the President, the heads of Colleges, representatives of the Faculties and members elected by the graduates. Speaking generally, the functions of the Board of Governors have to do with the business and financial administration of the University while the Senate deals more with academic matters. The line of demarcation, however, in practice may be somewhat vague. The final settlement of the present issue may incidentally help to clear up some questions of jurisdiction.

Book Offensive For Armed Forces Is City-Wide

University students are not the only people campaigning at present for books for the Armed Forces. Youth groups throughout the city are uniting their efforts to bring about a successful "Book Offensive."

Organizations taking part in the city drive include the Y.M.C.A., the United Church Young People's, the Labour Youth Federation, the Y.M.H.A. and various language groups. They have chosen as the area for the offensive, the district bounded by St. George and Bathurst; College and Dupont.

The offensive will take the form of a Blitz—leaflets, notices, radio squibs, will be used as ammunition. Lads in uniform and youngsters with wagons will gather the plunder.

Another plan is to exact a book as an entrance fee for people attending functions held by these organizations in the near future.

The type of books sought in the drive has received considerable attention, for it is felt that the average soldier cannot stomach a monotonous diet of cheap novels and Western thrillers. Classical literature, pocket and Penguin editions on all subjects, historical, biographical and scientific books, pictorial, geographical and popular mechanics magazines, as well as lighter literature are thought acceptable.

When collected, the books will be turned over to the I.O.D.E. for distribution to the Armed Forces.

That is why it is most important that each of us seek to make whatever contribution we can to the success of the Conference, even if it only involves seeing that the right delegates are elected.

A University education carries with it duties as well as privileges. If we are unwilling to attempt to settle our own problems, what right have we to be here at all?

Matthews Visits Art Exhibition

The Honourable Albert Matthews, Lieutenant Governor of Ontario, and Mrs. Matthews visited the Art Gallery in Hart House yesterday afternoon to view the Canadian Armed Forces Exhibition. Dr. and Mrs. H. J. Cody, Acting Warden J. R. Gilley and representatives of the Art Committee conducted the Lieutenant Governor and Mrs. Matthews through the Gallery.

Mrs. Matthews was impressed with the activity displayed by the artists, even more than in the standard of the art. She also considered the exhibit to be very realistic.

His Honour expressed surprise at the variety of the work and the mediums used, and the high calibre of the talent of the men and women in the Armed Forces.

At noon Tuesday, 5,823 people had seen the exhibition, 1,805 of whom visited the Gallery last Sunday. Special arrangements have been made so that women in the University may see the exhibition this Friday from 1:30 to 5:30 p.m.

George M. Biggs Trophy Presented To University; Won By Mullett, Finlayson

Athletic Trophy Unveiled By Mrs. G. M. Biggs in Hart House Last Night; To Be Highest Individual Award

SILVER PLAQUE

A silver plaque, the George M. Biggs Trophy, was unveiled and presented to the University by Mrs. G. M. Biggs last night in an unpretentious ceremony in Hart House. The new plaque is set on the wall in the west corridor of the Athletic Wing.

Dr. John McCollum, President of the Athletic Directorate, introduced the donor and explained the purpose of the award. The name of the winner will be inscribed on the plaque and a replica of the award will be given to the undergraduate who has contributed most to University athletics in leadership, sportsmanship and performance. The award will be made annually and the winner will be chosen by the current Athletic Directorate.

Dr. H. J. Cody, Honourary President of the Athletic Directorate, accepted the trophy on behalf of the University. An undergraduate representative presented Mrs. Biggs with flowers and a replica of the plaque, and stated that the trophy would become the most sought after athletic award of the University.

Although the official unveiling took place last night, the plaque already carries the names of its first winners. A joint award was made for 1942 as the Athletic Directorate found two worthy of the award—J. H. Mullett and D. G. Finlayson, graduates of Dentistry and Applied Science, who now hold commissions on active service. The former is with the Dental Corps and the latter with the Royal Canadian Navy.

Jack Mullett has won just about everything that can be won for athletics. He won the doubles tennis championship, played intercollegiate soccer three years and starred in basketball and track. He holds his faculty letter and the Bronze "T," given to those with three first Blue and White "T"s. Last year he was chairman of the Intramural Sports Committee.

Don Finlayson has had a somewhat parallel career. Besides his all round athletic ability he shone in the intercollegiate harrier team and for several years was one of the sparks of the intercollegiate cage squad. He received the S.P.S. bronze "S" for the outstanding graduating Engineer, besides holding a bronze "T."

The late George M. Biggs, whose name the new trophy bears, was an outstanding rugby player for Varsity teams in the years preceding his graduation in 1904; in 1903 he captained the Blue and White. Later he became a Professor in the Faculty of Medicine and head of the department of Oto-laryngology.

Cawley Elected To S.A.C. Post

Jim Cawley, President of the Engineering Society, was elected to the posts of First Vice-President and Acting President of the Students' Administrative Council at yesterday's regular fortnightly Council meeting in University College.

Cawley will succeed Gord Bell, retiring President of the Medical Society, whose graduation at Christmas necessitates his resignation from S.A.C. chairmanship.

Resolutions Of Arts Council

The attention of all students in the Faculty of Arts is drawn to the following announcement of resolutions adopted by the Council of that Faculty at a special Meeting held on Monday, No. 23, 1942:

Sub-section (3) of section 17 of the revised National War Services Regulations reads in part as follows:

"Any physically fit student who

(c) fails to pass any term or yearly academic examination required by his university, college or school, unless such failure, in the opinion of the university, college or school authorities and the District Office Commanding, is due to circumstances beyond the control of such student, and that he should be permitted to continue his course of studies.

shall be called out forthwith under these regulations."

In accordance with this regulation, the Council of the Faculty of Arts at its meeting on November 23rd, 1942, adopted the following resolutions respecting

I Students in Honour Courses

That each honour graduating department be asked to submit to the Council, not later than the February meeting, the names of any students of all four years whose work during the Fall Term has been found to be unsatisfactory, together with a statement of the procedure followed in reaching its decisions.

II Students in the Pass and General Courses

That each department providing instruction to students in the Pass and General Courses be asked to submit to the Council, not later than the February meeting, the names of any students of all years in those courses whose work during the Fall Term has been found to be unsatisfactory, together with a statement of the procedure followed in reaching its decisions;

That the reports of the departments be forwarded to the University Registrar to be collated and submitted to the Council at the February meeting by the Revising Committee and the General Course Committee respectively.

Cleveland Professor To Give Three Lectures

Three lectures in English Literature will be given this week by Professor Finley Foster of Western Reserve University of Cleveland, Ohio. Mr. Foster comes to this University on an exchange basis, through an arrangement made by the English departments of the Colleges of this University and those of Cornell, Michigan, and Western Reserve. These exchanges operate in a rotary fashion as the professor sent from Toronto will go to either Cornell or Michigan.

He will give his first lecture on "William Hogarth, Addison, and Steele" in the lecture theatre of the Museum this morning at 9:30 and it will be illustrated. On Friday morning at 10:30 Mr. Foster will speak in Room 8, U.C. on "Pre-Raphaelites in Art and Literature," and in the evening he will address the Graduate Club in the Senior Common Room on the subject "William Blake, poet and artist."

Speaking about these exchange Professor R. S. Knox of the U.C. English Department said, "It is a very happy arrangement from the point of view of staff, students, and the relations between the two countries."

Glazebrook Appointed To Government Post

Professor G. P. de T. Glazebrook, Associate Professor of History at the University, has been appointed to the position of wartime assistant to the Department of External Affairs, an Ottawa announcement states.

A member of the staff for 18 years, Professor Glazebrook specialized in international relations. After graduating from U.C. in 1922 Prof. Glazebrook spent two years at Oxford where he obtained his M.A. On his return to Canada he was appointed to the staff of the University.

Mr. Glazebrook is the author of five books dealing with Canadian affairs. His two most recent books are "Canadian External Relations" and "Canada at the Paris Peace Conference."

Nomination Time Extended For Staff-Student Conference First Meeting December 5

Deadline for Appointment of Delegates Set at Friday Noon; Plans Outlined at Convening Committee Meeting

TO DISCUSS COURSES

Extension of the time limit for nomination of delegates for the Staff-Student Conference on the University in Wartime to noon tomorrow, Friday, Nov. 27, in those colleges and faculties where delegates are to be appointed rather than elected, was announced to The Varsity at a meeting of the convening committee yesterday afternoon.

At the meeting tentative plans for the conference were outlined. The conference will start with a preliminary meeting on Dec. 5 at which a chairman and conference officials will be chosen, delegates will be registered, and the organization of the conference will be explained. Following these preliminaries, the chairman of sub-committees will be designated.

These sub-committees will probably be made up of non-delegates with delegates as chairmen. They will meet with staff members who will possibly act as co-chairmen to discuss various problems of the University in Wartime.

They will concern themselves with the particular problems of each course, the advisability of defferent kinds of alterations in the courses, and in some cases, with teaching staff shortages. Special committees will discuss such general topics as Military Training, Selective Service and extra-curricular activities and sports.

The sub-committees will be grouped in caucuses according to the type of course or topic under discussion and the chairmen of the various groups will meet in caucus on Thursday, Dec. 10, to draft caucus reports.

The reports of the caucuses will be presented following the opening ceremonies of the first meeting of the conference proper, the date of which is not yet decided. At this time the reports will be discussed and criticized.

Following this meeting the caucuses will re-convene to amend their reports in the light of discussion.

From the revised reports the conference's final report will be drafted and forwarded to Ottawa and the other Canadian Universities.

"BOOK HARVEST"

The War Services Committee in charge of the "Book Harvest" would like all fraternities, sororities, college residences and outside student organizations to actively support their drive by going through their libraries for books and magazines or by collecting books from their members, starting "immediately, if not sooner."

I.S.S. Campaign One Week Later

The War Services Campaign—combined drive for International Student Service funds and books for distribution at Canadian armed service camps—originally scheduled for Dec. 2, will take place Dec. 9, Don Rowat, President of the University College "Lit" and acting chairman of the S.A.C. committee in charge of the campaign, announced yesterday following the regular fortnightly Council meeting.

He said the postponement would allow more time for organizing the collection of books in the various colleges and faculties, and would also make a more extensive publicity campaign for both drives possible.

Russian Theatre Subject of Talk By H. W. L. Dana

Henry Wadsworth Longfellow Dana, grandson and namesake of the American poet, declared in an illustrated lecture on the Soviet Theatre and Cinema in Hart House yesterday, that the theme of Russian drama today is found in a sentence from Stalin's address to the people of Moscow. "May you be inspired in this war by the heroic image of our ancestors."

These words are being literally acted upon in the Russian theatre, which is portraying predominately national historical plays such as those based on Peter the Great, Ivan the Terrible, the Napoleonic Invasion of Russia and the Revolutions of 1905 and 1917, said Mr. Dana.

The great enthusiasm and admiration of the Russian peoples for their allies in the present crisis, is also illustrated by the staging of many British and American plays, including Hiawatha, Mr. Pickwick, and Uncle Tom's Cabin. On June 21, 1941, there were no less than six Shakespearean plays being staged in Moscow.

The Russian's believe that there is an "incessant need of great art and literature" to maintain the high morale of the soldiers and civilians of the Soviet. Thus, although the Russian people have always been interested in art and drama, there is an endless succession of plays, motion-pictures, ballets and operas emerging from the Soviet theatre today.

Behind Closed Doors

The controversy which has raged over admission to this University of alien students recently released from internment on condition that they continue their education has excited staff and students—as well as most of Toronto's press—for some time. But it may conclude today, when the Board of Governors meets this afternoon.

It is assumed that at today's Board session the Governors will consider resolutions forwarded to them from the Senate and from the Students' Administrative Council. These resolutions are believed to express practically unanimous dissatisfaction with the Board's previous negative vote on the issue of admitting the aliens. It is understood that the Senate resolutions are concerned with the legal aspect of the matter and suggest that the sole power of admitting students rests with itself and not with the Governors; the S.A.C. resolution and the various student resolutions appended to it are more concerned with the question of justice and humanity of admitting the particular students concerned.

It is not our place to predict the outcome of today's discussions in the Board Room in Simcoe Hall; but we feel that, faced with the two types of appeal for reconsideration, the Board will in all likelihood conduct an even more thorough examination into the whole question. And today's dictum will probably be final.

In the light of the likely finality of today's meeting, we are no longer concerned in these columns with the abstract merits of the case; we have argued them for the past eight issues to the best of our ability and we now rest our case. We also invoke our editorial prerogative of halting publication of correspondence on the matter. Letters on the subject—particularly those aspects of it connected with the recent statement of the Engineering Society—continue to pile up in our office; but to publish them now, when any influence they might have had is useless in view of the fact that the drama seems to be nearly played out, would be of little value.

Thus, as we say, our interest now no longer lies with the question of privilege which involves the Senate and the Governors, nor with the rebuttal and cross-rebuttal of arguments which have been carried on concerning the general advisability of admitting the aliens.

But, as we await the outcome of one of the most controversial issues to stir this campus in several years, we are only interested in the somewhat more personal question of the future of 18 individuals. They are not men in a chess-game of logic; they are men whose whole careers are bound up in a decision to be reached today behind the impersonally-closed doors of a council room.

Do We Know Our Friends?

Mr. Henry Wadsworth Longfellow Dana, noted authority on Russia, brough out an interesting piece of information about the Soviets in his lecture on "The Soviet Theatre and Cinema" in Hart House theatre yesterday. His point was that the Soviets, once they were in this war on the side of the United Nations, decided to find out what their new allies were like, what they thought, did and said, by the sensible method of studying their literature.

The result of this investigation has been revolutionary presentations in Russia of Othello, before a symbolic black and white checkerboard backdrop, and of The Devil's Disciple with an added character representing the play's author, Shaw, rushing onto the stage at the climax, crying, "Don't hang my character!" Not only the dramatic products of the United Nations but also the works of the novelists, political thinkers and philosophers are being read and discussed by the wide-awake and intelligent citizens of the Soviet. Their course is one which we could follow in reverse with great benefit to ourselves.

Most of us have read, or at least heard of the works of writers like Tolstoy, Tchekov and Dostoievsky, and have listened to the music of composers like Rimsky-Korsakoff, Tchaikowsky and Stravinsky, but the present generation of writers and artists in the Soviets are almost unknown outside their own country. Prokoffief's music is becoming deservedly well known and in the past year Shostakovitch's great Seventh Symphony, inspired by last winter's seige of Moscow, has given us new light on the Soviets. But it may come as a surprise to some of our readers that the reputedly richest man in Russia today is Alexei Tolstoy, descendant of the great Leo, who plies the traditionally impecunious trade of novelist.

A comendable start toward understanding our Soviet allies has been made in the series of three lectures in Hart House of which Mr. Dana's is the second. Professor R. D. Finch and his colleagues on the Public Lectures Committee of University College are to be congratulated on having organized these lectures. The first two lectures have been so popular with the students that standing-room-only has been the only limit on the audiences.

When information about one of the most interesting of our allies is greeted with such enthusiasm could we not arrange similar lectures about our other and perhaps lesser known friends among the United Nations? The Latin American countries especially should provide much interesting material. Could we perhaps also organize our research into the written and musical works of our allies along somewhat the same lines as the Russians have adopted with our own, with the works of Soviet dramatists presented in Hart House theatre; possibly with groups organized to discuss their literature and the written works of the novelists and philosophers of South America, China, Poland and the others among the United Nations whose works are little known here.

It is said that today two of the biggest selling books in the Soviet Union are Tolstoy's War and Peace and Steinbeck's Grapes of Wrath. Thus we have been given the lead in a cosmopolitan course, which we could get great benefit from following.

"Books," by Tom Nixon who won the playwriting contest with it two years ago, was first on the program of the Vic Alumnae Hall Theatre Night last evening. Dorothy Ley, the directress and leading lady was lively as an Irish housemaid. (We wonder why all stage housemaids are invariably Irish.) The accents came and went, but Mr. Cairns, the Jewish book fancier has a flair for comedy to compensate, and provided a tired audience with plenty of hearty chuckles.

A scene from "The School for Scandal" in modern dress provided the audience with a refreshing interlude. Here Dora Worden sparkled as Lady Teazle, who gave the piece and our spirits a lift every time she entered the stage. Were it not for Al McNeil's witty interpretation we would be forced to say that the men in the cast did not do justice to the obviously careful direction of Miss McNabb.

We are inclined to think that Vic theatre nights would only be worth the time spent by the stage managers if the actors would consider it worth their while to learn their lines. Often a good moment was spoiled or a catch line fell flat because someone had failed to hear the prompter. Otherwise we had a very entertaining evening.

Eaton's Galleries

There is a show, on Non-Objective are by Edna Tacon of New York, at Eaton's College Street galleries. This is the sort of thing you have to go to with an open mind—very open. For the non-objectivists are remotely related to the Surrealists, and a more maddening stye of art you never saw. But after you've been a couple of times, still with an open mind of course, you may begin to like it.

Take for example "The Dance," a red form swirling on a dove-grey background. As pure form it is appealing to the eye; it has no story to tell unless you have a peculiarly potent imagination. Composition on Black, a striking study in definite cubistic rhythms, and Ethereal Qualities, a watercolour, are reminiscent of Heinrich Klee in his more fantastic moments. An example of the Dadaistic technique, popularized by the Fauves in post-war Paris, is Blue Fugue, chastely labelled collage here. This is where you sit down with a large glue pot, and a pile of sundry objects such as scraps of newspapers, hunks of fur, bits of tapestry, (and only incidentally, paints and brushes) and—make a picture! In her Opus 21, the artist gives us another example of this technique, evidently requiring an immense amount of care. Several of the tempera paintings show evidence of paint applied with an atomizer, which in my humble opinion, violates one of the basic conans of art.

This exhibition is interesting if not inspiring. Go along to develop a phase of your esthetic education. But don't let it stunt your growth.

U.C. Eliminates Dentists 21-4

U.C. Wins Place in Mulock Cup Playdowns; Bitove, Amell, Nesbitt, Smith, Score for U.C.; Hambley for Dents

BOB MURRAY INJURED

By Gordon Mack

In the first of the sudden-death games for second place in Group II and for the right to enter the Mulock playdowns, U.C. unleashed one of the most devastating attacks of the year to eliminate Dents 21-4.

The Garnet and Blue opened the scoring in the first quarter when, after "Gopher" Woods recovered a U.C. fumble, Bill Hambley lofted a long spiral against the north wing of University College. Dents retained their margin throughout the quarter, but a misjudged kick and a Smith to Amell pass moved the ball deep into Dental territory.

The second quarter opened with Bob Murray returning Don Smith's kick from behind the line, but U.C. were not to be denied their first major score of the year. Smith looped a pass to Ron Schaeffer that made 15 yards, and then from the eight yard line, Jimmy Bitove crossed the line standing up on an end run, to give U.C. a 5-1 lead. Smith's convert hit the upright.

Murray kept the Dental men in the fight with a long kick that travelled 65 yards and was climaxed by Jay Turner dropping the U.C. receiver in his tracks on the four yard stripe. An exchange of kicks gave Dents possession on the 25 yard line and Hambly lifted his second point across the deadline. The half ended with the score 5-2.

On the kick-off for the second half, Bob Murray was injured and his absence was immediately felt by the team. Bob Ferguson plunged for just short of yards, but Don Smith intercepted a forward to give the Red and White the ball on the Dents' 35. A short pass from Smith to Jack Amell, who ran 20 yards, made the score 10-2. The convert again failed. Dents came back fighting for the second time, and Jimmy Bitove was chased back across his line and pulled down for a safety touch to make the score 10-4.

In the last quarter, the U.C. team had the play all their own way. A poor snap near the Dent line resulted in a fumble and Dalt Nesbitt fell on the ball just across the line for the third major of the game to make it 15-4. A pass convert was attempted but failed again. Dents took to the air then and Bill Hambley completed one to Johnny Huston who pulled it down with one hand and carried it for almost 20 yards. Hambley was then smeared, literally, twice on pass formations and was forced to kick. Sammy Stellman moved the sticks twice. Don Smith and Jack Amell combined again for two short flicker passes, and from in close, Jimmy Bitove went across for his second touch of the day. Don Smith took the ball across the hard way to conclude the scoring at 21-4. The final whistle blew with Allman carrying the kick-off out to the Dental one yard line.

The mild weather reflected itself in the few fumbles. Both lines were able to dig into the soft earth and large gains through the line were almost completely absent, Sammy Stellman being the only player to consistently make gains. The passers were given plenty of protection and Don Smith was able to complete several important forwards to Jack Amell. For U.C., the work of Smith, Bitove, Stellman and Nesbitt were the outstanding reasons for U.C.'s scoring splurge. For Dents, Bob "Muscles" Murray played well until he was hurt. Bob Ferguson played his usual good game at secondary but found the U.C. line tough going.

Dents—Murray, Ferguson, Hambley, Allman, Corcoran, Wright, Webster, Wood, Faulkner, Turner, Cummings, Nolan, Boyd, Huston, Jenkins, Schwartz.

U.C.—Garett, Nesbitt, Warren, Zierler, Kuhn, Morton, Dixon, Wade, Rafelman, Smith, Amell, Bitove, Stellman, Tartataglia, Hamilton, Cutler, Skinner, Uichol, Watson, Pohl.

Doctors Tie Vic In Scoreless Tilt

Meds and Victoria soccerites battled each other to a scoreless draw on the back campus yesterday afternoon. As the winner of this game must play Trinity in the first round of the playoffs next Saturday morning, the teams will meet again on Friday at 3:30 p.m. on the front campus. The game was evenly contested all the way and the only real scoring opportunities came in the 10 minutes of overtime. McKenzie hit the crossbar for the Scarlet and Gold, while Meds had a glorious chance in a prolonged scramble in front of the Vic net. Joe Fyfe, Art Boyd and Carl Zurbrigg were the outstanding stars of the game.

Meds—Cuthill, Boyd, Wilford, MacHattie, Allan, Robertson, Stamk, Fyfe, Stuart, Nikaido, Josef, Todd, Ford.

Vic — Bridgman, Bryce, Zurbrigg, Hoeniger, Paton, McKenzie, Rutherford, Groober, Atkinson, Birkensbaw, Dedrick.

S.P.S. Wins Boxla Group By Win Over Victoria

Sr. S.P.S. trounced Vic 11-5 last night to clinch their group leadership. The Schoolmen jumped into the lead in the first quarter with three counters; Vic held them in the second quarter, but the game was salted away in the third with three additions to the scoresheet.

Kellam, with seven, led the parade, and team-mate Lewarne punched home four. The Vic tallies came from the sticks of Patrick and Dedrick with two each and Bryce with a single.

Speaking Of Sport

By Jim Paton

IN ONE SCENE

Sportsed: "Howsa 'bout the soccer scribe writing an S.O.S.? huh? maybe?"

Soccer scribe: "Well, I don't know, Rog . . ."

Sportsed: "That fine! . . . Issue of Thursday, Nov. 26."

All of which finds us staring at a typewriter that will type but won't write. Now if this were the Sportswoman we could fill the column with a snappy weather report or something. Possibly a few thousand word beef about the exhumation of Intercollegiate sport would be good but maybe we'll write about soccer, which is what we think we know most about. (No comments, please.)

WORRY, WORRY

On Tuesday Emmanuel and Dentistry tied the first game of the soccer playoffs; Wednesday afternoon Meds and Victoria also tied and what do you think happened on Wednesday night? That's right. "Mac" McCutcheon and office staff tore out what little hair they have left and we get a chance to prove how little we know about soccer.

DON'T BET ON THIS

Meds and Vic go at it again on Friday and loyalty comes to the fore. So it's Vic to edge Meds by the scantiest margin. Regardless of who wins, this game, it's all settled that the second placers of Group I will topple Trinity the co-winners of Group III. The latter game will be played on Saturday morning. When this is cleared up, the successful team will make short shift of the S.P.S. second team who walked away with the marbles in Group II.

On the other side of the draw Dents will possibly nose out Emmanuel. Dents have an extremely cool defence, although they are rather weak up front. Emmanuel were the scoreless wonders in the early part of the season but picked up toward the end. However, they suffered the loss of their best forward, Art Creswell, and are not a balanced team. It really makes little difference who wins because nothing short of a catastrophe can stop the School I's from copping the bunting. From this corner it looks like a Vic or Meds vs. S.P.S. I final and the Schoolmen should take the cup for the second year in succession. The Schoolmen have no less than five of the 13 all-star Varsity team on their roster in addition to some other talent. Yea, School!

St. Mike's Men Drub Forestry

St. Mike's stickmen advanced nearer their group title last night when they edged Forestry 14-0. The game was not always as one-sided as the score indicates, but was considerably rougher than the previous clash between the two teams. McBride of Forestry suffered a broken collarbone in the first minute of play.

Starring in his usual manner for the Irish was "Musty" Morrison, who six times parked the rubber biscuit in the twine. Spup McNulty picked up four counters, Little Dynamite Gregson three and Don Hector a single.

St. Mike's — O'Brien, Hector (1), Doyle, Morrison, C. (6), Gregson (3), McNulty, Morrison, P., Quinn, Fitzpatrick.

Forestry — Bentley, Clipperton, McBride, Campbell, D., Campbell, J., Adams, Boissonneau.

Sportswoman

By Aileen McNally

Last night's opening tilt was one of the most exciting we have seen in some time. Not only were the spectators (the few who were there—what is the matter with you people?) thrilled, but we honestly thought that the U.C. coach was going in to help at any moment. However, her anxiety was rewarded for the Freshies defeated O.T. 18-13. But what a fight the therapists put up! At the end of the third period the score was 12-11 for U.C. Then O.T. scored to make it 13-12. The girls in Red broke away however and though O.T. did their best, the Freshies kept the lead until the final whistle. The defence on both teams was very good, and particularly Smythe of O.T. who did a splendid job of checking No. 13 (some night we are going to tell who she is). Marg. Scott (8) and Mary Mulligan (6) were top scorers for U.C. Ruth Thomson was the star of the forward line, setting up most of the plays and getting rebound after rebound. The return game between these two teams should be really something.

The second game, in which St. Mike's and Vic Freshies clashed, while lacking the colour and excitement of the first, nevertheless had its highlights. St. Mike's were the victors by a score of 24-10. The feature of this game was the presence of not only Birna Christie as referee, but also an umpire in the person of Betty Mortimer. The game was very closely checked and both sides were called frequently for travelling. St. Mike's tiny forward, Rosemary Cunningham, was the best on the floor, breaking in and intercepting many passes and at the same time being top scorer for her team. For Vic Mary Coleman was the best; the team seemed to centre around her.

Tonight at 5:30 U.C. Srs. meet Meds, while at 7:30 St. Hilda's play Vic Jrs. See you at O.C.E.

S.C.M. Theolog Union Opens Discussion Series

A discussion of "The Christian Witness in Education" will be the theme of the first meeting of the Theological College Union of the Student Christian Movement tonight in Emmanuel College. Introductory papers will be read by E. R. Fairweather, B.A., and J. Wagland, B.A., both of Trinity College.

The T.C.U. has planned a series of meetings this year, all of which will attempt to deal with the one great problem which faces all theological colleges today. What is to be the witness of the Christian Church in a world which is becoming more and more secularized? All denominations are realizing that the continual establishment of man means the consequent disestablishment of God. So the theologs are to lay aside their differences as they examine the situation with regard to education, the family, the State and the economic order.

Members of staff, students of the theological colleges and Church students in Arts are invited to attend.

V.C.F. Hears Dr. Joyce On Oriental Religion

The Varsity Christian Fellowship group meeting at the Mission School yesterday, heard Dr. Raymond Joyce, a missionary from China, speak on the challenge of the Mohammendan religion in China.

Referring to the influence of the Moslems over the Chinese today, Dr. Joyce said, "Islam has struck itself deeply into the soil of China. There is nothing more challenging than the rivalry of Islam and Christianity."

In his folder "The Challenge of the Crescent" which was distributed at the meeting, Dr. Joyce reviewed concisely the facts of Chinese Mohammedism, which were illustrated by coloured slides of his missionary travels through Moslem territory.

Vic Christmas Party To Be Tomorrow Night

The first Christmas Party of the season will take place this Friday night at Wymilwood, when Vic's Junior and Senior Classes hold their fall party together.

"The theme will be '23 Shopping Days till Christmas!" explained Fred Stokes, President of 4T3. "And don't ask what that means because it's a secret. It's so secret that we don't even want any Varsity reporters there."

Music will be supplied by Jim Bottomely and his orchestra. Admission will be by registration card for members of either 4T3 or 4T4. Other Vic undergrads or grads will be charged an admission fee of 50 cents.

Missionary to Speak On Communism, China

University students will again have an opportunity of hearing Rev. Stanton Lautenschlager while he is still in Toronto, at the Women's Union at 4:40 p.m. Friday. The Chinese missionary will speak on "Nationalism, Communism and China."

Professor of Sociology and Modern History at Cheeloo University, Mr. Lautenschlager was forced to move into Western China where he visited Communist headquarters and was invited to return to aid in building a church and setting up a Y.M.C.A. He has also studied co-operatives extensively and has been instrumental in converting many Chinese in the West China area—a territory as large as Western Europe.

The problem involves a 100 yds. sq. drill field, with absolutely nothing on it—not even soldiers. And, here's the complication, a 100 ft. flagpole that has to be erected in the centre of said field. The problem, is, of course, how?? There is nothing you can hang a block and fall to—if you had a block and fall to hang onto things. You have just the empty drill field and the flagpole. No superman.

The correct answer, and an elementary ont, and the official one, too, is—"Call a sergeant and a squad and walk off and leave them with it!"

AND IT WOULD PROBABLY WORK, TOO.

Old Text Books Wanted As Chief Contribution In Current Book Harvest

Students Are Asked to Donate Only Those in Fairly Good Condition; Pamphlets Should Be of Recent Publication

MAGAZINES WELCOME

By Doc Savage

With representatives in each of the faculties and bins for books appearing all over the campus, the "book-harvest," designed to gather reading material for men in the armed services, is getting under way.

The chief complication to date seems to be that the students do not know what kind of books to donate. The answer to that is fairly simple—"What would you like to have to read if you were in the army?"

The chief contribution that students can make is textbooks. Many of the soldiers wish to continue their education and others would like to start, and the only way they can do this is by reading. Because text-books are a rather limited commodity, they are one contribution that the university is especially fitted to make.

Technical texts, histories, especially of Germany and Japan, German grammars, and the like are suggested.

Another much needed contribution is books of a serious nature—War and Peace and others of the thought-provoking type. In times of war men naturally grow more serious than in times of peace and so there is a demand for good serious books. Pamphlets, if of current interest, are good too.

The biggest demand is for novels of all types, and for magazines. The thing to remember when you are deciding which books to donate is "would I read this myself?" The Adventures of the Bobbsey Twins and the immortal Tom Swift series are not apt to make much of a hit with the soldiers.

As far as magazines go, they should be recent. However, in the case of certain types like Fortune or National Geographic they can be quite old and still acceptable.

Donated books should be in at least fairly good condition. "This is a book harvest, not a salvage drive," stated one of the members of the committee.

The books are being gathered in each individual faculty under the direction of the faculty leaders. On Dec. 9, they will all be assembled with ceremonies harmonizing with the I.S.S. drive which will also be on that day.

The books are being gathered in various ways. All of the Vic residences will be canvassed, along with many others on campus. There are large bins for books at Loretto College and others.

Editor Returns

H. Dent Hodgson, last year's Editor-in-Chief of The Varsity, returned to Toronto yesterday after an 8,526-mile trip across Canada and back. He has been visiting Canadian University Press bureaux in the offices of various member-papers from Halifax to Vancouver and is now at work on a report to be made to the CUP executive on the present status of the intercollegiate press service.

let's go places

If you like the radio shows of the Fibber - Molly and McCarthy - Bergen combines, you will enjoy "Here We Go Again" at the Imperial. The picture is not as fast-moving as the radio programs, but it packs enough laughs per scene to satisfy most tastes. The plot is almost absent, consisting of a series of unconnected incidents which were included for their "gag value." Besides the screen appearances of such fugitives from a midway as Abigail, Wimple and the irrepressible Gildersleeve, the play features a troop of Girl Guides, the weirdest pool game this side of Hart House, an Indian powwow, an old-fashioned race between two horse and buggies. Besides the comedians, Ginny Simms and Ray Noble were handicapped with a couple of mediocre dance numbers.

IMPERIAL "HERE WE GO AGAIN"

The supporting bill was well filled with a "Victory News" short of the fighting in Africa, a feature on the famous United States Marine Band which had all the familiar martial selections from the "Marine Song" to "Colonel Bogey." A "Famous Trial" short was only fair, but it was compensated for by the performance of Academy Award winner, Donald Duck in the cartoon.

Co-eds Approve Home Nursing As War Service Training Course

The Home Nursing Course, one of the many offered in the compulsory war service training for women students, has found favor among the enthusiastic co-eds. It is planned to give instruction in caring for the patient in the home and consequently teaches "a lot that every girl should know and most don't."

Helen Teolis, II St. Mike's, ventured to say, "It's a course you can get a lot out of and the fact that we have almost personal instruction helps a lot." "Interesting" and "practical" seemed to be the adjectives most used by the enthusiastic home nurses-to-be.

Marg Lovering, II Vic, said, "It's a good course, very interesting even though only a bare outline is given." This prompted Terry Roach, II St. Mike's, to drawl, "It's easy enough to listen to what they're saying but I don't know if I could really do it when put to the test."

One young thing who refused to submit her name exclaimed, "Why it's a marvelous course. The other day during the lecture I actually found out what was wrong with me."

Marjorie Deems, II Vic, matter-of-factly stated, "It's easy to grasp—most of it's common sense," while Mary Sebert, II St. Mike's, exclaimed, "Oh, it's fascinating."

Mrs. F. G. Reason is head lecturer and she invites outside speakers to lecture on various phases of the work. "This is quite an intelligent class," she stated. "They take things in well. There is a difference in teaching University girls; it's really a pleasure."

S.C.M. BOOK EXCHANGE

The S.C.M. Book Exchange will settle the remainder of its accounts in Room 10, University College, from 1 p.m. to 4 p.m. on Nov. 26, 27, 28.

Board Reaches No Decision On Resolutions

The Board of Governors of the University of Toronto had "no statement to make" following yesterday's meeting in Simcoe Hall, C. E. Higginbottom, Board Secretary, told The Varsity last night.

Dr. D. Bruce Macdonald, chairman of the Board, was reported to have said that there had been no change in their decision to refuse admission to 18 "friendly aliens" recently released from internment, although the matter had "come up" during the meeting.

(Resolutions from the University Senate and the Students' Administrative Council were presented to the Board this week, asking that the decision barring the aliens be reconsidered. The Senate, further, questioned the authority of the Board in issuing the ban.)

It was reported that the Board adjourned after a meeting lasting nearly three hours, and that the matter would be further discussed Monday.

Foster Discusses William Hogarth

Professor Finley Foster of Western Reserve University yesterday described the work of the painter William Hogarth, and compared his attitude to society with that of Addison and Steele. In this first of three exchange lectures, Mr. Foster said, "Hogarth started low, rose to a position of affluence and respect, but did not achieve great recognition as a painter." He then told of Hogarth's apprenticeship as an engraver which he later used well by engraving copies of his better-known pictures. Because he always painted a moral into his pictures he was called "The Moral Hogarth" and from his pictures can be obtained a good background for the society and art of the time.

Prof. Foster showed a series of slides of Hogarth's most famous picture-series "The Rake's Progress." Here the lecturer pointed out the artist's great scope of observation, minuteness of detail, symbolism, humour and irony, and his mastery of caricature.

Addison and Steel looked at the rake as a young man sowing a few wild oats but Hogarth, from a more middle-class point of view, regarded him with some alarm.

Mr. Foster concluded, "For an appraisal it is necessary to know the social level and point of view of either author or painter."

Blatz to Lecture For Institute

The lecture to be given in Convocation Hall on Saturday, Nov. 28, at 8:15 p.m., before the Royal Canadian Institute is "Population Movements in War-Time England," by W. E. Blatz, M.A., M.B., Ph.D., Professor of Child Psychology and Director of the Institute of Child Study, University of Toronto, formerly the St. George's School of Child Study.

Dr. Blatz has just recently returned from England where he was appointed Director of Garrison Land Nursery Training Centre in Birmingham. While in England he also held the position of lecturer at the Nursery School Association Summer School in Oxford.

Dr. Blatz will discuss his experiences during his visit to England and the problems of evacuation.

STUDENTS DONATE BLOOD AS PART OF WAR EFFORT

Winnipeg, Man., Nov. 25—(CUP)—The War Services Committee at the University of Manitoba held an entertainment to sponsor blood donors for the Red Cross. Cards were distributed which the men were requested to fill in.

Students are reported to be wholeheartedly behind the drive and are considering it a part of their war effort.

Resolutions Of Arts Council

The attention of all students in the Faculty of Arts is drawn to the following announcement of resolutions adopted by the Council of that Faculty at a special Meeting held on Monday, No. 23, 1942:

Sub-section (3) of section 17 of the revised National War Services Regulations reads in part as follows:

"Any physically fit student who

(c) fails to pass any term or yearly academic examination required by his university, college or school, unless such failure, in the opinion of the university, college or school authorities and the District Office Commanding, is due to circumstances beyond the control of such student, and that he should be permitted to continue his course of studies.

shall be called out forthwith under these regulations."

In accordance with this regulation, the Council of the Faculty of Arts at its meeting on November 23rd, 1942, adopted the following resolutions respecting

I Students in Honour Courses

That each honour graduating department be asked to submit to the Council, not later than the February meeting, the names of those students of all four years whose work during the Fall Term has been found to be unsatisfactory, together with a statement of the procedure followed in reaching its decisions.

II Students in the Pass and General Courses

That each department providing instruction to students in the Pass and General Courses be asked to submit to the Council, not later than the February meeting, the names of any students of all years in those courses whose work during the Fall Term has been found to be unsatisfactory, together with a statement of the procedure followed in reaching its decisions;

That the reports of the departments be forwarded to the University Registrar to be collated and submitted to the Council at the February meeting by the Revising Committee and the General Course Committee respectively.

S.P.S. Increases Delegates To Student-Staff Council As Intense Interest Shown

All Faculties and Colleges Are Choosing Representatives to Voice Various Opinions in Conference

DEADLINE IS TODAY

Due to the intense interest shown by the Engineers in the Student-Staff Council, the S.P.S. representation has been increased from five to 12, Tom Nixon, chairman of the Council, announced last night. The increase gives School the largest representation of any faculty on the Council.

Throughout the campus Faculties and Colleges were selecting their delegates for the Council. The nine University College members will be appointed when nominations close today. Twenty-four candidates for the eight Victoria College positions have been received, and the V.C.U. will appoint the delegates from this list.

The five medical representatives were appointed by the Medical Society, as students were too preoccupied with examinations to hold an election. Trinity and Pharmary have elected three delegates and two have been appointed in Dentistry. Wycliffe elected their single representative yesterday.

Other faculties were either preparing for early elections or had not yet made results available.

ARMED FORCES EXHIBIT VISITORS' DAY

Special arrangements have been made for the women in the University to see the Canadian Armed Forces Art Exhibition in the art gallery of Hart House on Friday, Nov. 27 next from 1:30 to 5:30 p.m. Enter by south-west door.

Fraternities Aid Book Drive

In addition to a concerted drive in all faculties and residences, various outside student organizations are co-operating with the present "Book Harvest." At the usual meeting at Newman Club this coming Sunday only those with books to contribute will be admitted. The Student Labour Club has appointed a special committee to organize a means of gathering books and the Campus Co-Op Residence is taking part in the Drive.

Fraternities — the Delta Chi, Delta Tau, Cappa Rho Tau, Nu Sigma Nu, and Delta Upsilon—have agreed to co-operate with the "harvest." The committee broadcast a special plea for all fraternities and outside student organizations to take part in this event.

The Pan Hellenic Association during their meeting on Wednesday will discuss ways in which the sororities may contribute to the drive.

Most of the residences have not, as yet, reported actual collections under way, but councils have been formed in all the residences and preparations will soon be completed.

NEWSFRONTS

Moscow—In a swift sweep towards the Don River elbow west of Stalingrad, the Red Army seized more railway points and captured 12,000 more Nazi prisoners.

London — The British 1st Army in Northern Africa has battered down fierce German resistance and driven the Nazis from the strong point of Mejezel Bab, on the railway thirty miles southwest of Tunis.

London—General Charles de Gaulle, leader of the Fighting French, is expected to make a "strong personal appeal" to the United States to change Darlan's position from civil administrator in French North Africa.

CO-OP HEARS OF CHINA FROM RETURNED DOCTOR

Rev. Dr. Stanton Lautenschlager, missionary returned from China, addressed a meeting at the Campus Co-operative Residence last night, on the subject of co-operatives and education in wartime China, stressing the growth of small industrial co-operatives carried on by war refugees throughout Western China.

"We should strive for more international equity and understanding," Dr. Lautenschlager said.

SOCIOLOGY CLUB DISCUSSES RACIAL DISCRIMINATION

"Racial discrimination is an attitude that prevents a minority group from participating fully in the social, economic and cultural life of the national majority." This was one of the conclusion reached by a discussion group of the Sociology Club, held last night in Wymilwood.

The position of the racial group of Negroes in America was particularly discussed. It was pointed out that racial prejudices nearly always arise from economic causes and the desire to exploit the minority race group.

Lecturer Says U.S. Universities Admire Canadian Wartime System

By Rex Wilson

The Canadian system of dealing with the universities in wartime is much admired in educational circles in the United States, Professor Finley Foster, exchange lecturer from Western Reserve University, Cleveland, told The Varsity in an interview yesterday.

"The Canadian system has been used as an example in trying to find a solution to the problem there," he continued.

When asked what the exact situation in American colleges was now he was only able to say that the situation was as yet cloudy. It is not yet known whether 18 and 19-year-olds will be removed from the colleges as a body, or whether draft numbers will be assigned the men in this age group and certain ones only will be selected for military service. In any case the demands of the armed forces will require removal of a large number of these men from the campuses of the nations and the smaller colleges are seriously faced with the possibility of having to close their doors.

Meanwhile, he said, representatives of the American colleges have presented the government with a four-semester plan which will take in two-years' general college work in one year and three months. This course would be open to young men of the armed forces who would be selected by the services. The fate of this plan is not yet known.

Acceleration of all courses is now the order at Western Reserve, Mr. Foster explained. The plan, which is compulsory for all men attending college under any of the various enlisted reserve programs—this includes half the male enrolment—and optional for all other students, makes it possible to complete a four year Arts course in two years and nine months. This is accomplished by holding a summer session, he explained, thus providing an extra 16-week semester. The year then is made up of three 16-week semesters and the only breaks are two weeks at Christmas and two other one-week periods during the year.

"This is really no way to get an education, but it is the best that can be done under the circumstances," Mr. Foster commented. "It will not continue after the war, although for a time there were some people who hailed it as the new 'streamlined' learning."

The problem of meeting fees has been solved in various ways. Mr. Foster explained that, Cleveland being a highly industrialized city, there were plenty of jobs to be had in war plants there and many of the college boys were working as much as seven or eight hours a day outside of college.

"This again," he pointed out, "is a poor way to obtain an education, but the boys seem to get along that way, although the occasional one cracks up."

No Statement

The Board of Governors met in regular fortnightly session yesterday, and during their three-hour deliberations considered the resolutions forwarded by the Senate and the Students' Administrative Council urging reconsideration of the recent decision to debar 18 "friendly aliens" from this University.

Following the meeting, Board members had little to say to the press except that a special meeting had been set for Monday to consider the matter.

Thus, those of us who have maintained that to admit these aliens to our halls was the just decision may feel hopeful that they finally will be admitted. At least the Board has not given a flat refusal to consider the various objections raised. On the meantime, we must wait just a little longer for the denouement.

Education---Jap Brand

During the past few weeks we have become aware of the atrocities committed on the students and the universities of Czechoslovakia; we know that Hitler has meted out much the same treatment to the educational centres of the other conquered nations. We also know that the Japs have desecrated the ancient homes of Chinese learning.

Last week the Inter-Allied Information Committee issued a pamphlet, Axis Oppression of Education, describing the Axis policy of suppression of all non-Axis education which has come under its control. The description of the complete Japanese policy is of great interest since it is not so widely known as that of Hitler.

The pamphlet says in part: "The Tsing Hua University in Peiping . . . is used by the Japanese mainly as a hospital for their wounded soldiers. The auditorium . . . is being used as a meeting place for the troops. . . . The eastern half of the biological laboratory is a stable, while the classroom attached to it is a bar. . . . The new southern residential quarters have become Japanese brothels."

The Japanese advocate a "uniform system of education for Japan, Korea, Manchukuo and North China" and "Japanese as the language of East Asia."

The outrages against education have been worst in China: of 108 Chinese colleges, 14 were razed, 15 damaged by bombs, 25 forced to close. Others are still being bombed. Education in Occupied China is now organized under local bureaus of education with a Japanese "adviser." All instruction is in Japanese and is by Japanese instructors responsible for the "thought and morals" of their pupils, i.e., spies.

Typical of the new policy is the subject of a recent essay contest: "Why we should overthrow Chiang-Kai-shek."

The students who have escaped to free western China must live off the land and the help which various benevolent organizations give them. Chief of these organizations is International Student Service, which we will have a chance to support when it holds its sale of University and College ribbons on December 9 as part of the War Services Campaign. By contributing to this cause we can do our bit toward our fellow students who are not so fortunately situated as we are.

Correspondence

Editor,
The Varsity.

Dear Mr. Editor:

We, Laval students, have read with great pleasure your editorial of Ooctober 21, entitled "Quebec is Still in Canada." Since many fellow Canadians today fail to understand, or even to consider, the Quebec point of view in this war, we cannot but be glad of the kind attention given to us by as distinguished a newspaper as The Varsity.

It is obvious to anyone reading your interesting column that you are sincere when writing about us and your whole attitude is not of sympathy; you took the trouble of translating our article for the benefit of your fellow students, who do not have the advantage of being bilingual. All that we appreciate very much. Some Canadians find it easy to say that Quebec is not doing its part, and to call us slackers and even fifth columnists. But when it comes to help us, by encouraging us, by meeting us halfway, by giving praise when praise is due, you do not see them.

French Canadians cannot be expected to have all the same feelings as their fellow countrymen toward this war, its purpose, and the post-war period; England, to them, does not mean the mother country; and the British Empire cannot appeal to them exactly as it appeals to the English. Above all, we are Canadians; we are the oldest Canadians; nobody is more Canadian than we are. When we think of this fight for freedom we think in terms of Canada, not in terms of England, or France, or British Empire. This soil which our fathers have inhabited for many centuries, we still defend to the utmost limit. We have given many proofs of our patriotism, among others, lately, by our answer to the Dominion Labour Department and the Victory Loans.

No one can sincerely say that French Canada is isolationist. Canada is in this fight to the finish and we will never stop fighting for Canada. But, if we have different reasons for fighting this war, we can also have different means of fighting. French Canada is opposed to conscription for overseas service. Because we do not have to be forced to defend our country, fighting for liberty we will do it by our own free will. Because French Canada, having judged the circumstances and thought it over carefully, firmly believes that such conscription would do more harm than good to our national war effort and consequently is not necessary, even if it should please some colonial-minded politicians, who still consider Canada as a colony of England, and who, ignoring the 1931 Statutes of Westminster which makes Canada a free Dominion, feel that our country is not free to act differently from Britain in this war.

Our allies are asking us a balanced war effort. They need men, they need equipment and war materials, they need food. We have not been invaded or bombed yet: so our farmers and factory workers can get those supplies for other countries which have not had that chance. Manpower alone cannot win the war; war plants and farms are in great need of men too. Only this summer the Arvida aluminum plants asked for 5,000 workers and the farmers just lately for the same number. Are we going to say to these valiant fighters on our home front that they are not important? An army fights on its stomach and with equipment. We cannot logically give all our attention to manpower and neglect war material and food without reducing the efficiency of our national war effort. Any able man who is not in the army is probably working on the home front. Any young man naturally wants to fight for his country: it is hard enough as it is today to keep some of them on farms and in factories. French Canada wants the best war effort Canada can give and is sincere, like Australia, like South Africa, like all the other Dominions, when there is no conscription. Its opposition to conscription is logical and comes from reason, not from feelings. That reason is sound, because it considers Canada first. Is it unpatriotic to put the defence of our country above all? We are recommending what we think are the best means of defending this country of ours, which we love so much, and publicity in favour of conscription by the much, and publicity in favour of conscription by the government would not change our minds, fully convinced of its unnecessariness.

I hope that these line will help you to know us better since your article showed your eagerness to do so and your sympathy. We, too, would like to know more about you. We have read with great interest about the splendid reception which you gave to the Laval Commerce students, visiting your campus, in your Varsity of October 29. We are all looking forward to the chance of showing you some of the old French Canadian hospitality. If relations between our two universities have not always been as close as they should there is nothing wrong that such visits cannot cure. A better knowledge of the other fellow always brings better understanding. The hope for that spirit of good will and "bon entente" so essential for the post-war reconstruction, lies in the Universities: for out of these institutions of learning come the intellectual classes to whom the rest of our population looks up for leadership. being a university student is a great privilege in our troubled days our fellow countrymen of the same age have to serve in the armed services or the war factories beeause their parents cannot afford such a course. That is why our responsibility is greater than ever; we have to live up to the faith which our government is putting in us. I am sure that closer relations would help us both, in view of our future duties in society.

With my very best regards to you and to your readers.

Andre Gagnon, Law '43,
Secretary of Inter-University Relations,
Exchange Editor,
"Le Carabin."

Mr. Gagnon's letter has brought back the most pleasant memories of the visit to this campus of the 50 Lavol student-harvesters on their way back to Quebec City a mouth ago. The inter-university friendship and understanding fostered on that occasion and by the whole horvest excursion does much to bring about a spirit of unity which is often sadly lacking between the sections of this country. While not mentioned in this letter we would like to take this opportunity to thank Roland Mercier, leader of the Laval harvesters, for his tribute to us and to our President in his speech on the C.B.C. progrom "Cauadian Roundup" last Monday, on which Jim McCardle of St. Michael's also spoke. Such occasions help to cement the friendship between our two Universities.

While we appreciate the exposition of the French Canadian student's attitude to the war ond especiolly to conscription as set forth in this letter, we cannot really understaud it. From Mr. Gagnou's remarks we connot help but feel that perhops the students ore basing their arguments on folse premises.

In the first ploce there are many, mony others in Canoda besides the French Conodians who think, feel and act as Conadians and not os Englishmen or Frenchmen or Irishmen or whatever nationality. The 1931 Statutes of Westminster, which Mr. Gagnon points out makes us "a free Dominion" came as a result of almost a generation of increasing feeling across Canada that we should have more freedom. They did not come as a sudden bolt out of the blue. The great majority of Canadians today think as Canadions, much to the benefit of our country.

We also cannot quite understond our correspondent's reasons why conscription will not help our war effort. We have read with pride, as Canadians, of the heroic exploits of French Canadian regiments, especially Les Fusiliers de Montreal at Dieppe, who hove certainly proved that the French Canadian can be a great soldier. The thought of being conscripted to fight, perhaps to die, for one's country is distasteful, but in such times as the present emergency action is a better way of showing one's patriotism than words, which are at the best times suspected by one's hearers. The need for fighters on the home front is undeniably great, but the women of Canada and those unsuited for some reason for active fighting are turning to in order to make up for the shortage of labour. It seems unfair for those who are doing the distasteful job of fighting

Hey Chief---I Quit!

At the Press, late one night, with the moon shining bright,
I was dozing with great decorum,
When I saw our poor feline make an unswerving beeline,
For the Catitor's sanctum sanctorum.
There he poured out his troubles (which had recently doubled)
As night-eds against him had sinned;
And he spoke with a wail of the kink in his tale
And the way that his whiskers had thinned.
Then he heaved a great sigh, and a tear dimmed his eye,
As he spoke of his piteous plight:
For whene'er he'd emoted, he was always misquoted—
Night after night after night.
The further impudence of night-editing students
He could not endure any more,
So, without hesitation, here was his resignation—
And with that he strode out of the door.
A magnificent wave of his tail then he gave,
And in tones both determined and clear,
Said he: "Goodbye forever—though your features be clever,
Ne'er again will the Champus appear!

"Need Life Insurance—
WHO - ME?"

The younger you are when you take out your first life insurance policy, the lower your premium will be.

So, you should start thinking about your life insurance when you get your first salary cheque.

Will you need insurance? Yes—unless you intend to live like a hermit without human contacts and responsibilities. One day you may have a home of your own to keep, a family to provide for. One day you may need security for a business loan; and, some distant day, you will certainly need money for your own retirement.

There are Mutual Life policies that can do all these things. When the time comes for you to buy life insurance, see a Mutual Life representative. He will help you to plan the right kind and amount of insurance protection to suit your special needs.

Did you know Santa Claus is in town? Did you know there are only 24 more shopping days 'till Christmas? Did you know only 33 games remain to be played before the great day arrives when we begin our volleyball finals? And someone just shouted from the back room that quote—what's volleyball go to do with Christmas—unquote, and we hollered right back, quick like a bunny, that quote—it's got as much as Christmas has to do with volleyball, anyway—unquote. So there. . . .

For up the stairs on the track-enclosed gym floor for a number of weeks now one could retreat at the oddest hours to enjoy a few minutes of spectatoring. And no usual spectatoring was this, for there before one's very eyes were students who had foregone lunch, supper or perhaps even sacrificed as much as a lecture. And there they were jumping up and down, making lunges, however futile, at an undersized basketball. And the cries of the contestants—such unintelligibility! "Joe's set-up — I'll spike." How un-understandable, for as far as we could see there was nothing to set up and there was nothing to spike nothing—for we understand the stuff isn't allowed to perfume the portals of Hart House "the good."

And just think, junior, almost 200 games—200—have been battled to their gory end and you didn't know about them. Tut, tut, haven't you wondered what Meds XIV 15-8-15 — St. Mike's G 6-15-8 meant in the Sport In Short column each day? Now that there are only 33 more to be played we might as well attempt to unscatter the chatter. In short, class, a group of embryo or otherwise doctors in their 14th year — they flunked second — sewed themselves into a team of which they are fourth in their year. If the scorer wasn't wrong, the aforementioned medicos edged out a group of galloping Gaels three games to two. The 15-18-15, etc., in case you're interested and in case you haven't given up the job of decoding this maze, are the scores of the three games—savvy, laddy?

And just think, over 300 athletes, or reasonable facsimiles, are reaching the end of a long grind hoping against hope they may make the playoffs to bring fame and honour (and no P.T. credits) to themselves, their teams and their Alma Mater. But the twelve leagues have been usurped by the age-long rivals—Meds and School—for each have practically cinched four group championships. The others are split up among Trinity, Vic, Wycliffe, and even Dents. And another morsel of matter—these pacing teams have, with few exceptions, cinched their groups via the no-loss method. For the group leaders and probable group winners keep on sledding:

1. Sr. S.P.S.

4. S.P.S. IV and St. Mike's B tied

With Mr. Gagnon's wish that the Universities of the Dominion get to know each other better we are agree completely. That they understond each other is pretty well granted, but, as our correspondent points out "A better knowledge of the other fellow always brings better understanding." Perhaps we have not rightly understood Mr. Gagnon's stand. We sincerely hope we have. In any case we are grateful for his letter.—EDITOR.

EDITOR'S NOTE: We don't know how we did it—and we didn't know much about it—so here is one of our grods to describe it—BOWLING.

By Kay Brydon

With so much talk and reports about basketball, I'm sure a few of you fair co-eds will listen to a word about bowling. You would enjoy a few good "frames" of it—so come on out—now is the time to show your prowess. Little effort has to be exterted, so even the most timid enthusiast can try it.

Even you beginners and freshettes have a marvelous opportunity to show your College Spirit forth to all your friends. All that is neded is, of course, a free afternoon. (If you could find one somewhere and remember to bring along your little card, procured from your College Rep., you would make Barbara Rowe of St. Hilda's very happy indeed.)

The fun usually begins when you manage to knock down all pins except the "four"—which has to disappear from its original position before you can count. Some of you more experienced bowlers are more fortunate than those who are learning this fine art. But practice makes perfect. With some little luck, you can knock over all the pins with one ball. This is a strike.

Whatever you score on your next two balls of the next "frame" is added to the fifteen already scored by the strike. On the other hand, when all the pins are knocked down with two balls, it is a "spare" and the score of the first ball of the next "frame" is added to your previous score.

I hope that this account will encourage a few more of your fair co-eds to go to the Midtown Bowling Alley any afternoon from two until five o'clock—except on Saturdays—and find out more about the game for yourselves.

ART & MUSIC Drama

Less Wild and Woolley

U.C. Players' Guild

Audiences have by now so firmly identified the title role of The Man Who Come to Dinner with Monty Woolley that it is nearly impossible to sell them anyone else. Nevertheless, last night's premiere of the U.C. Players' Guild production was an astonishing success.

Murray Davis as the bearded invalid celebrity softened the inevitable comparisons with Mr. Woolley by approaching the part in a completely different way. The second act was well under way before an audience with preconceived notions accepted his sleek satire and fine restraint in place of the tempestuous bellowings they expected, but when they finally surrendered it was with vociferous applause. When Murray did raise his voice it was by contrast splendidly effective, and some longer passages, especially the finale of Act II, were superb.

Dominate as he would, however, the central figure could not prevent his secretary, played by Meg McLaughlin, from stealing the show. It is difficult to imagine how her performance could have been improved. Veronica Nesbit as the willowy lunatic with a past and Mel Goldberg as the bumptious Doctor were also particularly fine.

We are fully of the opinion (to quote the script) that Mr. Whiteside is the damnedest person we have ever seen. We will go farther. We feel sorry for anyone who fails to see him.

HUGH KENNER.

Graceful

Lubka Kolessa

Lubka Kolessa gave a Haydn-Mozart recital, as her third in this series, in the Conservatory Concert Hall yesterday. Since it was a program of Haydn and Mozart, it may best be described as light and graceful.

Mme. Kolessa opened her recital with the well-known and haunting Haydn Sonata in D Major. This sonata is typical of Haydn at his lightest and most gracious, for the Largo movement is not long enough to upset his usual style, or the gaiety of the two allegro movements. Mme. Kolessa treated the work with fitting nonchalance, for Haydn does not need obvious interpretation to bring forth his meaning.

The rest of the program was devoted to the works of Mozart. The Romance in A flot Major she treated delicately, as she did the Sonata in C Major, where she brought out every shade of expression. Mozart seems always to be more at east in slow movements, as in the andante of this sonata, than Haydn.

The recital concluded with a series of rather ingenious Mozart Vorlations (in G Major) over a theme by Gluck.

Haydn and Mozart piano compositions are always intimate, drawing-room things, but pleasant to listen to. Mme Kolessa seems to have just the right attitude toward them. She doesn't take them too seriously. It is a pity that her recent cold prevented this recital from quite equalling the two previous ones in technical perfection.

Junior School Defeats Senior School To Secure Intramural Swim Title

Junior School natators repeated Tuesday's exhibition in the Hart House Splash room last night by vanquishing their big brothers 22-11 to cop the Intramural Swim League title. The Juniors last fall took the championship due to some torrid tankwork of Johnny Northwood but moving up to the Seniors this year the freshmen were able to edge his team despite two personal victories.

The Juniors started off at a fast clip and in 1:42.5 time Walt Sharpe, Bruce Gilbert and Fred Sansom combined to win the 150 medley relay.

Johnny Northwood, who is probably the best back and breast artist on or near this campus, took first honours in 33.8 time in the 50 yard backstroke. The Juniors nabbed second and third spots as Dave Whittingham and Walt Sharpe splashed home.

The Seniors' point-winner, Johnny Northwood, punched home another victory in the breast, making it in 32.5. Bruce Gilbert, who is regarded second only to Northwood in the whole University, nabbed second spot and Ken Sharpe made a third for the Juniors.

At this point the Juniors were up one point, the count being 11 to 10. And the free style was as close a contest as you would want to see, but after deliberation the Juniors were given the nod. Fred Sansom and Palm Locklart were awarded top two spots and Bill Moffat was marked down for third place for the Seniors. Time for Freddy Sansom was clocked at 25.8.

The match and championship safely in the bag, the Juniors coasted to a victory in the 200 free style relay in 1:49.1. Lockhart, Ferrier, Martin and Sansom brought home the extra points to make the score for the match 22-11 and for the whole finals 44-22.

Need More Publicity In Drive Say Students

Desire to aid the International Students' Services and the Book Harvests through a more concerted University campaign was expressed by students yesterday in a round-campus survey.

It was generally felt that the I.S.S. drive to provide educational facilities for prisoners of war, and the drive to provide reading material for the men in the armed forces lacked sufficient publicity.

"Ballyhoo poured on thick would not be out of order," said Charles Winn, I Arts. "Since both causes are worthy ones, it would be effective to open students' eyes by means of posters, pamphlets, blackboard notices and by word of mouth."

A University tag day was recommended by Michael Fran, I Law, who suggested that girls in residence organize as taggers. "If citizens are allowed to inveigle us into buying tags every Saturday morning, I don't see why we shouldn't turn the tables on them by inaugurating our own day," he commented.

Lillian Rosen, I Arts, suggested that each faculty organization, coupled with fraternities and sororities, ought to select a representative for both campaigns.

"A special day set aside for collecting magazines and books," was urged by Jean Nathanson, II Sociology, while Sidney Weidman, I Law, recommended "that lecturers do their bit by reminding students after each lecture to bring books."

Ross Moores, II S.P.S., suggested that several boxes be placed in prominent positions at each faculty, each box advertising the need for books.

1. BATTALION TRAINING — SATURDAY 5 DECEMBER 42

No individual Company Training will be carried out on Saturday 5 Dec. 42.

Companies will parade on their areas on the North Campus at 1330 hours. Rolls will be called.

The Battalion will form up in mass at 1355 hrs. and will move off to Convocation Hall for special lectures.

2. BOOTS—ISSUE OF

A store of all sizes of boots except 8½ and 10 are available at Q.M. Stores for members to whom boots have not been issued.

Those concerned should draw boots from Q.M. Stores immediately.

3. BOOTS—REPAIR OF

Strict instructions have been received from the District Ordnance Officer regarding the repair of boots. It is imperative that boots be sent to the District Ordnance Officer for repair, before the heel plate has been worn to the leather and immediately the outer leather of the sole has been worn through.

Company Commanders will, therefore, conduct inspections of boots within their companies every two weeks and will instruct members who are in need of boot repairs to proceed as follows:

Boots needing repairs are to be turned into Quartermaster Stores by 1500 hours Mondays.

It is anticipated that repaired boots will be available to members concerned about 10 days from the time of turning them into Q.M. Stores.

4. RESPIRATORS—ANTI-GAS

Members who were issued with respirators anti-gas during the refresher or P.O.M. courses at the commencement of the training season will return them immediately to the Assistant Adjutant at Contingent Headquarters.

Forum Club Functions To Develop Expression

"In these days, more than ever before, it is necessary for men to think quickly and express themselves clearly and developing these qualities is precisely the function of the University Forum Club," said Jim Lillico, president of the club, yesterday. By mutual criticism of each other's speeches, whether prepared or impromptu, in small, informal meetings, the members are able to develop their own ability and confidence in public speaking and enable the others to do the same.

Membership is open to all male students of the University. The opening meeting will be held Saturday, Nov. 28 at 11:00 a.m. in Room 19 of University College. All members and prospective members are invited to attend. Freshmen are particularly welcome.

FORESTRY SCHOLARSHIP WON BY K. W. HEARNDEN

Last night, at the Foresters' Club meeting in the Music Room, Hart House, the Forestry Memorial Scholarship was awarded to K. W. Hearnden. The presentation was made by Dr. C. D. Howe, Dean Emeritus of the Faculty of Forestry.

Hearnden is the first man to receive this scholarship which was founded last year in honour of former members of the staff and in memory of graduates and undergraduates who have lost their lives in war activities or in civilian pursuits.

The scholarship of $250 has been made up of contributions by the Alumni of the Faculty of Forestry, other people interested in forestry, as well as a large yearly contribution by an anonymous donor.

McGill Club Protests Call Of J. T. Culliton

Political Economy Club Circulates Petitions Seeking Principal James' Intercession in Drafting of Professor

LED HARVEST EXPEDITION

Montreal, Nov. 29—(CUP)—McGill students are protesting the recently-announced drafting of Prof. John T. Culliton of the Department of Economics.

Prof. Culliton, who was in charge of the McGill contingent of emergency harvesters who travelled to Saskatchewan last month, received his army draft call last week.

When students learned of it at a meeting of the Political Economy Club Thursday night they drafted a petition to Dr. Cyril James, President of McGill University, asking that the University take action to have the call deferred.

Prof. Culliton has been a member of the staff in economics for some years. One of his colleagues told The McGill Daily that "although he is interested in continuing his work at the University, he is not averse to accepting the draft call, if such action is deemed in the best interests of the nation."

Text of the student petition, drafted by the executive of the Political Economy Club, and now being circulated, follows:

An Open Letter to Dr. F. Cyril James:

"Whereas we are given to understand that Professor J. T. Culliton of the

Artsmen Draft Not Wise Move Claims Dr. Trueman

Sackville, N.B., Nov. 29—(CUP)—Dr. George J. Trueman, president of Mount Allison University, said in an interview today that he did not consider "the drafting of students taking the arts courses in colleges a wise procedure."

Referring to a prediction of L. Austin Wright, assistant-director of National Selective Service, that able-bodied men might be restricted to University courses which would fit them to be technical officers in the armed forces or key specialists in war industries, Dr. Trueman said, "students maintaining their high standard in their arts courses should receive the same consideration as students taking scientific and technical courses."

Such consideration should be given "at least until the manpower needs of the country are more acute. Where are we going to find our teachers, our preachers and community leaders if we withdraw the students taking arts courses?"

Dr. Trueman said: "There is a prevailing belief that colleges and universities are harbouring youths who seek to avoid service in the armed forces under the cloak of the humanities and cultural courses."

Staff-Student Conference Delegates Announced

The names of all delegates to the forthcoming Student-Staff Conference as known to date were announced by the Credentials Sub-Committee of the Convening Committee of the Conference yesterday and are printed below.

Names of delegates have not yet been received from: the School of Graduate Studies, the Faculty of Pharmacy, the College of Education, Wycliffe College, the Faculty of Household Science, Emmanuel College, the School of Social Work, the School of Law.

A general outline of the program of the conference is expected to be announced tomorrow. All delegates will receive copies of that and of any further information as announced.

Council Ousts Fergus Cronin Following Editorial Defending Life Magazine Article on French Canada

ATTACKED VILLENEUVE

Montreal, Nov. 29—(CUP)—Resignation of the editorial board of The Georgian—official organ of the Students' Council of Sir George Williams College—followed the suspension last week of Fergus Cronin, Editor-in-Chief of the paper.

Cronin was suspended following appearance of the Nov. 17 issue of The Georgian of a front-page editorial dealing with French Canada. The editorial supported the views of an article on the people of Quebec appearing in a recent issue of Life Magazine and attacked those who opposed the views expressed in the article.

Among those attacked as doing "a lot of denying but no disproving," were His Eminence, Cardinal Villeneuve and provincial Premier Adelard Godbout. Cronin also attacked Le Carabin—official student publication of Laval University—for suggesting that Life's story did not present a fair picture of Quebec.

Jean Somerville, resigning Managing Editor, said tonight that the editorial board had resigned "when refused speaking right."

She added that the suggestion that a general student plebiscite on the issue be held had been refused by the Council and claimed that student opinion supported Cronin.

Nov. 18, Doug Dewar, President of the Student's Undergraduate Society of the Day Division, and Ray Brooks, President of the Evening Faculty Students' Society, after consulting faculty members, confiscated all copies of The Georgian outstanding, and, at an emergency meeting of the Students' Council,

Committee Says Book Assembly Up to Faculties

It has been decided at a meeting of the Students' Administrative Council joint committee in charge of War Services Day, that the method of assembling all of the books collected by the various faculties and organizations shall be left in the hands of the faculties and organizations.

There will be a silo on the front campus during the International Students' Service campaign, which, in conjunction with the Book Harvest, will be on the day of Dec. 9. The faculties and organizations may bring their book contributions to this silo in any manner they desire.

"It is to be hoped that the groups will display some originality and spirit—parades and the like—when they go make their contributions," stated Walter Lyons, committee member.

Dr. W. E. Blatz R.C.I. Lecturer

"The surest way of building a safe democracy is to give every child an equal share of the good things of his country," stated Dr. W. E. Blatz, of the Institute of Child Study, in his address to the Royal Canadian Institute at Convocation Hall Saturday night.

"There must be some change in our economic system after this war," he stated. "Through a blind worship of the family unit we have permitted a kind of social organization that makes it impossible for children to grow up with an equal chance. Juvenile delinquency is the direct result of child training, and yet we continue to build reform schools but not places for children to play."

The need for nursery schools in England during the present crises has revolutionized the people's concept of child needs. The Canadian school, founded in the slums of Birmingham, has been largely influential in the growing feeling that something must come out of this war for the benefit of these children. So far, Dr. Blatz stated, they have not suffered too much

2,000 "Guinea Pigs" Test Vaccine at Cornell

Ithica, N.Y., Nov. 29—Testing of a new type of influenza vaccine of "great promise" on 2,000 Cornell University students and teachers volunteering as "guinea pigs" began recently.

The experimental vaccinations will be continued for two weeks. Two types are being used. One is described as "a new preparation of great promise," and the other as a "control."

Both have been used experimentally before but among small groups. The large-scale experiment is designed to test not only efficacy but also possible reaction variances.

Moscow — Russian armies reported staging two new offensives, one west of Moscow toward Latvia, one through a new German defense line on the east bank of the Don River.

Boston, Mass—Stanley F. Tomaszwski, 16-year-old high-chool student, admitted accidently starting the "flash fire" in Boston's Cocoanut Grove which snuffed out 431 lives last Saturday night.

STUDENTS MEET FOREIGN-BORN AT U. SETTLEMENT HOUSE

Overlooking the rear of the Art Gallery is an establishment known as the University Settlement House. Here the University students meet the foreign-born population.

Mrs. Crowther, the Head of the Settlement, said in speaking of the importance of students meeting the foreign-born residents, "The only way to attach these people to Canada, is for them to be shown interest by Canadians, otherwise through loneliness and ignorance of Canadian life, they are open to propaganda from various sources."

The need for volunteers and especially trained volunteers, has increased since the war began. Girl students who have taken the Recreational Leadership Course and the Day Nurseries Course, are especially wanted.

Men undergraduates are needed too, as often the fathers and older brothers of young boys are overseas or working long shifts. These youngsters are not given sufficient direction and need to feel that there is someone who takes an understanding interest in them.

There is a swimming club for boys on Tuesdays from 5 to 6, and as about 30 boys belong, a fair amount of supervision is required.

Girls are needed to help with the pre-school children on Wednesday and Friday mornings. Mrs. Crowther said volunteers who come every week and really get to know a group of children are of more help than those who come only every two or three weeks.

Volunteers with a special interest in theatre groups, games and crafts, are welcomed. On Wednesdays about a hundred children use the Settlement, so an almost infinite number of volunteers can be kept busy.

There are two evening clubs of special interest to students. On Monday from 8:30 to 10:30 is the Jewish Mothers' Club, and on Wednesday The International Men's and Women's Club. These meetings take the form of parties with dancing and games. "The new Canadians get valuable contacts at these affairs and learn how we do things by watching us, thus acquiring a sense of security in manners and habits," said Mrs. Crowther, "and it helps them to overcome the loneliness and strangeness that are natural for newcomers."

Nurse Accidentally Shot at Queen's; Attending Sadie Hawkin's Dance

22-Calibre Revolver Worn with Costume Accidentally Discharged by Student, Wounds Nurse in the Shoulder

HAS RECOVERED

Kingston, Ont., Nov. 29—(CUP)—Betty Stewart, a 21-year-old nurse, returned to her duties today after recovering from a slight shoulder wound received from a .22-calibre revolver during a Sadie Hawkins dance at Queen's University Friday night.

Taken from Grant Hall to the Hotel Dieu Hospital, she quickly recovered and was able to resume her nursing duties. The police, after investigation, decided to lay no charges, stating the case to be an accident.

Police summoned to Grant Hall took possession of the revolver from which the shot was said to have been fired, and questioned three students, obtaining signed statements of their version of how the incident took place.

It is believed that the revolver formed part of a mountaineer costume worn by a student to the Sadie Hawkins dance, and was left lying on the floor. Another student is said to have picked it up, apparently not realizing it was loaded, and fired the shot that injured Miss Stewart.

Names of the students involved and reason why the revolver was loaded were not revealed by police or University authorities.

Exchange Lecture Given by Foster

Those who regard the Victorian period as one of dull placidity were charged with failure to appreciate all the cross currents of the age by Professor Finley Foster, special exchange lecturer in English from Western Reserve University, Cleveland, Ohio, in a lecture on the Pre-Raphaelites in University College on Friday morning.

A trained artist as well as an English professor, Mr. Foster confined himself mainly to discussing the Pre-Raphaelites in the field of art supplying a background for regular University English courses. This lecture was illustrated by coloured slides from his own collection and included examples of the work of Dante Gabriel Rosetti, John Everett Millais, and Holman Hunt. He concluded with a few remarks on the work of William Morris in the fields of interior decorating and typography.

The intention of the pre-Raphaelites was described by Mr. Foster as that of going back to the spirit of the painters who preceded Raphael. They sought to revive the spirit of their painting, but not the technique. This included a striving after versatility, freshness of vision, minute detail, exactness of definition and the portrayal of a noble subject. The last was found in the middle ages and in Biblical subjects.

Final Round?

Today will witness another step in the long-drawn-out deliberations on the question of admitting the 18 "friendly aliens" to the University of Toronto, when the Board of Governors convenes in Simcoe Hall to consider resolutions recently forwarded by the Senate and the S.A.C.

As we said Thursday, when we prematurely hoped that the issue might be settled then, we are halting publication of correspondence on the matter, although today we are bringing our "Press Comment" up to date, because we believe some of the recent remarks in other papers will prove of interest to our readers.

We await the final decision with keen interest; but we believe that whichever way the verdict goes, The Varsity and its readers have done all they can to reverse the original banning.

Broad-Minded Indeed

We are constantly fascinated by the editorial ease with which The Globe and Mail leaps through burning hoops of issue-evading. A case in point is the rapid change in opinion embodied in the editorial on the alien-student question reprinted on page 4 from Thursday's pages, and the first sentence in the editorial comment on the recent Liberal caucaus which appeared in Friday's issue.

Burden of the Thursday editorial seems to be that "If the practice of running to a newspaper office to report how everybody votes on each question is to pass unchallenged, then the Governors of the University may no longer be able to exercise an independent judgment on matters which are not necessarily of interest to the public nor fully understood by the people."

Then came the Friday editorial which opened pontifically: "The Liberal legislators in caucus in Queen's Park on Wednesday decided wisely to give a frank account of their proceedings to the public."

It is difficult to find permanent grounds for disagreement with a newspaper which is so ready to see things from so many points of view.

Conscripting Culliton

Members of McGill's Political Economy Club and other students on the McGill campus are reported by The Daily to be currently affixing signatures to a petition to the head of their University asking Dr. James to intercede in order that Prof. J. T. Culliton's army draft call may be deferred.

Dr. Culliton — recently in the news when he supervised the McGill expedition to the Saskatchewan harvest—is a member of several years' high standing on the McGill staff in economics, and his students believe that he can make a greater contribution to the nation's welfare in his present capacity than as a draftee.

We consider that in this belief they are correct. If the Government is to leave our Universities open —and we sincerely believe that it should—then it owes to the Universities a certain priority on skilled manpower. It would be understandable if military authorities were to conscript Dr. Culliton's specialized knowledge for some specific work in connection with the war effort; then none would object to taking him away from civilian work. But to call him up for routine military service is to squander valuable talent.

We hope that Dr. James will see fit to accede to the wishes of McGill students and exert his influence to have the call deferred. There is no reason for undue hesitancy in making a special plea for deferment. The Universities need not feel that the debt of gratitude which they owe to the Government is a one-sided affair. The Universities have already made — are now making — a huge contribution to Canada's share in the winning of the war. They produce annually large numbers of trained technicians; they send their best manhood to Officers' Training Centres; they give up staff members to specialized branches of the fighting forces and to war-research laboratories; they help in the training of uniformed personnel; they need not apologize for the part they are playing.

The Government should be—and in fairness we believe it is—aware of and grateful for the contribution of the Universities. And the Government must also be conscious of the need for students in economics—such as those in Dr. Culliton's classes—and in the other humanities and social sciences whose worth will be apparent in the long hard years of reconstruction which lies beyond the peace.

If the Universities are to continue to make a balanced contribution to a nation at war, they cannot stand by gracefully while faculty members whose work is not concerned with the immediate prosecution of the war are drafted as privates into the army.

Demise Of A Colleague

Word comes from Montreal of the suspension of the Editor-in-Chief of The Georgian and subsequent resignation of his Editorial Board because of vigorous exceptions taken by his Students' Council to a front-page editorial dealing with a recent LIFE Magazine indictment of French Canada.

The Editor in question dealt most untactfully, in our judgment, with the whole question, although there may be some truth in his remarks. But to hurl editorial epithets at Cardinal Villeneuve, Premier Adelard Godbout, and Laval's Le Carabin on a question which has scarcely any place in a college publication, except when handled with politest of kid gloves is in doubtful taste.

The whole matter brings up the vaunted "Freedom of the Press;" but it also bring to mind that the freedom of the collegiate press is something else again. Collegiate editors are in a most delicate position of trust in relation to our student councils. It is legitimate to lead their opinion, even to attempt to influence it forcibly. But we should only rarely attempt to bludgeon it into submission. And we should generally confine these outbursts to issues of direct University concern.

Thus we find ourselves in little sympathy with our colleague, because we feel that he has failed to use even fairly good judgment. If his remarks had been wiser in the first place, we would be prepared to help him fight for his right to print them; but in this instance we believe he has acted hastily and foolishly.

ART and MUSIC Drama

Unhackneyed

Wymilwood Musicale

Last night, at Wymilwood, Eric Tredwell captured an audience for an hour in a truly memorable way. And he did not sing down to them, for his program, though light, was unhackneyed.

It takes more than a superlatively good baritone voice to capture an audience. Mr. Tredwell adds to his by excellent showmanship, by a really thorough appreciation of the music he sings.

The most interesting music on the program was the group of three religious songs by Dvorak. Although it is a little difficult for a piano to represent mountains clapping their hands, most of the accompaniment was extremely apt. And then the first selections by Handel were not the standard selections of Handel which every baritone feels called upon to sing.

In fact, with the exception of None but the Lonely Heart and Shenandoa, the program was as remarkable for its originality as for the perfection with which it was sung.

Frances Marr Adaskin is the required complement for a perfectly enjoyable evening.

McGill Debate Upholds Arts

Montreal, Que., Nov. 28—(CUP)—At at meeting of the Mock Parliament of McGill University, the Government was defeated by the Opposition on the resolution: "That Education in Arts be Discontinued for the Duration of the War." The Government supporters were for the most part Engineers.

Speakers for the affirmative maintained that Artsmen were joining the University to escape the draft, and that "for the present all action must be directed to the common end of winning the war."

The Opposition replied: "Only about 6,000 Artsmen would be affected by the discontinuance of the study of Arts. If Science subjects alone are taught there will be no teaching of morals."

Following the debate the discussion was thrown open to the House.

Liquid Helium Secrets Shown by Dr. Ellis

Interesting experiments on liquid helium were revealed to a meeting of the Mathematics and Physics Society Wednesday afternoon.

Dr. R. G. Ellis, speaker for the occasion, and a member of the physics staff, told of his various experiments with this gas. After his talk he took the members of the society to see the apparatus that makes liquid air. He told them that his experiments are not completed, and that no real conclusion can be drawn from them.

U.C., Jr. Meds Playoff Tied 0-0

Second Division Rugby Playoffs Lengthened by Scoreless Tie; Game Went into Two Overtime Periods

PLAYED ON FRIGID FIELD

By Phil Shackleton

The playoff period of the second rugby division was further lengthened when U.C. and Junior Meds fought to a scoreless tie last Friday on a frozen Stadium field. The game was lengthened by two five-minute overtime stanzas but still no score was chalked up. Scoring chances were few and scattered, due partly to the cold weather which put a damper on plays by both teams and partly to the even matching of the rivals.

The lines on both sides of the scrimmage held wonderfully considering the temperature, and plunging plays made little gain. Exception to the rule was Clement, who made severals gains the hard way for Meds.

The prettiest play of the game came at the opening of the first overtime period when U.C's Jimmy Bitove took the kickoff and virtually ran through the whole Meds team before falling to a tackler on Meds' 35. Jimmy made most of the Artsmen's gains with his valuable galloping. Nesbitt's tackling also featured for U.C. Wade handled kickoff duties and Smith the other kicks and passing.

Spooner kicked for Meds while Patterson and Cleland stood out with their running and intercepting of U.C.'s forwards.

First Quarter

Wade kicked off for U.C. and Meds settled on their 25. Neither team made notable gains in the early plays but Hugh Cleland intercepted a U.C. forward and Spooner then kicked out on U.C.'s 25. Koffman retrieved a U.C. fumble but Wade intercepted a Meds' forward on the next play. Stellman plunged for eight and Smith kicked to Patterson who was tackled on U.C.'s 40. Smith ran back Spooner's kick to his own 5-yard line. U.C. held firm there and Smith kicked to Cleland who was promptly dumped on U.C.'s 45.

Second Quarter

Nesbitt and Zierler broke up two U.C. plays, sending them for two losses. Play bogged down just inside U.C. territory for a time until Meds were penalized 15 yards for allowing no yards on tackling the kick receiver. U.C. lost 10 on a fumble and Patterson intercepted Smith's forward and ran to U.C.'s 45. Spooner kicked out on the U.C. 10 and the half ended as Stellman plunged for four.

Third Quarter

Bitove made a beautiful 30-yard run on receiving Spooner's kickoff. U.C. was held to no gain and the kick went to Cleland who was tackled on Meds' 30. Meds made no gain and Stellman and Smith combined for short plunging gains for U.C. Nesbitt stopped Cleland, who received the kick, on Meds' 20. Meds fumbled and Nesbitt recovered for U.C. Nesbitt took Smith's forward to the five. Cleland however took the kick and Meds settled on their 10. Clement made two short plunges and U.C. was penalized five for an offside.

Fourth Quarter

The play was definitely U.C.'s as Bitove ran a kick back to centre. Patterson received the kick and Clement plunged twice for first down. Nesbitt intercepted a Meds forward and Smith ran for 15 and first down. Warren took Smith's forward another 15 yards and Smith's kick pushed Meds back to their 15. U.C. pushed Meds back several yards and the Doctors were literally saved by the bell as regulation time was completed. Score: U.C. 0, Jr. Meds 0.

Overtime Period

Bitove received Spooner's kickoff and ran through 11 of the 12 Meds players and wasn't stopped until he reached Meds' 35. The kick found Meds in possession on their 25. Clement plunged for nine and Spooner kicked to U.C. on the 40. U.C. went for a loss and Smith kicked out on Meds' 45. Meds were held for no gain and Spooner kicked out on U.C.'s 35.

Second Overtime Period

U.C. moved the yard sticks twice on forwards, Smith to Amell and Smith to Stellman. They were held for no further gain and Smith kicked to Patterson who returned the kick to Bitove, who ran to Meds' 35. U.C. plunged for five and Smith kicked and Nesbitt caught the receiver on the one-yard line. Two short plunges brought the ball out to Meds' four when final time was called. Final score: U.C. 0, Jr. Meds 0.

U.C.—Nesbitt, Warren, Zierler, Khin, Watsou, Dixon, Wade, Rafelman, Bitove, Amell, Smith, Stellman, Morton, Nichol, Tartaglia, Hamilton, Shaver, Cutler, Pohl.

Jr. Meds—Spooner, Clement, Scott, Paterson, Cleland, Fielding, Kofman, Hardtack, Turner, Feigman, Toogood, Jeffs, Salter, Brereton, Grier, Blanchitt, Slemon, McKiney, McGannity, Davies, Wilson.

Speaking Of Sport

By Roger Conant

The ancient and none-too-well-known Fitzgerald gonfalon is one of the next items of silverware to be put upon the block. For Thursday at 3:30 the splashing and shouting in the Hart House pool begins when the preliminaries of the Junior Interfaculty Swim Meet gets under way. Then those who have done their laps under the time requirements and rated spots on the finals will test their prowess Monday evening at eight for the silverware that School has formerly monopolized.

A larger entry is expected this year than formerly because of the great interest shown in the swiming league. Seventy-one was the grand entry list of last fall but of course not all were able to paddle home ahead of the time requirement. However, managers, Mr. Winterburn is willing to take all entries by Tuesday at 5:30—so if you want to literally flood the entrance list the deadline for finding your members is Tuesday at 5:30. However you must not use your swimmers in more than 3 events each. But, apart from the time requirement, the only eligibility rule is that the participant have his medical, swim test and University medical category. The events of the meet and their time requirements are:

150 yard medley relay—3 men	4.30 min.
50 yard free style	33 sec.
300 yard free style	6.30 min.
100 yard back	1.45 min.
100 yard free style	1.25 min.
200 yard breast	4.30 min.
200 ward free style relay—4 men	2.16 min.

Campus springboard artists will also get their chance to make their splash in the world. But all entrants must make their qualifying dives by noon on Wednesday. The compulsory items are; running plain front or jacknife, back straight or pike, and cutaway swan or back jack. Then for finals judging three optional attempts are permitted from the low board—one meter groups. So it seems that the galleries of the splash room will be ringing in a few days and we strongly recommend that if you want to see the best in aquatics in the University to mark those dates in your little book.

That "Dreaming of a White Christmas" has turned into a horrible nightmare for some. For, one year ago Saturday the Mulock Cup found its resting place on the showcase up in Vic. And this season the playoffs are almost a week away—and the finals aren't even chosen. And four more games have to be played before the Mulock mug can be disposed of. For that tie game Friday between the Junior Medicos and U.C. holds the finals over till a week today. The U.C.-Meds set-to has to be replayed today, the winner challenges St. Mike's on Wednesday, then the winner of that encounter plays Vic on Friday for the right to challenge Senior School for the Cup next Monday. And if we have another tie game tonight we wouldn't blame anyone if Mac McCutcheon, followed in mute silence by his faithful Athletic Office staff, climbed to the top of Hart House tower and, without a word, stepped off. Because if any more snow arrives to brighten the Christmas season either of three things have to be done: (a) declare the trophy a five-way tie, (b) hire the Public Works Department's fleet of new snow ploughs, or (c) rent or borrow 24 of the new army issue ski-shoes. We muse with rapt contemplation on the outcome of the vexing problem.

Navy Gets Training Base At Alberta University

Edmonton, Alta., Nov. 29—(CUP)—The first scientific basic training center for naval ratings in Canada will be opened at the University of Alberta this month, it was announced recently by Lieut. Commander Thomas J. Brown of R.C.N.V.R. headquarters at Ottawa.

Owing to the scientific nature of the course, ratings will be required to have junior matriculation standing. The first group of students has already been obtained.

Lieut. Commander Brown paid tribute to the war work of universities. "The universities are really doing a splendid job," he said. "One advantage of this plan is that their equipment will be brought up to date."

Indoor Track To Blossom Soon

Hec Phillips announced last week that he hopes to see the indoor track season get into full swing within the next few weeks. Hec said that he will be on the Hart House track every afternoon about 4:45. All those wishing to take part in indoor track events this year are requested to turn out soon. Newcomers to the track and field game are especially welcome.

The next few weeks will be devoted to feeling out the runners and developing a better style. Serious training will not begin until January and the interfaculty competition will not begin until latter January or early February.

The track events will range from a 50 yard sprint and a low hurdle race to a two mile endurance test.

Hec Phillips, very pleased with the fine results of the past outdoor season, has high hopes for a great indoor session. We hope too that the Arts colleges will field larger teams than those of the fall season to provide some better competition for School and Medicine.

Meds Beat Vic In Soccer Replay

On Friday afternoon Meds and Vic soccer teams staged the replay of their scoreless draw of the previous Wednesday and for sixty minutes of regulation play it looked as though the same result would be reached. However in the last half of a ten-minute overtime period Vic took advantage of a quick breakaway to snatch a goal lead which was grimly defended until the final whistle.

At game time a small-sized blizzard blew up and for the first fifteen minutes of play flurrying white stuff made it difficult to follow the flight of the ball. This condition subsided as quickly as it had come and the teams settled down to business. The game opened cautiously and the indications were that it would be closely fought with the margin of victory, if any, being narrow. The teams were very evenly matched. Meds appeared slightly stronger on the offensive but Vic threw up a stout defence to counteract this advantage. Play ranged up and down the field but neither team had many real scoring opportunities. On one occasion Meds almost counted but Dick Bridgman, Victoria's goalkeeper of all sports, came to the rescue with a full length dive that turned the shot aside.

Ian Todd at centre half for the Red and Black played an oustanding game both on the offence and on the defence while Joe Fyfe turned in his usual performance at fullback.

The game went into overtime and as timeup approached again the score still read 0-0. But with two minutes to go Rod McKenzie received a pass from right wing Dedrick and found an open road to goal. He broke fast and beat Johnny Wilford with a hard drive to the top of the net.

By virtue of the win Victoria earned the right to enter the playdowns and was scheduled to meet Trinity on Saturday morning but Meds filed a protest that Vic had used an ineligible player. The protest was upheld by the standing committee for soccer with the result that Vic forfeited the game and Meds will carry on against Trinity.

Vic — Bridgman, Bryce, Zurbrigge, Hoeniger, Richards, Paton, Dedrick, Birkenshaw, McKenzie, Rutherford, Groover.

Meds — Wilford, Fyfe, Roberston, Todd, Allen, Boyd, Delaney, Nikaido, Cuthill, Ford, Stranks.

Men unable to complete this test satisfactorily must enrol in a learn-to-swim class.

Failure to observe this regulation will prevent a student from securing standing in Physical Training.

This test must be completed at once at the following hours:

Mon	3.45 to 5.00 p.m.
Tues	10.30 to 11.30 a.m.—2.30 to 5.00 p.m.
Wed	3.45 to 5.00 p.m.
Thur	2.30 to 5.00 p.m.
Fri	3.45 to 5.00 p.m.

Emmanuel Loses to S.P.S. By Score of 3-0

In a Saturday morning tilt the favoured S.P.S. I team shut out the battling Bear Cats from Emmanuel three goals to nil. The Schoolmen played without Hal Seymour their best blayer, while Emmanuel were lacking Ross Cumming, a dependable fullback, and Art Creswell, one of their better forwards. The Engineers started off with a bang, rapping home two goals in the first five minutes of play. Both goals were scored on crosses by Dave Hibbard from the right wing. Capper was the marksman on the first and MacKenzie booted in the second. The Theologs settled down for the rest of the game kept the Schoolmen on the run. In the last half Ian Currie turned up for S.P.S. and bagged a goal for himself which definitely settled the outcome of the game.

The vistory places S.P.S. in the final round to await a finalist from Trinity, Meds or S.P.S. II.

S.P.S. I—Thompson, Knelman, Seymour B., Roberts, Clare, Kaufman, Hibbard, MacKenzie, Rigeuro, Martin, Capper, Currie.

U.C. ATHLETIC BOARD

All members of the U.C. Athletic Board are requested to meet in the Lit office at 12:45 Tuesday.

Calling all basketballers, calling all spectators, calling . . . well, hello. It won't be very long now before the semis are under way up at our old diggings on Bloor Street—what with the Santa Claus parade well over and Christmas (S.O.S. just went around the corner) snow all over the ground. If all oges well, we should be right into them by the week of Dec. 7.

Quite a bit of ball-playing has passed by the boards since we last dropped around. U.C. Srs. got the better of our co-ed doctors by the score of 12-3, and a good time was had by all. Thursday evening, last, also saw Vic Jrs. and St. Hilda's B team match baskets with one another. When the final score of a game reads 44-11, that mean a lot of good scoring in anybody's language. Here Vic accounted for most of it.

Since the winners of the groups have been announced, and three teams have drawn byes, this week will also see two elimination games played off — total points to count. The first will be on Tuesday at 8:30 between Vic Jrs., the winners of group 5, and III P.H.E., the winners of group III. Berna Christie will referee this game which promises to be very good indeed. The return game is scheduled for Friday at 5:30—and Beryl Pollock will call the tie ball, etc., here. When these games are played off it will be on to the semis.

Tonight, however, will see three preliminary frays which all you spectators shouldn't miss. At 5:30—St. Hilda's B team will meet Physio; 6:30—St. Mike's will meet Vic Freshies again; and at 7:30 U.C. Sers. will meet St. Hilda's Jrs. Come on up if they look good to you or if you want to find out how good they are.

OVERHEARD ON THE CAMPUS DEPT.—The other day an engineer was heard asking his gal friend to the Hart House Sunday evening concert—"Yeah, and there's going to be two men; one's baritone and the other's soprano—"

That's S.P.S. for you!

In a first year Economics class, the professor was counselling his eager young listeners to see all they could of life; then he hastily added, "ECONOMIC LIFE, I mean."

Come, come now, a liberal education eh?

However, the Economics Building must be a fascinating place, for we hear that there's one lad in second year Poli Sci who starts the morning off in his pyjamas, so that he can make his 8:30's.

That co-eds at least, take their lecturers seriously, was demonstrated the other day in Whitney; following a nutrition lecture recently on the merits of vitamin "A" in preventing night blindness, she procured two dozen raw carrots, and there she sits quietly in her room munching, munching, munching. Says she goes out so much, and she wants to know WHAT'S GOING ON.

While on the subject (almost) of co-eds' diets, we might warn the fair sex to be careful, for in Colorado State College, experimenters slowly killed a pack of white rabbits by feeding them a CO-ED'S DIET.

It's a good thing that the gals and guys at Mount Allison aren't superstitious, for on Friday, Nov. 13, the S.C.M. held a concert which was haunted by 13 jinxes.

The date was Friday, the 13th.

There were 13 items on the program;

13 violins in the orchestra;

13 spot and flood lights used;

13 seats in each front row;

13 on the S.C.M. Executive;

13 ushers;

13 sections in the railing on Juliet's balcony;

13 cents in one performer's pocket;

13 minutes and two hours was the length of the show;

13 stripes on socks of one of the electricians;

Another walked under a stepladder;

And 13th of July was birthday of orchestra conductor.

Peruvians Come North Under Co-operative Plan

Washington, Nov. 29—Colleges and universities in the United States will shortly be receiving larger numbers of students from Latin-American countries as the Pan-American result of a new series of co-operative agreements.

Peruvian students interested in technical subjects will be brought to the U.S. under the first such agreement announced by the State Department. In addition to funds contributed by the United States and Peruvian governments, tuition scholarships are being obtained from the American universities.

Poultry to be Studied At U. of Saskatchewan

Saskatoon, Nov. 29— (CUP) —Two courses in poultry husbandry, each of four weeks' duration, are to be held this winter at the University of Saskatchewan, under the Dominion Provincial youth training program.

Hon. H. Staines, minister of education, stated that each course will accommodate 25 young men or women. The first course starts in November, the second after the New Year.

Each student who attends regularly and makes satisfactory progress may receive $25 toward the cost of travel, board, lodging, books and materials. Students will be selected on the basis of worthiness and need.

Cronin Ousted, Board Resigns

suspended Cronin at Editor-in-Chief.

The S.U.S.D.D. passed a motion Nov. 19, upholding its President's action by voting suspension. Two days later, the E.F.S.S passed a motion of non-confidence in Cronin.

Next issue of The Georgian appeared Nov. 24, under the direction of the Editorial Board. It carried a front-page editorial, pointing out that the opinions previously expressed had been those of Cronin himself, and not those of "the entire Georgian Board, the Students' Council, nor the student bodies of the College as a whole."

It continued. "Without taking sides in any way in this issue, the Students' Council feels that articles of this nature have no place in a college paper. . . . Our policy has been to foster friendly relations between the French-Canadians and the English-Canadians at all points. . . . The regrets of The Georgian are particularly due to His Eminence, Cardinal Villeneuve and to Premier Adelard Godbout."

A newspaper story in the Nov. 24 issue said: "Throughout the entire discussions, Cronin insisted on shouldering the entire responsibility, refusing to implicate the remainder of the Editorial Board."

Drafting of Culliton Protested by Club

Economics Department has received a call-up notice from the Canadian Army;

"Whereas we believe that Professor Culliton's most valuable contribution to the War Effort is associated with his present work;

"Whereas we recognize that the government is defeating its own ends by conscripting professors when it permits the student body to remain in College, and that the University is likewise defeating its own purpose and function during a state of war;

"Whereas Prof. Culliton has been for many years a respected member of the faculty of this University, and is held in great esteem by the student body;

"Therefore, we members of the Political Economy Club request very sincerely that the Principal intercede, that Prof. Culliton may obtain his exemption from army service."

PRESS COMMENT

Reprinted from the editorial columns of The Globe and Mail, Thursday, Nov. 26:

High-Pressure Methods

The Board of Governors has rejected the recommendations of a special committee which advocated admitting to the University of Toronto a number of "friendly aliens" of German parentage. It is suggested that perhaps the Board of Governors is without the authority to do this. The point should be established without delay, for there are circumstances under which the case should be reviewed.

It is assumed that the Dominion Government will reconcile its conflicting attitude toward these aliens who are at present deprived of some of the rights of citizenship, and if admitted to the University would be placed in a preferred position as far as accepting the responsibilities of citizenship in wartime is concerned. But in any event there is a distasteful aspect about the controversy which has developed since the Board of Governors reached its decision. Information leaked out of the Governors' meeting into newspaper offices, and the names of those who voted on one side of the question, together with their business affiliations, were publicly emblazoned.

The Board of Governors is a corporate authority. Its meetings are held in camera, and its deliberations should be as private as those of the Cabinet. Although its decisions should be subject to criticism and scrutiny, they should be reached without the influence of "pressure groups." If the practice of running to a newspaper offce to report how everybody votes on each question is to pass unchallenged, then the Governors of the University may no longer be able to exercise an independent judgment on matters which are not necessarily of interest to the public nor fully understood by the people. Each member of the Board may be influenced, whether consciously or not, by a picture of the sort of figure he will be made to cut when the demagogues get hold of him and undertake to portray the motives which led him to his decision.

"Pressure groups" seeking support from this or that journal and lobbying in the Senate or among the governing bodies of individual colleges will not contribute to the good spirit that is necessary in solving the University's problems; nor will they improve the quality of the administration of the University.

Reprinted from "The Front Page" of Saturday Night, Saturday, Nov. 28:

Denial of Education

The seven Governors of the University of Toronto appear to have undertaken, if the Globe and Mail's exposition of their views is correct—and the publisher of the Globe and Mail is a Governor though he did not happen to be present when the seven voted—to determine who should and who should not serve in the armed forces of Canada. They are willing—at least the Globe and Mail is willing at the moment, since the question does not arise—to admit internees of German birth into the University, provided that the Department of National Defence will admit them into the armed forces, which is does not do.

The pretext for not admitting them into the University until they are admitted into the armed forces is that Canadian-born students are required by the Dominion Government to enter the C.O.T.C. and after graduation to serve in the armed forces or in some vital war service. The internees, being exempt from this requirement, would proceed to graduation and to the choice of a profession while the sons of those who are paying the bills would be sent into the field of battle."

We agree with the seven Governors that it is most desirable that the handicap imposed by the obligation to military service should be offset by any and all reasonable means. We merely disagree with them on the proposition that excluding other people, not obligated to military service, from getting an education is a reasonable means. We are glad to note that the Senate of the University of Toronto, practically all the academic authorities of that University, the unanimous opinion of the student body of that University, and the authorities of at least nine other Canadian universities, agree with us and not with the seven Governors, the Globe and Mail and the Telegram.

As to the question of who should and who should not be "sent into the field of battle," we prefer to leave that with the responsible military authorities rather than with the seven Governors, the Globe and Mail, or even the Telegram.

The University of Toronto last week held a memorial meeting in Convocation Hall to honor the memory of the Czechoslovak students massacred by the Nazis, at Prague and elsewhere, in 1939. The University of Toronto, also last week, refused to allow registration as a student to a young man who was once a student in architecture at the University of Prague, and who was forced by his anti-Nazi sympathies to leave that city at the time of the Munich Appeasement and flee from the path of the advancing Hitler. Had he remained in Prague he would probably have been shot, and the University of Toronto would have mourned his death. As he did not remain he was not shot, and the University of Toronto closes its doors against him.

This slight discrepancy between the attitude of the University towards Czechs three thousand miles away and Czechs at its doors is easily explained. The decision to commemorate the massacre was within the powers of the President of the University, a professional educationist, a minister of religion, and more than both of those things, a man of broad culture and generous humanity. The decision to exclude the Czech student and some 15 fellow applicants was not within the power of the President or of his academic colleagues. It was arrived at by a vote of seven members of the Board of Governors, a body appointed by the provincial Government. The President of the University, the Chancellor of the University, the Chairman of that Board, and the Vice-Chairman of that Board, all voted in favour of the admission of the Czech student and his fellows. But seven Governors voted against it.

The President attended the memorial meeting. We are not aware whether any of the seven Governors attended it, but if they did they must have felt slightly uncomfortable.

Christian Science Talk To Be In Hart House

"Christian Science: The Revelation of the Kingdom of Heaven" will be the title of the annual lecture presented by the Christian Science Organization at the University of Toronto in Hart House Theatre at 5:10 p.m. today. The speaker will be Gavin W. Allan, C.S.B., of Toronto, a member of the Board of Lectureship of the Mother Church, Boston, Mass.

A resident of the University district, Mr. Allan has prepared a special lecture looking at the subject from the undergraduates' point of view. All students, graduates and members of the University are cordially invited to attend.

U. of Manitoba Forum Addressed by Coldwell

Winnipeg, Man., Nov. 28—(CUP)—M. J. Coldwell, leader of the C.C.F. in Canada, addressed the students of the University of Manitoba at a forum sponsored by the Debating Union. The basic aims and policies of the C.C.F. party were under discussion. Mr. Coldwell announced that the aim of the C.C.F. party is to "combine two ideas: the necessity for winning the war, and the building of a future in the post-war world, working towards world revolution."

Mr. Coldwell expressed his desire to speak to the University students, since he realized the importance of these students in developing socialism in Canada.

Attending the meeting was Mr. Shinbane, K.C., prominent Winnipeg Liberal, who came "to hear Mr. Coldwell and probably raise some objections and questions." The pros and cons of both parties were discussed.

Principal Brown Insists "Friendly Alien" Eligible After Vic Team Disqualified

Interfaculty Soccer Squad Is Disqualified as Athletic Association Declares Player to Be Ineligible

'REGULAR VIC STUDENT'

Sequel to disqualification of the Vic interfaculty soccer squad from the play-offs Friday was a statement from Dr. W. T. Brown, Principal of Victoria College, declaring the player—one of the 18 "friendly aliens" recently banned—which the athletic association ruled ineligible was "a regular member of Victoria College and as such should be eligible to take part in university sports."

He added that "Otherwise Victoria College is not part of the University of Toronto."

The team was disqualified following a game in which they had actually beaten Meds 1-0 on the playing-field. The ruling followed a warning from the athletic association that the player in question was not eligible for interfaculty sport, since he had not paid his athletic fee and had not received his medical examination.

Dr. Brown said that the student in question was enrolled at Victoria at the beginning of the term but that "the Bursar of the University had refused to accept his athletic fee."

"This is just a case of the struggle over the alien students going down into the activities of the student body," the College head stated. "However, we are not worried about it. The man is a regular student of Victoria College and we still think that he is eligible for university sports.

"I think the athletic association made a mistake in interfering in this business. The officials of the soccer team deliberately used the man because they quite rightly consider him eligible."

Warren Stevens, athletic director of the University, said that the Victoria team was disqualified "according to a long-established rule which holds ineligible any man who has not paid his athletic fee and has not received his medical examination.

"To take part in interfaculty sports a man must have these qualifications,

Posters Exhibited Emphasize Need For More Books

"Bring in those books!" cry the signs in the various buildings on the campus. Over in the main hall of Victoria College, a bored sailor leans against the wall, a glum airman sits with chin in hand and a soldier with nothing to do, sits and looks sad. This is the best of many posters that portray the need of good reading material for the men in battledress.

In the halls and rotunda of U.C., several colourful posters ask and demand that students bring their books for the Book Harvest to the Registrar's office. There were a few dozen in yesterday afternoon, with the accent on Joseph Conrad, Charles Dickens and P. G. Wodehouse. Some students answered to the call for magazines and had brought in back copies of Life and The Readers' Digest.

The combined effort of St. Michael's College, St. Joseph's and Loretto at Newman Club has been the best to date, where two cartons of books of different kinds were collected Sunday night.

Wycliffe and Emmanuel are behind the drive for books; but the fact that the majority of their students live in the colleges makes it diffirult for the boys to give books. As John Flagler, President of the Wycliffe Literary Society, put it, "All the books the men have here are the ones they use in classes."

Students of Social Work, however, who are either away from home or without a library, are investing twenty-five cents in a Penguin Book or a second-hand book in good shape.

Late last night, Walter Lyons of the Book Harvest Committee said that plans are still formulating in most of the Staff-Student Conference Membership Now Complete

Membership of the Staff-Student Conference on the University and the War is now complete, it was announced today by Geoff. Johnson, in charge of Membership and Credentials on the Convening Committee.

A general outline of the program was released last night by Tom Nixon, Chairman of the Convening Committee.

On Saturday morning, Dec. 5, the delegates will assemble for an organization meeting. Conference officials will be elected, and the aims and purposes of the Conference outlined.

From the delegates will be selected chairmen of sub-committees which each chairman will organize in his own particular department. These sub-committees will meet throughout the week until Thursday, Dec. 10, and then their chairmen will be grouped to form committees which will present reports made up of the common results of the sub-committees in allied courses. These reports will be discussed in plenary session on Dec. 11, and 12, at which all delegates will be present. After criticism the committees will meet again to revise their reports; then they will be presented to the Conference for final approval.

Finally a drafting committee will be appointed to draft the report to be presented to the Federal Government, and the Conference as a whole will be asked to approve the resolutions before they are adopted.

Letters are being sent to all delegates outlining the plans in greater detail.

The following names have been added to the last of delegates:

St. Hilda's College—Miss S. Morawetz, Mod. Lang. IV; Miss G. C. Carpenter, Law II.

Faculty of Household Science—Miss R. M. Dewan, III.

School of Social Work—Miss M. Clancy, I.

Ontario College of Pharmacy—D. A. Hamilton, II; F. E. Palumbo, II; J. E. Work, I.

Onatrio College of Education—Miss E. A. McGaw, B.A.; F. L. Delmore, B.A.

School of Law—M. C. Shumaitcher.

Emmanuel College—W. C. Parrot, III.

Wycliffe College—G. H. Griggs, III.

Additional Staff Delegates—Prof. D. N. Cass-Beggs, S.P.S.; Prof. E. L. Daniher, O.C.E.; Prof. J. L. Synge, App, Maths.

New Plan Formed For Pre-Air Crew

Officials of the R.C.A.F. announced yesterday that pre-air crew education detachments will shortly be organized at the University. Purpose of the courses will be to instruct men who have not sufficient education to meet air crew standards.

The Toronto detachment will have its own commanding officer, orderly room and daily routine orders. It will be under air force supervision and will be administered as a unit in the field.

Other universities participating in this new plan are: Brandon College, Brandon, Man.; Queen's University, Kingston and the Ontario Agricultural College, Guelph, and the Universities of Alberta, Saskatchewan and British Columbia.

Annual Bursary Award Goes to U.C. Student

James Byrne, II U.C., has been awarded the Bursary given annually by the International Accountants' Executives' Corporation, it was announced by President Cody yesterday.

Byrne was born in Glasgow and attended Patterson Collegiate in Windsor where he obtained first class honours in three mathematical subjects.

The award of this Bursary is made by a standing committee consisting of the President, the Dean of the School of Graduate Studies and the Director of University Extension. The committee makes its award on the advice of members of the staff of University College.

Dr. J. R. Mott to Speak On Post-War Question

Dr. J. R. Mott, founder of the World Student Christian Federation, will speak informally on student questions on the emerging post-war world at 97 St. George St., on Wednesday night from 5:45 to 7:45 p.m.

Dr. Mott, who has visited more than 80 different countries, will stop in Toronto only for a few hours, interrupting a trip to Cleveland from Ottawa. His meeting with the students was arranged through the Student Christian Movement.

Lamont to Speak On Soviet Russia

"Soviet Russia and the United Nations," will be the subject of an address by Mr. Corliss Lamont to be given Wednesday afternoon at 5 p.m. in Hart House Theatre. This will be the third and final lecture in a series of three on Russia.

Mr. Lamont has lived in Russia a great deal and recently wrote several books on Russian development. He has lectured throughout the United States and was on the staff of Columbia University before he accepted his present position of Professor of Philosophy at the School of Social Research, New York.

Graduates Now in Navy Mentioned in Awards

Two Varsity graduates now serving with the Royal Canadian Navy were mentioned in a recent list of men awarded for meritorious service.

Lieutenant L. Nelson Earle, 3T8 Vic, was awarded the Distiguished Service Cross while Sub-Lieutenant Frank Oatley Plant was mentioned in dispatches.

Lieut. Earle's citation read: "During a long attack which resulted in the destruction of an enemy U-boat, this officer was in charge of the able seamen organization of his ship, and by his devotion to duty and quick thinking contributed in a large measure to the success of the action."

Sub-Lieut. Plant was mentioned in dispatches as an officer "who has carried out his plotting duties with remarkable skill and devotion. His work contributed in no small measure to the destruction of a U-boat."

Earle graduated with an honour degree is political science and economics. During his college career he was intercollegiate senior swimming champion and the president of his class.

Plant was called to th bar in 1941 after gradhating from Osgoode. He was president of the University Law Club and later of the Legal and Literary Society of Osgoode Hall.

"Friendly Alien" Question "Not Cleaned Up Yet" Says Board Chairman

Dr. Macdonald Reports Governors Consider Questions Raised By Senate, S.A.C. Resolutions

HINTS ANNOUNCEMENT SOON

Question of admitting 18 "friendly aliens" to the University of Toronto is "not cleaned up yet," Dr. D. Bruce Macdonald, Chairman of the Board of Governors, said last night following a two-hour Board meeting called to consider the issue.

Asked if the Governors had considered the resolutions from the Senate of the University and the Students' Administrative Council which have recently been forwarded to them, Dr. Macdonald replied that "The Board disucssed what the resolutions were about."

(Resolutions in question dealt with the advisability of reversing a recent Board decision which refused admission to the 18 foreign-born students.)

He said that the next scheduled meeting of the Board was set for Thursday, Dec. 10, but that "There might be a further announcement forthcoming before then."

Dr. H. J. Cody, President of the University, and C. E. Higginbottom, University Bursar and Board Secretary, had no statement to add to Dr. Macdonald's remarks.

Banner Displayed To Protest Draft Of Professor

Montreal, Nov. 30—(CUP)—Across the Engineering Building of McGill University for two hours today hung a banner—20 feet long and three feet high—bearing the words: "DRAFT JAMES—LEAVE US CULLITON."

It is believed that the banner was placed there by McGill students who are protesting the fact that Prof. T. Culliton of the staff in economics recently received an army draft call.

Student petitions, claiming that his University work is essential and calling upon D. F. Cyril James, Principal and Vice-Chancellor of McGill University, to intereede for deferment of the call, are being circulated. To date, Dr. James has made no comment on the situation.

The banner was hung at noon today. It was later removed by a building attendant.

Senator to be Speaker At Liberal Club Meeting

"Senator Salter Hayden will addess a co-ed U. of T. Liberal Club meeting on Wednesday," announced President Harry Jolmson, IV Vic, yesterday. A new policy is to be invoked when for the first time the Liberal Club will admit women members to its meeting to be held at 12:30 noon, Wednesday at Diana Sweets on Bloor Street.

The guest speaker, attaining his M.A. and Ph. M. at Ottawa University, graduated from Osgoode Hall and was called to the bar in 1922. He joined the legal firm of McCarthy and McCarthy and eventually became a partner. He was given his K.C. in 1934. The following year he ran for election for the Dominion House for St. Pauls riding but was defeated. Then about three years ago he was elevated to the Upper House.

Senator Hayden has been keenly interested in sporting activities and besides his golf and yachting activities is a past president of the then doldrumatic Toronto Maple Leaf Baseball Club.

Associate Director Outlines I.S.S. Role In International Student Relations

Associate Director of International Student Service in Geneva, Walter Kilpatrick, last week congratulated the University on its very active participation in support of I.S.S. Before his appointment as associate to Andre de Blonay, permanent I.S.S. secretary, Mr. Kilpatrick was President of Cedarville College in Ohio.

Mr. Kilpatrick was in Toronto to confer with Robert Mackie, Secretary of the World Student Christian Federation, an organization closely allied with the I.S.S. in the support of student relief.

Now on leave of absence from Cedarville, Mr. Kilpatrick says his major problem is to cross enemy territory to Switzerland. Everything was clear until the African campaign and the Vichy move closed all available means of entrance to isolated Geneva.

"In spite of the way in which Switzerland is surrounded by belligerent powers there are a number of international organizations operating and doing excellent work there. International Student Service in co-operation with the European Relief Fund exemplifies in spirit the fact that students around the world are restoring faith in the solidarity of international student brotherhood," he explained.

When questioned on the action taken concerning the 18 alien students at Toronto, Mr. Kilpatrick said that he was insufficiently informed of the facts of the situation, but suggested as a parallel a similar question in the United States.

"The question concerned the relocation of some 1,800 Japanese American citizens in the far West. The question was accepted both by educational and governmental authorities as important to the people concerned, but even more important to the democratic process involved. Consequently, a way was opened for them to continued their work," he said.

"I.S.S. has a two-fold problem," Kilpatrick pointed out. "The first is concerned with informing every student in America as to the facts of the situation—of the whole student generation around the earth." The second problem is closely related to the first: "College circles, once recognizing these facts,

Queen's C.O.T.C. Prepares For War In Newly Designed "Blitz" Course

By Doug Wilson
News Editor, Queen's Journal

Kingston, Nov. 30—(CUP)—The Queen's University C.O.T.C. has just put into use a "blitz" course, to be negotiated by third and fourth year men in order to condition them for the Officers' Training Centres at Brockville and Gordon Head. The course is laid out in Leonard Field, a large vacant plot reserved for a future residence, and has been under construction for several weeks.

The course is not yet completed, but already students have been negotiating or not, as the case may be, such obstacles as are ready for use. Praetically every afternoon "labour platoons" have been observed marching over, their picks and shovels over their shoulders. The labourers have been largely recruited from final year students in Mining Engineering, who thus gain practice at their chosen profession.

The course begins with a deep ditch about three feet wide, meant to represent a foxhole. Three men are supposed to clamber down into this and then dash out and run up onto and along two poles, about two feet off the ground and 15 feet long. Then they run to a two-foot obstacle which they are supposed to jump.

A little more running and they arrive at a device designed to be the equivalent of a row of old rubber tires. A wooden frame has been sunk into the ground. Some of the spaces in the frame are filled in with earth, while some have been excavated. The men really have to hop to avoid tripping as they place one leg into one hole and jump for the next. The result resembles the hopping of a flea.

Next on the menu is an eight-food wooden wall. This is the device that separates the sheep from the goats. Many were called but few were chosen, at least it was that way on the first occasion. Two corpulent individuals, one a mere private and the other a lieutenant, excited much amused comment as they vainly tried to reach the Promised Land on the other side. It is permitted to have someone give you

Tomorrow and Tomorrow . . .

And so the alien-student question still hangs fire, after a special meeting of the Board of Governors of the University of Toronto apparently failed yesterday to come to a clear-cut decision on the subject which has created so much stir on this campus in the past two weeks.

While discussions still seem to deadlock in the Board Room, there are other aspects of the situation which continue to crop up elsewhere. One of the less pleasing of these is the projection of the controversy into the committee rooms of the athletic association, a body which functions quietly and unassumingly to promote the interests of sport and sportsmanship on the campus.

We have little comment to make on the state of affairs which has led to the disqualification of a soccer team from Victoria College. The team manager was apparently in full knowledge of the applicable rules when he played the ineligible man. The student committee had no choice—regardless of sympathy—than to abide by those rules. Our one reaction is that perhaps the academic head of Victoria has done little to settle the issue amicably by his statement to one of the downtown papers that the player really was eligible. Victoria's chief basis for argument against the Governors has been that their recent decision exceeded their legal powers; and this stand is not strengthened by attempting to disregard the properly-constituted rules of an athletic organization.

But the disqualification of a soccer team is a laughably minor matter compared with the importance of the real issue at stake. Even above the vital question of where certain powers of jurisdiction in University government lie, loom, in our estimation, the paramount questions of justice in offering higher education to men whom our government deem worthy of it, and humanity in offering that education freely to men who have been subjected to the oppressions of Nazidom.

I.S.S. To The Rescue

Yesterday we overheard one passing student ask his companion, "But has he got his University ribbons yet?" and we were reminded of the War Services Day to be held on Dec. 9. On that day the University ribbons will be sold to any student for 25 cents, and the ribbons of each faculty for any additional amount the blue-and-white decked students care to contribute to the Drive, for the benefit of International Student Service, which might now be classed as our official student charity. On Dec. 9 the question, "But has he his University ribbons?" will be followed by, "And has he his faculty ribbons?"

By this time almost all the students must know what the famous initials I.S.S. stand for. They will know that this heroic organization is for the benefit of students in any country where the usual sources of education are cut off by any form of pestilence, at the present time by war. They will know that the organization did some of its first important large-scale work in China when the universities and students in the eastern part of that country were forced to take up bed and books and walk, sometimes over a thousand miles, in order to find some reasonably sheltered spot in which to carry on their studies, and they will know that the I.S.S. was ever ready to help those homeless students with food, and then with the needed books and scientific apparatus.

Now that the war has become world-wide the duties of the I.S.S. have been correspondingly enlarged. Still continuing to aid our brother students in China it has held out a helping hand to those it can reach in Europe, especially to those of the United Nations who are interned in the Axis-held countries. Many of the interned young Canadian airmen, soldiers and sailors in Germany are grateful for the chance the I.S.S. has given them to go on with the studies they left in order to join the fighting forces. This study has not only the future value of helping to fit them to be better citizens of the world on their release, but it also gives them one of the things they most need right now; steady work to take their minds off the terrible and vitiating effects of the monotony of a prison camp.

Those among our student readers who have friends or relatives now prisoners of war in Europe will need no urging to contribute to the I.S.S. since, indirectly, they are contributing to the happiness of those dear to them. Other students who have no immediate personal reasons for contributing will see at once the good they can do with even the smallest contribution of 25 cents on Dec. 9.

The I.S.S. is a student organization operating from headquarters in Geneva for the benefit of students the world over. By ensuring with our contributions that it continues its humane work we prove that we too are alert and humane citizens of the world.

Bread For The Spirit

Reports from several quarters of the campus already show a heartening response to the call for books for the armed forces training centres. Newman Club especially set a fine example in this matter of the Book Harvest when it made the contribution of a book the admission fee to its "Open House" on Sunday night. The result on that one occasion was two cartons of books for the men in training.

The main purpose of our Book Harvest which is also being held on Dec. 9, is to collect reading material for the men in training camps who have sent out a call for more books of a higher type than the Westerns and discarded second-rate novels which have been sent to them in quantity. Apparently the drive for books for the services has up to now been answered mainly with the rag-tag and discards of civilian libraries. As a result the boys in the forces across Canada have asked for well-written books of biography, history, engineering subjects, politics, philosophy, economics, international relations, for novels of the higher class and, perhaps surprisingly, for poetry, provided it is not trash. (We also have it unofficially from members of the services that they enjoy detective stories.)

A recent poll conducted in the United States among servicemen shows almost identical results. American privates and marines have shown the same preference as our Canadian fighters. The American poll gave the boys a chance to tell what they did not want and trashy novels were high on the list. They also turned thumbs down on books about the war, which is understandable since when warriors relax they want to relax, and not have to read about the work at which they spend their time.

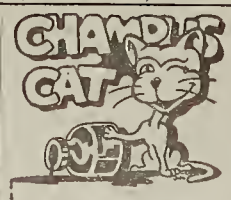
This appeal for books has come to the universities primarily because they are known storehouses of the kind of books that are wanted. On Dec. 9 when the books have all been collected they will be harvested into a silo which will be situated at some central point, the area in front of Hart House or perhaps the front campus. The spirit of the occasion will be that of a harvest-home of food for the mind and spirit.

When the students turn out for the Harvest wearing their blue and white ribbons and those of their faculty, the campus should certainly be a gay place, and Dec. 9, 1942 go down in the annals of the University as a red letter day.

Correspondence

Following letter from Mr. Mitchell is published at his special request that Jewish students be given an opportunity to reply to certain remarks quoted in our news columns recently. Although we had believed such a letter superfluous, we have acceded to this request, but wish it understood that this letter is published as an exception to our ruling that no further correspondence on any aspect of questions arising out of the alien-student controversy be submitted for the present. We believe that University of Toronto students have made adequate expression of their views on the issue, and that repetition can be of little value now.

Editor,
The Varsity.



Dear Sir:

Please allow me to reply to the S.P.S. students, who were interviewed by The Varsity Nov. 25.

Valiant was the word for Filly O'Colte, whose Wymblywood piano recital Friday afternoon, eleventh in the current series, was marred by an irreverent audience and mice in the piano.

Miss O'Colte displayed her usual syllogistical nuances, and her brilliant pizzicatto was evident in the second chukker of the beautiful Feenaminta in U, which ended in a note of utter pizzazz. We have no quarrel with her interpretations except in the all-important eleventh bar of the fourth Steinmug concerto, where the superb receding sevenths were marred by an alien and unwarranted tierce sinister, pint and quarte, both proper. We feel that a pianist with so Sunday-School an approach to the immortals has no business playing in public.

In the matter of mice I can be less charitable. Certainly they could be heard squeaking continually, and the resolution just forwarded to this department by the local SPCA defending their conduct on the grounds that their tails were caught by the hammers does not to my mind excuse the business in the least. The excuse of Wymblywood officials was equally pitiful; the claim that the mice were carefully aneasthetized half an hour before the concert began merely stamps those who advance it as wedded to half-measures.

This reviewer for one will not attend another Wymblywood concert until definite assurances are received that the piano has been fumigated. I feel that anyone who was agonized as I was by the undisciplined soprano outbreak interrupting the hushed stillness of Beirmug's Press Room will side with me in my boycott.

Our last remark concerns the attitude of the audience, which we feel is equally without excuse. It is all very well for people at a noon recital to plead two-thirty lectures, but to skip one's afternoon's work and then talk about leaving for supper seems to me inconsistent to say the least. The Etude Marathon was interrupted for too many times by slamming doors, and the rattling of lunch-boxes was even more distracting.

All in all, we feel that the concert was a howling success, on which congratulations are due to The Varsity, the Wymblywood third under-janitor, the SPCA, Mason & Risch, and the artist.

But could not something be done about my shoes? They were inexcusably tight.

U.C. Swamps Junior Meds 15-0

Two Touchdowns in Fourth-Quarter Offensive Clinch Victory for Red and White as Meds Defence Yields

REPLAY OF TIED GAME

By Bill Nicholls

In a fourth quarter offensive, U.C. gridders counted two touchdowns to stretch a hard earned 3-0 advantage over Jr. Meds into a 15-0 victory in yesterday's playoff tussle at white-mantled Varsity Stadium. The contest was a return engagement after the stalemate overtime game last Friday afternoon.

With the strain of two game between these evenly matched squads, with only one point scored, fireworks were in the offing. The first Red and White touch came late in the fourth quarter. Bitove grabbed a Med forward on his opponents' 15. Smith rolled a pass to Lloyd Cutler who waited over the goal line to score the major. The second big count was a crowd-thrilling surprise. U.C.'s plunging sensation, Sammy Stellman, romped through the Red and Black centre for 20 yards, passing to Bitove who legged in over the line with comparatively little opposition.

In this game, as during the whole season, Meds fielded a strong line, almost impregnable, and a team built for defense. Patterson and Cleland sparkled in the running department, and Spooner punted well. The airtight defense that had repelled U.C.'s best attempts for two games finally crumbled as the Red and White made the most of its advantage.

In the first tightly-contested three and one-half quarters Jerry Rafelman, U.C.'s quarter, called a cakey game and did some good ball-carrying. Nesbitt starred with his tackling. Smith counted the three kicked points—one in each of the first, third, and fourth quarters. Bill Wade accounted for both Red and White converts.

First Quarter

Bitove took the Med kickoff on his 20 and then skooted to his 40. Smith kicked to Patterson who fumbled but recovered the frost-bitten pigskin on his 30. Jack Amell started U.C. into Med territory on an eight-yard plunge. Smith spiralled behind the goal line where Patterson of Meds caught the ball and struggled to his five-yard line. Meds' kick went out at their 40-yard stripe. Clement, taking to his heels, gained yards on Rafelman's extension pass. Smith again kicked to Patterson but Dalt Nesbitt went down fast and threw Meds' safety man in the snow for a rouge. Meds fumbled on their 25 but U.C. on the offensive couldn't click on forward passes. Smith's punt was blocked and a no-yard penalty called against U.C. gave Meds' possession on their own 40-yard marker.

Second Quarter

Meds' line play was frustrated and Spooner hoofed to U.C.'s 40. Patterson of the skull and crossbones took two kicks from Smith for handsome runback gains. Sponner faked a pass on the first down and kicked a long low bounder to Rafelman on U.C.'s 5, where Meds' tacklers swamped him. Stellman plunged 15 yards, then two Red and White bucks were held; Smith had just kicked to midfield when the whistle blew for half time. Score: U.C. 1, Jr. Meds 0.

Third Quarter

U.C.'s kickoff went over the goal line to Patterson who passed to Clement to Meds' five. Bitove took Spooner's kick on Meds' 50 and in his characteristic style ran back, then around the end for 10 yards. Stellman smashed through for eight, and Rafelman made yards. The ball went to Meds' 25 via the Stellman method. Smith hoisted to Clement who was downed for a point one scant yard baek of his goal line. Clement rounded the end for five yards to start a Med march whieh finally petered out on U.C.'s 40 when Smith intercepted a long forward. Snow on the field made punt catching in the air almost essential—Patterson missed one from Smith's boot and the quarter closed on Meds' 25.

Fourth Quarter

Jerry Morton for U.C. intereepted an extension pass and gave the Red and White possession on Meds' 25. Patterson dropped Smith's kiek behind the goal line and fell on it, while U.C. counted their third single point. Patterson dropped another punt on his 10 but recovered it. Bitove snagged a Med forward to put U.C. again in seoring position on the Red and Black 15. Smith picked his man and fired a pass to Lloyd Cutler for a touch. Wade eonverted to give U.C. a 9-0 lead. U.C. came to midfield after the exchange of punts after the kickoff. Then Stellman erashed through the line, smashed through the tertiary and was about to be tackled by Patterson, when he flipped the ball to Bitove on the run, who scuttled over the Med line. Wade added the single point to end the scoring, and two plays later the game was over.

Final Score: U.C. 15, Jr. Meds. 0.

Jr. Meds—Spooner, Clement, Cleland, Scott, Patterson, Fielding, Kofman, Hardman, Turner, Feigman, Jeffs, Salters, Brereton, Slenon, Wilson, Greer, McGannity, Blanehett, Davies.

U.C.—Nesbitt, Warren, Zierler, Kuhn, Dixon, Wade, Nichol, Rafelman, Smith, Amell, Stellman, Tartaglia, Morton, Garett, Bitove, Watson, Cutler, Pohl.

Speaking Of Sport

By Gord Hay

EDITOR'S NOTE: Continuing our Tuesday policy of guest S.O.S.ers this week we have the Athletic Director of Victoria, which college, in case you forget, holds the muchly-battered Mulock mug at present. Gord Hay came to Varsity with an extensive athletic background garnered at Pickering College. And he far from disappointed anyone—being a standout on the gridiron and lacrosse floor. In the former field last year one can vividly recall the Mulock winning trio of Carson, Rutledge and Hay, who withstood everything School could hurl.

THE HIT PARADE

It has fallen to my lot to be numbered on the Sports Editor's Hit Parade—or is it his sucker list? At any rate since Rog is determined to push off his responsibilities onto such blokes as I, you will have to bear with my efforts.

LAST ROUNDUP

After six long weeks of tough slugging on the gridiron, accompanied by many headaches for the Athletic Office, the football schedule is finally nearing completion. At least since U.C. finally disposed of Jr. Meds, it leaves just four teams to squabble over the Mulock Cup. Tomorrow St. Mike's take on U.C., and since for the latter it marks the fourth game in eight days, everything would seem to favour the Bay St. boys coming through with a win. On Friday, the winner of Wednesday's game will play Vic in the semi-finals, with the ultimate winner vieing with Senior School for the honour of plucking the "old mug" from the end of the rainbow a week tomorrow. All three teams have built up an impressive record during the season, and none of them can be considered as a soft touch. I don't intend to stick my neck out and choose the winner. After all, when the battle is all over, I hope to have the old cadaver still in one piece. The prime requisite now is that we should all start praying for good weather, for if we can get rid of the snow next week will provide us with some high-class entertainment in the Varsity bowl.

ENTHUSIASM

It is a tough time of the year to be still playing rugby, and it is even tougher to turn out three nights a week for practices. So this is an appeal to all the lads and lassies on the campus to show some real enthusiasm and get out to cheer your favourites on—the fellows really appreciate it! Remember, many of those you see performing would have been your intercollegiate stars had they but had the opportunity. So, U.C., St. Mike's, School and Vic, get behind your team, and make it a winner.

ANOTHER BOUQUET

It is a favourite occupation of guest writers to give a boost to the hard-working Staff in the Athletic Office; and I, too, would like to add my two cents worth, for they handle a tough job well!

Molarmen Beat Irish In Boxla Playoff 9-4

Dents passed and seored a 9-4 lacrosse victory over St. Mike's in the first round playoffs yesterday in Hart House gym. This win matches Dents with Sr. S.P.S. in the semi-finals to be played Wednesday afternoon.

Jaek McCartney and Currie co-starred for the winners as they netted four goals apiece. Ryan added the odd counter for the molarmen. St. Mike's played a team game, with no player bagging more than one.. Double blue scorers were: the Morrison brothers, McNulty, McDonald, and Bennett.

At half time the score was 4-3 for Dents. It looked like anyone's game until a third period scoring rush of four goals put the winners well on top.

St. Mike's—O'Brien, Doyle, Heetor, Grgeson, C. Morrison (1), P. Morrison (1), McNulyt (1), Fitzpatrick, McDonald (1), Bennett (1).

Dents—Lind, Hambley, Currie (4), Ryan (1), Cousins, Murray, McCartney (4).

Dear Sir:

In the issue of The Varsity for Nov. 30 there appeared an article entitled "Liquid Helium Secrets Shown by Dr. Ellis."

The title "Doctor" is an anticipation, whieh, I regret to say, will not yet be recognized by the Senate.

I regret, too, the helium still keeps its "Secrets." What is known about it was published before the present war and is considered quite safe, if rathe dull ready even in Germany.

You do the scientists of your University less than justice when you say that "no real conclusion can be drawn from [their experiments]." The conclusions, though limited, are definite; their experiments, though incomplete, superior to those performer elsewhere.

Forgive me if I seem to deal harshly with you. You have done no worse than other Toronto papers, but you can do so much better.

I will remain, as I was before you rechristened me,

To Mr. Ellis The Varsity owes a whole series of apologies. It tenders them with the assurance that as soon as space permits we intend to launch a vigorous crusade to have his doctorate conferred upon him forthwith—EDITOR.

Sportswoman

By Florence Cooper

Hear ye, hear ye! History is made at last! After two years of weeping, begging and gnashing of teeth, I was finally given the opportunity (by our "most gracious" Sportswoman) to write this column. Now that I am here (I still can't get over it), I shall line up the basketball games played at O.C.E. last night.

The first game between Physios and St. Hilda's Freshies "B" was fast and furious with St. Hilda's ending up on the short side of a 44-17 score. Mary Coekeram was St. Hilda's best with 10 points to her credit, but hats off to Barbara Metcalf and Betty Dainard of Physios, who coupled together to score 40 of their team's points.

The second game saw St. Mike's eke out a very close victory (12-11) over Vie Freshies. The latter showed a marked improvement in their play-making but lacked the little "something" whieh might have put them ahead. Jean Soleman helped herself to all but two of Vic's points. "Mike" Mahaney and Bette Mondo were the starring twosome for the double blue.

The last tilt of the evening was a decisive victory of U.C. Srs. over St. Hilda's Freshies "A"—25-6. Jean Hoult starred for the Red and White, whilst Laura Fletcher upheld the Saints, performing extremely well on the defence.

The basketball schedule comes to an end on Wednesday but we still have three more games. So come one, come all, and let's hear those cheers. The games for tomorrow are as follows:

6:30—U.C. Freshies v. O.T.
7:30—U.C. Srs. v. I P.H.E.

Trinity Downs Meds 3-2 To Enter Soccer Finals

Trinity soccerites outrushed a ganging Meds squad 3-2 yesterday to get into the finals for the Arts Faculty Cup.

Early in the first half Cuthill sank a lovely boot from the centre front to put the Meds in the front. A little later Trinity squared the count by slipping the ball past goaler Wilford in a scramble on the snow-laden field. Before the half was over the Red and White had bulged the twine twice more to put the scoreboard up to three. Cartwright netted two of the markers and Wayland the third.

The Doctors applied sustained pressure during the remainder of the game and had the pill in enemy territory most of the time. Results were obtained when Allen scored on a corner shot but the sturdy and sometimes spectacular defenee of Max Clarkson along with the Bell-Irvings kept the tying goal out. The winners made numerous rushes down the slow field, led by fleet-footed Norm Lambert, but the Medieos had definite territorial advantage throughout the game. Joe Fyfe was a standout for the losers although the whole forward line played well.

PRESS COMMENT

Reprinted from the editorial columns of The Manitoban, Friday, Nov. 20:

Aliens At Toronto!

On the front page of this Manitoban appears a news story dealing with the refusal of the Board of Governors of the University of Toronto to allow 18 friendly aliens to enter some of Toronto's affiliated colleges. First the S.C.M., then the daily Toronto 'Varsity, and finally the student government itself have come out in unhesitating opposition to this ruling of the Board of Governors.

The Editor of The Manitoban wishes to laud this courageous action on the part of Toronto students as an excellent demonstration of the place a student government should have. It is the democratic right of every student body to pass an opinion, or make recommendations concerning decisions of the governing boards in charge of the institutions which they attend. Toronto Students' Council is to be congratulated on this for having clearly realized their duty, and for having acted upon it with vigour.

If the students of the University have no objections to the 18 alien students studying with them, why should the Board of Governors care? Certainly aliens whom the Dominion Government sees fit to release as friendly should not then be treated as dangerous by a presumptuous body of Governors. Indeed, such treatment is the very thing which will, most certainly, turn such aliens from being friendly. Of what good is their freedom within Canada if the Canadian people are to shun them.

The only reason for such action, as tentatively advanced by the editorial columns of The Toronto Varsity, seem to be that, "the move may be pleasing to certain reactionary sections of the press and public." Judging from the typical "Toronto the Good" attitude of many sections of the Toronto public, there is little doubt that The Varsity's presumed reason for the action is correct. It is certainly to the high credit of the Board of Governors of the University of Manitoba that no such question was raised over the registration of friendly aliens here.

In view of the fact that the Toronto decision was arrived at only by the settlement of a tie vote, through a by-law stating that ties are automatically settled negative, it is to be hoped that the Board will reverse their decision. After all, it is not much of a concession to allow the opinions of several thousand students to operate instead of a mouldy by-law. Here is indeed, one of the many cases where true democracy cannot be obtained through observing the letter of the law.

In any case, The Manitoban awaits the outcome with interest.

We extend thanks to The Manitoban for its compliments to the Toronto student body and S.A.C.; but we would like to point out that The Varsity—not the S.C.M.—was the first to voice publicly student protest against the Board decision—EDITOR.

should participate sacrificially to share in the needs of fellow students everywhere."

"The work of the International Student Service is among three groups. The first, is with the prisoners of war in German Occupied Europe, and German and Italian prisoners in Canada. The second group is in non-military internment camps throughout Europe, including large numbers of Polish refugees in what was Vichy France, and Switzerland. The final division is composed of refugees in exile, outside of camps—wherever they are found."

A professor in the Law Department was having an argument with one of his students during a lecture. Not wishing to embarrass the lad, he changed the subject and went on with the lecture.

After the lecture, a sweet young thing, who had been sitting there taking it all in and saying nothing, walked up to the professor and asked sweetly: "Professor, why didn't you just bash him out?"

You do it, dear.

It happened in The Varsity office the other week, during the time when we were taking one of our downtown contemporaries rather seriously. An enthusiastic member of the staff begged permission to write a scathing editorial on what he felt was a particularly heinous example of journalistic malpractice.

"See here now," a mastheader told him, "we've told those guys just enough about the way they should run their paper—if they want us to tell them any more, they'd better start paying us."

a boost up, but two factors militated against it. For one, nobody wished to have a very muddy boot put in his hand or on his back. The other was the shame of it all—having to be helped over.

For those able to ford the "Jordan," the next obstacle is a parapet with a broad ditch to be jumped. Following this is a horizontal bar, to be crawled along, hand over hand. Next comes a step ladder about 10 feet high. The man is supposed to run up this ladder and run down (or jump) the other side. Now there is only one more obstacle—a ramp up which the student must run (puff, puff) and jump down into a ditch, out of which he crawls, if he has any strength left.

The course is approximately 375 yards long, and is supposed to be negotiated in a part of seven minutes. The students will be in full battle order — that is, rifle and skeleton web equipment, but no greatcoat. Students are expected to negotiate the course twice in the one hour period. The course was laid out under the direction of Major Brown, who was loaned to the contingent as chief instructional officer.

or else be subject to disciplinary action.

"He was spotted in the first game he played for Victoria and he and the team were warned that he was ineligible. Altogether, he played four games, including the final game of the competition—that against medicals. Before that game he was warned and the manager of the team was warned in our office.

"You should also remember that the action of suspending the team was endorsed by the soccer standing committee of students, by unanimous vote, including the vote of the students representing Victoria College."

Mr. Stevens said that the athletic association received from the Students' Directory a list of all the regularly enrolled students in the University and that "this man's name was not on that list."

"We never had a case like this before," he added. "That is, we never had a case of a man persisting after being warned that he was ineligible for Varsity sports."

C. E. Higginbottom, Bursar of the University, commented on Dr. Brown's statement that "the bursar refused to accept this student's fee."

"We registered and collected fees from 5,000 students in two and a half days at the beginning of the term," he said, "and it is rather difficult, because of the rush of business, to know whether one of the tellers turned this man down or not.

"Under normal procedure, it isn't likely that he would offer to pay his fee until he was sure he had been accepted as a student at the University."

"This man was recently informed by the registrar's office that his application for entry into the University of Toronto had been turned down by the Board of Governors," said A. B. Fennel, Registrar.

facultics. He added that members of the faculty staffs are also asked to contribute to this War Services drive.

On Wednesday morning, posters will be available at the S.A.C. office for all faculties to stimulate the students' interest in this charitable work. If any faculties are having difficulty securing boxes to hold their contributions, boxes can be obtained through the S.A.C. Committee.

"There was certainly more action on Monday than on any previous day," said Lyons.

When the silo is erected on the front campus, the faculties will put their contributions into it.

Another members of the book committee said that the students weren't taking enough interest in the drive and that the campaign could be speeded up.

One student didn't help the campaign though, when he picked up a maths book and said, "Gee, they charge a buck-fifty for a book like this." With that he substituted a piece of fiction for the maths book that represents the very type of reading soldiers want most.

the world's pulse

By W. J. Bramah
Secretary, League of Nations Society
(Toronto Branch)

The African campaign has been instrumental in raising various political issues the repercussions of which cannot yet be clearly visualized.

Primarily, it has affected Soviet progress on the Russian-German front and has prompted Stalin to applaud the Allies as "first-rate organizers." Consequently possible diplomatic tension between London and Moscow has been considerably relieved. Stalin declares that the invasion of North Africa "creates the prerequisites for establishment of a secont front in Europe nearer to Germany's vital centres, which will be of decisive importance for organizing victory over Hitlerite tyranny."

A complex issue has arisen however as regards the confused relationship existing between Spain and the United Nations.

Franco has accepted President Roosevelt's assurances and intends to avoid "anything which might disturb our relations in any of their aspects.' The Allies have no assurance however of Franco's ability to combat the Axis if they should persuade or force Spain to relinquish territory for use against the United Nations; and unfortunately Franco not only controls Spain but also Spanish Morocco, colonies both north and south of Dakar, and strategic islands in the Atlantic and the Mediterranean.

The United Nations are faced with a most delicate problem in negotiating with leaders who, in the past, have openly supported the Nazi regime. Nevertheless, the potential political backfire must of necessity be subjugated to military issues; but it is to be hoped that the conquered countries and our Free French allies will not be disturbed by occasional undesirable compromises such as are essential for the fulfilment of victory.

It must be assumed that momentary compromises will not be tolerated when it is possible to make effective the blueprint which is presented in the Atlantic Charter. The people of all liberated countries will be free to choose their own form of government on the basis of international co-operation, social justice and the rule of law. An Allied victory will by no means consolidate the power of men like Franco. Agreements at the moment are only directed toward military expediency.

One of the most encouraging political features of the African campaign is the attitude which Latin America has adopted. The governments of the two countries most reluctant to offend the Axis—Argentina and Chile—have forwarded congratulations to the United States. They also express approval of Washington's policy to afford friendly treatment to Italians living in the United States; this attitude is undoubtedly accentuated by the statements made by Under Secretary of State Berle on Nov. 14. He declared that the "nationhood" of Italy was guaranteed by the Atlantic Charter, and that the United Nations "do not contemplate a punitive peace; the aim is justice, not revenge."

That Man's Here Again!

Life with Father

Torontonians welcomed back Life with Father last night as an old friend. The acquaintance made last year at Eaton Auditorium was strengthened by this season's production.

The play itself needs no praise of mine to make you try to see it. It is a beautiful piece of light comedy, with the necessary undertones on essential, if rather obvious truth, and it is acted with the mastery that comes only after long acquaintance with every part of the script by every member of the cast.

Comparisons are inevitable, I suppose, between the two productions, but they are so equally good that little can be said. This production suffers a little from the mugging by Margalo Gilmore of the female lead of Vinnie, Mrs. Day. She is only slightly less good than last year's Mrs. Day, and the rest of the cast is superlatively good. Cousin Cara, the only person to whom I took exception last year, is the same person, Kay Lang, but she is perfect this time. Father, himself, Percy Waram, was excellent.

All in all, the production is really good, and the play very funny. The two making a performance which is just about as good amusement as one could demand.

To Too Few

Organ Recital

Dr. Healey Willan presented one of his usual fine recitals of organ music yesterday afternoon at Convocation Hall. That the audience was not bigger is to be greatly regretted, for the recital was really excellent.

The greatest work on the program was the Rheinberg Sonata No. 7, which Dr. Willan played with masterful ease. In the Fuga which closes the last movement, he displayed especial brilliance and technical mastery in an extremely difficult composition.

The Rheinberger Evening Rest which followed was definitely less noble, but it was played with a full appreciation of its essentially simple character. It was very pleasant.

The three chorale preludes reached a climax in the final one of the series, which must have seemed all to short to the audience. It seems only to get under way before it is all over.

West's Finale Jubilante, which closed the program, is an interesting work, but it required neither the technical mastery or the musical scholarship of the rest of the recital.

NEIL MACDONALD.

Southern Harmony

Southernaires

The four personable masters of the art of harmony, the Southernaires, renewed their friendships with a Toronto audience last night at Massey Hall.

Some evidence of their popularity may be garnered from the fact that over one-third of the program was made up of encores.

Many listeners enjoy the Southernaires in their Sunday morning program; but this casy chair appeal cannot compare with seeing these men in person; they combine poise, personality and friendship; and they are able to play upon the moods of their audience by gesture, word and expression.

Homer Smith, first tenor in the quartette for over 13 ycars has joined the United States Coast Guard. Mr. Yeats, who has taken his place, in the incredibly short time of 20 days, has entered into the spirit of the unit and retained its high standard of voice and showmanship. His effects were particularly expressive in Water Boy, the cry of the sun-scorched, parched Negro at work in the fields.

Cataloguing the numerous selections would be futile. Just imagine the scope —from Honey, a rollicking love song, and Do You Call That Religion, to Brahms' Lullaby, Nevins' the Rosary and Abide with Me. The Southernaires present the flexibility of generosity with a perfection of harmonic technique.

Harley Granville-Barker To Give Alexander Lectures

Shakespearean Scholar Will Speak on "Coriolanus," in Hart House Three Afternoons Beginning Dec. 9

SERIES IN 19TH YEAR

This year's Alexander lectures will be delivered by Harley Granville-Barker, a well-known English Shakespeare scholar, President H. J. Cody announced yesterday. The subject will be Shakespeare's "Coriolanus." The series consists of three lectures which will be delivered in Hart House Theatre at 5 p.m. on Wednesday, Thursday and Friday, Dec. 9, 10 and 11.

Mr. Granville-Barker is co-author with G. B. Harrison of the "Companion to Shakespeare Studies" and has also written his own "Prefaces to Shakespeare" to which the coming lectures will be added. Since 1941 and until recently, Mr. Granville-Barker has been attached to the British Library of Information in New York.

The Alexander lectures were established in 1923 by friends and former students of Professor W. J. Alexander, Professor Emeritus of English, University College, as a tribute to his contribution to Shakespeare scholarship.

A different play of Shakespeare's is dealt with each year.

Cuyler Young To Go To U.S.

Rev. T. Cuyler Young, Assistant Professor of Oriental Languages at Victoria College, has been appointed to an American government position, it was announced yesterday.

Mr. Young, a missionary in Iran for eight years, will serve as a specialist on Iran in the Division of Special Information, Department of Strategic Service.

Leave of absence for the remainder of the academic year has been granted by Victoria College and may be extended if his services are required further.

Mr. Young expects to leave for Washington at the end of the term.

Judith Anderson

Katherine Campbell plays the above role in the Victoria College Dramatic Society production of "The Devil's Disciple" by George Bernard Shaw, which opens a three-night stand at Hart House Theatre tomorrow night. Earle Grey directs the production.

Students Approve U. of T. Xmas Cards

until Christmas, the sale of University Christmas cards is well under way on the campus. You can get them down at the University Press, where they have been on sale for a week now. They have seven different kinds to choose from, all of which, due to wartime restrictions, are repeats of last year's popular selection.

There is a view of Hart House, and one in blue and white of the Soldiers' Tower. There is a card for the C.O.T.C. with crest and message, and other views of U.C., Convocation Hall many other campus scenes, all snowed-on and full of Christmas spirit.

Up at Vic they have three brand new types of cards, but they tell us at the Book Bureau that the old etching of the main building is still the most popular.

Students are mostly vague but happy about this year's cards. Some have not seen them, but others told us that they are "lovely," "distinctive" and even "really super," and the people at the Press say that sales are coming along quite well.

Salute to China Given In Victoria Convocation

Eaton Memorial Church was the scene Monday of a Missionary Convocation and Salute to China by Victoria University. The occasion was the conferring of Doctorates of Divinity upon the Moderator of the United Church of Canada, The Right Rev. Dr. J. P. R. Sclater, and upon three Canadian missionaries to the Far East, Rev. Geo. Bott of Japan, Rev. James G. Endicott of China, and Rev. Andrew Thompson of China.

The recipients of the degrees were presented by Principal Davidson of Emmanuel College, while Chancellor Brown of Victoria conferred them.

The service was also a farewell to Dr. Endicott, who will shortly return to West China, there to take up his post as advisor to Chiang Kai-Shek. Cards of personal greetings from the large congregation will be taken by him to the Generalissimo and the Chinese people, a symbol of the esteem in which they are held by their Canadian allies.

"Varsity" Special Green Issue Is Year's Literary Publication

By George Elliott

The special Christmas supplement of The Varsity — the Green Issue — is to appear on Friday, Dec. 11.

Sixty-two years ago, when The Varsity was founded, it was largely a literary publication. As the campus expanded, however, and as the need for up-to-the-minute news of University affairs arose, The Varsity gradually acquired its present form of "The Undergraduate Newspaper." This Green Issue, which is almost a tradition now, is the one chance for all students of all faculties to have their literary efforts—both prose and poetry—printed in The Varsity. Michael O'Mara, Varsity Editor-in-Chief, said last night: "The Varsity is something in which all students who are interested in writing should play an active part."

There are five special categories in which cash prizes will be awarded. Largest cash award will be given to the winner of the Essay Contest, with the present status of Canadian Universities and suggestions for amplification of their contribution to the national war effort, as subject material. Other prices will be given for the best Prose or Short Story contributions; a prize each for Light Verse and Serious Verse; and a prize for the best in India ink artwork. Contributions will be judged by members of the Faculty, whose names will be announced later.

Contributions' deadline for this issue is Tuesday, Dec. 8. All contributions are to be handed in to either The Varsity Office on the second floor of Hart House or to the Women's Office, Room 42A, University College.

In tune with the coming festive season, this final eight-page issue of The Varsity before Christmas holidays will be printed in green ink.

The Dec. 11 issue is an all-faculty, all-University number; all entries in the competitions will receive fair judgment. Have your contributions in before noon, Tuesday, Dec. 8.

Students And Professors Comment On Conference

Student Opinion Varies as to Whether Decisions Ought to Be Publicized; Could Become Powerful Pressure Group

WANT POSITION CLARIFIED

An informal Varsity poll of student opinion on the forthcoming Staff-Student Conference on the University and the War, has revealed a sizeable quota of students with little knowledge of the aims and purpose of the conference, while comment was received from many others.

Like Doug Munro, II Commerce and Finance, some have approved the idea and stressed the timeliness of the conference. Tom Mather, Victoria, IV C. and F., is among these and adds, "It's a sure way to find out what the students think of the matter. There is a wide representation of opinion and it will probably be watched by the outside public."

Ruth Gregory, IV Vic, was doubtful of the students' ability to reach agreements and felt that any publicity of further reports to Ottawa would only bring fresh public criticism regardless of their content.

Two Social Work students, Maurice Gold and Nathan Give, hailed the conference as a step toward "democraciziing the University." They felt that the Conference could become in time a powerful pressure group, not through its own action, but through the action of some governmental body with authority.

Vic Culotta, II St. Mike's, said, "The function of a university in wartime should be the same as in peacetime, to teach. Any modification of a university to meet any circumstances should be accidental, not substantial." Most enthusiastic was Vince McNamara, a sophomore in the same college, who thought there should be one every week.

In Pharmacy, Albert Gordner, II, stated that the University was doing its part getting out officer material. While Jim Cawley, president of the Engineering Society, stated, "About the only effect the Conference might have on us in Engineering would be to clear up, if possible, the position of the student in wartime."

Members of Staff Are Anxious to Justify Existence of Arts Courses in Wartime; Some Would Publicize Results

MANY LACK INFORMATION

Staff members on the campus, like the students, appear generally to lack information concerning the coming Staff-Student Conference on the University and the War. Most professors approached by The Varsity declined to comment on it as they had not considered the possibilities of the Conference to any extent.

G. Edison, professor of Philosophy at Trinity College, said, "There's a danger of everyone panicking at the moment . . . of people forgetting the positive basis on which wars are fought —that basis is founded on the knowledge of what we are fighting for." Mr. Edison went on to state that the government hasn't as yet tapped the University's resources of education for the armed forces, even though the University is willing to supply it. "This," he said, "is the significant question at this time."

Commenting on the coming conference, R. S. Knox, Professor of English in U.C., said, "We want to guard against the notion of some people that, in our age, arts courses are an anachronism, anyway."

W. J. McAndrew, Registrar of U.C., felt that "considerable good can come

V.C.F. to Hear Gullison of China

Dr. R. B. Gullison, B.A., M.D., Ch. B., medical missionary from India, will address the V.C.F. missions group today at 4:40 p.m. in the School of Missions, 97 St. George St.

Dr. Gullison, a native of Nova Scotia, graduated from Acadia University in 1932; after studying medicine in Edingurgh he went to a district on the east coast of India, 400 miles south of Calcutta. There he built and conducted a 20-bed hospital, as well as managing six schools which were run on a bilingual basis. In addition to these strenuous duties he was responsible for the spiritual welfare of an area of 600 villages, with only two churches and approximately 30 Indian helpers.

Queen's Will Eject Women Failing Term Exams

U. of T. and Maritime Colleges Have Not Considered Problem of Women Unable to Pass Half-Yearly Exams

McMASTER UNAFFECTED

Kingston, Dec. 1 — (CUP) — The Faculty of Queen's University announced recently that women will be included in the recent government regulations concerning students who fail their mid-term examinations. Excepting those who are included in Section 17 of National War Services Regulations "unless such failings in the opinion of the University and the District Officer Commanding, is due to circumstances beyond the control, of such student," the women who fail to obtain pass standing will be placed at the disposal of the National War Services Board.

(W. P. Hurd, Associate Dean of Arts at McMaster, stated that the restrictions will not affect the women students. No official statement have been issued by Mount Allison or other Maritime universities.

(Whether women students at Toronto will be affected has not yet been decided, A. B. Fennell, University registrar, said yesterday. As there is no government conscription of the womanpower of the country, it would seem improbable that the women will be dealt with the same as the men except possibly in flagrant cases at the discretion of the College concerned, Mr. Fennell continued. There has not been any official consideration of the problem yet.)

Drive to Smash Last Record

A campaign to smash the record scored by last year's "March of Dimes" will be launched on the campus Wednesday, Dec. 9, when co-eds will sell royal blue and white ribbons in every faculty to aid the I.S.S. war charity drive.

Early morning Wednesday will find volunteer co-eds from the Arts Colleges greeting students with a smile and a pennant emblazoned with the University colours to be sold for 25 cents. Wednesday afternoon pennants with individual faculty colours will be on sale at various faculties.

"Plans for a tag day street-dance to be held in front of Hart House are now being arranged by the I.S.S.," Eileen Acton, chairman of the S.A.C. committee organizing the tag day campaign, told The Varsity yesterday.

Miss Acton said the committee would try to make arrangements with all fraternities and campus organizations, a certificate of honour being given every group that supports the I.S.S. drive. At present each University faculty is conducting its individual campaign publicity, she said.

"If every student on the campus contributed 25 cents, we would raise $1,250.00," said the committee chairman. "Last year the I.S.S. received $1,012.60 in dimes laid on the white-washed line in the 'March of Dimes' campaign."

Money contributed on the tag day will be sent to Geneva in aid of needy students and prisoners overseas. Names of five Canadians interned in a German camp who will benefit from the campaign, were announced yesterday by John Coleman, Secretary of the I.S.S. of Canada.

Commenting on the tag day campaign, Coleman told The Varsity, "There is not a single person on the campus who ought not to aid in contributing to this worthy cause. It should be one of our chief war responsibilities."

BOOK HARVEST POSTERS

Engineers to Hear Expert on Glass

"Glass in National Defense" will be discussed by Dr. C. J. Phillip, physicist in the Corning Glass Company, Corning, N. Y., at a meeting of the Toronto branch of the Engineering Institute of Canada tomorrow evening in Hart House.

The huge reflecting telescope discs for the Dunlap Observatory at Richmond Hill, and for the observatory at Mount Palomar, California, are among the recent achievements of the company.

Dr. Phillip has written articles on glass and its manufacture for the Encyclopaedia Britannica, and numerous technical publications. He is also the author of a book, "Glass: the Miracle Maker."

GRADUATES ANNOUNCE CONFERENCE DELEGATES

Representatives of the School of Graduate Studies who will attend the Student-Staff Conference were announced last night. They are Miss A. Wright, Department of History; J. Watson, Department of Physics; and Gordon P. Crombie, Department of Geology.

Creative Dancing What Is It?

By Sara Socol

"Sway, sway, sway and bend," came the voice from the head of the gymnasium. The instructress executed a graceful sway and a leap and twenty-odd girls in various forms of gym-dress valiantly tried to imitate her. For two minutes the room re-echoed with the heavy thud of feet, broken only by the occasional creaking of long-unused bones.

"Modern dancing is one of the finest forms of exercise," said Miss J. M. Forster, director of physical training for women. "This, as you can see, is the First Year modern dance class," she explained. "All First Year students must take some form of physical training and modern dancing is one of the forms of P.T. offered them."

"Few people really understand what is meant by the term 'modern dancing' because there is so little done here in Toronto, and for want of a better name it is often called creative dancing," Miss Forster explained. It is called "modern" dancing because, as compared to ballet, there is more natural movement and no set technique. Unlike ballet it is done in bare feet.

One Week Courses Open at Oxford

Oxford, England, Nov. 30—One week courses at Oxford University have been made available to officers and men of the United States armed forces in Great Britain. The courses are offered in a number of subjects including psychology, the laws and government of Great Britain and classics. These must be taken on leave time so as not to interfere with regular military duties.

The men will live in the famous old college buildings of Oxford while they are taking the courses.

Not Tea-Cup Talk

As the Registrar of University College pointed out to a Varsity reporter yesterday in commenting on the forthcoming student-staff conference, the projected discussions may be particularly helpful in view of the proximity of the University Conference to be held at Ottawa during the Christmas break.

We have much to gain and certainly little to lose in considering our present status minutely and objectively. Universities—if letters which have appeared from time to time in down-town newspapers are any example—are in decreasing favour with certain sections of the public. We may say that we are misunderstood; that the hoi polloi cannot hope to see things from our advanced view-point; that we should ignore the carping of misinformed critics and blandly go our enlightened way. And in large measure we all agree that our future cannot be dictated entirely from without. On the basis, then, of the tacit agreement that we merit a voice in our own regulations, it is our duty to take an active interest in the deliberations of the Conference. Because out of this Conference may come decisions which, properly publicized, will do much to reinforce our present shaky prestige.

But over and above the question of stabilizing our position in public opinion, stands the more vital issue of taking progressive action in relation to influencing possible government decisions which may come out of the Ottawa conference. Government heads will welcome constructive suggestion from students of the largest of Canadian Universities on possible changes in academic curricula, special war-courses, military training programs and so on, since to date the universities have proved something of a problem-child. Our contribution to the war, in relation to the numerical manpower involved has been immense; but to allow us to continue, at a time when manpower needs are becoming increasingly acute, may need, from the Government viewpoint, some further assurance that we will continue to augment and amplify our present war-work, and some reassertion of our right and purpose to continue as the centres of higher learning in a world which is now by-passing many of the fine points of civilization which we still nurture here.

If we do not go to the Conference with purposeful and vigorous intent to make constructive suggestions about our own future, we may well return to the campus in January to find all our decisions made for us by men whose knowledge of University affairs cannot be as comprehensive as our own.

Staff and students owe it to the University and to the future of the nation to make the Conference their vital concern.

Changes In Britain

We take pleasure in being able to publish the portions on the situation of English universities at the present time from a long and very interesting article entitled "Changing Education in Britian," by Joan Peel, writer for The London Times educational supplement and noted authority on education in Britain. In view of the forthcoming Staff-Student Conference on our University in wartime we feel that this article is of particular interest and our only regret is that we cannot print it in its entirety because of lack of space.

War has brought about big changes in British education. Not only have welfare and school services had to be greatly extended, but the pressure of wartime events has tended to bring to light latent weaknesses and to accentuate existing problems. On the other hand the basis has been created for a rapid improvement in eduactional methods after the war.

(Here Miss Peel describes the evacuation of primary and secondary schools from the cities to the country.)

University students have done a great deal of war work, both inside and outside the Universities. Many hundred of them attended harvest camps and a large number more spent their vacation working in factories. Some students relieved overworked teachers, while others helped in youth clubs. In certain universities a fourth term has been introduced to speed up training. (English universities have three short terms where we have one short and one long one.)

Technical colleges have been working to capacity providing not only for their own students, but for industrial trainees, and specialists for various branches of the armed forces. In many colleges there is a shift system and production work for local factories is frequently undertaken.

Thus far the war has produced many innovations in the educational field, which are changing the face of British education. Welfare services attached to the schools have been greatly extended; provision for the pre-school child, a weakness in pre-war days, has greatly increased; experiments in informal education have led to a reconsideration of the best type of school organization.

Questions, relating to the content of education have also been raised. There is general agreement that the curricula of secondary schools and universities are too academic, and not always in touch with modern needs. It is suggested that the classics take too important a place in the scheme of education, and that more science and above all scientific method should be taught. The lively interest which children take in the causes and course of the war has led to more time being spent on talks and discussions on contemporary problems.

While there are still many controversial points to be cleared up, there is general agreement that the lessons learned during the war will form a basis of peacetime educational schemes. Certain it is that when victory is ours, the way will be open for a far-reaching reform of the organization and content of education in Britain.

ART & MUSIC & Drama

Kerplunk!

Secondary School Concert

Despite inclement weather, a gala crowd of young people was out for the Secondary School Concert at Massey Hall last night. Ettore Mazzoleni led the Toronto Symphony Orchestra through an unassumingly pleasant program. They opened with Dvorak's Carnival Overture, in which the percussion men had a whacking good time. Much subtler was the "Shropshire Lad" Rhapsody, by English composer Butterworth of World War I. Here the musicians evoked the abstract melancholy of Housman's poetry with skill and sensitivity.

Guest artist of the evening was Johanne Moreland, who sang Depuis Le Jour from Charpentier's Louise with youthful charm; in the Jewel Song from Faust she showed a nice comprehension of its dramatic implications, but was frequently submerged by the orchestra. This lady will bear watching.

Mr. Mazzoleni has said that Strauss waltzes may be played in two ways, either to dance to, or symphonically in the concert hall. Last night's version of The Emperor fell into the second category—kerplunk! Bramhs' First was great music, nobly played. Strings and woodwind caught and carried the memorable themes with fluency and finesse. Mr. Mazzoleni conducted throughout precisely, aptly.

This segment of the school population listened with better attention than ever was shown by their adult counterparts, and certainly was more courteous in the little matter of arriving on time.

Cameras Turn on RCAF In Hart House Great Hall

A motion picture production crew came to Hart House early Friday morning to "shoot" the boys in the R.C.A.F. radio technicians' course.

The Great Hall was one location for this film unit who will use the scenes taken here in a short training film on "Nutrition" for the R.C.A.F.

With giant movie floodlights blazing on them, the boys tried to be nonchalant for Robert Martin, a cameraman from Associated Screen Studios in Montreal.

Professors who came to eat in the balcony of Great Hall that day found some of their places had been taken up by several ten thousand watt technicolor lights.

In the kitchen and in the Hall, waitresses had to watch their feet as they served the food; there were miles of rubber eable snaking through the chairs and tables.

The film, when completed, said Martin, would be a concentrated course in itself, demonstrating the use and value of various foods.

This picture is the third in a series produced by the Air Force to aid in the training of their personnel.

GROWN IN SUNNY, SOUTHERN ONTARIO

SCHOOLMEN FIND USE FOR ALCOHOL

A new process for making synthetic rubber has been discovered by Angus Smallbeer, D.T., and Bringus Twosteins, P. and Q., two young research workers in S.P.S., it was learned yesterday. Smallbeer and Twosteins are both recent graduates in Chemical Engineering and have been engaged in secret research at the University, under government supervision.

THE INVENTORS

The recent news that distillers were turning their plants into factories for making synthetic rubber, fired the two chemists with the idea of making rubber without the waste of all this fine brown-coloured fluid. "We just had to!" said Smallbeer.

As may be seen from the accompanying diagrams the process is very economical. The apparatus illustrated is: "A," a tank in which malt, barley, yeast, hops, etc., are mixed. In vat "B" large numbers of Mexican jumping beans are added to make the hops higher, and in "C," worn-out saddle shoes and mules from Withme Hall are added to give the product more kick. (This is just plain corn which is thrown in too—Ed.) "D" is a receptacle for tired beans, which are then salvaged and given to equally tired Artsmen to think with. A tap is provided to drain off excess fluid.

The next units is for extraction of the alcohol from the resulting fluid. The workings of this are plainly evident from the diagram and need not be elaborated upon here. After extraction of the alcohol, the remaining liquid is bottled and sold. "It will be better beer than LaDreggs any day," Smallbeer commented. The small spigot on the container of concentrated alcohol is for drawing off excess, and to test for purity, aroma, flavour and—"After you, Angus," says Bringus.

In another unit, shown on page five (see page five, fellas—Ed.) a surveyor's chain is broken up and ground down into particles of molecular dimensions. The particles are dropped into the alcohol, and since they are not used to anything so strong, they soon become confused, and then they are drawn off at "H" as chains of molecules. Now, as everybody knows, synthetic rubber is made of chains of molecules, so there you are.

The Varsity Reviews

Acta Victoriana

November, 1942

Somewhat rarified in tone but very high in quality, the November issue of Acta Victoriana measures up quite favourably with last month's issue.

But the reader who lacks the breadth of culture of his editorial board, will be somewhat distressed, particularly by a sizeable piece of undeniably excellent French prose filling the three pages following the editorial. Much of the rest of the prose tends to be a trifle cloudy although its workmanship is uniformly excellent.

Easily the best thing in the issue is Paradise Regained, by John Edward Speers, another welcome newcomer to Acta's columns. Speers comes up with a pretty thorough piece of Canadiana in what we understand is his first published story. The style is not particularly new, but as far as we know it has never been applied to Canadian life.

Rigmore Christopherson's story of the month deals weirdly with musical calves and wacky families and Margaret Gould's Without Benefit replete with lush allegory.

Dorothy Sigmund's short poems continue to show originality, a quality which is reflected to a greater or lesser degree in the rest of the serious verse in the issue. A write-up of a class hike done in excellent Chaucerian verse is a pleasant novelty.

Among the articles, Rex Wilson's biographical sketch of E. J. Pratt and Rodger Bishop's full account of his harvest experiences are noteworthy. Paul Fox's facile sketch, Politics Made Easy is amusing in spots if a trifle superficial.

An engaging account of Barbara McNabb's experience as a waitress (nothing out of the ordinary) and mildly provocative book and music reviews complete the issue.

EDGAR SIMON.

Let's Have More of This

This editorial might be construed by anti-Victorians as unjustified praise of a play which has not yet gone before the public.

Let it be understood, therefore, that it is not praise of the production, but of the play itself. George Bernard Shaw undoubtedly is the greatest playwright of our age. He, of all those who are writing today, will be remembered for having said something, and for having developed stage technique to the highest point of our time.

The Devil's Disciple is beyond the usual criticism of Shaw's work—that there is no action in it, but only a group of characters who are really Shavian puppets, talking. But that is not the point. What we feel should be said, even before the play has appeared in public, is that the Victoria College Dramatic Society has done a fine thing in choosing a play by some other criterion than its recent Broadway success. It is easy to choose the latest hit from New York, give it a passable production, and call it a finished play. Whatever the outcome of this work's production, and no matter how well done or how badly done it turns out to be, praise will be forthcoming for choosing a play that really is worthwhile producing. Not Shaw's greatest, of course, but sufficiently difficult to require a good deal of work and thought before amateurs can put it over.—N. M.

Intramural 'Fight Meets' May Return

Students Show Interest in Competitive Sports' Basic Training Courses in Regular P.T. Class

NOVICE TOURNEY TO COME

By Bill Nicholls

Boxing and wrestling have been pepped up considerably this year, according to Chesty Martin who is directing activities in these sports in Hart House Gym. This is due to this year's new departure of incorporating basic training, in these individualistic, combative sports, in the regular physical training periods.

As a result of the interest shown in these periods, a large list of prospective belligerents has been signed up. The object is to form representative teams for intramural "fight meets." Before the war Varsity teams met teams from Queen's, McGill, and O.A.C. in the senior group, and with McMaster, Western and O.A.C. in the intercollegiate intermediate. Those were the golden years of trips to Penn State and Massachusetts. Last year U. of T. went to O.A.C. and the visit was returned, as well as a tourney with the air force.

During the week nights, Mel. Glionna trains the boys in the ring. His work is best understood by observation. "Mix 'em up," he puffed, "throw your left as well as your right—a straight left is the best." Then he looks around at the new crop of beginners and chortled. "You fellas are all holding yourselves too tight—you try and knock me out, and you're all winded after one round." Burgess and Curry are the senior boxers who instruct twice a week.

"It's harder to get instructors for wrestling," Chesty lamented. The same system is used in the grunt, twist and strain department as in the K.O. setup. George Daly is instructor and fellows who are interested in the sport are ushered in for mild tastes during the P.T. periods.

"The boxers and wrestlers who have not won intramural decisions will be eligible for the coming novice tournament. As soon as the war is over we will have a nucleus of trained combatants to give the backbone to new teams for intercollegiate and American college competition.

Yes, The Women Are Doing Their Part!

Speaking Of Sport

By Bud Smith

HIGHER! HIGHER!

The other day while perusing the pages of that noted literary contemporary of ours, namely Esquire, we came across an article by Jean Eberhart who is a noted something-or-other from someplace. This article had all the sleep-inducing qualities of a first-rate Speakin-On-Sport, so we decided to pass along its grimy retails to ALL our readers (neither of their mothers will let them look at E———e).

Just to arouse your non-existent curiosity we will quote to you the opening sentences of this masterpiece. "There wasn't a dissenter in the house. It was the best cure for blindness the world has ever seen." Now before you start whispering "Ah, Seagrams!" let us hasten to assure you that the subject under discussion is merely a new arrangement of basketball referees. Now many is the time you have seen a referee call a decision when he was some distance from the play and his view was obstructed. (Anyway Jean Eberhart says you have!) So, Mr. Eberhart had a novel idea. Why not hang the referees from the ceiling? We're sure thousands of fans have shared his sentiments at times—but with a slightly more sinister conception of the term "hang." Mr. Eberhart merely wished the refs to be maintained somewhere in the air above the playing surface. Many gyms, such as our own beloved Hart House gym, with its three square feet of playing surface, are admirably equipped with handy rafters for the referees to swing about on! However many gyms are not so forunately outfitted with left-over details of construction, so Mr. Eberhart put his spacious intellect to work on their problem. He ended up with a remarkable idea. Why not have two referees, and perch one on each of the backboards? There might be a slight difficulty at first, what with referees falling off and all that, but he felt sure all such difficulties would be overcome. As a matter of fact when "Flag-Pole" Kelly turned down an offer to officiate at the inaugural game under these new conditions, Eberhart's young son, Homer, solved the equilibrium problem by building a couple of tree huts above the backboards.

With everything in readiness for the initial game to commence, with the referees in their perches, there was an embarrassing pause. The two centres crouched ready to spring for the ball. However the ball proved rather objectionable. It refused to budge off the floor. Despite exhortations by the audience it refused to move. But Mr. Eberhart was not done yet. His fertile mind worked overtime. In a matter of a few hours he had a solution, and the game proceeded; the audience, which by this time had become somewhat impatient, settled back to enjoy the game or at least some of the audience settled back to enjoy the game. You see Mr. Eberhart's practically instantaneous inspiration had been to add a few more officials to carry out the menial chores of tossing up the ball, calling out-of-bounds, and so forth. As a consequence a major share of the audience was chasing madly about the court blowing whistles to their heart's content. Mr. Eberheart considered equipping the original refs with air raid sirens so they could be distinguished above the din, but finally rejected the idea as, on the first trial, a slashing penalty caused a blackout of the entire midwest area of the States!

To come back to sanity again (but only for a moment) we really think that the idea of elevating the referees is a good one. Two volunteer linemen could perform the referee's trivial duties on the court. Besides having a practically perfect view of his own end of the playing surface, the referee is particularly enabled to observe play in the key-hole area and around the basket, where most mistakes are made in calling fouls. The officials no longer have to watch the play while avoiding a charging mob of players. The offending player in "bodily contact" penalties is more easily ascertained from above. Also it is much harder to talk back to a referee who is situated several feet above you. In a trial at the Southern Oregon College of Education, coached by Mr. Jean F. Eberhart, the referees were equipped with microphones and they explained all penalties to the fans as they were called. This led to a much better appreciation of the game by the spectators, and actually, for a variety of reasons, there were less penalties called. So we reiterate, this is a good idea and we eagerly await its universal adoption.

let's go places

MIDTOWN DOUBLE BILL

Constance Bennett does as good a job as the plot permits in the first feature, "Madame Spy," at the Midtown. Strictly a "B" class play, it evolves around a foreign correspondent who marries a beautiful girl in Europe during the war. They tour the battle-fronts and return triumphantly to New York. Espionage and counter-espionage end in a surprise climax.

For your money's worth, however, "Between Us Girls" rates hight. Diana Barrymore along with Kay Francis and Robert Cummings does up almost an "A" class job. But Miss Barrymore steals the show because throughout she outactresses an actress. Plot centres around several complex love affairs that has the audience in laughters most of the time. Romance held to a minimum—the slap-happly plot is quite excellent.

—R. G. C.

EGLINTON DOUBLE BILL

For those of you who were afraid that Orson Welles is just a highbrow, an intellectual and a snob, we have reassuring news. He is human and has gone Hollywood, and now he produces second-rate "psychological" pictures like "Journey into Fear" just to keep his name in the public eye. If you have a morbid sense of humor, go and see it, and laugh at Welles' attempt to maintain the standard of his former pictures. He continues to defy the laws of physics and tries to illuminate all his scenes with a whole lot of shadows, interspersed, just for variety, with some darkness. If you go, don't (as your reviewer did) walk in in the middle of the picture—but better still—don't walk in.

On the other hand, though, you may be forced to see the above-named effort. If you like Damon Runyon, and we confess that he is one of our great likes, don't miss "The Big Street." — Runyon produced it, and kept out as much of the Hollywood adulteration as he could. Somehow, no oue has ever succeeded in transporting the dialogue of Runyon's "citizens" to tbe sound track—there is a little of it, but only a little. The citizens are all there, though, and the casting was excellent. Henry Fonda, who can be, at a moment's notice, a besieged Spanish Loyalist soldier, or a brainless bus-boy, and Lucille Ball, seemed to have been made for their parts. So, fellas, phone the theatre and find out when the main feature isn't playing, and govern yourselves accordingly.—H. Z. S.

VIC DOWNS SCHOOL 13-7 IN LACROSSE TILT

Dedrick and Munro, Outstanding Players in Vic Line, Help Make Victory Certain in Second Half

FIRST GAME OF SEMIS

The Scarlet and Gold stickwielders from Victoria downed School Fourths yesterday in the opening round of the lacrosse playdowns. Their 13-7 victory gave Vic the right to meet Junior School in the second round on Friday.

Yesterday's game was fairly close for the first half with Vic nosing into a two goal lead, 7-5. In the second half School's attack weakened however and the Searlet and Gold tossed in six markers while the Engineers managed to garner only two.

Dedrick and Munro were the most potent scorers for Vic. Between them they counted 10 of Vic's goals, each tossing in five. Patrick, McKenzie and Scott were the other marksmen, The Engineers' scoring was fairly well distributed throughout the line-up. Boyle and Sharp led the parade with two goals apiece. Cross, Davey and Devine completed the total.

Vic — Dedrick, McKenzie, Mark, Rutherford, Munro, Patrick, Bryce, Scott, McComiskey, Waugh.

S.P.S. IV — Hutchinson, Cross, Davey, Devine, Boyle, Thompson, Sheppard, Sharp.

Last night was a gala occasion for the girls who sport the red and white. After all the cheering was over and nearly everyone had gone home, three victories were chalked up on the boards to their credit. Their seniors snagged top honours from their worthy opponents, I P.H.E., and came away with 11 point to P.H.E.'s 6. Their freshies stayed right along with them by defeating O.T.. And—for the highlight of the evening—III P.H.E., who are playing under their colours, went away with a win from Vic Jrs. reading 22-13. This game was the first of two which will put us one step closer to the semis. After the final test on Friday at 5:30, total points will be added up.

Now, let's talk about a few players who shone last night and about the general style of the games. U.C. Seniors and P.H.E. I played a very close game indeed — despite the score. Close-checking made it hard for both teams to shoot to count and spoke well for those seldom talked-about guards. We might even liken the guards on a team to the linesmen on a rugby squad, inasmuch as they do most of the hard work and usually (until some favourable reporter appears on the horizon) do not get public attention drawn to them.—This sort of thing really must stop.—For U.C.'s prominent guard of the evening, we pick Mary Graham—but, as we noted before, all the guards in this first game played well and wisely. I P.H.E.'s star as we saw her was their tall, tricky, tallying forward —Doris Clarke—who accounted for all six of her team's baskets.

About the U.C. freshie O.T. game, we'll have more to say tomorrow. U.C. are the winners in their group, and we might say from first hand experience that they are a very good team indeed and will likely show up very well even against their seniors, should they meet them in the near future.

The much larger score of the III P.H.E.-Vic. Jrs. game shows a lot of good shooting on both sides, especially in the last half. The score at the half was tied at 5 all—and all the rest of the baskets were made in the latter part which was definitely one of action. Mary Sinclaire was top scorer for P.H.E. since she accounted for 11 points, while Helen Patrick stood Vic in very good stead with her excellent guarding. A nine-point lead seems like quite a margin—but you never can tell in basketball just what will happen.

This evening at 5:30 will see the last game of the primary schedule played off. St. Mike's and O.T. will do the honours. So come on along if you are interested.

Correspondence

Sports Editor,
The Varsity.

Dear Sir:

If a student is a regular member of Victoria College, and is therefore accorded full privileges as a student in the College, he has a perfect right to play on any of its athletic teams.

This was the basis upon which Vic's soccer team unanimously invited a "friendly alien" student enrolled in the College to continue to play soccer with them. Efforts had been made, in vain, to qualify the student to play in inter-faculty sport according to the regulations of the University Athletic Association. The student offered to pay athletic fees, and presented himself at the Health Service for a medical examination. Both attempts to qualify were refused on the grounds that he was not a member of the University.

Thus through no fault of his own he was deemed ineligible to play in University sport by the regulations of the University Athletic Association.

Some compromise might have been effected had we had more time to seek a special ruling in the ease. When I returned from Saskatchewan three weeks ago, such a compromise did not seem possible and we elected to accept any penalty that might be imposed, rather than drop a man from our team who, as a member of the College, had as much right, in our opinion, to play soccer as had other members of the team.

Our action was not in defiance of the athletic authorities, but rather an assertion that the "alien" should be regarded as one of ourselves.

I hope that this letter has somewhat clarified a most unfortunate incident.

Yours truly,

P. R. Bryce,
Manager,
Victoria Soccer Team.

We used to write a military column once, until an outraged sergeant taught us discretion. . . . But now we operate under the aegis of a new and slightly less husky sergeant, so we will essay a brief comeback. . . . The gentleman with the stripes on his suit was explaining some of the phenomena of battle drill as practised at Brockville, and wound up by telling his bug-eyed audience of the particularly graceful method the hup-two-three-ers have evolved of moving off. . . . "First ya take a step to the left with yer left foot, then ya take a step to the right with yer right foot an' move off," he barked amiably. . . After mastering this little routine, we are sure that commando training becomes very simple indeed.

Medicos, as a colleague keeps telling me, are wonderful. . . . Take the recent U.C.-Jr. Meds gridathon frinstance. . . . Four or five of the pre-internes nailed an artsman deep in paydirt and flung him face-foremost in the frosted turf. . . . As the light-hearted Iceches unpiled, the last took his knee out of his victim's back and proceeded to prod him in a professional manner, howling happily to his mates for a stethoscope and a scalpel. . . The artsman got up quick.

A scene that recaptured the charm of the medieval ballad occurred during a recent blackout. . . . On the steps of Cody House as the lightless hours passed stood an impatient army officer, his pips gleaming palely in the bright moonlight. . . . of discussion of the topics on the continuation of the humanities." The exchange of opinions between the staff and the students, he said, will be particularly helpful at this time, with the Canadian University Conference in Ottawa so close at hand.

E. A. Smith, Associate Professor of Chemical Engineering, declared that, "Since we are fighting for democracy, we should practise it." The friendly alien students seeking admission to the University, he said, should be given an opportunity either to do war work or to continue their studies, that their talents might not be wasted.

R. J. Brown, Assistant Professor of Electrical Engineering, expressed the opinion of many engineering professors when he said, "If any benefit is derived from the conference, there should be others. The only hindrance to it is the time consumed."

I. R. Pounder, Professor of Mathematics in U.C., stated, "This conference may help to give to the people in authority the views of some of the people directly concerned in regards to the distribution of manpower and the continuation of all the studies in university."

Dr. J. C. Watt, Professor of Anatomy, was in the same position as the rest of the medical staff. All the medical professors are busy with the coming exams and the accelerated course in medicine. "If the results of this conference are made known in the right quarters, it should be valuable," said Dr. Watt.

PRESS COMMENT

Reprinted from the editorial columns of The Sheaf, Friday, Nov. 27:

Trouble at Toronto

Last week The Sheaf ran a short front page story concerning a resolution of the students of the U. of Toronto to reconsider the banning of 18 friendly aliens from the University. Since then the issue has developed into a regular crusade and has called forth considerable comment from leading Toronto newspapers. The question is indeed of widespread interest and vital importance.

The fact behind the case:

In July of 1940, a large number of alien refugees were sent to Canada from Britain without their cases being examined with any care. In 1941 it was decided that many of these aliens could safely, and should be released. Of these, some were released as students. For various reasons these aliens were not allowed to enlist. However it has been made clear that no stigma is attached to any of these men. There is no reason for any discrimination against them.

The students of the University of Toronto, then, have good reason for protesting against a recent decision of their Board of Governors which refused admittance to the University of 18 of these friendly aliens. The education of these students in technical and other lines in Canadian universities is a policy approved by both Canadian and British authorities. Furthermore at least nine other universities have accepted student refugees including McGill, Acadia, McMaster, Dalhousie, Montreal, Ottawa and Saskatchewan. Furthermore the refugees were released on the condition that they study at Canadian universities after being sponsored by responsible Canadian citizens.

It is difficult then to understand why such people should be refused admittance to the University of Toronto or any other university. It is a waste of talent that is stupid and undemocratic. It is suggestive of racial prejudice and discrimination which is hardly contrary to Nazi philosophy. These elements are at the present rife enough in many phases of Canadian life. To find them at work in our higher institutions of learning, the last strongholds of freedom and tolerance, is distressing to say the least. We hope this is not so.

This is a question of national importance. Though slight in itself it is yet a test of the efficiency of Canadian democracy and of the calibre of our universities. Justice demands these students be admitted. We commend the efforts of the U. of T. Student Council. Its awareness and sincerity is indeed encouraging.

Reprinted from the editorial columns of The Daily Star, Friday, Nov. 27:

Friendly Aliens and the Fighting Services

Early in the war there were great numbers of refugees in Britain from Germany and other European countries, victims, many of them, of Nazi persecution. There was no time to go thoroughly into each case. Hundreds of these people, many of them bitterly hostile to the Nazis, were shipped off to Canada for internment in 1940.

Since then there has been a thorough investigation by three sets of officials. These have had the records of the British Home Office at their disposal, as well as the information gathered during the refugees' stay in Canada. As a result of the inquiry, many alien refugees have been certified friendly and have been released for work in industry, on farms, and, in some cases, for an educational course at universities on condition that they take positions in war industries during vacations and finally on graduation. This has been done in accordance with British policy.

Nine Canadian universities have accepted these friendly aliens. The Board of Governors of the University of Toronto has failed, on a tie vote, to approve their admission. The University Senate, on the other hand, has voted to admit them. A dispute as to which body has jurisdiction has been precipitated, and in the meantime one of the refugees has been attending science classes, while some of the rest have been accommodated at other seats of learning.

In the discussion which has taken place, the suggestion has been made that these friendly aliens should join the armed forces instead of going to college, or should at least have to take the C.O.T.C. course if they do attend university. But the national defence department will not permit this. Many of the refugees have vainly tried to enlist.

A number of reasons are advanced in support of the department's policy in this respect. In the first place, in almost all instances the families and close relatives of these men live in enemy countries. To take them into the armed forces might bring reprisals upon these families and relatives.

Moreover, almost all the friendly aliens in question speak English imperfectly and with German or Italian accents. If they were admitted into the armed forces this fact, coupled with the fact that they have been for some years in internment, would easily lead to distrust. Discipline and morale might suffer.

There must also be considered the possible fate of these German nationals if captured while fighting Germany. Related to that is the possible forced enrolment in the Nazi or Italian army of Canadian nationals now in Axis hands as a reprisal for the employment of German nationals in Canada's army. In fact it might be seized upon as an excuse for similar action by the Japanese as well. The more the thing is examined, the more evident it becomes that the problem is not as simple as it might at first appear to be.

Reprinted from the editorial columns of Acta Victoria, November, 1942:

Confidentially . . .

What we have been dreading has come to pass.

The action of the Board of Governors on Nov. 12 in refusing to allow the federated colleges of the University of Toronto to admit enemy aliens is more than deplorable.

It is tragic. We could say the usual words, pointing out that freedom is one of the things we thought we were fighting this war to retain, that a university should be in the forefront of all broadminded ventures, that here was an opportunity to reach a group of young men who, we hope, will be leaders in Europe after the war.

But all these ideas are the obvious, the sensible point of view which one would expect all educated persons to have taken up.

We might go on and point out the extreme foolishness of the action of the Board of Governors in over-riding the authority of the Dominion Government. These students were released only to study at a Canadian University; the authorities considered that this was a good idea and each student was examined most closely to make absolutely certain that he was a real anti-Nazi. We, however, are governed by a body which is wiser than our Dominion authorities. This is its domain and what it has said is law.

We shall not, however, say any of these things, because there are certain aspects of this business of which we can be truly proud. Right at home here in Victoria College we have Dr. Walter T. Brown as our head, and he is in the forefront of those who wanted to assist the enemy alien students. Dr. H. J. Cody, President of the whole University of Toronto, has expressed his regrets that the vote of the Board of Governors was adverse and it has been made public that Dr. D. B. MacDonald and J. J. Gibson, Chairman and Vive-Chairman of the Board respectively supported Dr. Cody's motion to admit these students.

The greatest tragedy lies in the fact that those other members of the Board of Governors who might have supported the motion were absent from this very important meeting. After all, 14 out of 23 members present does not indicate a very high degree of interest on this admittedly important problem. And it would have taken, probably, only the slightest of campaigns to have made certain that enough "Ayes" were present to outweight the "Noes."

All is not over yet, however. Perhaps the Board of Governors, sceing the hornets' nest it has raised may reconsider its decision. The down-town press, The Varsity, the Heads of all the Arts Colleges—all have joined in protest. We hope that the results of their vociferous protests will make this editorial sound extremely foolish.

Choose Committee Chairmen For All-Varsity Discussions; Conference Begins Saturday

Memorandum Sent to Delegates Outlines Conference Details; Plenary Session to Be Held Dec. 11 and 12

ALL COURSES REPRESENTED

Chairmen of the sub-committees of the Student-Staff Conference have been appointed, subject to the approval of the delegates at the organizational meeting in the Big Hall of the Economics Building Saturday at 9:15 a.m. The move was made so that the preliminary organizational work may be done by the pro-tem chairmen thus enabling the sub-committees to begin their deliberations immediately after the first meeting of the delegates on Saturday morning.

All of the delegates have been sent a memorandum explaining the general mechanics of the conference and outlining some details of the programme. By this it was hoped that the delegates would come to the first meeting with a clearer idea of the purpose and function of the conference.

The memorandum includes a description of the various committees of the conference, a general time-table and a tentative outline of the programme.

Because much of the work of the conference will deal with the possible revising or speeding up of courses, the delegates are divided into committees representing general groups of courses with somewhat similar problems. Some of these groups include the humanities, social sciences (arts), natural sciences, pass and general arts, applied social science (O.T., Physio, Nursing), the professional courses, teaching and theology.

Each committee is divided into sub-committees representing the individual courses. For example the committee on humanities would have sub-committees representing classics, moderns, English.

The list of sub-committee chairmen released by the convening committee of the conference is presented below:

D. C. Rowat, Mod. Hist.; G. Rosenbluth, Poli. Sci.; W. V. Blockley, Biology; Miss M. L. McRuer, Household Ec.; Miss N. Fraser, Sociology; Miss M. F. McCrimmon, Classics; W. G. Cross, M. and P.; G. H. Rutledge, C. and F.; Miss M. P. McKenzie, Eng. Lang. and Lit.

W. L. Somerville, Law; D. H. Kirkwood, Physics and Chemistry; Miss S. Morowetz, Moderns; J. F. Casey, Pass; D. G. Rohr, Phil. and Eng.; Miss P. C. Leonard, Fine Arts; F. W. Hanley, Meds; B. Lightfoot, Dents; R. E. Scott, S.P.S.; D. L. Davidson, Forestry.

A. J. Kennedy, Music; Miss K. R. Caswell, Nursing; Miss M. P. Band, O.T.; Miss L. A. Alexander, Physiotherapy; W. C. Parrot, Theology; Miss M. Clancy, Social Work; Miss R. M. Dewan, House. Sci.; F. E. Palumbo, Pharm.; F. L. Dilmore, O.C.E.; M. C. Schumaitcher, Law; C. P. Crombie, Grad. Studies.

The work of the sub-committee chairmen will be to pick committeemen from among the students and the staff representing his course. He is to assure himself that his committee represents a general cross-section of his course, according to recommendations laid down in the memorandum.

His sub-committee will draft a report regarding the possibility of revising and improving his course and will present this report to the chairman of the committee representing the course. The latter will draw up a report based on the sub-committees' reports and present them at the plenary session of the con-

Fraternities Aid In Book Harvest

Of the 33 fraternities on campus, 16 have pledged their support to the Book Harvest campaign that is being carried on in conjuction with the International Student's Service appeal, both terminating in combined demonstrations on Dec. 9, and one other has already contributed to the city book collection.

The 16 fraternities are Sigma Alpha Mu, Sigma Chi, Theta Delta Chi, Xi Psi Thi, Alpha Delta Phi, Alpha Kappa Kappa, Betta Theta Phi, Beta Sigma Rho, Phi Kappa Sigma, Phi Theta Upsilon, Phi Lambda Phi, Delta Chi, Delta Tau, Kappa Rho Tau, Nu Sigma Nu and Delta Upsilon. The fraternity that contributed to the city "book blitz" was the Zeta Psi.

"We are pleased with the way the fraternities are co-operating," Walter Lyons, II Social Studies, committee member, stated, "and we hope the other fraternities will do likewise. Also, I would like to appeal especially to the women's fraternities.

"Fraternities usually have rather large libraries and collections of magazines from which they could make contributions," he concluded.

Method of collection in the fraternities will be left to their own discretion. They will bring their books, along with the faculties, down to the central silo on the campus on Dec. 9.

Jaffary Stresses Need Of Social Services

Dr. S. K. Jaffary, Director and Associate Professor at the School of Social Work, gave a lecture in the Economics Building Tuesday on Social Services.

During the depression years there was little co-ordination in social developments, he said. Patients in mental hospitals, able-bodied workers, widows and old people were all given the same attention by the government and help was not afforded according to the individual need.

Dr. Jaffary said the solution to that problem lay in the development of Social Service. He said the social services would take an important part in post-war reconstruction.

As part of reconstruction he advocated social insurance against unemployment, sickness, old age and death; public assistance to restore individuals to self-maintenance, and university tax-supported health institutions.

Lamont Urges Co-operation With Russia

The necessity of continued co-operation between the western democracies and Soviet Russia after the present war was emphasized by Mr. Corliss Lamont, Professor of Philosophy at the School of Social Research, New York City, in his lecture on "Soviet Russia and the United Nations," in Hart House Theatre yesterday.

Although the average Canadian and the average American want to co-operate with and understand Russia, as yet this has not gone much further than admiration of the courage of the Russian people and the strength and endurance of the Russian armies, said the speaker. What is needed is an accurate knowledge and understanding of Russian conditions which have made possible the events of the past two years in Russia.

When Russia first entered the war, many people believe that she would last

Sen. Hayden Addresses Liberal Club

Senator Salter Hayden, addressing the University of Toronto Liberal Club at an informal dinner at Diana Sweets yesterday, discussed the question of sugar-control, comparing the present system with that used during the last war.

The Senator explained the stabilization fund which has been set up in Canada by the Sugar Controller, and which disposes of the sugar at 25 cents more than than cost price. Though shipping space is now a major problem, this stabilization fund has aided materially in maintaining the ceiling price at its present level, and will be available after the war to help adjust prices and avoid a depresison, he said.

Senator Hayden spoke of the powers exercised by the Controllers, and derived from the War Measure Act. He emphasized that these powers are pure-

Vic Dramatic Production To Begin Three Night Run

Jack Coleman as General Burgoyne in the Victoria College Dramatic Society's production of "The Devil's Disciple" by George Bernard Shaw which will play in Hart House Theatre Thursday, Friday and Saturday of this week with Earle Grey as director.

Victoria College Dramatic Society to Present Shaw's "Devil's Disciple"; Is 11th Annual Production of Society

OPENS TONIGHT

Weather permitting, the Victoria College Dramatic Society will tonight present their 11th annual production, George Bernard Shaw's Revolutionary War melodrama, "The Devil's Disciple," in Hart House Theatre.

Last night an anxious stage crew was waiting for the abatement of an extremely blustery wind to enable them to bring the scenery over to the theatre from the workshop in the basement of University College without being blown away.

With a tradition of successful plays, including the sceneryless "Our Town" by Thornton Wilder, confidence was expressed by the players that they could carry on without scenery if necessary.

This year's company includes Hugh Thorburn as Richard Dudgeon, Katherine Campbell as Judith Anderson, Tom Nixon as Minister Anderson, Ruth Sanders as Mrs. Dudgeon, and Jack Coleman as General Burgoyne. Earle Gray, well-known for his work in England and a newcomer to Toronto, is the director. The sets for the production were designed by Ralph Hicklin and Charles Brown.

The brilliant costuming of the Revolutionary period is under the direction of Miss Kathleen Coburn, lecturer in English at Victoria College and a student of the costumes of the time.

Ex-Masthead Members Cast in Army Production

Frank Shuster and Johnny Wayne, University College graduates of 1940 and former masthead members of The Varsity, will be members of the cast of the Canadian Army Show, in preparation for stage and radio appearances shortly.

On The Varsity they were active in all departments. Weingarten is best remembered as "Wiregarters," author of many Campus Cats during his year as Feature Editor in 1939 and afterwards when he served as News Editor. Shuster succeeded Weingarten as Feature Editor and also spent a year as Assistant Sport Editor.

Holmestead, S.P.S. Grad Killed in Egypt Drive

Lieutenant David S. Holmestead, a graduate in Mechanical Engineering in 1935, died of wounds received in Libya on Oct. 31, according to word received by his parents recently.

Coming to the University from Upper Canada College, he starred in track units, winning the intermediate intercollegiate 440-yards in 1930-31. He also held at one time the Ontario record for the quarter mile.

After graduation, he was employed in the London office of Consolidated Gold Fields until the outbreak of war, when he obtained a commission in the Royal Army Ordnance Corps.

War Services Day, Dec. 9 To Vie With March of Dimes As Gala Varsity Occasion

War Service Committee's "Book Harvest," I.S.S. Sponsored Ribbon Sale, to Be Promoted By Street Dancing

TO PICK TYPICAL CO-ED

On the morning of Dec. 9, the campus will assume an aspect equalled only by that of the "March of Dimes" drive last year, with beautiful co-eds, a contest to choose the "Typical Co-ed of the University," street dancing and the siloing of the "Book Harvest," according to the plans released by the International Students' Service Committee late last night.

It will be "War Services Day," when the activities of two organizations, the War Services Committee in charge of the Book Harvest and the I.S.S., will be combined in one mammoth display, calculated to outshine anything of this nature ever before attempted on this campus.

The feature attraction of the day's activities will be the selection in Hart House Theatre of the "Typical Co-ed of the University." Each faculty is expected to send a contestant. Further details will be announced in The Varsity at a later date.

The day will start with the sale of I.S.S. "University" ribbons and the various coloured "Faculty" ribbons in the different faculties. The University ribbons will cost 25 cents and the amount of the donation for the Faculty ribbons, which may be purchased after the University ribbon is bought, will depend on the generosity of the individual donor.

At noon hour 30 beautiful co-eds (guaranteed by the committee to be beautiful—all 30 of 'em) will sell ribbons on the campus to any who may have been unable to obtain theirs previously.

Weather permitting, there will be street dancing in front of Hart House, just as during the March of Dimes last year. Students will be required to be wearing the University ribbons for admittance to the dancing. The committee, incidentally, guarantees that there will be no shortage of co-eds (all beautiful) to dance with.

In keeping with the spirit of the "Book Harvest" a large silo now under construction at S.P.S. will be placed on a truck in front of Hart House. There the books brought down throughout the morning by the various faculties and organizations will be placed with due ceremony.

The committee hopes to be able to work all of this programme in during the morning and early afternoon hours, possibly terminating at 2:00 p.m. Final and complete details will be announced in The Varsity as soon as received.

Comfort to Judge Green Issue Art

"Judge for for The Varsity Green Issue Ink Artwork contest is to be C. F. Comfort," announced Michael O'Mara last night. "This is the second year Professor Comfort has been kind enough to help us with the Green Issue" he said.

Charles Comfort is himself one of the recognized artists of the country. His work is represented in the Art Gallery here in Toronto, and one of his paintings, "Saguenay," is at present in East Common Room of Hart House. His most noteworthy work, "Young Canadian," which was displayed in the Hart House Music Room last year, is a present at the Philip's Academy Exhibition of Contemporary Canadian Paintings in Andover, Mass.

Besides doing canvases, Professor Comfort designed the murals for the Toronto Stock Exchange, the North American Life Building, and the Canadian Building at the Paris International Exposition of 1937. At present he is turning out patriotic posters for the government.

Entries for the Ink Artwork contest must be in by noon next Tuesday. This also applies to the other contests, Light Verse, Serious Verse, Prose or Short Story and the Essay Contest, the subject of which is to be "The Present Status of Canadian Universities and Suggestions for Amplication of Their Contribution to the National War Effort."

The green eight-page Varsity will appear Dec. 11 and will the last issue until the new year. The contributions are to be handed in at either The Varsity Office on the second floor of Hart House or the Women's Office, Room 42A, University College.

CORRECTION

Due to an editorial error, The Varsity carried a story Nov. 25, reporting that 25 students had been defaulted from the University of Saskatchewan C.O.T.C. Actual number of students involved was two. The Varsity apologizes for this inaccuracy.

Scholarships for Women Open to Canadian Grads

Two scholarships, open to women holding a degree at a Canadian University and totalling $1,950 in value are being offered by the Canadian Federation of University Women, it was announced yesterday.

A travelling scholarship of $1,250 is open to any woman graduate of a Canadian University, preference being given to candidates who have completed one or more years of graduate study and have a definite course of study or research in view. As far as possible, the principle is observed of granting the scholarship alternately to students engaged in scientific research and in literary, historical, economic or philosophical studies.

A junior scholarship of $700 is being offered to a woman graduate not more than 25 years of age, preference being given to a student who has studied at only one university and wishes to continue studies at another.

Further information regarding the scholarships may be obtained at University and College registrars' offices.

School Debaters To Hold Contest

The S.P.S. Debates Club will hold their annual impromptu speaking contest today at 4:30 in the Music Room of Hart House.

This contest gives every undergraduate Engineer a chance to talk his way into cash prizes which total $7.

Each contestant is given a choice of 10 subjects. He is allowed two minutes preparation and two minutes speaking time.

Novel and interesting subjects have been found and it is felt that any contestant should be able to find one of the 10 on which he could talk for 30 times two minutes.

Fun Can Be Useful Too

Overshadowed by the alien-student controversy and publicity for the student-staff conference, the forthcoming War Services Campaign, scheduled to culminate Dec. 9, does not yet seem to have caught the student fancy.

Perhaps students are growing too serious this year to recapture the mass enthusiasm which marked last year's March of Dimes during which Varsity students put more than a thousand dollars on a whitewashed line in less than eight hours to the accompaniment of brass bands, informal inter-faculty debagging contests, barkers, beautiful co-eds changing money, and street dancing to canned syncopation.

But we doubt it. Students are still young and in possession of large quantities of steam that needs to be blown off at intervals. Despite the gravity of our present problems, we can still enjoy a little noise and frivolity, especially when the object is the raising of money for war victims and collecting books for men of the Canadian forces.

Briefly, Dec. 9 will be a day on which students can have another brief fling at pre-war student behaviour—but at the same time they can serve two valuable ends.

All but this year's crop of freshman will recall with pleasure the time we all had at the March of Dimes last year. Let's do it again.

Changes Close To Home

As a companion-piece to yesterday's editorial, "Changes in Britain," The Varsity today reprints a recent editorial from The Columbia Daily Spectator, named by The Associated Collegiate Press as one of the best student editorials on the subject in recent weeks:

American colleges and universities, secure in their traditions of academic freedom and intellectual and ideological leadership, have always been looked upon as a vital part of the democratic heritage. Yet today, for the first time, they are being compelled to face openly the one issue they have avoided, but which directly challenges their right even to consider themselves a part of the democratic way of life.

For the blunt fact is that the whole system of higher education in this country is built upon the basis of class privilege—for the colleges now, as in the past, continue to draw their students primarily from those financially able to afford an enduaction. As a people, we have seldom questioned this condition. We have built up legends about students who "work their way through college" till we have almost convinced ourselves that the opportunity for higher education is open equally to all elements in the population. Yet we have failed to realize that, not only are colleges to a large extent reserved for those who can afford it, but even those who either partially or wholely "work their way" are able to do so simply because their families do not require their earnings for subsistence.

In times of peace, a system of college and graduate education based on privilege hardly jibes with the sacred American principles of "equal opportunity for all." In wartime, its undemocratic character is accentuated both because it leads to serious waste of effective manpower and because it inevitably hardens the class distinction in the armed forces.

That the American people are now paying through the nose as a result of their delusions about higher education is seen in recent reports of the national resources planning board and the Carnegie endowment. Three out of every four high school students who graduate in the top ten per cent scholastically never get to college, mainly because of financial reasons. In other words, the country annually is losing a substantial part of its best "brainpower" because the financial means for providing the proper training for that brainpower are unavailable.

By now, most of the colleges have forgotten that the original selective service law, which only permitted temporary deferment for students, so specifically designed to prevent the rise of a privileged group exempt from service. The various reserve plans however, by drawing officer material from students after they had been admitted to college, became a convenient means for circumventing the clear intention of the law. No one will deny that deferment is necessary to enable a student to receive adequate training; but deferment and eventual commissions belong to those who deserve them on the basis of ability, not to those who were able to pay for the opportunity to receive them.

Since the army and navy depend on the colleges for most of their officer material, the effect of perpetuating the traditional basis for admission can only be to strengthen the degree of privilege which pervades the armed forces. A democratic army is one whose officers are drawn from all elements in the population and not limited to the sons of the comparatively well-to-do.

The changes which must be made are simple, yet clearly revolutionary in nature. In principle, they are contained in the plans now being evolved in Washington. Whatever the form of financial aid adopted, it must be made clear that there can be no compromise with the basic principles that higher education is not the possession of a particular class, but the right of all the people, with the government assuring the realization of that right when necessary.

It is now up to the colleges, their faculties and their students—those most affected by the new proposals—to rally behind leaders like President Conant of Harvard and show the world that they understand that democracy tolerates no privilege. Should they fail to renounce the present basis for higher education in the United States they shall in effect have given the lie to all their sacred traditions and all their wee words about freedom and equality.

At The Far Turn

Today we give our readers — that gallant little group of hardy perusers of the printed page — the 50th issue of the 62nd Volume of The Varsity. We have reached the halfway mark in our September-to-March hegira, and find ourselves with a scant moment and a few inches in which to survey the present position.

Already this year we have used up more lines of banner type than we did in 100 issues last year. We have handled some of the hottest stories in the past decade. We have become involved in more than one crusade. We have had many nice things said about us. And we have aroused the epistolary ire of several of our readers.

All of which is very satisfactory to us. We believe that we are giving our public plenty to think about for the approximate 17 cents a year that The Varsity costs each of them in the S.A.C. budget.

We do not intend to conduct a student poll this year to see what our readers think of us. But like last year, we still welcome comment on our efforts. If there are features you would like to see added, columns you would like to see cut out, tell us so. It's still The Undergraduate Newspaper.

RECORDS IN REVIEW

The Toronto Symphony Orchestra has made its first recording for Victor, under Sir Ernest MacMillan, of course. It was released in September and we have at last caught up with it. The orchestra plays the four Pomp and Circumstance Marches of Sir Edward Elgar. The first march begins in the highly inflected style that Sir Ernest displays on the piano, and the cellos in particular attack vigorously. One certainly cannot say that these marches fail in their effect through lack of noise. The orchestra plays with all stops out almost all the way through these records, and, at any rate the music does flow. But the playing seems unnecessarily feverish and there is no trace of the easy assurance which a military march should have, except perhaps in some of the slower tunes which Elgar confides to the cellos. It may perhaps be the music and not the conducting which gives this impression. For surely these marches lack the clear-cut athleticism which distinguishes Sousa's marches. They are imbued with the heavy mysticism and struggle which one finds in The Dream of Gerontius and the First Symphony, something which in the First Symphony, at any rate, I find highly unsatisfactory. And one wonders whether it mixes very will with the Chauvinism which is also very prominent, and which is less naticeable in the marches of Sousa. As for technical details in the performance, although it is often highly inflected, the edges do not sound very sharp on records, and there is a confusion of detail, and an excessive use of cymbals which blurs the sound somewhat.

I suppose Nos. 1 and 4 are the favourites and they are probably the best too. The climax at the end of No. 4 does not quite come off, probably because the forces of the orchestra are not held in sufficient control, but as a whole these performances are good. If you complain that they are not very subtle, well neither is the music. And finally I doubt if this was a very opportune time to bring out these marches, somehow they don't fit.

If you want to hear some music that is good on the ears and doesn't try to

Objection Overruled

(Champus Cat, we may mention, had announced his intention
Of quitting, for now and for semper;
He claimed that misquotage made him sound in his dotage,
And shortened his lives and his temper.)
We went down on our knees and made tremulous pleas
As we urged him to change his decision,
If our dearly loved Cat left The Varsity flat—
That would be just an awful condition.
"For the absence of kitten" (we wept) "isn't fitten"
For a cozy old joint like the Press:
Please—forgive and forget, and we'll try to do bet-Ter." But he started away, nonetheless.
Then we told a grim story, of mice in their glory,
All leading a life of great ease,
If our Cat went away, then the rodents would stay,
Playing tag on the typewriter keys.
And the co-eds would scurry with fright and with hurry,
And screams, like a bat out of Hades,
To the chairs of the Press (which are backless, or less)
And would surely collapse 'neath the ladies.
Oh, the strong men, they fainted, at the carnage we painted,
(Or found that their hair had turned grey)
And so, seeing his duties to The Varsity's cuties,
The Champus announced that he'd stay.

Campus Natators To Meet Today In Preliminaries

Today at 3:30 the preliminaries of the Junior Interfaculty swimming meet get under way with a total of 95 aspiring mermen starting in seven swim and one diving events.

The standing committee in swimming announced yesterday that the following officials for the meet had been appointed: Diving Judges—Beames, (U.C.), Northwood (S.P.S.), Sommerville (S.P.S.). Starter—Sansom (S.P.S.). Timers—Northwood (S.P.S.), Robinson (Meds). Judge—Moffat (S.P.S.). These officials are asked to make certain they are on time for the meet.

The entry list is much larger than that of last year, with the greatest representation from School. The Junior Engineers have 50 entries in the 50 yard free style alone. The diving, unfortunately has attracted but four entries although these four are of high calibre.

The finals of the meet, which is one of the largest in the history of the Hart House pool, will be run off beginning at 8:30 Monday evening. Only five of the 71 entrants in last fall's meet were eliminated because of the time requirements and as small a number is foreseen for this meet.

ly administrative, and said that when a Controller takes it upon himself to define what shall constitute a punishable offense, and further, what this punishment shall be, he is taking upon himself legislative powers, which belong only by the Governor-in-Council.

A control system is necessary, he said, in order to prevent inflation, but it must be forced to act according to existing law, so that the Controller does not become a dictator.

In reply to a question, Senator Hayden said that the English equivalent of our Controllers have wider powers, but that they were bestowed upon them by the Government, through Enabling Acts, so that they have a constitutional right to them.

A considerable feeling of unrest has been aroused in the people of Canada, he concluded, due to the present situation with regard to Controllers, which could be eased by making these Controllers act only as empowered by Order-in-Council.

SKATES IN ORDER

Much to the delight of blue-lipped sportswriters, who attempt to peck out a coherent rugby yarn after a two-hour vigil in the Blue Bowl, yesterday's U.C.-St. Mike's tussle was postponed. The casual dropper-by would have expected to find at the Stadium, not shivering gridmen, but rather a team of heavily-sweatered hockey players waiting to face-off on the glassy surface of the field. At the rate at which these playoffs are progressing, I for one, would not be surprised to learn some frosty A.M. that Varsity had adopted the American custom of holding feature rugby games on New Year's Day. However, be that as it may, an unusually unreliable source reports that the series can continue, at the most, for only another month this year.

KERPLUNK!

If you should happen to wander into the Hart House pool room (the one in the athletic wing) sometime about 3:30 this afternoon, the chances are that you will see some plain and fancy splashing about. Yessir! The junior interfaculty swimming meet gets under way with the preliminaries today and the finals on Monday evening, and if sizeable entry lists foreshadow a victor, that party will be Junior School. Over 50 of the 95 entries hail from S.P.S., who has ruled both the junior and senior swimming roosts for some years past.

PITTER PATTER

Perhaps as you read the above head (O the conceit of me) you, like the fellow who had his leg amputated, asked, "What's coming off here?" So to set your cerebellum at ease I might mention that the above sound effects come to you through the courtesy of Hec Phillips and his men of the indoor track. Hec announced this week the opening of the indoor season commencing with a general tune-up period when creaking bones and muscles might be moulded into a somewhat more suitable condition before attempting time trials and meets. Hec will be available every day about 4:45 and hopes to organize a track team to compare with that which completed so satisfactory a season but a few weeks ago. The interfaculty competition, which will probably take place in late January and February, offers a wide range of events to please any potential track and field man. The track events include sprints from 100 yards up, middle distance events, and a two mile distance run. A low hurdle race, the jumping events, and the shot put complete the program.

TWO CENTS WORTH

We seewhere there is a suggested new deal in the Mulock Cup playoffs. Sounds like a good idea for a number of reasons:

(a) One less playing day is required and in this weather that one day might make or break the final game.

(b) U.C. and St. Mike's should have no objections as it would lighten their potential load by one game.

(c) Vic, if things are unchanged, would be meeting the stronger of U.C. and St. Mike's so they have nothing to lose unless they are drawn against S.P.S. in the semi-finals which situation should be avoided. REMEMBER TRINITY!

(d) From the S.P.S. standpoint, they would be forced to play another game but they would at least have a tune-up game and an opportunity to accustom themselves with the changed playing conditions.

However, it's up to the team managers.

RECORDS IN REVIEW

be solemn or profound, the set to get is Victor's recording of Music for Theatre by Aaron Copland, played by the Rochester Symphony Orchestra under Howard Hanson. After the pretentiousness of a Brahms or a Sibelius it is a relief to hear music as delightful as the Prologue, as funny as the Dance with its highly diverting jazz tune, and the Burlesque with its grotesque rhythm and instrumentation and the amusing mixture of popular fragments which follow. The Interlude is quietly lovely, perhaps the best movement of the lot, and the last movement, the Epilogue (which follows the Burlesque) refers back to the Prologue. The performance is good and the recording brilliant.

Sportswoman

By Aileen McNally

For some time now the copy in this column has been concerned chiefly with basketball. Game after game has been played but we wonder how many know what the gals are playing for (besides, of course, the love of the sport); because we have not a Reed Trophy like the males in these parts. However, over at the Women's Union there is the nicest silver cup and it is awarded annually to the winner in the interfaculty loop.

Since it was first awarded in 1913 the cup has rested at one time or another in all the arts colleges on the campus. But in the last four years, it has thrice graced the mantel in the Union for the gals who wear the red and white have a knack for producing winning teams.

This year they stand a good chance of doing it again, for of the five group winners, four are bearing the red and white banner. So it is up to Vic to come through, or that silver loving-cup will be collecting dust (figuratively speaking) at the Union for another year.

Last night saw the curtain fall on this season's schedule up at O.C.E. All that remains now are the playoffs, and the semi-finals are scheduled for Monday. St. Mike's took this last game 28-15 from O.T., but this made little difference in the group standing. Play for the greater part of the night was fast, both teams breaking at every opportunity. The defence has been mentioned on more than one occasion lately for their steady playing, and this tilt was no exception. (We are not prejudiced.) On the forward line Ruth Thompson of O.T. turned in a good performance, scoring seven of her team's total. Rosemary Cunningham was the best for St. Mike's, not only was she high scorer with 16 points, but she was also in on most of the passing plays.

Winter Plays Havoc With Schedules As Varsity Rugby Finals Draw Near

"The wind she blow lak hurrican"—For which very good reason the quarter-final rugby game between U.C. and St. Mike's was not played yesterday. Warren Stevens inspected the stadium gridiron at 2:30 and decided, much to the relief of the interested players, that the ice was not soft enough to allow the game to go on. One U.C. player, ex-harvester, expressed the thought that it was better weather for "pitching bundles" rather than forward passes.

The latest official communique from Mac McCutcheon on the situation is to the effect that the managers of the four teams left in the Mulock Cup playdowns will meet at 12:30 p.m. today to devise ways and means to nose out old man winter. At present at least three games are necessary to complete the series and this with a sudden death final. Moreover these games have to be held on separate days. U.C. and St. Mike's meet first; the winner then tangles with Victoria while Senior School awaits the survivor of the second tussle.

An alternative solution has been suggested and it will probably be considered at today's meeting. By this a draw would be made among the four teams and two games would result both of which could be played on the first favourable day. Barring tie games, only the final would remain and it could be played on the second good day.

A further suggestion is that Senior School and Victoria by virtue of their league standing are entitled to seeded positions in the draw. In this manner a climax to the final is more or less preserved. What action the managers will take remains to be seen.

S.P.S. ,Vic, Dents In Lacrosse Finals For Dafoe Cup

The final resting place for 1943 for the Dafoe Cup will soon be decided as two School teams, Vic and Dents struggle down the last mile in the lacrosse playoffs.

Friday at 12:15 the first of the semis will be played when Jr. School and Vic tangle. Then on Saturday at 11:30 Senior School and Dents mix it up for the playoff berth. The finals between the winners of these two games will commence on Monday—the number of games to be decided by the finalists.

Senior and Junior School drew playoff byes, taking their respective groups in straight games. The second placers in the first two groups eliminated the representatives of the third group. Dents squelched St. Mike's, who won their group title, by a 9-4 score. Vic eliminated School fourths with a 13-7 count. Thus the two School teams may be favoured over the second place teams whom they meet. But the selection of an ultimate winner is a matter of deep conjecture.

PRESS COMMENT

Reprinted from "L'Oeil de Carabin" in Le Quartier Latin, Friday, Nov. 27:

Beau Geste des Etudiants de Toronto

Dix-huit jeunes allemands, étudiants d'universités et de collèges anglais jusqu'au déclenchement des hostilités, alors qu'ils furent dirigés vers un camp d'internement, ont récemment été remis en liberté, par ordre des autorités canadiennes. Ces jeunes hommes, comme on le suppose bien, n'eurent rien de plus pressé que de reprendre les études qu'ils avaient dû abandonner en '39. Et ils firent en conséquence une demande d'inscription à l'Université de Toronto. Mais le Bureau des gouverneurs de la dite université, réuni à cet effet, s'avisa de leur refuser l'entrée à l'Université. On eût pu croire qu'à Toronto, l'affaire se fût close là, sans aucune protestation, à la satisfaction de tous. Bien au contraire, un imposant groupe d'étudiants, se trouvant réuni peu après l'incident, passe une résolution pour manifester sa désapprobation de la décision prise et demander au Bureau des gouverneurs d'étudier le cas à nouveau, et ce à une unanimité et avec un enthousiasme qui surprennent les étudiants eux-mêmes. Le lendemain, le Varsity adopte la même attitude résolue, et revient encore à la charge les jours qui suivent.

(Le Quartier Latin then quotes from Varsity news columns and editorials of Nov. 17, and editorials of Nov. 18.)

Il faut également donner crédit au McGill Daily d'avoir endossé sans hésiter, dans son numéro du 19, l'opinion de son confrère torontois.

(Here is quoted the McGill Daily editorial of Nov. 19, already reprinted in these columns.)

Dans la presse non-universitaire, notons que le Toronto Star opina dans le sens des étudiants, tandis que l'ultra-jingo Toronto Telegram, frère de lait du Globe and Mail, se scandalisa qu'il eut même été question d'admettre les dix-huit jeunes allemands à l'Université.

Post-War Co-operation Urged by American

only a few weeks against the Axis forces. Since that time we have learned that the Russians possess real strength and skill in military prowess and strategy, he continued.

Russia could not have fought back the army of Hitler had she not had equipment in large quantities and in good condition, manufactured by the Russian people. The fact that she had this equipment showed that industrial production in the Soviet Union was more efficient than most people in America believed possible.

The five year plans set up in Russia have been responsible for the rising standard of living, but due to the fact that from 1932 on the Russians realized that they would have to spend a great deal of time, energy and raw materials to equip themselves for defence against a possible attack from the west, the standard of living has not risen as much as it might have under more favourable conditions.

In preparation for this expected attack Russia had redistributed her industries throughout the Soviet Union, many having been moved from vulnerable positions in the west to such areas as the Ural Mountains, the Caucasus and Sibcria. Such action has helped to open up the whole country for industry, and by June 1940, Russia had more industry east of the Ural mountains than the whole of Czarist Russia had in 1913.

Had it not been for her well-functioning economic system both before and after the beginning of the war, Russia would not have been able to hold out against the Axis, said Mr. Lamont. The collective farming system has increased harvests and taught the peasants modern mechanical techniques. General economic planning and training of people for modern industry have greatly improved conditions in Russia. The Soviet has made phenomenal advances in technical as well as elementary education since 1917.

Russian leadership in the war has been unmatched, and many of the Russian generals are young men. It is erroneous to believe that individual initiative disappeared with the introduction of the new regime, for it is seen not only in the Russian army leaders, but also in the Russian people, especially the guerilla fighters behind the German lines.

Democracy in Russia is not mere political democracy but embraces every aspect of life. Although there are 150 different racial groups within the country, there is little race prejudice, and any expression of such prejudice is punishable by law.

Russia's new constitution expresses the trend towards complete democracy, political, cultural, and economic, in which the people are driving.

At the time of the Munich conference Russia was not invited to participate, and the Russians acquired the idea that the western countries were trying to make Russia and Germany fight each other to death. Russia's annexations of territory were made against the inevitable blow from the west, and they proved invaluable when the attack came.

In her foreign policy, Russia seeks peace through collective security; disarmament both to reduce friction and save money; furtherance of international trade; and non-intervention in the affairs of other nations.

Unless the United Nations co-operate with one another and remain united after the present war is over, lasting peace will be impossible and the world will soon find itself running into serious trouble again.

"Russia, the British Commonwealth of Nations, and the United States, must continue to march together after the war is over. We must think in terms of being united for victory, united in victory, and united after victory," the speaker concluded.

Student-Staff Meetings To Open on Saturday

ference on Dec. 11 and 12.

Some of the questions considered by the sub-committees will include the abolishment of the course, the possibility and desirability of speeding up courses, how such speed up might be accomplished, the question of entrance standards, and the problem of faculty members liable for draft call. A list of many other possible topics for discussion are presented in the memorandum.

"The programme outlined in the memorandum does not pretend to be exhaustive," explained Jim Weld, Chairman of the Programme Committee, "but merely hopes to present some of the broad lines the discussion may follow."

Weld explained that there were special committees besides the committees and sub-committees on course revision. These include committees on military training, on extra-curricular activities, and on the institution of a university selective service such as that existing at Yale University.

"The main thing is that all interested students consult their sub-committee chairman to arrange for meetings next week," said Weld. "The sub-committees have only four days to confer next week, and it is essential that the organizational problems be cleared away as soon as possible."

PROFESSORS ARE NOT ONLY HUMAN BUT ALMOST IMMORTAL DEPT. There's a Prof. on campus who likes to tilt back in his chair while lecturing, and just as his mother told him, or should have, when he was a lad, he occasionally comes down with a most disastrous-sounding crash. On these occasions he recovers himself quickly and turns to his horror-stricken students, saying, "You'll have to get used to this; I do it all the time."

Another person of equally unorthodox sitting habits is a little Theda Bara-type co-ed wearing green knee socks and sheepdog bangs we noted in a Harbord Street sweetery recently. This creature likes languidly to sip cokes in a semi-reclining position, feet up on the bench and one elbow on the table. Sich manners! Enybody in History could tell her ya only eat that way in Greek restaurants.

This piece of wacky persiflage, bearing various connotations, including more than a hint of commercial sabotage, wafted through this sweetery the other day.

A proud Greek-lettered co-ed was expounding the virtue, size, extent and so-on of her fraternity (sorority? Like we say, women confuse us) at the same time punctuating her remarks with waves of an empty coke bottle. "Yes, indeed," she asserted," discussing the topic of the various chapters, "they have them all over the States."

"Yup," agreed a passer-by, "and they come in green bottles, too."

Doubtless you hear the loud wails that went up when the U.A.T.C. was issued with those billboard shoulder badges. We did, and were rather unsympathetic with one lad and said, naively, that we didn't see anything wrong with the loud blazons.

"Oh, you don't, eh?" he snapped heatledly. "Well, it's plain to see you don't smoke."

More about the U.A.T.C.—The Air Force sets a high standard for vision, but apparently requires little in the way of discrimination on the part of its members. After the rugby game last Saturday afternoon when air-force officers were walking down teeming Devonshire Place with their saluting arm propped up, who should approach a group of U.A.T.C. lads but an Army private in one of the new issue raincoats and carrying a brief swagger stick. Quickly one U.A.T.C. lad snapped up his right flipper, and the soldier just caught himself with his hand half-raised in return. Three civilian friends became weak with laughter and when last seen the soldier was tantrumentally breaking his swagger stick over his knee.

Well, enough of that sort of thing. Tomorrow you will have the privilege of hearing a real high-minded hither by none other than Owen Prichard, Varsity sportsed of two years ago. Our ol pal Owen, now a Licentiate in Theology, blew in Tuesday from Montreal where he is the voice of Saint James the Apostle and frantically begged to be allowed to write a hither. So, tomorrow we are happy to present a very proper sort of hither by a gentleman of the cloth—yes, a very proper hither indeed, for like we always say of Owen, "He's a proper one, he is."

DR. CODY WILL OPEN STUDENT CONFERENCE

Delegates to Meet in Economics Building Tomorrow Morning to Elect Executive and Discuss Organization

NON-DELEGATES INVITED

Delegates to the Staff-Student Conference on the University in wartime will hold an organizational meeting tomorrow morning at 9 o'clck in Room 119A (the big hall) in the Economics Building. All students and staff who are not delegates are also urged by the convening committee to attend.

Dr. H. J. Cody, President of the University, will be the opening speaker at the meeting. The speaker following Dr. Cody will be Tom Nixon, chairman of the Convening Committee.

First business will be the election of the general executive committee, followed by the election of committee chairmen. J. D. M. Weld, programme director of the Convening Committee, will then explain further details of the programme, organization and information received from Ottawa. The meeting will then turn to the discussion of the mechanics of the Conference.

"It is the responsibility of all students who have an interest in the University to attend," Nixon told The Varsity and pointed out that non-delegate students and staff members will be permitted to speak from the floor when the discussion is thrown open.

Non-delegates attending the Conference will also be able to serve on general committees such as those on Military Affairs and University Selective Service, it was revealed. Any students interested in serving on committees considering the revision of courses are urged to get in touch with their sub-committee chairmen.

(Complete lists of sub-committee chairmen were published in The Varsity of Thursday, Dec. 3.)

Thief Steals Money From Hutton House Room

A thief stole $23 from a ground floor room in Hutton House, University College women's residence, yesterday morning. A man believed to be the thief was seen entering the residence at 11:30 a.m. and leaving 15 minutes later.

The ground floor of the residence was deserted at the time the theft is believed to have taken place. The owner of the stolen money revealed that her room had been thoroughly searched but that only the money had been taken. It had been kept in a drawer in the room, which was unlocked.

The man seen entering the residence was described as being of medium height and wearing a dark brown hat and blue winter coat. He was carrying no parcels or bundles of any kind when seen.

Culliton Draft Condemned By Students At McGill

By Bob MacIntash
C.U.P. Editor, McGill Daily

Montreal, Dec. 3—(CUP)—A resolution condemning the drafting of Professor Culliton was passed today by the Student Society of McGill University. Although a substantial majority supported the resolution, a small group provided tenacious opposition.

The arguments in favour of the resolution were based on the principle involved, rather than on the Culliton case in particular. The first argument put forward in opposition was that other key professors had left to join the forces and their respective departments had never protested in this manner. To this, those in favour replied that the above-mentioned men had left for appropriate jobs, that is, to do work in which their experience and training would have more value to the war effort.

The opposition suggested that Culliton was not essential to the Economics Department. Affirmative speakers claimed that McGill had just this year added two professors to this department.

India to be Topic At Varsity Debate

The first All-Varsity debate of this season on the campus will take place Monday at the Victoria College Debating Parliament's second session.

Representatives of U.C., St. Mike's, Lorretto and Vic will tangle over the subject, "Resolved, the India is ready for complete independence." Marg Albright of Vic and Bryant Kassirer of U.S. will uphold the affirmative against the negative team composed of Jean Vale from Loretto and Don Rohr from St. Mike's. It is expected that guest members of the House will include several Indian citizens who are now connected with the University.

Opposition Leader John Dales explained that the Vic Debating Parliament had arranged this All-Varsity Debate "to replace in some measure the Hart House Debates which were discontinued several years ago."

Prime Minister Marg Dillon said, "I hope supporters from all colleges will come to the debate to back up their representatives. All colleges are welcome, of course."

Both she and Dales expressed the hope that those who attend the debate will familiarize themselves with the topic before they come. "They might look over Cripps' proposals and the speeches on imperialism by Wendell Willkie and Vice-President Henry Wallace," suggested the Leader of the Opposition.

Saving Electricity Is R.C.I. Topic

Ways and means whereby electricity may be conserved for war work will be discussed by Dr. Thomas H. Hogg, graduate of S.P.S. and now Chairman and Chief Engineer of the Hydro Electric Power Commission of Ontario, at the Royal Canadian Institute lecture in Convocation Hall on Sat., Dec. 5, at 8:15 p.m.

Dr. Hogg has an international reputation as a hydraulic engineer and has been largely responsible for the design of many of the Commission's power plants. His advice has been sought throughout the Dominion on connection with various power propects and he was an official Canadian delegate at the Third World Power Conference held at Washington in 1936.

ST. MIKE'S NON-RESIDENTS FORM SOCIAL CLUB

Non-resident student of St. Michael's College have formed an organization tentatively called the St. Michael's "Lit," to organize their extra-curricular activities, it was learned last night.

The new organization, formed at a meeting of non-residents last Sunday, will accommodate the 70 day students who make up a minority of the college enrolment.

The Lit's second meeting is a smoker scheduled for Sunday night at 8 p.m. in Brennan Hall.

HART HOUSE THEATRE TO CLOSE NEXT TERM

Syndics Announce Six-Month Shutdown of Drama Centre as Departing Manager Found Irreplaceable

SOLUTION SOUGHT

Hart House Theatre, home of campus drama since the last war, will shortly close its doors for the six months following Jan. 1. A letter from Professor Gilbert Norwood, Chairman of the Board of Syndics of the Theatre, informed The Varsity yesterday that Norman Nichol, present manager of the theatre, will shortly join the armed forces.

"We have found no one who is both thoroughly competent to conduct the managership and also reasonably sure of being able, in the present upheaval, to retain it during the next six months," the letter states. "To keep the Theatre open would therefore involve serious risk that we should be forced to cancel bookings at hopelessly short notice—a risk we have no right to incur."

In the latter part of next June the Syndics will consider the possibility of re-opening the theatre in September.

Prof. Norwood expressed the gratitude of the Syndics to the various individuals and groups who have used the Theatre, saying, "Such friends will readily believe that this decision has been made only with deep regret and after long deliberation."

History of the Theatre

The Theatre was founded on the visions of the Hon. Vincent Massey, now Canadian High Commissioner in London, and Mrs. Massey of an experimental theatre for the University and for the wider community which it serves. Opened after the last war, dur-

Literary Issue Judges Named

Literary judges of contributions to The Varsity's Christmas Literary Issue—scheduled to appear Dec. 8—will be Prof. J. D. Robins, Head of the Department of English in Victoria College, and Prof. A. E. Barker, Director of Studies in English in Trinity College, Michael O'Mara, Editor-in-Chief, announced last night.

Prof. C. F. Comfort, of the the Department of Fine Art, will judge the art-work for the special eight-page green number, it was previously announced.

Dr. Robins will judge the prose and essay sections of the annual competition, while Dr. Barker will mark the light and serious verse sections.

"Contributions have been disappointing to date," O'Mara said last night. "We only have four more days to the deadline now, and if students want the tradition of the 'Green Issue' to be carried on, it's up to them to get busy."

Deadline for the contests is noon, Tuesday, Dec. 8. Contributions should be turned in to The Varsity Office, Hart House, or the Women's Varsity Office, Room 42A, University College. Literary efforts should be in typescript or legibly written, and are contributions should be executed on white paper in India ink.

Student-Harvesters Receive Questionnaires

Students who left the campus to go harvesting this fall have received questionnaires in the mail, the last two day, from a special committee of the Council of the Faculty of Arts.

The series of questions was designed to help the committee in their report to the Council meeting this month.

Questionnaire asked for specific information pertaining to the length of time the student-harvesters worked, the pay received, living conditions on the farms, good and bad features of the arrangements made last October. Students were also asked for general comments on the scheme.

Findings drawn from the results of the questionnaire will be used to aid and improve arrangements if a similar plea for student labour is made to the University next year.

Forces Favour Pictorials Say Book Harvest Officials

Did you know that Life is the most popular magazine in the Armed Forces? When interviewed on the Book Harvest, being held on the campus this week, each representative of the Army, Air Force and Navy exclaimed:

"Get us more Life's!"

"There never seems to be enough of these magazines to go around"—one airman remarked, when asked in the crowded halls of Hart House at noon.

Tom Smith, another airman taking his training here at University, remarked that during the course here, the boys don't have much time to pursue any other reading except their own intensive studying.

"Any extra reading we do, is always in magazines, where the stories or articles are short."

"I think Varsity has hold of a wonderful idea," said Jack Hodgins, private, R.C.O.C. No. 2 Ordance Corps, Manning Depot. "But when the boys sleep out, as many of us do, they usually depend upon their own libraries for any of their extra reading."

"The libraries in the barracks here," he continued, "are very complete. We could do with more technical books pertaining to the courses the boys are taking. Most men, however, like magazines—Magazine Digest, News Week (it doesn't matter how old, because they are always interesting) and particularly Life and Time, as well as any pictorial magazines—Look, Pic and Click."

Sailors are in favour of additions to their technical books for their courses. They find that more reference books would come in handy.

"On the whole," one authority told us, "we like magazines—where we can begin and finish a story in one sitting."

"You've got something there," a soldier told us (he wouldn't let us use his name). "Keep up the good work, Varsity."

"Typical Co-ed" Contest War Service Day Feature

Dr. H. J. Cody, President of the University of Toronto, will start the ceremonies of the forthcoming "War Sevices Day" on Dec. 9, when he will present a cheque to the International Student's Service drive, shortly after 12:30 that afternoon. In return he will receive faculty ribbons from the girls entered in the "Typical Co-ed" contest, one of the main features of the program, the committee announced last night.

The committee also announced that if the weather roes not permit holding the street dancing as originally planned, there will be a program of some sort arranged in Hart House theatre to take its place.

Meanwhile, Walter Lyons, II Social Work, a member of the Book Harvest committee, announced that receipt of books for the harvest which will coincide with the I.S.S. drive have exceeded 500.

The co-eds who will present the ribbons to the president will be contestants in the "Typical Co-ed of the University" contest which is to be held in Hart House Theatre in the early afternoon. It is believed by the committee that this is the first contest of this sort to be held on this campus in a considerable number of years.

Each faculty will be entitled to one entrant, and the judges will be announced later. Exact details as to time and conditions of entering the theatre are also being momentarily withheld by the committee.

As was stated previously, the day, a combination of the I.S.S. appeal for funds and the culmination of the Book Harvest, will start early in the morning with the sale of University ribbons in the various faculties. During noon hour there will be co-eds canvassing the campus, selling University ribbons to those who have not purchased theirs yet and faculty ribbons to those who already have their University ribbons.

To The Young At Heart

To President H. J. Cody of the University of Toronto, The Varsity extends its heartiest greetings in anticipation of his 74th birthday, which will be celebrated Sunday.

It has been customary courtesy to offer this newspaper's good wishes annually to the President on these occasions. To some the practice may seem a perfunctory gesture. Actually it is prompted, in Dr. Cody's case, by the warmest feelings of respect and regard.

The University is singularly fortunate to have as its leader, in times when there may be far-reaching changes pending, when institutions of higher learning are in great need of sound leadership, so able a man as Dr. Cody. And the students of the University are privileged to have as their president a man who has so consistently shown himself eager to forward their interests. Seldom do men reach the stature of Dr. Cody and retain their ability to see things so clearly from the viewpoint of the young.

Dr. Cody was described recently in Saturday Night as " a man of broad culture and generous humanity." To this we add that he has been, in his 11-year tenure of a difficult office, a man of infinite understanding.

Parenthetically, The Varsity must insert here its own thanks to the President for the many kindnesses and courtesies he has shown us in the past, and assure him that they have been appreciated.

We take a special pleasure in expressing the birthday greetings of the entire University to its President, and on behalf of his staff and students wishing him a great many happy returns of the day.

Salute The Conference

Tomorrow will see the launching of the Staff-Student Conference when staff and students will gather for the organization meeting in the Big Hall of the Economisc Building at 9:15 a.m. Already the chairmen of the sub-committees of the Conference have been appointed. The sub-committees represent the various courses given throughout the whole University and their work will be to prepare and present suggestions on how their course can be improved, with special emphasis on their duties in the present war situation.

The enthusiasm shown by the chairmen of these sub-committees and by the student delegates who will be chosen to serve on them give excellent promise that the Conference will be a successful one.

Some students are perhaps still wondering what the Conference's aims are and what it can hope to accomplish. Its aim, briefly, is to clarify the status of the university student in wartime and to plan for an even further contribution from the University to the war effort. The task is immense; the idea behind the Conference is even larger. No Canadian campus has yet undertaken so large a project. McGill has a War Council which is doing excellent work to co-ordinate that University's war effort, and other universities follow somewhat similar systems, but none has enlisted the entire student body to discuss the questions which affect us most at the present time.

There is little question that the Conference will fail to achieve much that it has set itself to do. Last year's conference of the medical students on this campus proved the worth of such discussion. A report of that conference was forwarded to the Government at Ottawa and was adopted practically in toto, with the result that any medical student within two years of graduation can join the medical branch of the Canadian forces, wear uniform and draw pay. This plan has been proved to be most sastifactory: it has solved the financial problem for medical students whose summer earnings have been cut short by the accelerated courses and it gave them better status with the civilian population by virtue of their uniforms. Although at the time of the conference the staff especially thought that the request to join the uniformed forces was hopeless, Ottawa quickly granted the wish as a satisfactory solution of the problem.

In the same way the coming Conference for the whole University may accomplish other student-proposed plans.

"The Commonwealth requires the education of the people as the safeguard of order and liberty" reads the inscripition on the Boston Public Library. With a minor alteration the same might be said of our own country. The need for education to safeguard our way of life is all the more accute at the present time. The United States forces have discovered a shortage of those experts necessary to the waging of a total war. Here, thanks perhaps to the wish of so many students to study technical courses, we do not appear to have so accute a shortage, but still more experts are needed.

The problem of the Arts courses, which we have reviewed exhaustively in these columns earlier in the term, is to ensure that "order and liberty" for which we are fighting. Without these so-called unnecessary courses we would have no democracy nor any ideas of order or liberty for which to fight.

These and the many smaller problems for the University arising from the war will be discussed, with the active co-operation of our professors, at the meetings tomorrow and during the whole of next week and the following week-end. With the enthusiasm of delegates, staff and students the Conference should succeed in solving many of them.

ART and MUSIC Drama

Came The Revolution

The Devil's Disciple

Vic's production of Shaw's The Devil's Disciple is excellent. Last night's performance was real entertainment, of a kind far beyond the usual undergraduate offering. The melodramatic aspects of the play were brought out, at the expense of some of the finer shading perhaps, but the play is definitely good. The audience reacted with a little to much immaturity (giggling in the wrong places a few times), but it entered into the general spirit of the play and definitely enjoyed itself.

The general level of acting is very high, and the casting excellent. Shaw's puppets prove to be real people, even when caricatures. The best performance of the evening was that of Essie, played by Mary Ellen Wenwick, followed closely by Tom Nixon as Anthony Anderson. His C.S.M.'s voice made his transition to soldiering extremely natural. Mrs. Dudgeon, too, was very good. The rest of the cast was uniformly excellent, with one exception, who probably realizes it!

To return to Miss Fenwick. Her part, for the time she was on the stage, contained fewer words than anyone else's, but she made every word tell, and created a living character from extremely difficult material. She was not the most important character on the stage, but she was the most perfect.

The production was not letter perfect—no first night performance is. But I noticed only one missed line (that showed, that is). The only flaws occurred in the last scene, where the ghastly music turned into comedy the one place where the melodrama shows signs of becoming drama. And the battlements along the back of this scene seemed more fitted for Elsinore than Websterbridge.

But make not mistake about it. The Devil's Disciple is the best undergraduate production I have seen. It is something that will long remain in your mind. It, above all, is interesting, and the interest never flags. Probably even Shaw would appreciate it.

NEIL MACDONALD.

Under The Weather

Ernesto Vinci, Baritone

I am afraid that the weather has affected Mr. Ernesto Vinci. At any rate it seems charitable to assume that the hoarse and coarse tone which he displayed last night was caused by a bad cold. Apart from this distressing fact and a few other technical uncertainties, Mr. Vinci gave a concert last night that was usually adequate and often enjoyable.

Beethoven's son cycle The the Beloved at a Distance was impressive, although some listeners may find the lack of melodic distinction not fully compensated for by the elevation and nobility of the style. Among other at-

Blueboys Swamp Burgoyne's Redcoats In Tangled Tussle

To Meet Cornwallis Team in Playoffs at Yorktown in 1781

DECISION PROTESTED

In as rough a game of histrionics as these tired old eyes ever seen Burgoyne's redcoats went down to defeat on the stage of Hart House Theatre last night before the savage onslaughts of Coach Georgie Washington's Blue and Buff Valley Forgers to a score of 0-99. Vicious by-play by civilian Colonists and nebulous Forces of Moral Reaction who periodically cast their hats and viciously barbed epithets on the ice hampered the play extremely.

Hardly had play started when assistant coach Grey, who was in command in the absence of his boss who was sitting for a postage stamp, threw in a substitute for the leading man. Points started to mount up when Minister Anderson for the Forgers scored the morals of the community.

Burgoyne, who rode about the field on a grey pony, looking very smart in a three-cornered polo helmet, very nearly brought the proceedings to a rapid close, but he failed to score. Contrary to popular opinion, Burgoyne does give a hang. He nearly succeeded in hanging the Valley Forgers' star player Richard Dudgeon, but due to too rapid substitutions by the Valley Forgers were found to have too many men on the field and the play was called back.. This was the last scoring chance the Redcoats had and play ended with them all well in the hole.

Protests were registered by Burgoyne on behalf of his team, claiming corruption of officials. He alleges that a white breaded individual was seen bribing the well-known referee N. Exorable Fate.

University Students and Airmen Welcome

Americans At St. Mike's Face Uncertain Draft Call

By Doc Savage

With the passage of the 18-19 year-old draft law in the United States, new complications have been added to an already over-taxed situation facing the American students enrolled in St. Michael's College.

It is impossible to state the situation with any degree of clarity, due to the mechanisms of the American Selective Service System. Each draft board is a law unto themselves in that they have a definite quota each month that must be filled, and the pool of available manpower varies with each individual board. Thus their attitude towards the college student depends to a great extent on how badly they need men to fill their quotas.

As a result of this, some of the boys are of the opinion that they will be called up shortly, possibly in the January draft, while others have been granted deferments, and the vast majority are more or less in the dark as to their status.

The "Westerners" or American students who are taking what corresponds to the American first year college and Canadian fifth form, number in the fifties. These are the students who, because of their age, have been most affected by this new law. Of these, about 20 have received questionnaires.

Of the Americans registered in first year Varsity, about 24 have received their questionnaires and seven have already been classified.

The first year group are the most pessimistic about their chances of completion,

There are 20 Americans in Second Year and it is believed that all of these have received their questionnaires. There are only 11 left in Third Year.

Many students enlisted during the summer, but an accurate estimate of the number is impossible due to transfers, students dropping out and similar causes. An indication of how heavily St. Mike's was hit may be found in the fact that of all student officials (S.A.C. and Athletic Representatives) elected last year only four returned this fall.

A small percentage of the students have been able to qualify for Marine and Naval Reserve commission, and others are taking pre-medical courses.

"Need Life Insurance—

WHO - ME?"

The younger you are when you take out your first life insurance policy, the lower your premium will be.

So, you should start thinking about your life insurance when you get your first salary cheque.

Will you need insurance? Yes—unless you intend to live like a bermit without human contacts and responsibilities. One day you may have a home of your own to keep, a family to provide for. One day you may need security for a business loan; and, some distant day, you will certainly need money for your own retirement.

There are Mutual Life policies that can do all these things. When the time comes for you to buy life insurance, see a Mutual Life representative. He will help you to plan the right kind and amount of insurance protection to suit your special needs.

S.P.S. Favoured In Swim Finals

According to the showing made by the 65 Hart House water churners in the elimination trials in the Junior Interfaculty Swim Meet yesterday afternoon, School's victory apparently will be even more decisive than their most one-sided victory in many years of 1940. Last fall Schoolmen collected 55 points while all other faculties combined only scraped up 31. Out of the so-far-decided 25 finalists for Monday's set-to, 21 will do their splashing for the Blue and Gold, while three will vaunt Vic colours and one U.C.'s.

Because of a scarcity of time and a surfeit of contentants the 200 yard relay, the 150 medley and the diving were left for Monday. However the 50, 100 and 300 yard free, along with the 100 back and 200 breast, were run off and five finalists selected for each.

The 50 yard free promises close competition Monday for the five finalists were within a second of one another. The five were P. Lockhart, G. Ball, G. Ferrier and T. Graham, all of S.P.S., and R. Jeanes of Vic.

The 300 ward free has four more Schoolmen, namely J. Martin, H. Hall, J. Swanson, J. Brace. Vic is also represented in the person of J. Crang who made very good time in his trial.

U.C.'s lone finalist appears in the 100 yard back in the person of Frank Waldon. School flashes four more natators here again with W. Sharpe, W. McDonald, O. Whittingham and D. Forester carrying the mail.

The 100 yard free style has another four representatives in the persons of D. Ferester, J. Sansom, A. Patterson and A. Dickson. J. Craing is Vic's hope in this event also.

The 200 ward breast ended the afternoon events, to further clinch School's monopoly. All five in this hail from the Engineering Faculty: B. Barrington, G. Bow, J. Roberts, H. Hall and K. Sharpe.

BOOK HARVEST

Book harvest representatives have a letter waiting for them at their college or faculty office. Printed posters are also available at the S.A.C. office.

tractive things As Ever I Saw by Peter Warlock was particularly fine.

And finally Sir Ernest MacMillan's accompaniments had distinction which did not however compensate for technical sloppiness. The epilogue to Mozart's Non Piu Andrai was played as inaccurately as anything I can remember ever having heard on the concert stage.

Brilliant

Lubka Kolessa

Lubka Kolessa gave a truly brilliant recital yesterday at the Conservatory Concert Hall. This all-Beethoven program gave her a chance to interpret something really worthwhile, and she certainly made the most of her opportunity.

The first selection was the Sonata in B Flat Major—a sonata which many an aspiring musician has plowed through. But what a difference in Kolessa's interpretation! Hers was the performance of a gifted artists, as well as of a sound technician.

But her interpretation of the C Major Sonata surpassed even that. I have never heard Beethoven played more brilliantly! The aAagio section was particularly captivating, for Madame Kollesa brought out every shade of inner meaning with her remarkably sympathetic interpretation. Kolessa's treatment of the Beethoven might be condemned by some purists as being too romantically sentimental, but to me it was perfect.

The lighter part of the program included three Bagatelles and two Ecosaisses. Kolessa rippled through them with such ease and enjoyment that the audience caught the spirit and enjoyed them with her.

Speaking Of Sport

By Roger Conant

THE HARD AND THE FAST OF IT

Didja ever know where they got the word gridiron? Well, it seemed like someone took a gander at Varsity Stadium one cold December 4. Whoda' thunk a coupla hunks of tinware were waiting for the temperature to rise to be given away. Yea—in case you haven't heard—a mug they call the Grey Cup is awaiting its turn tomorrow and another they call the Mulock is just plain waiting its turn. But, of course, the latter is plutocratic—it needs three games—three—until its holder can be found.

The Grey Cup game will on despite the combination skating rink-pavement effect of the ordinarily grassy sward of the Blood Bowl. For crowds will appear at this game—and crowds mean money—and money means sand and salt preparations for the rugby surface and equipment for the players and cheques to pay doctor bills for the unfortunates. But will crowds appear, let alone pay, to see 12 Artsmen endeavour to bounce 12 Engineers on the granite field? Thus, by a process of Sherlock Holmesian deductive reasoning one could construe that sand and salt and equipment and doctor bills will not be payed for. Thus, one could perhaps further gather—if one mulled the subject enough—that the remaining Mulock Cup games could not be played with conditions remaining the same. Unless, of course, it was decided to play touch rugby on the spacious floor of the University Avenue Armories.

Then comes the necessity of waiting for a break in the weather—that is to give the field a chance to thaw out and become a mud puddle. But then the gamblers in the audience pipe up and question the odds at finding six days of warmth. And to substantiate their questioning they state that this is the latest in history to be playing interfaculty rugby. The year 1939 saw St. Mike's down Trinity 13-6 to cop the cup on November 29. Then in 1940 the two S.P.S. teams waited all winter for a break in the weather—and never got it—and the last game of that season was November 25. Last year saw Vic walk away from Trinity to collect the silverware on November 28. So one can conjure by the records that the chances for six good days might be slightly slim. For six days are needed—U.C. and St. Mike's to play—two days later the winner takes on Vic to decide the challenger to Senior School two more days later.

Ah, Doctor Watson, we could then surmise that the odds of finding four goods days would be in ratio of 2 to 3 to finidng six good days. Then, shot one bright student of deductive reasoning—if the playoffs are kept to two playing days—sat if U.C. and Vic battled on the same day as a St. Mike's-School match, the silverware could be given away twa days hence. And everything, if Jack Frost came through with a little break, would be hunky-doodly. Ah. but then come vociferous wails from the Engineering section of our audience. Because of impending examinations we can't nd time for an extra game—it would be hard enough to field a team for even the final game, let alone a semi too. And anyways injuries sustained on the hard field would jeopardise academic chances of some.

As a matter of fact, some suggestions were brought up before a meeting of the four managers yesterday. As any decision to change the schedule must be unanimous—no revision was accomplished. However, the standing committee convenes today and probably—as it is hoped by all parties—a solution will be found for the problem of the day.

Theatre to Close After New Year's

ing which it had served as a rifle range, it became the home of the growing dramatic groups of the campus.

A small, but technically complete theatre, it became the home of the Players' Club, whose memory is called to mind by the painted inscription at the base of one of the pillars near the stage door. The theatre once has its own costuming department under a separate director, and early in its career was staffed entirely by undergraduates and faculty members, the stage manager being the only professional employed.

At one time the Theatre supported a regular repertory season during which eight plays were presentcd. Casts were entirely amateur and were drawn from all over the campus. It was the home of the Ontario Section of the Dominion Dramatic Festival until the Festival was suspended for the duration of the war. It has also been the scene of most student productions and the University theatre nights as well as of the annual University Drama Festival.

Way Out Sought

Reaction to the Syndics' announcement among leaders of campus drama was immediate and pronounced. Jack Coleman, president of the Victoria College Dramatic Society, expressed surprise and hoped that if some solution could be found the Syndics might not consider the verdict as final. Ken Peck, pesident of the University College Players' Guild, was for immediate conference of the University Drama Committee to seek a concrete solution to present to the Board.

Rev. J. L. O'Donnel, adviser to the St. Michael's Players and director of their forthcoming production of "The Late Christopher Bean," said, "I'm sorry to see it close. Of course it is obvious no student could carry on the management, with all the demands on a student's time today, but it seems to me there should be a way to keep it open."

A plan similar to the way in which The Varsity is published by students was suggested by Doug Stewart, president of the Victoria College Music Club. "Some sort of student committee could be formed to manage the theatre, at least until the present bookings have been fulfilled," he said.

Next week will see the opening of the semi-finals at ye old O.C.E. and by the 14th, round about Christmas time, the finals winners will be named. On Monday, at 5:30, II P.H.E. and U.C. Seniors will test their basket-shooting and checking ability, At 6:30, U.C. Freshette and the winner of the preliminary game between III P.H.E. and Vic Jrs., are scheduled to play. Both times it will be U.C.'s home game.

On Wednesday at 6:30, U.C. Seniors and II P.H.E. will play a return match. At 7:30 the finals game will be played between U.C. Freshies and the winner of the preliminaries. In these game it will be the opposite team's home game to even things up—and, as usual, total points will count for the two tilts.

These games, in addition to the preliminary one tonight at 5:30, are very promising. The teams matched are close in ability and anything is liable to happen. Let's keep these dates in mind and look in on a game or two in between our Christmas shopping, what? We'll have more news about the finals next week.

hither and yon

with owen prichard

. . . So the Exchange Ed strolls in on his knees and coyly hints that he would welcome a hither from The Varsity Montreal reader. We withstood his blandishments until he started tearing out fingernails, chanting diabolically, "Go on, I dare ya! Write something funny!" The following is typrewritten with a torn and bleeding pinky, on his promise that he will not let my grandmother out of the dungeon.

THERE'S NOTHING THE MATTER WITH OLD McGILL, as witness the testimony of a gorvernment man who came to Montreal recently to whip up the Redmen's enthusiasm for the harvesting expedition. Grasping a rhetorical Roman candle in both hands, this worthy clinched his oratory with a sweeping gesture toward the present Principal, who was gracing the platform. "Finally," he thundered, "your own principal, Dr. McGill, is solidly behind this venture!"

EVEN FUNERALS CAN BE FUNNY. A certain young cleric (who shall remain un-named) had an anxious moment one day last summer with a mourner of the leaky type who appeared to be quite moved at the moment when the funeral director touched the little pedal gadget which started his wife's casket gravewards. The tension grew when, the service over, he stood immobile, lost in thought. The cleric took his arm to case him away from the scene of sadness, and was greeted by the chipper remark, "That's quite an invention, isn't it?"

THE CURRENT BOOK HARVEST reminds us of a box of books for soldiers' spare-time reading in which we found an assortment of Butterick Pattern Books. "My dear," said the Sergeant-Major to the young recruit, "I'm just thrilled to see the improvement a little gusset made in that dream of a greatcoat you're wearing."

* * *

YOU NEVER KNOW WHAT YOU'RE EATING, even when they give you a menu. A Montreal restaurant of the better type, where they add the phone number onto your check, has been featuring Sirloin Steak with Smothered Onions. Gad, sir, that's worse than boiling lobsters alive!

ANNESLEY GIRLS WILL COME TO NO GOOD END, as long as residence officials post signs like those which appeared in quick succession last summer: "Gentlemen Will Leave by Eleven O'Clock" and the next day, "Lights Out at Ten."

THERE IS AN OLD ADAGE which runs, "A man never knows what happiness is until he's married, and then it's too late." We illustrate with the parable of a man who found that the brain must be whipped to extremes of nimble thought to keep the little wife from losing her sunny sweetness. This friend of ours had been let out for an evening of carousing with the old gang, and it was nearly 7 a.m. when he tiptoed into the bedroom and began to shed his coat and vest. To the stock outbrust, "Are you just getting home?" he replied, replacing his togs, "Oh, no, darling. I have a heavy day ahead of me at the office, and thought I'd go to work early."

SOME PEOPLE ARE SO CARELESS! Recently the Montreal Star carried an ad which said that even in these days of priorities someone had "LOST: A white girdle, in the St. Catherine street car or the York Theatre."

We've always wanted to write stories like the ones in Esquire, which never get anywhere. Lo, here is a true one which has us baffled. The other night at 4 a.m. the occupants of Bedside Manor, (the upholstered sewer in Montreal which we laughingly call our apartment) were roused from our beds by a vest-pocket edition of the seige of Stalingrad which was taking place out in the hall. The racket, we found emanated from a small man who was hammering on the door of The Girl Across the Hall. We're still mulling over his casual explanation, "I'm calling on Miss M . . . You see, there is a fellow who is crazy about her, and he was supposed to take her to a dance tonight, and he couldn't keep the date, and he asked me to come up here and apologize to her." Weird, what?

Where? When? At Honey Dew, of course, any doy. Grond food properly prepoied, temptingly seived. Benevolent to budgets, too.

PART I

No. 44-1942

1. DRESS—OFFICERS AND OTHER RANKS

The collar of the battle dress blouse will, or may, be worn closed or open on the various occasions as noted below:

(a) All ranks will wear the collar closed on all ceremonial parades and duties.

(b) Officers only may wear the collar open when walking out.

(c) All ranks may wear the collar open,

(i) On all route marches, training exercise, all parades, and working parties.

(ii) On duties in offices, stores buildings, supply depots, workshops, buildings, supply depots, workshop, etc.

(iii) On all other parades and duties in camp or other training areas, except ceremonial parades and duties.

(iv) When off duty in camps or other training areas, barracks or quarters.

NOTE: Other ranks will not wear ties.

Authority—District Order No. 1306 dated 1 December, 1942.

2. LOSS AND DAMAGE—ASSESSMENT

The following extracts from District Order No. 1310 dated 1 December, 1942, are published for the information and guidance of all concerned:

A soldier who is found guilty either by summary trial or by court-martial proceedings or losing or damaging any article of clothing, necessaries, personal equipment, or regimental equipment, including bedding and eating utensils, etc., by reason of neglect or culpable mismanagement, will, subject to para. 4 below, be assessed as follows:

(a) Repairable damage—Actual cost of repair, including both labour and materials or components; labour will be assessed at 75 cents per hour in the case of arms, technical equipment, and vehicles; 50 cents per hour in the case of other stores, including clothing, personal equipment and barrack stores, etc. If the cost of repaid exceeds the amount which would have been chareable had the article been damaged beyond repair, the District Officer Commanding may, at his discretion, authorize the lesser amount to be charged against the soldier.

(b) Loss or damage beyond repair—

(ii) Clothing and Equipment except technical instruments, including binoculars and telescopes, etc.

Seventy-five per cent of the full vocabulary rates, unless evidence is obtained that the actual value at the time of loss was greater or less, in which case the actual value will be assessed. The minimum amount to be assessed will not be less than one-quarter of the full vocabulary rate except in the case of clothing part worn at time of issue. The rate to be used as the basis of calculation for assessment for part-worn clothing will be one-half the full vocabulary rate.

(iii) Technical instruments, including binoculars, telescopes, etc.

Seventy-five per cent of the full vocabulary rates unless evidence is obtained that the actual value is greater or less, in which case the actual value will be assessed one-half the full vocabulary rate.

(iv) Small Arms—Full vocabulary rates will always be charged for Small Arms.

(c) The rate upon which calculations will be made are as laid down in the Priced Lists of Stores (Canadian) as published in Routine Orders and the Vocabulary of Army Ordnance Stores (British). When prices are obtained from the latter publication, 35 per cent of the price will be added to cover customs dues and Departmental expenses. The pound sterling will be taken at par.

4. Provided that the amount charged against the soldier is in accordance with the rules of assessment laid down in para. 1, Commanding Officers may dispose of all losses, etc., except that:

(a) If the amount proposed to be recovered from any soldier exceeds $20.00, the approval of the District Officer Commanding must be obtained.

(b) If it is proposed to allow any portion of the loss, etc., fall on the Public, the matter must be dealt with under KR (Can.).

Student-Staff Conference Opened By President Cody In Saturday Ceremony

Each Academic Course to Be Scrutinized and War Value Weighed; Explicit Recommendations Forthcoming

MacDONALD IS CHAIRMAN

With President H. J. Cody's opening address at an opening meeting concerned with the arrangements of mechanical details, the Student-Staff Conference got under way Saturday morning in the Big Hall of the Economics Building.

Dr. Cody's address was preceded by talks by Tom Nixon, chairman of the Convening Committee, and Jim Weld, chairman of the Program Committee.

Nixon outlined the reasons for calling the conference, saying that it would help to answer the question of whether universities were doing all they could to assist the national war effort, and would help the Government to make decisions regarding future policy in relation to universities.

"Strong Chairmanship" Urged

Weld, in charting the Conference program, urged "strong chairmanship" in the sub-committees which will consider the work of each academic course, in order that they can complete their tasks in the relatively short time allotted.

Dr. Cody, introduced by Nixon, hailed the Conference as "A unique event in the long history of this University . . . an indication of no stagnation of

GREEN ISSUE

The deadline for contributions to the Annual Literary Issue of The Varsity (the Green Issue) is noon tomorrow.

Contributions should be turned in to The Varsity Office, Hart House or the Women's Varsity Office, Room 42A, University College. Literary materials should be typescript or legibly written and art contributions should be in India ink on white paper.

U.S. Training Plan Affects Students

New York, Dec, 3—Two hundred and twenty-five colleges and universities are participating in a new retraining program sponsored by the United States Office of Education. The object of the program is to train men and women now employed in non-essential civilian jobs for work more closely connected with the war effort. Two hundred thousand students will be trained under the program during the present academic year in the 5,000 courses offered.

A $30,000,000 government subsidy makes it possible to offer the courses at no cost to the students who are drawn for the most part from men and women who are now working, but whose jobs, it is expected, will soon be discontinued

By Gearge Elliott

Rabbi Emil Fackenheim is a Jewish German student whom the International Student Service helped to bring to the University where he is working on his Ph. D. thesis.

Two days before the first Nazi pogrom in 1938 in which 50,000 Jewish people were put in concentration camps, Emil and two companions, as a step of despair, wrote letters to twelve American universities applying for scholarships. It took two days to translate these letters into English. The students were thrown into a concentration camp on the very day they mailed the letters.

Speaking of the pogrom, Emil said the Gestapo had complete records of all Jews in the smaller cities of Germany. Hearing that the small university town of Halle, where his father lived, had been cleared of Jews, Emil phoned his home from Berlin to see if his father was safe. The Gestapo had tapped the wires, though, and Emil was taken when he returned to Halle.

Conditions in the camp were horrible, Emil added. "I wonder what the Germans would do to those people who worked against them when I think of how they treated students."

Harvard University was the only school in the States that considered Fackenheim's appeal for a scholarship, as a result of the I.S.S. taking action in his favour.

Through the I.S.S. at Harvard, the head office at Geneva and the Society in England, a temporary visa was granted to the three students, in February, 1939.

After three months of frantic waiting, Fackenheim was released on the condition that he be out of the country within six weeks. It was eight weeks before he flew from Berlin to London and safety. He took up his studies at Aberdeen University in Scotland, where the I.S.S. helped him to register.

Interned again in 1940, Fackenheim arrived in Canada in August, 1940.

A year ago now, Emil left the internment camp to continue his studies again, through the courtesy of a Canadian sponsor.

"I have been here a year now, and I like it extremely well. . . . I feel very much at home," Emil declared. He went on to say, "I have been in many universities, studying, and as a graduate school, this University stands very high among the universities I have been too."

Emil Fackenheim said he would like to be a chaplain in the Canadian Army. He said he felt qualified for the job because of his experience helping the troubled and worried men in German concentration camps. Selective service regulations, however, do not allow aliens into the army.

The I.S.S. then, as now, operated on a slim budget, and how this society managed to arrange for transportation and finances for students like Emil Fackenheim is the story of a great humanitarian struggle.

Meds at Boston Have Course Cut

Boston, Dec. 3—By a vote of the Faculty, entrance requirements in Medicine at Boston University have been revised to require only two years of college work. Three were formerly required. The step was taken to relieve a threatened shortage of doctors.

Dr. Bennett F. Avery, Dean of the Faculty, said, "We have no intention, however, of lowering the rigid standards of the medical profession."

In common with a majority of United States universities, Boston's Medical Faculty has been operating on an accelerated schedule since the United States' entry into the war. It is now possible, by working all year, for a medical student to graduate in three years. To these three years and the two required in arts the medical student must add a year as an intern.

Carol Practices Begin on Campus

With a "White Christmas" just around the corner plans for Carol Services and Carol Singing are being formed all over the campus.

The U.C. Women's Glee Club under Lanse MacDowell will sing at Miss Ferguson's annual Christmas party on Monday, Dec. 14. They are practicing to accompany pageants as well.

Both the Women's Glee Club and the Hart House Glee Club will take part in the S.C.M. Carol Service at Knox Chapel Wednesday, Dec. 16.

Beginning Monday, Dec. 7, there will be Carol Singing at noon from 12:30 to 1:00 in the Women's Union on Mondays, Wednesdays and Fridays. This will include old and new carols and all women are invited.

At Victoria the Residence Choir is practicing to sing at the Christmas Dinner on Dec. 17, and the Chapel Choir will sing carols at the monthly Chapel Service. There will also be Carol Singing at the Wymilwood Musicale before Christmas. On Sunday evenings between now and Christmas there will be informal Carol Singing in the Common Room at Annesley Hall for the girls in residence.

On Sunday, Dec. 13, the Trinity Chapel Choir, led by Prof. A. Holt, will take part in a Carol Service to be held in Trinity College Chapel. This will be at 11 a.m. and everyone is welcome.

NEWS LECTURE

The last of the series of news lectures for staff members of The Varsity to be held in the Fall Term will be given today at 4 p.m. in Room 11, University College.

NEWSFRONTS

London—600 Allied planes executed the greatest daylight raid of the war yesterday over western Europe, concentrating over Lille and Amiens.

Moscow—Four German strong points in Rzhev district captured by Russians after smashing twenty Nazi counter-attacks.

Ottawa — Government subsidizing of tea, coffee and oranges becomes effective today with reduced prices in all three commodities.

Hydro Saving Depends on All

"It is to the domestic consumer, to you and to me, that the Electric Power Commission must look to supply the shortage of electricity necessary for making the tools for victory," said Dr. Thomas H. Hogg, Chairman and Chief Engineer of the Hydro-Electric Power Commission of Ontario, in his address to a joint meeting of the Royal Canadian Institute and the Toronto Branch of the Engineering Institute of Canada in Convocation Hall on Saturday night.

Dr. Hogg pointed out that in a mechanical war our contribution is determined by the output of our manufactured articles, and that in Canada, especially in Ontario and Quebec, this output depends on the electrical power developed from our streams. Although since the beginning of the war, Canada has been increasing her electrical energy in every possible way, the growth of her war industries is so rapid that she faces a severe shortage this winter unless all her citizens co-operate in saving hydro power for victory.

The second half of the lecture was accompanied by slides showing the recent power construction made by the Commission in the Georgian Bay and Eastern Ontario hydro systems. There followed a coloured sound motion picture, illustrating how electrical power could be saved in the home with little inconvience to the consumer.

At the close of the address the appreciation of the audience was expressed to Dr. Hogg by W. S. Wilson, assistant dean of S.P.S. and a member of the Toronto Branch of the Engineering Institute of Canada.

McGill Registers For War Work

Montreal, Dec. 6 — (CUP) — Three hundred and twenty-five McGill students — mostly engineers — registered Saturday in the first day of campus registration for various types of voluntary war work.

They have volunteered to work part time in war industries and salvage campaigns, donate blood and so on. Many have already given blood to Red Cross "banks."

The students are presented with two forms to fill in. Of these, one is the standard Blood Donor form of the Red Cross, and the other is specially prepared by the War Council for the use of McGill students only.

The special form begins by asking the volunteer to check off all free hours available for war work, and goes on to ask that people register for work in industry and as human Guinea-Pigs.

First 'Lucem Dare' Issue Available in U.C. Today

The first issue of the "Lucem Dare makes its appearance today in all U.C. buildings. It is being published weekly under the auspices of the U.C. "Lit" and W.U.A., and will appear each Monday morning.

The bulletin is to inform students of U.C. of the current activities in their own College. The Editors hope that the numerous organizations in U.C. will take advantage of the publication and contributions will be welcome up to Friday evening of each week.

Copies will be available Monday mornings in the U.C. Rotunda, the Junior Common Room and at noon in the Women's Union.

Most Faculties Responding To Appeal For Material For The Armed Forces' Use

CORRECTION

Due to an error in editorial handling of a story appearing in last Wednesday's issue under a Kingston dateline, it was announced that the decision of the faculty of Queen's University to report women failing to pass term examinations to their War Services Board was in accordance with National War Services Regulations. These regulations actually apply only to men eligible for military service, and any similar action regarding women students is entirely at the discretion of the university concerned.

Many More Books and Magazines Are Needed for a Good Harvest; College Residences Actively Engaged in Drive

CAMPAIGN ENDS WEDNESDAY

"The books are coming in, but the response could be better," was the general opinion expressed to a survey conducted over the week-end to see how the students of the various faculties are responding to the current Book Harvest.

At Victoria College numerous posters are displayed and the large bin in Alumni Hall is already two-thirds full of books — from "Inside Europe" to "Algebra for High Schools." Dr. W. Brown, Principal, has addressed a circular letter to the staff requesting contributions. Eileen Acton, S.A.C. representative, stated, "The collection in the residences does not compare with that in the Hall. It is definitely slow."

Trinity College proper, has three bins which are being steadily filled with novels and text books. J. Riley, S.A.C. representative, voiced the opinion, "Although books are coming in—a lot more should be here by Wednesday."

"St. Hilda's collection," said harvester Ruth Robinson, "consists mainly of magazines and French books."

A Town Crier is to be in attendance at U.C. on Monday and Tuesday, and notices will be posted in all lecture rooms — to spur lagging souls who meant to, but forgot. Officials of the Harvest say that a steady stream of novels, text books and magazines is coming in, but more are needed for the final effort.

Francis Hall, in charge of Whitney Hall Harvest, reported, "The books, mostly text books and magazines, are piling up, but we can stand fuller co-operation."

A circular letter has been sent to all Schoolmen urging co-operation and a telephone circuit will be completed on Monday. M. J. Ackroyd, S.A.C. representative, said, "Schoolmen are contributing steadily, but more books are needed."

At School, technical books take the lead, with a liberal sprinkling of Penquin books and one choice volume entitled "The Horrors and Atrocities of the Last War."

Mount Allison Plans Residence

Sackville, N.B., Dec. 3 — (CUP) — Plans are now ready for the new Men's Residence at Mount Allison University to replace the old one destroyed by fire on Dec. 17, last year.

Three-quarters of the funds necessary for the construction of the new building have already been obtained from insurance, business firms and alumni, it was revealed by the treasurer of the University last week.

A three-building group has been planned of which the central unit will house about 125 students, and each of the others about 80. The units will be three stories in height and of completely fireproof construction, and will occupy the area comprising the site and grounds of the previous building.

Following the fire last year, the majority of the students were left temporarily homeless, due to lack of accommodation in Sackville. However, a hotel was bought by the University last January and converted into Brunswick House, which helped alleviate the situation. Many others are living in private homes in the town of Sackville.

Colleges Choose Comely Coeds To Carry Colours In Campus Contest

Beauty, brains, ability, personality . . . what are the qualties of the Typical Co-ed? This is the question faculty executives are struggling with at present, in choosing their representatives to the contest taking place next Wednesday afternoon in Hart House Theatre.

The contest, one of the features of "War Service Day," is to be judged by Warren Stevens and Griffiths McCutcheon, staff members of the University Athletic Association.

The Arts Colleges are holding contests within the contest to pick their choice from the numerous glamour-bearers in their midst. U.C. is posting a ballot-box in the college rotunda for nominations, and Tuesday the executive staff of the Women's Undergraduate Association will choose two girls as U.C.'s ideal co-ed.

Vic is leaving the nomination of candidates to the three male members of each class executives, and the election of them to the male members of the V.C.U., the Bob director, and an unnamed professor. The election is to be a rather spectacular affair, states Tom Nixon, with the whole College in attendance Tuesday at 12:30 in Alumni Hall.

School has already found their Ideal in volunteer Jessie Pickard, V Mechanical, who emerged as representative of the 18 feminine upholders of the Blue and Gold by popular acclamation.

In the extension courses, such as Occupational Therapy and Physiotherapy, informal groups met and quickly decided on their choices.

No candidates will be coming from such faculties as Medicine, Dentistry, nor Pharmacy since they are at present absorbed in final exams; nor will there be any from the Theological Colleges owing to a shortage of womanpower.

We Hope It Improves

The Student-Staff Conference—awaited by thinking students on the campus for weeks as the one remaining hope that universities may make their position firmer before possibly ill-judged governmental action changes the whole picture for the duration at least—opened Saturday morning.

First came an opening address from the University's President. Then came a depressing session in which students—and even a few staff members—indulged in a series of minor quibbles involving procedure and mechanics. From the press perch in the gallery of the big hall, an aerie in which an attitude of detachment was possible, it seemed evident that this conference, like so many good ideas that students have had in recent years, might bog down through the Hamlet-like propensity of the educated to talk.

We are being deliberately harsh on the speakers at the session. Admittedly they were wrestling with difficult points, proper establishment of which would go a long way to smoothing further procedure during the Conference. But we could not help but feel that there was a disinclination to pitch in with the proper spirit of active co-operation and attack the job energetically.

We hope we were wrong. We still have high hopes for the success of the extremely admirable venture. But that success will depend, in the immediate days ahead, on the ability of sub-committees to get down to practical considerations of their problems, without recourse to the hemming and hawing that was the chief feature of Saturday's session.

Remember Pearl Harbour?

Our American allies do. It was a year ago today that the treacherous power of the Mikado struck at United States and British bases in the Pacific. At a score of objectives Japanese dive-bombers hurled sudden death while Japanese ambassadors continued farcial peace-talks at Washington.

Those sudden attacks throughout the Orient showed American and Englishmen alike to be pitifully unprepared for the ferocity of the Nipponese onslaught. In the short weeks that followed, despite the gallant efforts of outnumbered Marines in U.S. island outposts, despite the desperate rearguard actions of imperial troops in the steaming Burmese swamps, despite the epic stand of MacArthur and his motley army drawn into the fortress of Corregidor, we gave ground at every point. Gloomy news of Britain's loss of the Prince of Wales and Repulse had hardly been digested when we heard that the Canadian-garrisoned stronghold of Hong Kong had fallen. Impregnable Singapore was lost. Java fell. Revolt threatened in fabulous India. Australia was endangered. We touched perhaps the lowest depths of fortune that we will face throughout the whole war.

But the pendulum swung back after an indecisive summer. Industrial power in the mighty plants of the United States, swinging into full production spurred by the whip of growing Japanese dominance in the Pacific, was largely instrumental in turning the tide against the Axis.

American planes, tanks, guns, shells, began to play their part more and more in the battles for New Guinea, Egypt, China, Stalingrad. The weight of the United States Navy's big guns flashing across the Coral Sea bore down on the Japanese. The achievement in Anglo-American co-operation culminating in the mass landing in Northern Africa of a few weeks ago, marked the opening of the "second front" which may lead to the union of the armies of all the United Nations before another year is out.

Mr. Churchill has warned repeatedly in recent weeks that this present phase is not "the beginning of the end." He is right in predicting that we face hard, long months of effort yet. The Axis is still a potent war-machine.

But when the tumult dies, and when United Nation's historians come to relate how their countries won the war, they will agree that the day of Pearl Harbour—black as night in our annals—will be black as hell in the annals of shattered Japan.

Correspondence

Editor,
The Varsity.

Dear Sir:

The student-staff conference comes at a very important point in world history. The armed might of the United Nations is on the offensive—finally the initiative is ours. The surprise successes of the American Army, the rout of Rommel and his impending annihilation, the magnificent strategic offensive of the Red Army which portends the final hour for Hitlerism—all this is the unified strategy for victory. One does not have to be a prophet to say that the next six months will reveal a turning point in history.

There is cause in this for optimism, but not complacency. There is cause in this for work, for even greater participation in the offensive for victory.

This student-staff conference is historic in the activity of Canadian students. Since the first Canadian Student Assembly took place in Winnipeg, there has been no significant student conference on any campus. The participation of staff is a great step in welding closer unity between staff and students which has been so lacking in the past.

There is no doubt that the Conference will crystalize important opinion on the role of the university in the war—in the momentous offensive which is unfolding. Basically the role of our University must be no different from that of the National University of Chungking, the University of Leningrad, London University, yes and the spirit of the University of Prague. True, the majority of our students are not near the fighting front, nor have they, as yet, been called upon to drive the fascist hordes away from our portals of learning.

Sr. Lt. Pshelinstev, a delegate to the International Students' Assembly in Washington, and sniper of the Red Army, told me that a number of students from the Mining Institute where he studied formed a guerilla unit and fought desperately behind the German lines, destroying many bridges and railways.

We have not been asked to do this but our attitudes and our work must reflect the heroic deeds of the Soviet, British and Chinese students. Our will to victory—our pledge to support the new offensives — must be as great as their deeds, and sacrifices.

We have a duty towards the slain students of Prague who were butchered by the Nazi sadists. We have a duty to the bombed-out students of Chungking, of Bristol, and to the gallant Soviet student guerrilas.

What does this mean to us—students and teachers at the University of Toronto? What does it mean to the Student-Staff Conference? Our activities, our studies, our deliberations, must be motivated by the spirit of the offensive. A revaluation of our work should reflect the needs of our country's total effort.

Nor need our attitude be a destructive one. What does our Government and community require of the University today? Is industry sufficiently supplied with highly-skilled personnel? Does the army need specialized officers more quickly for our expanding army of the offensive? Is our C.O.T.C. training adequate pre-training for these men? Does the increasing problem of "war children" require more trained women? Is our University utilizing its libraries and other facilities to amass information of value to our governments and army? Do we need more students able to speak, read and write German, French, Spanish and Italian? Should we start a course in the Russian language?

These are some of the questions to be asked and answered. Perhaps we can only solve a few of these problems—but even this is an advance. Certainly informative and authentic facts ar required. Many maintain that the University has a great contribution to offer in winning the peace and establishing a free and just post-war world. This is true. However our contribution to the peace and our deliberation on how this can be given must be preceded by our contribution to the offensive, and to victory which is the first basic step in the peace. Many things can be done now. The dissemination of knowledge about other countries, the closer contact with universities of all the United Nations, will do much.

Our University has another task in the war and no less important. We must remember, aid and encourage our students who are actively fighting on the war-fronts—the McGillicuddys, the Hendrys and the Bantings—these are our personal heroes and they are close to our hearts. Let us send out to those who are yet fighting, and who are yet to go into battle, our letters, our parcels, our books and our admiration. This is most important.

At first glance the task of the Student-Staff Conference seems large, but it is surmountable. My knowledge of the students and staff who are giving such fine leadership tells me it will be indeed an historic meeting. Its success will depend on the work of the delegates and the wider participation of as many observers as can fill the conference hall.

This Conference is of utmost importance to us and we can make the American sergeant in Tunisia and the Yugoslav guerrila in Croatia also feel it is important. We can make it the first onslaught of the university offensive toward victory.

Yours very truly,
Murray S. Acker,
IV Meds.

We admire the enthusiasm of Mr. Acker's admonition to the Conference that it move aggressively to face the problems which confront universities, and to make of its deliberations a stepping-stone to ultimate victory.

But in his suggestion that the Conference is to be "the first onslaught of the university offensive toward victory" we feel he lets his critical spirit override his good judgment. He makes allusion to Paul McGillicuddy, George Hendry, Sir Frederick Banting. Surely their names and the names of 84 others of the University's fallen which were listed on Remembrance Day suggest to us that the University has begun its contribution to victory. Nor do the contributions of our laboratories to the war-research of the past three years, the training we have given uniformed men in our halls, the 5,000-odd recent graduates and students now under arms, imply that the University has been neglecting its war-time duties.

We also feel that Mr. Acker underestimates the value of consideration of the post-war settlement even while the war is being waged. The very fact that no Nazi battalions have invaded our campus places us in an advantageous position to give consideration to problems which students of Universities in the war-zones have no time to discuss.

Numerically, our potential manpower contribution is weak — our brainpower contribution can be tremendous.

Nonetheless, we commend the energy and vigour of Mr. Acker. If the Conference accomplishes half the things he hopes, it will have made an incalculable contribution to victorious war. If it accomplishes half the things we hope for it, it will make a similar contribution to a victorious peace.—EDITOR.

"The Radio Workshop has already had two of its plays recorded at local radio stations, one of which was broadcast over station CFCF in connection with the recent Victory loan. All plays used by the Workshop are original—written by members of the Scriptwriting Division. There are also divisions for Acting, Directing and Sound Effects, so that the members may have aid in whatever branch of radio most interests them."

ART MUSIC DRAMA

Welcome Back

Hart House Quartet

Last night's recital by the Hart House String Quartet reached a very high climax indeed in the Dohnanyi Quartet in D Flat Major. I have heard this music all too seldom and in was a pleasure to hear it played as the musicians did it at this recital.

Dohnanyi is strongly romantic, and charged with deep emotion. This is the kind of music the Hart House Quartet does to perfection, for their type of playing is peculiarly suited to its meaning. The first movement is especially powerful. The playing of the second movement, presto acciata, showed especial brilliance.

The Haydn Quartet, Opus No. 2, which opened the program, contains an extremely beautiful adagio, one of the great pieces of quartet literature. The minuet, into which it leads is a scherzo of surpassing brilliance, whose trio is extremely dissonant. This was the best of the quartet.

I was ashamed of the attitude of the students who attended this recital. Although they usually are polite, last night was an unfortunate exception. I have never heard as much talking during a recital before.

NEIL MACDONALD.

Toronto Symphony Orchestra

One of the privileges given to students in this University is the special rate tickets to the Toronto Symphony Orchestra concerts which are obtainable through the Warden's Office, Hart House.

The Toronto Symphony Orchestra is Toronto's greatest (and therefore also Canada's) musical organization. To hear it at all is a privilege; but to hear it at a special rate is a double opportunity.

Speaking of Sport

DRAMA ON ICE

As we were saying jocularly to a friend just as the Service Police tapped us lightly on the shoulder, "It was worth going A.W.O.L. to see the game." Well, writing this from the digger, we still feel the same way about it. The sergeant-major is an old hockey man, himself.

Teams from out of the West have never failed to bring with them the dash of the plains (one Redeye, please), an elan that has given us the most colourful characters of our time, like Kit Carson and Renfrew of the Mounted. You caught a sense of it Saturday afternoon when the Bombers, clad in slightly juvenated jerseys, but in the same old black pants that deseated Tigers back in '35, skated gracefully out onto the Varsity icefield. The same feeling we got just a year ago watching the westerners Peg down the Dominion title, or a bunch of kids called the Rangers bowl over Montreal Royals down in the Gardens two springs past. A dramatic technique, a savoir faire, an avoirdupois, call it what you will—we carried Pass French only one year.

And with that the Bombers took the field, dumped everything they had, but still hadn't enough to shatter a team that wouldn't quit. Three minutes before time was up Lou Mogul, feet dragging, head lowered, slogged off the field. He was probably thinking what thousands were voicing in the stands, "They can't beat Hayman." Some will lay it to the old Hayman jinx, for twice before Hayman's Argos had turned back Winnipeg on the very threshold of the Canadian chamber of champions. But actually the teams, two of the best ever to appear on our rugby scene, might have spent the afternoon flipping pennies (we haven't seen two bits for lo these eight months) for the title. If it lay anywhere, the advantage was with the Bombers. Their wingline was heavier, their passing a feat of wizardry (11 strikes out of 15 thrown is some sort of a record). Sheley, McCance and Moorehouse so completely baffled the Hurricanes with their pass barrage that safety-man Bill Stukus moved up more than 20 yards. He moved up so far, in fact, that most of the fans figured him for a charging middle.

But with all that, you have to hand it to the Hurricanes—to Crowe, Stukus and little Pop Poplowski, and more especially to a line that outfought the 'Peggers and paved the way for victory. The winning play was Don Crowe's long canter from centre field to Winnipeg's three. The whole centre of the Hurricane line blasted a tremendous hole and went right on to take out the West's great snapback, Mel Wilson. Crowe didn't as much as see an opponent until he reached the 15, where he evaded two tacklers, carried on until he was pulled down on the three.

After the third quarter, it was strictly up to the line. The Bombers had pulled off a sensational touchdown after a series of plays that partnered the Hurries with the whirling dervish. Three points was a big lead on a field like that. The 'Peg's pass defence was impregnable. The ball, if moved, would have to be moved along the ground. The line laid a road that had to pass over the bumpiest terrain the Hurricanes had run into in two months of campaigning.

Watching the West Saturday kept us in mind of last year's champions. Then they had an outside called Bud Marquardt, a lean rake of a chap who managed somehow to stoop down far enough to be able to tackle. This year the West brought with them Moorehouse, just as long, an Army fellow who caught rifle-like passes one-handed. It's been some time since the East has seen such catching. They missed Hanson and Thornton. Charlton shook himself loose for only one commendable gain, but we held on more than once as the long-legged 18-year-old started around the end with Stukus playing tertiary. But he got by Eddie Burton but once.

A great team had been beaten by one that was just a little bit greater.

Dear Ed: We haven't had a chance to follow the interfaculty rugby this season. We were just wondering how Trinity is doing. Quick, the rear exit.

Varsity Cagers Hold First Drill

If numbers can be employed as a means of judgment, then the Varsity basketball team is travelling in the direction of a highly successful season. The first practice session drew a squad of 30 hopeful hoopsters in the Hart House gym, where Warren Stevens officiated in a two-hour drill. The potential Blue and White cagemen were tutored in the art of passing, blocking, checking and shooting.

The squad this year will contain few veterans since the better part of last year's Blue team have left via graduation alley. Among the old timers to put in their appearance at the first practice were Stu Scott and Bill Dewar, both of U.C. Three other vets, Murray Thompson of Vic and Ken Tettmar and Don Gibson of School, will show before the season gets officially under way. Another spark plug expected to put extra zip into the Varsity is Durocher, former Assumption College captain, now in attendance at O.C.E. Last year's team will remember Durocher as the rangy centre of the Windsor team of the last season.

Although they will not appear in a league the basketeers will play a series of exhibition games similar to that of last year. Warren Stevens announced that games have been arranged with Wayne University, Rochester University, Assumption College, R.C.A.F. (Trenton), I.T.S. (Church St), Navy, and other Armed Services teams.

Rugby Playoffs Undergo Change

Because of the severe and precarious playing conditions the standing rugby committee on Friday revised the playoffs for the Mulock Cup. Under the new arrangement Sr. S.P.S., champion of group one, meets U.C., second in the second group. On the same day St. Mike's, who finished as group two's leader, will meet Vic, last season's cup winner who finished the season only a point or so behind Senior School.

The winners of these two games, which are to be played at 1:30 and 3:45 at the Stadium, will meet two days later in a sudden-death clash for the coveted trophy. If no suitable weather is forthcoming before the 10th of the month, it was decided that the awarding of the cup for 1942 will be called off. Profiting from this fall's experience the committee also recommended that the schedule next year should begin several weeks earlier—perhaps around Oct. 8.

Vic and Sr. S.P.S. Stickmen Advance To Dafoe Finals Over S.P.S. and Dents

Combination and team play made for a "last three feet of fillum" finish when Vic edged Jr. S.P.S. 8-6 in the Friday noon hour semi-final for the Dafoe Cup, emblematic of interfaculty supremacy in lacrosse.

Smooth passing, the kind that curls the spectator's hair, with lightning shots, was only frustrated by goalers Steele for School and Bridgeman for Vic. Malc. Dedrick of the Scarlet and Gold was the most dangerous man on the floor, sinking half of his team's total and the all-important game-winning goal late in the last quarter.

The Jr. School quintet faced a 3-0 deficit before they could test their strings. Things looked glum for the Blue and Gold when scoring stood 5-1 at half time. By the end of the third quarter faultless passing and unerring marksmanship tightened up matters with School trailing Vic's 5 points by one goal.

Glen Munro was a heavy contributor to Vic's win, dug in, played his man and worried the ball, but a quick getaway by School made for a tied score. Both teams opened up for the winning marker but with that condition Vic had the advantage. Munro to Dedrick to the lower left eluded Steele and the Artsmen forged ahead. To clinch the contest Munro sunk his second counter.

S.P.S. players who featured the gallant up-hill fight were Scott and Graham with two goals apiece; Turner and Hull each tallied once. The Scarlet and Gold's tripple threat — Mackenzie, Munro and Dedrick divided Vic's scoring honours.

Saturday's noon hour saw an undefeated Sr. School team advance toward the final step in retaining the Dr. W. A. Dafoe Cup when they emerged victors over Dents, 15-4.

The final issue wes never in doubt after Frankie Kellam Sylapped two past goalie Lorne Lind in the opening minutes of the game. Before the quarter ended, Lewarne and Kellam had made the score 4-0. At the start of the second quarter the same two Engineers added another two tallies. While short-handed, Buzz Crosby nicked another pair for the Blue and Gold within 30 seconds, to make it 8-0. Dents lone score of the first half came near the intermission when Frank Currie was left unchecked and raced the length of the floor.

Joe Ryan opened the second half for Dents with their second goal to bring the count to 8-2. This score was nullified as Frank Kellam bagged his 5th of the game and Buzz Crosby his 3rd to end the quarter. McCartney for Dents and Lewarne alternated on the first four goals of the last quarter to make it 12-4. Then Buzz Crosby added his 4th and Ian Currie ened the game's scoring with two shots from the corner in the closing minutes.

The invasion of Africa has greatly complicated the position of Spain. Although the Allies surround Spanish Morocco, German forces have amassed troops along Spain's northern frontier. It appears that Hitler planned a counter-stroke against the Allies, but Franco maintaining stubborn neutrality, answered by ordering the partial mobilization of his forces.

This, he explained, was to "insure our keeping away from the conflict and to strengthen our defence, our integrity and sovereignty and at the same time to preserve peace in our territory."

It was reported that in conjunction with this statement the Spanish dictator had refused to grant sea and air bases to Germany and announced that Spain would accept aid from the other side if such bases were seized.

To add weight to Franco's pledge of neutrality to President Roosevelt on Nov. 14, Juan Francisco de Cardenas, Spanish Ambassador in Washington, gave further asurance to Under Secretary of State Welles. These assurances, Mr. Welles said, were extended voluntarily.

In Washington, Spain's insistence upon neutrality is regarded as quite sincere. It is to be remembered that although Franco has been notoriously sympathetic with the Axis, he failed to give assistance to Hitler in 1940 when the Axis seemed the logical victor; consequently he is unlikely to do so now, when the tables have been so decidedly turned.

It may be assumed accordingly that no matter what the Allied fortune in Africa may be, it will have very little effect upon Spain's attitude. She will undoubtedly become aggressive however when the war is drawing to a close, in order to play a more important role in the establishment of a new world order.

Diplomatic relations between the Allies and Spain must be maintained as long as possible since Franco's army may ultimately be a deciding factor in the African campaign, and the subsequent attack upon the northern coast of the Mediterranean. The opinion has been expressed however, that possible aid to the Allies from Spain would be more likely to come from the Spanish people than from Franco's government.

Three Georgian Editors Temporarily Reinstated Cronin Still Suspended

Montreal, Dec. 6— (CUP) — Three members of the editorial board of The Georgian, weekly student publication of Sir George William College, who resigned in protest against dismissal of the fourth, Fergus Cronin, editor-in-chief, have returned to their posts pending clarification of relations between the newspaper and the students' council of the College, which suspended Cronin.

The council will meet Monday to consider recommendations for a new constitution made last year. Meanwhile it announced that Cronin's suspension still stands.

Suspension followed publication Nov. 17 of an editorial dealing with French Canada, which discussed a recent article on the subject appearing in Life magazine. The editorial for which Cronin accepted full responsibility, supported in part the views expressed in the Life article. The council later met and requested Cronin's resignation.

A council statement said that "Mr. Cronin is dismissed as the student council feels that the Georgian should not become involved in the controversy on the Life article at all, and is refusing to take sides in the controversy one way or the other."

(Among those expressing opposition to the Life article, who in turn drew the fire of Cronin's editorial, are Cardinal Villeneuve, Premier Adelard Godbout, as well as several Roman Catholic organizations in the province.)

Cronin denied that his dismissal was result of many clashes, claiming that the present issue was his first difference of opinion with the students' council. He added that his editorial policy had been that of the new constitution, to be discussed by the council Monday.

The Red and White have done it again! Last Friday evening III P.H.E. emerged the victors over Vic Jrs., 24-10, in the last of the preliminary games scheduled for the season. When they started the tilt, you remember, P.H.E. had a 9-point lead on their opponents—which is a tidy bit of score to start with, but which had little effect on the aggressiveness of the girls in scarlet and gold. All in all, speed was the order of the night. The referees had to calm down the play by multiple toss-ups and quite a few fouls — all of which shows that both teams were determined to get that elusive ball at any cost.

Betty Allen and Zoe Christie both played well for P.H.E. and were greatly responsible for the large score on their side. For Vic Jrs. Flo Whiting and Mildred Donaldson tallied most and tried a lot of long shots in addition. Joan Campbell and her fellow defence players gave P.H.E. some stout opposition. When the total points for the two elimination games were counted up, they read 46-23.

This week, you remember, the semis are being played at O.C.E. Here, too, the girls in Red and White have all the limelight. Tonight at 5:30 II P.H.E. and U.C. Srs. are scheduled to play, and at 6:30, III P.H.E. will meet U.C. Freshies. All four of these teams have well-earned their basketball prowess and we won't venture to say which two will survive the play in the finals; but we will guarantee basketball at well nigh its best for all prospective spectators.

Speaking of spectators — gosh, we seem to be seeing less and less of them when we'd love to be seeing more and more turn up to cheer their favourite team on to victory. What do you say, fellows and girls?

Hart House will be scene of the finals. They are scheduled for the 11th at 7:30 and the 14th at 6:30. So get your Christmas studying and shopping done early and keep this time free to see University women's basketball at its best.

Student-Staff Conference Begins With Organization Of Its Work

thought."

He suggested that the outcome of the Conference would be of great assistance to the deliberations of the Universities Conference set for Ottawa, Jan. 9; that suggestions had been forward in connection with future policy towards the universities—"some of which are very drastic, and others are debatable"—and that it was advisable for the universities to give the Government a lead as to projected regulations.

Maturity and Youth

"The essence of a University is the personal relationship between staff and students," he said. "The maturity of the staff gives us experience—and experience in this world still counts for something—while the youth of the students—and youth counts for oh, so much!—gives us the spirit of enterprise and adventure. In this Conference we find a combination of experience and adventure."

Functions of a University

Wishing the Conference "all success" he defined the functions of a University as five-fold:

1. To cultivate the spirit of learning and research;
2. To send forth intelligent citizens into the democratic world;
3. To provide good professional workers;
4. To conserve the teachings and amassed learning of earlier generations;
5. To cultivate a spirit of reverence for learning and religion.

He quoted the recent remark of General Drum to a Columbia University convocation: "Continue to turn out men with a broad general education. That is the function of a University in wartime."

Dr. Cody added: "Only free countries have universities; and they must be maintained by service. Already has begun the trickle of men back from service overseas and it has been variously estimated that they will number between 40,000 and 60,000 immediately after the war."

He gave as his belief that "The only way to train the intelligent officer and the intelligent private is not through the pathway of the sciences," and added that the Universities' war record even to date was "not ignoble."

"We'll be very glad to have the result of your deliberations," he concluded. "We have great confidence in your good judgment and common sense. May God help you to make the right decisions."

Organization of Conference

Following Dr. Cody's speech, the permanent Executive Committee of the Conference was elected. Chairman of the Conference will be Professor J. F. Macdonald, University College; Vice-chairmen are Prof. C. A. Ashley, Department of Political Economy, and T. W. Nixon, President of the V.C.U. Four other members complete the Committee: Miss Diane Chafetz, Conference Secretary, Prof. L. Infeld, G. H. Johnson, and C. Birchard.

The rest of the meeting was devoted to a discussion of the organization of the Conference as outlined by the Convening Committee. J. D. Weld, discussing the program, emphasized the immense amount of work that the Conference and its committees would have to accomplish in the next week if the Conferences were to attain its aims.

"The Convening Committee realized at the start," he said, "that there was no use passing general resolutions and hoping that eventually someone would get around to implement them. To be of any value at all the Conference will have to make specific recommendations for the adaption of the various courses to the war program. It was for this reason that the somewhat complicated plan of division into committees and sub-committees was formulated. It would obviously be impossible to discuss the details of each course in the full session of the Conference."

Sub-Committee Discussions

All students and all Faculties are urged to get in touch with their convenors to learn what arrangements are being made to discuss the revision of their courses. The following is the list of convenors:

George Jean Nathan was once described by Sean O'Casey as a critic without fear and without reproach. We don't know about the reproach part of it, but our own A. M. & D. editor can meet the caustic mister Nathan on even terms in the matter of sand and match him grain for grain.

We were down in Hart House Theatre the other night before the opening of "The Devil's Disciple," and, in a heckling mood, we twitted the stage manager on the doubtful authenticity of the hangman's noose. "Can you tie a real hangman's knot?" that harassed individual asked. "We can try," we remarked, rising to the occasion. So, reaching well back into our scout lore, we produced a reasonably accurate facsimile of a correct noose.

"Will someone try this for size?" we asked, and who should step obligingly forward and thrust his head twixt the hempen strands, but the A. M. & D. Editor—and right before his intended victims, too.

TIE THAT, MR. NATHAN!

Speaking of Vic's big period type production, right in the middle of the eighteenth century the other night an anachronistic telephone rang back stage. NO, NO, MR. BELL, YOU DON'T COME UNTIL THE NEXT CENTURY.

One of our spies reports the case of a lout who was going to go to last Friday's St. Hilda's Formal. He also had a ticket for last night's Sunday Evening Concert, but no date for it. "I wonder who I can ask?" he queried himself ungrammatically. "Oh, well," came the philosophic reply, "maybe I'll meet someone at St. Hilda's." AND THEN AGAIN . . .

Another item from the some source informs us of a naive prof who was lecturing on the illumination of the moon. Says he, "The light of a full moon is greater than some text books indicate, as you no doubt have observed, you can even read by it."

A very resplendent military individual sat down in the U.C. Library the other day and two Pass Arts co-eds spotted him. "Gee," gasped one loudly, "two pips!" "Golly, no," corrected the other, also loudly, "Thu-ree!" YOU'D THINK THEY NEVER SAW A SERGEANT BEFORE.

Affirmative Gains Margin As Varsity Debaters Decide India Could Be Independent

Bryant Kassirer, U. C., and Marg Albright, Vic, Opposed Jean Vale and Don Rohr of St. Mike's

VIC PLAYS HOST

The resolution that India in ready for complete independence was passed by a narrow majority in the All-University debate of the Victoria College Debating Society last night.

The first speaker for the affirmative, Bryant Kassirer, IV U.C., drew an historical sketch illustrating how other countries such as United States and Canada had gained their independence, and describing the conditions which gave rise to their fight for freedom. He claimed that Britain's method of exploiting India had presumably been for the "good of the country," but actually for her own vested interests. Kassirer also pointed out that if the conditions of the Atlantic Charter are to be observed, they must certainly be applied to India as well. And in so far as this country is concerned, they are as much applicable now as they will be after the war. He concluded by suggesting that the United Nations must decide the India question, since they have taken it upon themselves to settle other world problems.

The first oppostion speaker in the debate, Jean Vale, II Loretto, outlined four qualities which might be considered necessary for any country about to receive its independence. They were: a strong political unity and organization; freedom from religious strife to a reasonable extent; economic security and a foreign diplomacy. Miss Vale undertook to elaborate on the first two of these points. She stated that there was a great deal of dissension between the Moslem League and the National Congress (which latter she asserted to be predominantly Hindo), representing the two major opposing factions in India. She claimed that dissension might be amicably settled in peacetime; but not in war. The speaker pointed out that India's conduct under

Co-eds Prepare Faculty Ribbons

Girls of the four Arts Colleges have spent the week-end preparing the faculty ribbons for the International Students' Service campaign which is to be held on Dec. 9, in conjunction with the closing of the current Book Harvest.

Due to wartime restrictions, the committee has been unable to provide the proper colour combinations for a few of the faculties. The ones that are being prepared are: S.P.S., gold and navy blue; Victoria, scarlet and gold; Pharmacy, gold, black and scarlet; U.C., scarlet; Trinity, scarlet and black; St. Mike's, navy and sky blue; Dents, maroon; and Meds, scarlet and gold. The other faculties will be provided with royal blue ribbons.

These ribbons may be purchased in the faculties or from the co-eds selling them on campus, but only after a University ribbon has been bought. While the University ribbon will cost a quarter, the amount donated for the faculty ribbons will be decided by the donor.

Dr. Johnson is now assistant Pastor of Knox Presbyterian ,Church, Toronto.

PASS ARTS MEMBERS

All students and Professors from the Pass Arts Course are invited to attend a meeting in Teefy Hall of St. Michael's College today at 2:00 p.m. in regard to Student-Staff Conference, to discuss the function of the Pass Arts Course in a war-time University.

Deadline Today For Green Issue

The traditional eight-page green issue of The Varsity will appear on Friday, Dec. 11, being the last regular issue of this term.

In it the undergraduate artists, poets and writers will get a chance to publish works and to compete for the annual Green Issue cash awards.

judged respectively by Prof. J. D. Robins, Head of the Department of English in Victoria College; Prof. A. E. Barker, Director of Studies in English at Trinity College; and Prof. C. F. Comfort of the Department of Fine Art.

Michael O'Mara, editor-in-chief of The Varsity, reports that, despite all inducements, the volume of contributions is poor compared with other years, particularly in the art division.

Today is the last day contributions will be accepted. Material to appear in the Green Issue must be submitted eithe to The Varsity Office, Hart House, or to the Women's Varsity Office, Room 42A, University College. Literary contributions must be legibly written or typed and art contributions must be in India ink on white paper.

Helen Bannerman, women's editor of The Varsity, said last night, "The Varsity Green Issue gives one of the best chances to campus writers to see their original work published and in past years the contributions to this issue have been of a high calibre.

Deans Approve Co-ed Training

General approval of the work done under the Women's National Service Training plan by the Arts women of Second, Third and Fourth Years of the federated Colleges was expressed at the meeting of the Deans last week.

Reports from the lecturers and those in charge of the various courses offered this term showed commendation of the faithful attendance, the co-operation and the interest of the studenty body. "The girls must be congratulated for the way they devoted themselves to the Courses, some of which were especially heavy in hours and subject matter," was the general comment.

The regulations for the work of the second term are, for the post part, similar to those of the first term. Thirty hours of work, either lectures, field work or field trips, are required in each course. Special comments regarding each separate course will be found below and it is suggested they be kept for reference.

Red Cross Corps

Students who enrolled in the Corps in the first term will continue in the Corps for second term and will watch the C.R.C.C. column in The Varsity for orders.

Hospital Nursing Aids

Students who were enrolled in the first term will complete their 60 hours of practical duty, finishing approximately at the end of January, 1943. This will constitute a total requirement for the year.

Names of the students who are allocated to this course for next term are already posted or will be posted on the Dean's Notice Boards early next week.

Day Nurseries

Students enrolled in first term will proceed to field work as they are allocated by Women's Voluntary Services. Lists will be posted next week. Names of the students who are allocted for next term will be potsed next week.

A.R.P. and Home Nursing; A.R.P. and First Aid

Students who chose both of these courses and who have completed A.R.P. and Home Nursing in first term will be allocated to First Aid only in second term. Those who had Home Nursing only will take A.R.P. and First Aid.

Sewing

Mrs. Gallie, of the Red Cross Work Room, is enthusiastic about the work of the girls who have been at the Red Cross Room, and is very anxious that the girls should continue to sew throughout the second term, as they are just at the point of being really useful in the making of the various needed articles. Therefore all girls enrolled in Sewing will continue in that course, unless there is a serious reason for transfer, for which special application must be made to the respective Dean of Women.

Recreation Leadership

Students who enrolled in this course in first term have a choice in second term:

(a) Field work in Recreation Leadership in a chosen age group or type of leader activity.

(b) A.R.P. and First Aid.

(c) The new course, "Community Needs and Resources," the details of which are printed elsewhere in this issue of The Varsity.

Nutrition or A.R.P. and Home Nursing

Students who enrolled in Nutrition or who enrolled in A.R.P. and Home Nursing without choosing the second course A.R.P. and First Aid may choose:

(a) A.R.P. and First Aid.

(b) Recreation Leadership (a repeat of the course given in first term).

(c) "Community Needs and Resources."

All girls will register with their respective Deans on Thursday and Friday of this week, (a) to check their attendance and hand in their registration cards for grst term; (b) to fill in their first and second choices in the courses in which choices are offered. It is most important that the registration be complete on Friday so that arrangements for next term can be made.

Dr. Jaffary Describes New Course Offered In Women's Service Training

Dr. S. K. Jaffary, director of the School of Social Work, in the following articles describes a new course in Community Needs and Resources, which is being offered in the Easter Term as one of the Women's National Service Training courses. This article also announces the course, for which arrangements have just been completed through the efforts of the School of Social Work, with the collaboration of the Welfare Council of Toronto.—EDITOR.

A community is a group of people living together. The people in a community have a variety of human needs—needs for food, housing, medical care, education, recreation, social and religious life. These needs are differently met—well met with some people, poorly met with others—depending on the arrangements which the community has devised for them.

This course will illustrate some of the needs in Toronto. By lectures, the work of certain social agencies will be described—such as the Victorian Order of Nurses, the Visiting Homemakers, the Juvenile Court. Field visits will then be made to see these agencies in action; to see their activities and their difficulties.

Following these illustrations, some more general community service will be discussed, such as the City Council and the City Planning Board, again by lectures and visits. From the whole course the student will obtain a clearer picture of the working of community machinery in meeting the needs of its people.

The course is arranged by the School of Social Work, with the collaboration of the Welfare Council of Toronto.

Annesley Hall Association Makes First Group Donation To War Services Drive

Motion Carried Unanimously as Girls Donate $43; U.C. Women and Vic Class Also Make Contributions

CETIFICATES AWARDED

The first group donation to be made to the International Students' Service drive came from the Annesley Student Government Association, which gave a sum of $43.

At a meeting of the Association, various house improvements and other war charities were suggested, but the proposal that the sum be given to the I.S.S. was carried unanimously, stated Ruth Colclough, IV Vic, President of the Association.

The University College Women's Undergraduate Association has made a contribution of $60. Margaret Ham, President, said, "I had difficulty in preventing them from emptying the treasury."

Aileen Acton, Associate President of the Victoria College Union, announced that the class of 4T4 at Vic had made a donation of $5.

Each fraternity or student organization which contributes $5 or more will receive an honorary certificate, to be awarded by the Joint Committee appointed by the Students' Administrative Council to handle the combined I.S.S. drive and the Book Harvest.

Letters were sent to the fraternities and student organizations telling them of this, and some mailed last Friday reached their destination only this morning. This, stated Aileen Acton, was the reason for the small number of contributions so far, but she expressed confidence that there would be many more during the next day or two.

CHRISTMAS RAIL FARES

The Railway Companies are issuing to students of the University, and to members of the University staff, round-trip tickets for the Christmas and New Year Holidays, at the current normal one-way fare and one-quarter for the round trip.

Students wishing to take advantage of this reduction should leave their names with the Registrar of the College, or the Secretary of the Faculty, School or Department concerned, on or before Monday, Dec. 14.

The certificates will be issued to the students at their College, Faculty, School or Department office, at 5 p.m. on Friday, Dec. 18, 1942.

Members of the teaching staff may obtain certificates at the Registrar's Office, Simcoe Hall.

Attention is drawn to the fact that these certificates are issued only to members of the teaching staff and the students of the University, and are not available for wives and children of the above, for office employees, or for any persons not engaged in giving or receiving instruction.

I.S.S. Assists Varsity Grad

(This is the lost of a series of stories showing some of the work of the International Students' Service, here and abroad. Mr. Bernstein is one of a group of Canadian students who are being aided by the I.S.S. and whom our donations tomorrow will help. Due to the organization of the I.S.S. records, it is impossible to give at this time a complete list of Couadian students who have been contocted by the organization, but we are assured that the numbers are considerable.—EDITOR.)

By Barbara Jones

One of the many students contacted by the I.S.S. is Harold Bernstein, a graduate of Toronto University. He obtained his Ph.D. in Physics and Chemistry in 1938, and won the 1851 Exhibition Scholarship at the same time, leaving Canada shortly after to continue his studies in Denmark.

When Germany invaded Denmark in April of 1940 his plans were made to leave within two weeks, but he was taken with other aliens and interned. He has now been in an interment camp for two and a half years. During this time he has been unable to continue his former studies because of lack of equipment and the proper books, but he has become interested in Nutritional Chemistry and has written home requesting books on this subject.

His family receive monthly letters from him which have passed the censors without being blacked out. They have also received photographs. Red Cross food parcels reach him and parcels from home arrive regularly although letters do not. His family has sent him books and some of his former professors have also done so. This assistance has been supplemented by the I.S.S. Branch in Geneva which takes care of student aid in Europe.

Vic Men to Select 'Most Typical Co-ed'

Today at 12:30 Vic selects her "most typical co-ed." Meeting in Alumni Hall, Vic undergrads will witness the selection of Vic's acme in female pultrichude who will then represent Vic in the All-Varsity contest in Hart House on Wednesday.

Four candidates from each year in Vic have been chosen by the male members of the class executives. From this group, a Board of Judges composed of Professor H. N. Frye, the Director of the Bob and the male members of the Victoria College Union, will choose Vic's "most typical co-ed."

Our Aims Defined

Speaking at the opening meeting of the Staff-Student Conference, Dr. Cody set forth the five aims of a university, as follows:

1. To cultivate the spirit of learning and research;
2. To send forth intelligent citizens into the democratic world;
3. To provide good professional workers;
4. To conserve the teachings and amassed learning of earlier generations;
5. To cultivate a spirit of reverence for learning and religion.

A more complete answer to the recent questions "What are the functions of a university?" and "What does a university accomplish?" could scarcely be given.

There seems to be no quarrel at the present time with the third point on the President's list. With the fighting forces and their allied medical, dental, nursing and engineering services all crying for more trained men and women there can be no question that the university faculties which train these needed professional workers are now doubly necessary.

There can also be little dissension over the fourth point. The Universities have stood through the ages as the homes of the learning of the past. That is how the universities first came into being: the centres where the ancient learning survived the ravages of the era after the fall of Rome, became the Mecca of students from all part of the then known world, and as soon as the travelling students, or "scholar-gypsies," gathered at one of these centres or learning it became a university. The more modern universities of the world, our own included, have inherited the tradition, without which there could be no university, for any centre of learning in which the store of past knowledge had been supressed would be an educational monster, possible only to the brain of such a man as Hitler.

The first and fifth points in the President's list are allied. To cultivate the spirit of learning and research is to cultivate a spirit of reverence for learning and, with the great majority of sincere students, also for religion. While we can all agree that a little learning is a dangerous thing, we can also state that once a student has passed the "dangerous" state of small learning he reaches a new spirit of respect for the knowledge he pursues, which he keeps for the rest of his life. Sometimes this respect comes as early as the last year of high school; sometimes not until the final year in the university—or even later. In any case, the university plays an important part in fostering and furthering it.

Since not all students can be professional workers, due to the limitation on the size of the professional faculties if for no other reason, and since only a percentage of the students have the enthusiasm and the means to pursue knowledge for its own sake, the President's second point may be said to be fundamental because it includes all the others: To send forth intelligent citizens into the democratic world.

The Hon. Perrault Casgrain, Minister without portfolio in the Quebec cabinet, made a similar statement in a recent public address, when he stated that "it is important for us to remember while speaking of preparation for the post-war period that the most important weapon of reconstruction is the formation of the mind of the present generation." Later in the same speech he said, "it is necessary for youth to receive the best possible information there is."

No institution can take the place of the universities in the great work of building our democracy as defined in these statements by two of Canada's leading men. We have said before and we say again that were it not for the universities and the knowledge they give to their students and to public by the written and spoken words of their leading thinkers, there would now be no ideal of democracy toward which to strive.

Let those who think that the university's work is confined entirely within its own walls take heed of Abraham Lincoln, who, while not a university man, was grateful to these centres of learning because he could read the books produced by their thinkers, and so educate himself.

Women's Work

With the announcement of a new course in Community Needs and Resources, to be offered as part of the Easter term work in Women's National Service Training, we can look over the wide selection of interesting courses offered in this Training and the success they have had with the women students. In fact it is a difficult question whether to give the highest praise to the hard-working committee which arranged the courses or to the women students who have made them a success. The committee members are: Miss M. B. Ferguson, Miss J. Macpherson, Mrs. M. M. Kirkwood, Deans of Women at University College, Victoria and Trinity respectively, and Dr. Victoria Mueller, acting for the purposes of the committee as Dean of Women for St. Michael's College. A. B. Fennell, University Registrar, is the chairman.

The plan of training drawn up last year was devised to meet the needs of the girl students who felt they should help the national emergency in a practical way with war work, with a scheme of hours roughly similar to that of the men of the C.O.T.C. Also it was felt that the Government would ask something of university women and the training plan was thought out so that they could contribute.

The committee has arranged not only a widely varied set of courses, so that each student can be enrolled in one to her liking, but they have also tried to equate them: short lecture courses which do not complete the 30 hours for the term have examinations which, it was felt, would compensate for the longer hours in other courses. Some of the courses, like sewing, make up all the hours in practical work. Others, like recreational leadership and day nursery work, are half lectures and half practical work.

The University departments consulted about contributing to the courses have immediately co-operated with the committee; the colleges have been most generous in loaning the use of rooms and equipment. The girls taking the courses have been enthusiastic. There have been very few exemptions and those all on physical grounds.

The enormous task of arranging a satisfactory program of women's war work in this large University has been resolved to the satisfaction of all those concerned. The work has also had an excellent effect on University spirit: the girls have met and made friends with girls from other colleges and faculties whom they would probably not have met under ordinary circumstances. All in all, the Women's National Service Training courses can look back on a successful first term and forward to a successful second one.

RECORDS IN REVIEW

Patter and Clatter

Well, Gaties, many a moon has gone down behind the woodshed since our last meeting and during that time the war and Petrillo have played havoc with the record racket. Rambling through a local platter merchant's shop the other day we found few listed in the catalogues could be had for the asking, indeed we were shown files or ordered discs—delivery date unknown.

One of the first to strike our attention was T. D.'s Blues Blazes and Manhattan Serenade on Victor 27962. Top side is a typical Sy Oliver number—fast and terrific with Buddy Rich rockin' it solid. Violins spoil the first few bars but some Bushkin 88 and a typical Elman scream break are the things to note. Reverse is a usual Dorsey slow smooth blues-ballad featuring Jo Stafford's vocal. On the whole the disc is two of T. D.'s best waxings in some months.

Lionel Hampton comes through next on a Decca 18394 with Flying Home and In the Bog. Latter is a relaxed but very powerful number that features some tenor sax work that is slightly terrific. The Flying Home is a Hampton original and his theme. It has a somewhat restrained attitude but Hampton himself tickles the bones with much fervour. Some super tenor at the beginning and a terrific Ernie Royal chorus when he goes up above high "C" are the kicks.

The King of Swing comes up next with We'll Meet Again and Before on Columbia C639. Peggy Lee smooths out the top side in ordinary balad style. The reverse is an expert dance arrangement of Rachmaninoff's Concerto No. 2 in C. Mel Powell carries the mail most of the way on the keyboard and with Goodman's stickwork builds a very tricky but swingy and danceable arrangement—and Sergi doesn't have to turn over in his grave, either.

Shep Fields comes out with his everything-but-brass band with I Came Here to Talk with Joe and Crossroads on Bluebird B-11578. Latter displays his technique in using nothing but reeds and rhythm to turn out a smooth ballad. The Joe side features Ralph Young trying to imitate Vaughan Monroe. The number begins with some fine guitar phrasing and the platter is worthwhile to have in your collection—for dancing at least.

The "Harlem Express" — Jimmy Lunceford to the uneducated—turns out a "must have" in Knock Me a Kiss and Strictly Instrumental on Decca 10053. Top has a beautiful tenor middle part but we claim that Willie Smith doesn't touch Eldridge's effort with Krupa. Instrumental is a typical Lunceford—solid rhythm, super Thomas tenor stretch and planty of sock. If you have a partiality for the "Express" be sure to pick this one up.

Sorghum Switch on Decca 10037 by the great Jimmy Dorsey appears to be another of his deep rhythm and virbrant sav masterpieces—not unlike his older number, Turn Left. A fine guitar opening is gradually overcome by the

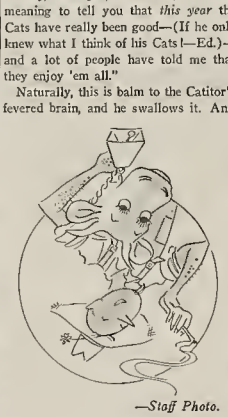
LESSON ELEVEN



Today we take you on a tour of the Catitor's mind — yes, he has one. Sssshhh! Quiet!! See those wheels turning? They're grinding out tomorrow's Cat.

This is a typical scene inside a Feature Editor's cranium, and describes how a Cat is written.

The Catitor, like all his predecessors, was roped in for the job in a moment of weakness—after all, who wants to lay an egg every day? So, as the year progresses, the ed-in-chief and other senior mastheaders give him the odd shot in the arm, to keep him from resigning. For example, at 1:30 p.m. on any afternoon:

"Say, Champus, old fellow, I've been meaning to tell you that this year the Cats have really been good—(If he only knew what I think of his Cats!—Ed.)—and a lot of people have told me that they enjoy 'em all."

Naturally, this is balm to the Catitor's fevered brain, and he swallows it. And

Senior School Takes Dafoe Cup

Frank Lewarne Leads Engineers to 10-7 Victory Over Vic in Lacosse League Sudden-Death Final

DEDRICK STARS FOR VIC

By Jim Paton

For the third successive year the Dr. W. A. Dafoe cup, emblem of inter-faculty lacrosse supremacy, will retain its place in the School of Science trophy shelf. Yesterday afternoon Sr. S.P.S. came through with a 10-7 victory over Vic in a sudden death final which was an exciting thriller from start to finish.

In the first minute of play Frank Lewarne, high-scoring forward of the Engineers, started the Blue and Gold along the victory trail with a beautiful effort, but Vic wasted no time getting it back via Malc Dedrick. Seconds later Lewarne was through again but the goal was called back. Three goals in quick succession ended the first quarter with Vic holding a narrow 3-2 margin. Dedrick and Glen Munro tallied for Vic while Frank Kellam was the S.P.S. marksman.

An illegal draw at the start of the second quarter gave the Schoolmen a free throw and Stan Kent took a quick pass from the throw to tie the score for the third time. A minute later Lewarne netted his second goal to put his team in front where they remained for the rest of the game. Kellam added another by way of emphasis.

The last part of this quarter presented the most exciting part of the game but no more goals were scored. The Engineers bombarded the Vic goal from all angles for at least three full minutes but they failed to beat the agile Bridgman in the Vic net. From this sustained barrage Ron McKenzie broke loose and raced the length of the floor to pass to Dedrick, who had Art Capper at his mercy; but somehow or other the S.P.S. goaler outguessed him with probably the most sensational save of the season. At half time S.P.S. led 5-3.

Once again S.P.S. started the quarter off with a quick thrust, Frankie Kellam splitting the Vic defence for bis third score, only to have Dedrick come right back for the third of his four goals of the afternoon. Play continued at a terrific clip and at the thre-quarter mark Lewarne and Dedirck had added two and one to their total. S.P.S. 8, Vic 5.

Going into the last quarter Vic showed definite signs of fatigue as Frankie Lewarne whipped home two goals to more or less cinch the championship for the slide-rulers, but Vic recovered to notch two more goals, both by Glen Munro. At timeup Vic were pressing hard in a desperate attempt to pull the game out of the fire, but S.P.S. was not to be denied. Final score: S.P.S. 10, Vic 7.

The game was one of the best of the year and was a fitting climax to a good season. With a little more reserve power the Scarlet and Gold might possibly have reversed the decision, but on the game the Schoolmen deserved their win and are worthy champions.

The two Franks, Lewarne and Kellam, were in great form and divided nine of the 10 S.P.S. goals between them. Kellam got three and Lewarne, who avowed before the game that he wasn't feeling well, bagged six. For the losers, Malc Dedrick and Glen Munro stood out offensively while Rundy Patrick and Ron McKenzie were towers of strength on the defence.

Sr. S.P.S.—Kellam, Lewarne, Kent, Crosby, Graham, Currie, Prentice, Gorman, Heffernan, Capper.

Vic—Bridgman, Munro, Dedrick, McComiskey, McKenzie, Rutherford, Patrick, Waugh, Bryce.

VIC TO HONOUR TEAM IN SECOND RUGBY DANCE

The second annual Vic Rugby Dance is to be held at 8:30 this Friday in Burwash Hall. The dance was inaugurated last year in honour of the 1941 Mulock Cup champions, and according to the committee, this year's dance is held in eager anticipation of a repeat performance.

Music is to be supplied by Jim Bottomly and among the several features planned will be numbers dedieated to each member of the team. The decorations will also follow the rugby montif.

Affirmative Wins Varsity Debate

the influence of its internal religious animosity has necessitated British interference on numerous occasions.

Marg Albright, II Victoria, the second speaker for the affirmative, stated that the one basic essential for a country to gain its independence is for that country to have the will to be free. Using China as an example, Miss Albright said a country need not have any of the qualities that the opposition mentioned are necessary. She stated her belief that India is ready for independence because she has that will for freedom; that she has national unity and is truly represented in her National Congress; and that she has proved that she has excellent leadership which has read the signs of the times more clearly than many of the world's leading statesmen. And in this connection, Miss Albright referred to India's early boycotting of Japan, condemnation of Italy's invasion of Ethiopia, and disapproval of Britain's former appeasement policy as exemplified at Munich. "And as for changing horses in midstream, or giving India her independence while the war is on—is it not a truism that danger from without brings stronger unity within?" the speaker concluded.

The final speaker in the formal debate was Don Rohr, IV St. Mike's, who upheld the oppostion by continuing with the four points outlined by his colleague. This speaker claimed Indian economic security was impossible, giving statistics concerning the country's "cultural and physical illiteracy." Her lack of knowledge of scientific agriculture, which is her basic industry, was propounded by Rohr as a proof of economic insecurity.

low, powerful saxes — the climax is reached with the master's own alto—then the disc fades out with the "git" repeat. The reverse, an ex-Hit Paradite, My Devotion, came off second best. Bob Eberly seems strained and weak—so we suggest T.D.'s discing of said number for listening pleasure.

As a token of remembrance to Glenn Miller, who has donned a uniform recently, we would like to dig up one of his last releases—Keep 'Em Flying and Dear Mam on Bluebird B-11442. First is his usual brand of fast, powerful, screaming ensemble work, featuring May trumpet and Purtill drums. Reverse is also typieal—a slow sweet saxpredominating ballade with Ray Eberly and Modernaires weeping their way through the disc.—R.G.C.

Speaking of Sport

By Bud Smith

SLENDER, TENDER AND TALL!

Well it looks like the fall term is drawing to its usual bedraggled close. At least all indications seem to point that way. After all, when the rugby leagues are midway through their schedule, Christmas can't be far away! Incidentally, a propos of the aforementioned rugby leagues, we hear that Senior School is definitely worried. Seems that they are due to lose quite a few of thier players by graduation this spring, and as a consequence will be weakened for their Mulock Cup final with Vic, which this year will be played in July as a feature of the Orangemen's Day parade. (Don't be silly, Homer, nobody ever graduates from Vic!)

As we were saying however, fall is fading. This brings us to the question of next term's athletics. And this, in turn, brings up the one bright spot in the extramural dimout—namely those "slender, tender and tall" cage boys, THE BIG BLUE TEAM! That is our sole remaining memento of the "Rah Rah" days. However, when we look at all the other colleges like McGill and Queen's, which have only Football, Hockey and Basketball teams left from their pre-war program of Football, Hockey, Basketball and Ping Pong, we must consider ourselves lucky. (Who do we think we're kidding?)

Anyway we have a basketball team, so let us praise Allah and ruminate over the quality of this basketball team. Last year's Blues turned in a remarkably fine performance, and enjoyed one of the most successful seasons that any Varsity cage quintet has had in recent years. The only blemish on their record was a loss to the "Long Green" of Wayne University. Despite the loss the Varsity squad, led by Hal Axon and Bill Roberts, turned in a scintillating performance against Wayne, and the most thrilling hoop game seen around here in many a moon was the result. They emerged victorious over such teams as Niagaga U., Buffalo U. and No. 1 I.T.S.

Most of last year's sensational squad have departed. The great St. Mike's duo of Jack LaVarnway and Bill Roberts have returned U.S.-ward. Hal Axon and Don Finlayson, the other veterans on the squad, have both graduated and are no longer available. However a few familiar faces are still with us. Lanky Don Gibson will be back at his regular centre spot, waving his arms gaily about in the stratosphere as he draws a bead on the opposing basket. Stu Scott, fleet freshman forward of last season, is also back in the fold to bolster Warren Steven's crew. In addition to these two regulars, three other members of last season's squad have turned out. They are Murray Thompson, Bill Dewar, and Ken Tettmar, all of whom saw a lot of action last year. Also the news has come slipping in that a smooth ball-handler named Durocher is indulging in O.C.E. this semester and will turn out for Stevens & Co. Durocher operated at right guard for Assumption College last year and may be remembered by some who saw Assumption play here 'way back last February. Considerable other latent talent around the campus is about to be unearthed by "Steve" to add to his team. There was a large turnout at the first practice on Friday and most of them looked as if they had been in a gym before.

The Green and Gold boys from Wayne will renew their rivalry with the Blues in the feature match of the season. Other college aggregations passing this way will be those of Rochester and Assumption. The Rochester team had a brilliant record during the past season, and ran rough-shod over their eastern opposition. There is no reason to suspect that this seasons edition will be any weaker. Assumption, starting place for the great Joe Krol's athletic career, shouldn't prove too difficult but will certainly be no push-over. The Blues will also tangle with the Navy team from H.M.C.S. York which they defeated in a remarkably close contest last season. Air Force teams from No. 1 and No. 6 I.T.S. will come to challenge the Varsity cagers. These Air Force teams are somewhat unknown factors at the present time, due to changing personnel. Last year the Blues were fortunate in meeting a team from Eglington which hadn't become very accustomed to playing together. However, this year things may be altogether different. After all, there is no use letting Hayman waste away just because the Grey Cup is packed up! We imagine that Lew will have a rather good team under his tutelage if he stays at the home of the Hurricanes this winter. Hayman coached the Varsity cagers a few years back, and for the past two seasons has tutored the U.T.S. teams.

Among the material turning out for the Blues this year are a couple of promising freshmen who have played opposite each other in the Prep School loop for the past three years. They are Locke Clement, a smooth-working ex-Upper Canada star who hails from Toledo, and Stu Peterkin, one of Hayman's proteges from U.T.S. who is playing for Central "Y" this season. Clement was the big gun on the U.C.C. team which was nosed out by Harbord in last year's city finals and might well make the grade to the Blue this year. Kenny Hoyle, U.C. mainstay for the past couple of years, is another capable ballhawk who is bidding for a place on the squad. All in all, with the expert coaching of Warren Stevens and the good material on hand, a capable Blue team should result, and this year's series of Athletic Nights should be equally as successful as last year's.

Last evening at O.C.E. the semis started off with a flash of marvelous basketball. As a matter of fact both games were so good that we are going to devote this column and tomorrow's to them. In this way, we can become better acquainted with the teams which are the pick of the University, and have a greater scope for our remarks bearing on them.

The first game of the evening between II P.H.E. and U.C. Seniors was fast and furious. We tried to stay on our respective benches, but things were far too exciting. Every minute was packed with action and it was a fight to the finish. Tbe final score, 15-14, and the 12-all at three-quarter time, shows just how close a game of basketball it was—but, wait a minute, that's only half the story. The other half you really should see to appreciate it—but we will give you a bit about the style of the players.

Connie O'Connor was top scorer for the girls in maroon, blue and white, and Jean Stinson ran her a close second. Connie waylaid and baffled her guards by streaking skillfully about the floor and by being ready for any and all passes from her team-mates. Jean rarely missed a shot on the basket and did some truly neat cutting to get a closer view of it. All the P.H.E. guards did a plendid pob of stalling the U.C. forwards at crucial moments. Jean Barhart had her heighth and aggresiveness to hold over them—and she used it to great advantage; whilst Betty Davis did very well indeed when it eame to cornering the ball or impeding her opponent's progress.

U.C.'s twin top scores were Jean Hoult and Joan Carter. The fact that they each accounted for three of their team's baskets speaks for itself. Jean's passing, moreover, was particularly good, inasmuch as she was usually very well guarded. Her few long shots were accurate and she worked well with her team-mates. Joan usually managed to break away from her guards or pivot around them, and when she couldn't, she tried an overhead shot which usually went rolling into the basket.

The guards had a very hard battle to wage—and, all in all, they waged it very well under the able command of Marg. Stock. Once or twice, however, they were baffled by the quick passing attack of P.H.E., wbose condition was quite a bit superior to thcirs, what with all the exercises and games which are a vital part of their course. Spectators and players alike all agreed that this was a game apart which was tense with interest and spectacular basketball.

We'll talk about the second feature of the evening between III P.H.E. and U.C. Freshies tomorrow. And there is still a little room for a few more onlookers. So come on over on Wednesday for the return games. Anything is likely to happen and you are very welcome indeed.

Speaking of basketball, and while we are still on the subject, there is a little matter about practice reports to be handed in to Ruth Virtue at Oaklawn as soon as possible. The various College representatives sbould list the number of hours that their respective teams have practiced either in O.C.E. or in Little Vic gym so that the season can be finished off properly in this respect.

ARTS WOMEN

All women in National Service Training courses except those in the Canadian Red Cross Corps, Hospital Nursing Aids and Red Cross Sewing, are required to report to their respective Deans of Women on Thursday, Dec. 10, or Friday, Dec. 11, to fill out application blanks for the courses to be taken in the Easter term.

hither and yon

There is a medical student around this University who gets into the darndest scrapes. Said medstude was spending a few weeks living in one of the hospitals, as part of his course in Obstetrics. One Sunday night he got fed up with it all, and went home to relax and read for an evening. "Don't call me unless there's something spectacular, like sextuplets," he instructed his partners.

Along about ten o'clock, his phone rang: "Hello," said his pal, "we've all got dates to take the nurses to a midnight show on their hours off. Phone D.... and come along!" "She won't be able to go — don't you know it's against the rules for them to go out at night." But Satan triumphed, and the hapless student phoned the nurse, who, by this time had been told to agree to anything he said. "Oh yes," she sweetly, "I'll meet you on the corner at eleven-thirty," And at eleven-thirty we find our hero on the aforementioned corner, waiting, waiting, waiting, for a pair of blue, blue eyes to appear. But alas, he waited in vain for nearly an hour, while the cold November wind slashed at him, for alas, it was all a prearranged suck-in.

BUT THAT WASN'T THE END OF HIS TROUBLES. It seems that when his pals threatened to tell his girl friend about the incident, he bragged: "Oh, I tell her everything." However, when the Medical-at-Home rolled around a couple of months later, one of his friends lured her into a corner and told her. "I don't believe it," she said, and before a roomful of his friends she asked, in a loud voice:

"DID YOU SPEND AN HOUR ON A STREET CORNER WAITING FOR A NURSE?"

"Yes, dealing."

A TYPICAL SCENE in the Great Hall concerns the lone Artsman or Theolog who sits down at a table otherwise populated by medical students, and gets caught in the crossfire of the invariable discussion concerning the latest (usually gory) operations, postmortems and moribund patients. As the meal progresses the hapless intruder eats less and less, and usually leaves half way through his dessert.

Over at Wymilwood the other night a medstude was getting himself married up, and in another part of the same building the Sociology Club was meeting. At one point two very bewildered socialogists, still in C.O.T.C. uniforms, wandered in and got tied up in the receiving line—but they were saved from harm by a more enlightened member of the club who bellowed—"Come on outa here, ya jerks. This looks like a wedding."

And so it did.

* * *

And a propos of practically nothing at all, we offer this:

"I hear you got thrown out of college for calling the Dean a fish."

"I didn't call him a fish—I just pointed at him and said 'That's our dean'."

A little later on, the groom's close friends came along in the receiving line, and the poor fella feared the worst—so perhaps we shouldn't be to harsh with him for muttering, as one of the boys was preparing to kiss the bride: "Get away from there, you wolf!"

You malign me, pal.

THERE ARE TWO GRADUATE NURSES at one of the larger hospitals in town who know the same naval officer, and, somehow or other, they don't like each other. One of them wrote him one day, and included a detailed report of what the nurses in training thought of the other one. She wasn't quite sure of the address, but she sent the letter anyway, putting her colleague's return address on it. The address was wrong, and the letter returned . . . to the other one, who then brought it back to the author, with the comment: "Here's a letter you must have written. I didn't read it, of course."

Of course.

In the University of Western Ontario Gazette we found the following, much to our disgust: "Just a slight warning to any little Freshie who has discovered a Med — and Med. They are creations whose minds travel in one direction, and in the gutter all the way."

And the author of those words was probably a fellow traveller.

One student, who will graduate shortly, is very susceptible to pocket picking. The other day some of his pals lifted the stethoscope and percussion hammer he was carrying, and dismantled them, and, just as he started to look for them, his friends reassured him: "Don't worry — your instruments are safe." and then, before his eyes, the dismantled instruments were dexterously slipped into various pockets of the clinician's suit.

This sort of thing (as O'Mara used to say) must stop!

Holiday Readers May Sign Now

Students who want books for the Christmas holidays, may begin to sign for them today at the various libraries on the campus.

At the University library, books may be taken out during the last three days before the end of term and must be returned not later than Jan. 4. The same regulations apply at the University College reading room.

At the Victoria library, Miss E. A. Keeley, warned of the "terrific" rush for the most popular books, explaining that 377 were loaned to students during the Christmas holidays last year.

At the University Library and at U.C. the number of books which each student may borrow is limited to two in each subject, but there is no restriction on the number at Vic.

SPEAKING of SWING

By Barry Townley

One of the prominent music magazines has referred to Les Brown's orchestra as "the most consistently under-rated band on the continent." The statement contains more than a grain of truth. The band does have "that little extra something."

The boys have travelled a long way from the small jazz combo that was organized as "Les Brown's Blue Devils" on the campus of Duke University. They are still as happy together, as youthfully enthusiastic, as they were in the thirties; witness the hep vocal sextet. But to their exuberance they have added generous doses of showmanship and some of the best arrangements in the business: "Procession of the Sardar" and "Valse Triste" attained symphonic proportions.

However, Les, who by the way is unassuming but personable, doesn't line up to the promise of his recordings which are usually of superior jazz. He lacks a definite style. Able to play music smooth or hot, he doesn't leave one striking stylistic impression on our ears. In Les Brown adds an outstanding style to that tremendous drive, he'll no longer by "under-rated."

Adventure and the good old love interest get tangled up in a Spanish Civil War story as spies slither their way through "Blockade." Madeline Carroll plays the pivot part as she engages in sabotaging the efforts of a small town to get a ship through to relieve starvation of the pitiable Spanish inhabitants. The theme, which is most convincing, is her realization of the actual cost of these dealings on life, morale and malnutrition. Henry Fonda changes from the lover of the land to an army lieutenant and stands alone as his seniors aid in defeat. The scenes are excellent if somewhat too long drawn out and sordid in spots.

MIDTOWN DOUBLE BILL

A good balance for the double bill is "The House Across the Bay." The house is made of stone and has been called Alcatrez. Joan Bennett, beloved of gambler George Raft, tries to remain true for 10 long years but is placed in difficulties by her husband's lawyer. The picture hangs together well and the denoument is brought about in a dramatic climax which brings in Walter Pidgeon as aeroplane inventor and the old movie thrill of a "break" from the house of the iron bars.

U.C., VIC SMASH TO MULOCK CUP FINAL

Red And White Battlers Upset School Machine 6-5 In Overtime Pigskin Classic

Heavier Blue and Gold Squad Bows Before Determined Royal Collegians as Sammy Stellman's Plunging Provides Tieing Touchdown and Don Smith's Extra-Period Single Settles It

NESBITT'S SPECTACULAR TACKLING FEATURES

A determined and resurgent U.C. rugby team made good on the breaks yesterday and upset a heavier Senior School squad 6-5 in overtime to make their way to the Mulock Cup final against Vic tomorrow. The Engineers—beaten only once previously and even money to take the ultimate gonfalon—missed several scoring chances and were finally overcome by a Red and White team that had come through a long group playoff schedule with a fighting spirit that carried everything before it.

Much of the game was played on the line and two effective plungers emerged, Sammy Stellman of the Arts College and Punchy Parchello for the Engineers. Stellman was the hero of the U.C. win, and the greatest yardage gainer of the day. School had massed five points in the first half on two singles and a placement by Quittenton. Jim Bitove had revived U.C. hopes on a 65 yard run to the School 15 when, fortunately for the Engineers, half time was called. Stellman knotted the score after Warren intercepted an end run pass on the Engineer 38, by battering his way over the goal line on two successive thrusts through the tight School centre.

Play ranged from one end to the other as the teams battled for the odd point advantage during regulation time. The Engineers missed some golden opportunities, one especially in the last quarter when an attempted placement from the 20 fell short.

The overtime period told the story when opportunist Graham Warren again spiked a School fumble on the 25 yard line. Smith made no mistakes and kicked deep behind the goal line where Nesbitt made the tackle for the rouge.

Much vaunted favourites before the game, it was a bitter blow for the School team, the one that had downed Vic earlier in the season. Parchello crashed the Red and White line and left his tacklers gasping for breath on the turf—and ice. Hal Seymour handled the School kicking department in excellent fashion. He began the scoring by a well-placed punt behind the U.C. goal line at the end of the first quarter.

Bill wade left the U.C. line-up in the first quarter due to a shoulder injury, and his educated toe was missed on the convert after Stellman's touchdown, Bitove flashed off some important yardage and caught forwards at random. Smith got his lofts away in good time as the heavy School line charged in and threw forwards with amazing accuray. Nesbitt was everywhere at once and his shoestring tackles kept the School backfield frozen in their tracks.

First Quarter

McIntyre kicked off to Smith on U.C.'s 25. Line plays were smashed and a long hoist was misjudged by Bob Seymour who recovered on the S.P.S.

73-MEN SPORT I.S.S. RIBBONS

The first I.S.S. ribbons of today's campaign were purchased by the U.C. Men's Residence, known as "73." Getting a preview of the ribbons that comely co-eds will be selling today through-50 articles to the Book Harvest drive. out the campus, 100 per cent of the artsmen contributed more than five dollars to the fund through John Wood, IV Classics, who is a member of the committee.

In the last few days the men of the residence also sorted all bookshelves and will make a contribution of about

CO-EDS TO VEND BLUE AND WHITE RIBBONS AS I.S.S. DRIVE CULMINATES TODAY

Ribbons will flutter in every lapel and a carnival spirit will prevail today—War Services Day—as the University of Toronto puts on its mammoth demonstration to aid not one, but two war charities: the Book Harvest, which will be brought to a colourful close; and the International Student Service.

President H. J. Cody will take part in the opening of the Rally at 12:45 in Hart House Theatre where he will make a contribution to the I.S.S. after donating some books to the Book Harvest, thus, in a sense, symbolizing the union of these two war charity efforts by the University. In return for his I.S.S. contribution, the President will receive Faculty ribbons from the co-eds representing the various faculties who are entered in the "Typical Co-ed Contest" to be held in Hart House Theatre immediately afterwards.

Only two of the faculties—Meds and Pharmacy—will not take part in the full drive. Due to examinations, these two faculties will stage their own drives at a later date.

The day will start in the pre-dawn hours of 9:30 lectures as the University ribbons and the Faculty ribbons go on sale in the various faculty buildings. University ribbons—white with blue printing—will be sold for a quarter; once this has been purchased, the students are privileged to obtain their faculty ribbons for whatever donation they feel free to give.

There will be co-eds (beautiful co-eds, the committee promises) selling ribbons in the non-faculty buildings and on campus during noon hour.

At 12:30 p.m. the President will be met in front of Simcoe Hall by Eileen Acton and Don Rowat of the I.S.S. committee and two pipers from the pipe band. After he has given some books to the Harvest outside Hart House, the rally will take place inside Hart House theatre—admission to be the wearing of the University Ribbon. In addition to the choosing of the "Typical Co-ed," the cast from the Vic Bob will re-stage their "Harvest Ballet."

While the rally is going on inside, there will be a street dance outside of Hart House, just as there was last year during the "March of Dimes." Admission to the street dance will be the wearing of the University ribbon and 10 cents. Once the judging is finished, the co-eds in the contest will go outside to join the dancing, which will last as long as there are people there.

If bad weather prevents outside activities, the entire rally will be staged indoors, President Cody making his do-indoors, the dance being held in the rehearsal room back of the stage.

Books are to be brought in from 12:15 to 12:45, when they will be placed in a large silo resting on a truck in front of Hart House. When the contributions are all in, the books will be taken to the I.O.D.E. headquarters and added to those collected in the city-wide drive.

The Book Harvest will be held outside, no matter what the weather conditions, for the silo will be ample protection for the books.

During the rally, all contributions to the I.S.S. will be turned in to the S.A.C.

BOOK-SILO IN FRONT OF HART HOUSE IS RALLYING-POINT FOR TODAY'S HARVEST

By 12:15 today it is expected that the Book-Silo constructed at S.P.S. will be in position in front of Hart House to receive the harvest of texts, histories, biographies, pamphlets, magazines, in today's campaign to collect books for the Armed Forces. The Silo, with hay and pitchforks, will help to emphasize the "harvest" theme of the drive.

Books which have been collected in the different colleges and faculties during the last two weeks will be placed in the silo and students who have not yet contributed their books may bring them directly to add to the crop.

In S.P.S., where a letter of appeal was sent to each student in the hope that "every man, woman, and child in School," would contribute to the harvest in order that they might have enough books to fill a Martin transport tractor-trailer, from three to four hundred books, predominantly texts, have already been collected, Jim Cawley, President of the Engineering Society, said last night.

Loretto College is planning to form a "conga line" when they bring their books to the silo, and it is anticipated that other colleges and faculties will have special forms of presentation. The Physiotherapy students are planning to bring their contributions directly to the silo tomorrow, as they have not previously taken up their collection.

In the University College Rotunda, the book-crop has overflowed the special box placed there for the purpose and books and magazines have been piled beside it. University texts, current popular magazines, and older copies of geographical magazines predominate. Book-of-the-month selections have been contributed by some students.

Posters displayed in the halls of the different buildings have urged students to contribute to this cause.

Since they were unable to find suitable books of their own for the Harvest, the girls in residence at Oaklawn have chipped in to buy books to donate instead. Other students who have no libraries from which to choose, have purchased penguin books to add to the drive.

If any student has forgotten to bring in his books today he is asked to give them to his college or faculty book-harvest representative as soon as possible, said Walter Lyons, of the Book-Harvest section of the War Services Committee.

Munro, Bundy, Thompson Lead Last Year's Champs To 13-1 Win Over Gaels

St. Mike's Powerful Line Outplunges Scarlet and Gold But Pass Defence Powerless Against Munro's Potent Tossing; Winning Touchdown March Goes 80 Yards on Three Completed Forwards

QUICK KICK BREAKS IRISH ATTACK

The unerring pitching arm of Glen Munro, the capable ball handling of his receivers, notably Bob Bundy and Murray Thomson, and a surprise first-down kick gave Victoria's favoured grid machine a 13-I victory over an unexpectedly stubborn St. Mike's squad in a Mulock Cup semi-final yesterday.

The Irish were pushing the Vicmen around more than somewhat and had them a point down when Munro opened up his passing barrage in the second quarter. They kept on pushing off and on until well into the final quarter, when the passes started coming a little too thickly and accurately for effective resistance.

A frost-hardened, ice-flecked field made the going rough for both teams. Plungers frequently had difficulty gaining momentum on the slippery terrain. Chunky Tom Jacob and big Frank Dunlop smashed for consistent gains through the line for the Gaels, while Bob Bundy, Vic's main plunging threat, was generally held in check.

First Quarter

Victoria received the opening kick-off and moved up to the midfield stripe. Penalized, Munro kicked; on the first down St. Mike's returned the kick which was run back 18 yards on a cross lateral to St. Mike's 50. The ball moved to the 30 where Tucker intercepted Munro's pass. St. Mike's kicked to the Vic 46, recovered a fumble, kicked again and Dunlop downed Munro of his own 15. On a cutback he took it up to the 30 but there his pass was again intercepted by Odette who was knocked down on the 40. Tom Jacob sliced centre for 15 to end the quarter.

Second Quarter

In two downs the Gaels advanced the ball nine yards and Odette kicked for the point from Vic's 34. From the 25 the Red and Gold advanced to their 50 and lost the ball on downs. St. Mike's made a first and then kicked; Munro was downed by a hard tackle on his own four. On the exchange of kicks Vic reached their 30. The next five plays were pass plays, three were complete; Munro to Thomson, Munro to Burford, and Munro to Bundy from the Double Blue 33 for the touchdown. This was a beautifully executed play, the man going over standing up. The convert was good. The half ended with the score 6 to 1.

Third Quarter

Trailing by five points, St. Mike's turned the power on; they made seven first downs to Vic's none, yet the score for the period was one more point for Vic. Dunlop carried the ball seven times for 52 yards, an average of better than seven yards a crack. Receiving the kick-off, the Gaels rolled up three first downs until Rutledge intercepted a pass and ran it back to the St. Mike's 37. Vic lost the ball in three attempts and the Double Blue added two more

Typical Co-eds To Vie For Crown

Yesterday the colleges and faculties of the University looked over their feminine enrolment and picked their candidates for today's "typical co-ed" contest.

Blondes, brunettes, redheads, short girls, tall girls, glamour girls, indoor and outdoor girls, sweater girls and better girls paraded before the somewhat uncritical eye of the judges of the faculty.

And today the survivors of the gruelling preliminaries step before the judges of the finals contest, whose names the War Services Day committee have prudently withheld.

The male members of the Victoria College Union, headed by N. H. Frye, selected Marg Banting and Evelyn Gardhouse from 16 participants chosen by their year executives. Before a cheering crowd of students, eds and co-eds, including a strong contingent of slack-jawed Schoolmen, the committee of judges argued its way heatedly to a final decision.

At University College, the Women's Undergraduate Association deliberated at considerable length on a list of nominations submitted by U.C. undergraduates, and finally decided on Georgette Brown and Alison Foster.

At an early hour this morning St. Michael's S.A.E. representatives were reported to be locked in a conferences chamber, discussing the merits of two candidates from Loretto and St.

You'll Enjoy Today

Last year it was the March of Dimes. Campus grey-beards of one or more years of Varsity experience will readily remember that day when "Collitch" spirit flowed forth on the campus for the first time since the declaration of war—a gay and youthful spirit that was directed towards a worthy cause and achieved results far beyond most of our expectations.

This year it is "War Services Day," with not one charity as last year, but two objectives for the students to shoot at. Not one outlet for exhuberance, but two.

Both the causes are worthwhile. Enough has been said in our columns to acquaint the student body with the aims and results of these causes — the International Student Service and the Book Harvest.

All that remains now is for the results to come in. Both of these causes are tailor-made for students—one a direct aid for less fortunate students, the other an appeal for the commodity of which we are the best source.

There will be dancing in the streets and the choosing of the "Typical Co-ed," and as a special added attraction, there will be a presentation of a "ballet" inspired by that other occasion this year wherein the students backed a cause—the harvest.

Students are students and do not change in essence, though they may have to modify the outward aspects under the force of circumstances. The spirit of the campus heydays, of the intercollegiate rugby teams, of high interfaculty rivaly is still there, though it has been compressed to fit the times.

Here is an opportunity for that spirit to burst forth and achieve a good by doing so. If we throw all of that undergraduate enthusiasm into this effort today it cannot help to be a success.

And we can have fun doing it.

A Question Of Principle

Disturbing news for student journalists continues to come out of Montreal in connection with the recent suspension of the Editor-in-Chief of The Georgian by the students' council of Sir George Williams College. Suspension followed publication of a front-page editorial dealing with the controversial subject of Life magazine's recent article criticizing French Canada.

We continue to feel that the editorial in quetsion, which attacked Cardinal Villeneuve, Premier Godbout, and others who had expressed opposition to the Life article, was untactful in the extreme and we question the wisdom of a college newspaper which helps to aggravate a delicate political situation which is none of its immediate concern.

On the other hand, little comfort is supplied by the student council's stand on the issue. Their grounds for the editor's dismissal, as given in a statment to the press, are that "The council feels that The Georgian should not become involved in the controversy on the Life article at all, and is refusing to take sides in the controversy one way or the other."

If the council of Sir George Williams College feels that its newspaper is carrying on a policy detrimental to the welfare of the student body, we feel they have every right to take steps to rectify the situation. But when the council demands that the newspaper adhere strictly to the council's ideas as to what stand is to be taken on every issue, it is not surprising that the entire editorial board of The Georgian should resign in support of their editor, regardless of the particular issue at stake.

We understand that the council has had trouble with editors of The Georgian in the past, and in view of their declared policy, it is not to be wondered at. The undergraduate editor has enough difficulty formulating a sane and consistent editorial policy of his own without having to check with the frequently varying views of a group of campus executives.

Fortunately, the problem has not arisen on this campus for a number of years. The constitution of The Varsity, and of many other college papers, gives the editor generous scope in which to formulate his own policy, making him answerable to the council for his discretion in dealing with whatever issues arise.

This week the council of Sir George William College meets to discuss ratification of a new constitution for their newspaper. If they value the function of the paper, they will not allow the present unfortunate situation to becloud the principle of a reasonably free press, even in a university and in wartime.

BLUE

Today The Varsity appears in bright blue ink. Usually in former years, these Blue Issues have been reserved for days before "The Big Game" of the football season, when Varsity's Big Blue grid squads stepped out onto the Stadium turf to battle for the league lead against the Redmen of McGill or the Tricolour of Queen's. Since intercollegiate days, The Varsity has subsisted in a blue issue diet of Ski Club copy.

This Blue Issue is a bit different from the others. In part it is dedicated to the Mulock Cup final, set for tomorrow in Varsity Stadium, between the men of Vic and U.C. But it is also published as a "pregame" send-off to today's War Services Campaign. Here is probably the biggest chance students will have to show unified University spirit. And to the spirit of a united University, we give an issue printed in Varsity Blue.

ART & MUSIC — Drama

This Is a Record

Toronto Symphony Orchestra

Last night's all Russian program by the Toronto Symphony Orchestra was everything that a good symphony concert should be. The orchestra is only just short of perfect and the conducting leaves absolutely nothing to be desired.

With that praise, there must be the usual tempering. The Shostakovitch Fifth Symphony, played of course almost perfectly, was the chief music of the evening, but it is a profitless work. It brings up the whole question of "Why?" in art. Is there any justification for it, other than its admitted cleverness? There is no feeling of uplift, of spiritual inevitability to the music.

The mantle of Tschaikowsky in particular hangs over Shostakovitch, and it can be seen particularly in his striving for effects which are beyond the power of the symphony orchestra, and in his love for mere volume and immensity.

Rimsky-Korsakoff's Scheherazade is a riot of tone colours, and it was given a truly memorable performance. Woodwinds and strings particularly should be praised, but every part of the orchestra was excellent.

When Moussorgsky's Night on Bare Mountain is played as it was last night, it becomes a wild Russian dance, and opens new ideas for its interpretation. It was very interesting.

I do not believe I have ever heard the orchestra in a more exalted mood. They hung up a record for a perfect performance which it will be difficult for them to keep up, let alone surpass. Almost no group could have played what they played better. It is a goal for them to keep in mind for the future.

Servicemen to Dance Around Gala Pyre of Irreplaceable First Editions

KINDLE LEARNING'S LAMP

A gala book-burning by members of the three armed services will climax the Book Harvest, to be held on the campus today. Special detachments from H.M.C.S. York, the Newmarket Training Centre and No. 6 I.T.S. will do war dances around the specially constructed fireplace in Varsity Stadium where the books will be burnt.

"We've been waiting for this opportunity for years," said Ordinary Seaman Ledde Swinger, former S.P.S. freshman. "I've been trying to land a bomb on the University Library for six weeks, but I keep wasting 'em on the Parliament Buildings," complained LAC Goliath N. Macpherson, a reformed journalist.

"Us commandos really get a kick out of good, clean entertainment like this," said Cpl. Pyle Moron, setting an experimental match to a first edition of Dostoievsky's "Brothers Karamazov."

"I think it's a swell idea," said Warren Stevens, popular athelic director. "The fire's just what we need to soften up the field for tomorrow's Mulock Cup final."

"But who's going to soften up those Vicmen?" moaned Sammy Shacklepohl, star U.C. rugbyist.

"Who's going to soften up the Most Typical Co-ed?" chorused the freshmen classes of six other faculties.

An admission fee to the burning will be charged, with the proceeds going to the I.S.S. drive, Leo Walters, committee member, told The Varsity last night. Special faculty ribbons, cut from the scalps of St. Mike's and S.P.S. rugby players, will be on sale at the door, Walters added ghoulishly.

"I am glad to see students of our University keeping the lamp of learning alight," commented President H. J. Cody.

Barbers are certainly formidable. They never leave a job half done if they can help it, nor do they hesitate to take direct measures. For instance, an innocent lad of our acquaintance, beset by insistent sergeants and a photographer, went into a shop to be shorn in a straightforward manner. However, hypnotized by the subtle snickersnack of the scissors he answered yes to various mumbled questions put to him and 'ere he realized what was happening he had been put through a complete course of shave, haircut, scalp treatment, facial, shampoo and other sundries to the tune of $1.80.

And as for the direct measures. We were being scraped by the Hart House shop's finest steel a while back and kept complaining in our malcontent way about the dullness of the shop's ceiling. Suddenly our ministrant stopped scraping, seized a hot towel and plunked it over our bored eyes, and incidentally our whole face, remarking, "Sorry I had to drop it, BUT IT WAS TOO HOT TO HANG ONTO."

The biggest tonsorial jape to come to our notice was played on two current campus notables when they were the greenest of Frosh. Early in the autumn of their first settling here someone told them of a swell place, a barber college along Bloor street. They went in and were snipped over by, of all things, women barbers! And then the ladies pushed and combed their hair and put stuff on it, and all for free! Coming out they noticed the thing was called a School of Hairdressing, and when they looked in the mirror, guess what—they had TWO OF THE MOST GLORIOUS MARCELS!

Category (that letter on our Health Service card which makes us gasp "Thank God we still have our decrepitude!") was the subject that came up when an orderly friend of ours was in the office the other day. "I don't have to worry about that sort of thing," he remarked. "Why not?" we naively asked. He waved a khaki arm at us with a smug expression on his face. "Yeah," we remarked, "but it might go down and they might throw you out."

"Nah," he shrugged, "THEN THEY'D MAKE ME AN OFFICER."

At a post-exam camp of campus organization of mildly religious slant last year, two couples were out quite, quite late one night. The gentlemen in the case saw the ladies safely home and then snuck back to their own digs. "Hisst," hisst-ed one to the other as they approached their cabin, "suppose we wake somebody, this'll look awful funny, it's a blasphemy awful hour to be coming in!"

"Right," said the other with a we-must-protect-the-ladies'-good-name tone, "We shall have to remain out until about seven in the morning until we can come in and pretend we were just getting up."

So they did, only they must have fallen asleep, because the next thing they knew the sun was sticking it's nasty flamboyant face up over lake and woodland and the little birds were yapping their matins. They tried to sneak back into their digs, but too late—everyone was up and about. "You know," said one to another, "this could result in a most embarrassing rumor." And it did. Shortly it was being hushed about camp that "those Varsity people certainly were a strange lot. FOUR OF THEM WERE OUT ALL NIGHT DOING PENANCE ON THE ROCKS!"

U.C. Gridmen Stage Upset, Edging School In Overtime

40. Bitove was crowded and U.C. taking 15 for no yards went to midfield. Cutting in from an angle the S.P.S. line threw Smith for a 15 yard loss. Seymour raked off another 15 when he received the kick and Parchello plunged for nine. A short hoist went to U.C.'s 25. Quittenton bucked through to throw Smith again for a 10 yard loss. No yards to Hal Seymour gave S.P.S. possession on the Red and White 20 where two heavy line barrages were held. Hal Seymour kicked to the deadline for a single point.

Second Quarter

Parchello advanced Smith's kick to his 50 and two line plays were smeared. The ball went out on the Red and White 20 and the line couldn't protect two U.C. extensions. Nesbitt nailed Bob Seymour and School's Punchy Parchello crashed through the U.C. centre for 30 yards to the 25. Hal Seymour hoofed his second punt past the goal line. Bitove fumbled after he was tackled on his 25 and Quittenton sent the ball through the uprights from an impossible angle. Just before the half ended a Smith to Bitove pass and run took the U.C. team to the S.P.S. 15, for a total of 65 yards on the play.

Half time score: Sr. S.P.S. 5, U.C. 0.

Third Quarter

U.C. kicked off and Parchello took the ball to the 35. Warren intercepted a fumble on the 38. Stellman headed through the centre for 15 yards, and on the next down plunged the rest of the way for a major score. Smith's attempted convert was blocked. Stellman speared the kickoff on his 25 and galloped 20 yards. Amell got a first down. An offside for S.P.S. on the kick gave U.C. yards once more. The Engineers' guns then started to roll when Parchello and Hal Seymour moved the sticks. The offensive was finally broken up by Captain Bucky Zierler of U.C. when he broke up a dangerous end run, but it was School's ball on the Red and White 45 at the end of the quarter.

Fourth Quarter

Bitove fumbled on his 15. School attempted another placement. It went wide and short and was taken by Smith on his three. He carried it to his 15, and Amell took it to the 35. Parchello smashed off yards and two more plunges put School on the U.C. 15. The Red and White line stepped in to block the kick, and U.C. breathed slightly easier on their 30. As full time ended S.P.S. had just kicked onside and out of touch on the U.C. 50.

First Overtime Period

Hal Seymour returned U.C.'s kickoff to Bitove on the U.C. 40. A short pass Smith to Amell and an offside for S.P.S. gave the Red and White possession at midfield. Nesbitt nailed Seymour on the 20 and Warren grabbed a School fumble. This was the big break for U.C. and Smith kicked to Seymour who was tackled by Nesbitt for the game-winning point.

Second Overtime Period

School grabbed a short kickoff but lost the advantage when U.C. blocked a kick on the second down on their 40. The Engineers pressed heavily but Tartaglia for the Royal College relieved the situation by running out Seymour's kick from his 5 to the 20.

Final Score—U. C. 6, S.P.S. 5.

Sportswoman

By Betsy Gowan

With the second round of the semis to be played tonight, it's P.H.E. in the lead all the way. Last night must have been just one of those nights mentioned by our friend Omega—you remember—when an Editor gets so tired and worries so much about tomorrow's "Sportswoman" that her weary old hands forget to type out the winner of the game to which she devoted a whole column. As our dear O'Malley would say—this sort of thing must stop. Anyway, as you have probably heard by now— II P.H.E. defeated U.C. Srs. 15-14—and anything is liable to happen tonight when they meet again at 6:30 at O.C.E.

III P.H.E. also acquitted themselves nobly by defeating the U.C. Freshies 26-10 on Monday evening. Although the play was fast throughout it was definitely a good game from everyone's point of view. No 13 upset all tradition about her designating letter by scoring very frequently indeed for U.C. and displaying some truly great style whilst so doing. Alive Wyfoglad and Mary Sinclaire shone on P.H.E.'s forward line with lovely passes to and from their helpers and beautiful baskets which often astonished their opposing guards. All in all, both teams looked very good indeed and in all probability will come forth with even a better brand of basketball this evening—more propaganda—but we love it and our players like spectators to cheer them on. These teams will meet at 7:30 to decide which one of them will enter the finals—and a good time is guaranteed to all.

Speaking Of Sport

By Bill Nicholls

A SURPRISE

Well it looks like School and Vic will have another big fight Thursday one be-slideruled student remarked before the kickoff in yesterday's Mulock Cup semi-finals. There were few around to object—certainly not Schoolmen, nor their rugby team. But what happened? One young Engineer refused to believe the sad tale until he saw the team manager collect the helmets preparatory to placing them in their moth-ballian winter abode. School admittedly hammed many good chances of getting the odd scoring point that would have clinched the game, but the strategists, undoubtedly influenced by Vic's impressive victory, wished to repeat the trick.

But the dogged determination of a veteran semi-finalist U.C. team worried the men from the Schoolhouse. Wild snaps and jittery kicking can never press an advantage, and yesterday's semi-final was no exception. If I were a psychologist I would probably go off in long tirades about the foolishness of overconfidence and the advantages of facing things realistically. But there now—who ever draws morals from the playing field?

EXPECTED

The "Fighting Irish" stubbornly fought their way up the granite and ice and against an ordinary team would have made an adding machine necessary for the scorekeeper. But it was an instance of a panzer division going down before the dive-bombing of a superior aerial force. It seemed that Bob Bundy and Murray Thomson had advance information as to the slated Double Blue pass receivers—and this information spelt a lot of doom in the Bay Street Academy. But, as a matter of fact, the Gaels displayed great power in their thrust down the field and were only edged in the actual play in the air. For it was the great tossing of Tubby Munro that put the score in the teens.

FOR THE MULOCK CUP

Just before the battle, Mother . . . Tomorrow afternoon will settle the issue. Will Vic's powerful grid aggregation polish off the Royal Collegians and retain possession of the Mulock Cup this year? The long-awaited final clash has had too many upsets in its previews to warrant anything rash in predictions. The Mulock Cup is the most traditional of all the intramural trophies and from the brand of football to be expected even conscience-stricken freshmen worrying about exams should take in this contest.

In Group I, Vic after a wobby start and a much rubbed-in defeat by Senior School, have been playing unbeatable rugby. Glen Munro and his Scarlet and Gold stalwarts displayed their top form in squashing St. Mike's yesterday. And the sad thing for the arm chair game-callers is that St. Mike's were the group II winners.

The Red and White ended up in second place and in a three-way tie. Shutouts have studded their games all season, and only one point in three games with Jr. Meds. But the fact is, Coach Jim Folwell's men have been going from strength to strength. The very fact the U.C. was determined to take the measure of the School team yesterday shows they have the fight and the heedlessness of unfavourable odds which makes for victory.

However, the affair might turn into a repeat of yesterday's first game—for U.C. seems to be strong on the groundwork with Stellman knifing and Bitove skirting the line. Vic seems to have a strong pass defence and probably will be able to solve everything Smith throws but on the other hand almost any pass play can be deciphered. So, if the Royal College can catch onto the Vic aerial attack another so-called "upset" may be forthcoming.

Munro's Unerring Aerials Spell 13-1 Defeat For Irish

first downs before the ball was again in Vic's possession. On the first play Munro got off a long quick kick which caught the St. Mike's safety man completely by surprise. Running back, he carried the ball over his own goal line and was dumped by a swarm of Vic men. Again the Irish started out, added two more first downs in a row, but were stopped and the quarter ended as Vic took over the ball.

Fourth Quarter

They took over the ball and the ball game, completing six passes for another touchdown, a kick for a point, and but for two gruelling touchdown stands by the Irish the score would have been much worse. Munro passed to the St. Mike's 19, repeated with the same play that had previously scored their touchdown to reach the four, Munro to Bundy. Three plays later Burford went over on a lateral from the quarterback. The convert was no good. St. Mike's kicked off to Vic who racked up two first downs on Munro passes. They kicked to St. Mike's and recovered a Double Blue fumble on the 17, passed to the 10 and kicked an easy rouge for the last score of the day. Fitzgerald starred as the Victoria offensive continued, the game ending as the Irish fought out from beneath their own goal posts.

Fourteen Sextets Left In Hunt For Cup As Volleyball Playdowns Loom

With the ball pounders of Meds III B edging out a strongly-finishing S.P.S. VII volleyball sextet to a 15-6 and 16-14 score yesterday, the long schedule draws to a close. And the 14 group winners start the playdowns for the coveted Victoria Staff Cup.

Yesterday's game was the result of a tie in group nine but the outcome left no room for doubt. The match was all Meds at first but the Engineers came back in the deciding game to tie it up several times. It took an extra point to give the match to the Meds and the right to enter he playdowns.

Four of the 14 group winners will be eliminated today. Although taking the fifth group, Meds IV A have defaulted to S.P.S. IX because of their graduating examinations. However there should be three good games up on the floor above the wrestling room. Sr. U.C., winning and losing three in the regular schedule, take on Meds I B who made a clean sweep of their group. This match should prove rather close. However, the senior artsmen have all had considerable experience and should go a long way.

The Wycliffe-Med II B encounter promises to be the closest of the day. Each have swept their respective groups—which are almost equal in strength.

Vic III challenges Jr. School at 7:30. Here it is noted the Scarlet and Gold took group six with only one loss, but the Engineers lost twice to the highly rater Dents A squad.

The finals show a representation from most of the faculties and keen competition is expected. Sr. School took group one with no losses as did Dents in number two, Trinity A in three, St. Mike's B in four, Wycliffe in seven, MedsII B in eight, Meds I B in 10, S.P.S. IX in 11 and Meds I C in 12.

With practically the whole Dents A team back from last year and not too much competition in immediate sight it seems that the showcase of the embryo dentists may be graced again by the Victoria Staff Cup.

office, there to be counted by a committee headed by Don Rowat, IV U.C., to the tune of the street dance outside.

All faculties and student organizations who make a group contribution of over $5 will receive a special certificate from the committee. The Student Government Association of Annesley was the first to metrit one, with their contribution of $43, the first to be received by the I.S.S. The Co-Op Residence, The Vic class of 4T4 and the University College Women's Undergraduate Association, who contributed $60, are also among the early contributors.

The money received by the I.S.S. will go to aiding interned students, many of them Canadian, some of them formerly of Toronto; while the books will be put at the disposal of the men in the armed services.

The joint committee appointed by the S.A.C. to handle this day consists of Eileen Acton, IV Vic, Chairman; Walter Lyons, II Social Work, Books; Jim Cawley, IV S.P.S.; Maurice Aykroyd, IV SPS.; Marg McDonough, IV St. Mike's; and Don Rowat, IV U.C.; and they were assisted by Miss Parkes.

let's go places

"The Big Blockade" at the Eglinton this week is one of the best documentary films we've seen yet. The billing given amiable Michael Redgrave in the ads is confusing, as his part is but a small one, and the real star of the picture is the Ministry of Economic Warfare.

EGLINTON DOUBLE BILL

Combining fictitious characters and actual officials and war correspondents the film sketches the history of MEW, its work, and some of the effects of its integrating action on the Royal Navy and the Royal Air Force on Germany.

Among those present in person are Hon. David Bowes-Lyon, Sir Ronald Cross, Hugh Dalton and drawly Quentin Reynolds. Those portrayed are a Herr Schneider of the Deutsche Allgemeine Schweinhandelgesellschaft, a Russian traveller in Germany, Michael Redgrave, and various officials of the Reich who are made to look a trifle too ridiculous.

The accompanying light feature, "Strictly in the Groove," is not supercharged, but it is better than the title would indicate, and it has both Ozzie Nelson's band and Mary Healey.—R.W.

CHRISTMAS RAIL FARES

The Railway Companies are issuing to students of the University, and to members of the University staff, round-trip tickets for the Christmas and New Year Holidays, at the current normal one-way fare and one-quarter for the round trip.

Students wishing to take advantage of this reduction should leave their names with the Registrar of the College, or the Secretary of the Faculty, School or Department concerned, on or before Monday, Dec. 14.

The certificates will be issued to the students at their College, Faculty, School or Department office, at 4:30 p.m. on Friday, Dec. 18, 1942.

Members of the teaching staff may obtain certificates at the Registrar's Office, Simcoe Hall.

Attention is drawn to the fact that these certificates are issued only to members of the teaching staff and the students of the University, and are not available for wives and children of the above, for office employees, or for any persons not engaged in giving or receiving instruction.

Ambulance Campaign Livens U.B.C. Campus

Vancouver, Dec. 8—(CUP)—"An Ambulance—Before—Christmas" was the slogan around the University of British Columbia campus recently. A special event-studed week was held to raise $1,300 for the purchase.

Every central point on the campus was canvassed by volunteer girls from two of the sororities. Each student was asked to contribute 50 cents, and small cardboard model ambulances were sold to acknowledge the donation.

Daily score sheets in the familiar form of Victory Loan thermometers were posted in conspicuous places. Original plans to have Bob Chester play at a dance at which the admission was a cardboard ambulance, had to be suspended but possibilities were that some similar feature would be held.

The first day's returns netted almost $225.

U.N.B. Biologists To Aid Blood Banks

Fredericton, N.B., Dec. 8—(CUP)—The Biology Department of the University of New Brunswick has undertaken the preparation for the government of 10,000 pints of blood annually.

When the increased demand for prepared blood was realized, the government formed the Biology Processing Laboratory attached to the Biology Department in 1941. Several thousand dollars worth of equipment has already been purchased including modern refrigeration, power centrifuges, incubators and sterilizers.

The present output is 300 pints of blood per week but, dependant upon the arrival of further necessary equipment, this figure may be increased after Christmas.

Sunday next, Dec. 13, will be the last Visitors' Day this term for members of Hart House. The House will be open for inspection between the hours of 2 and 4 p.m. Members will be required to show their membership cards.

Professors at Western Successful in Research

London, Ont., Dec. 8—(CUP)—Extensive research carried out during the past year by Dr. A. Bruce Macallum and Dr. Christian Sivertz of Western University has resulted in the discovery of important information concerning insulin's reaction with certain amino sulphone compounds.

The results of the yet incomplete research have already been reported to the National Research Council and key medical men in the United States, and their findings are expected to be fully investigated in the near future.

A preliminary report on the findings by Dr. Macallum and Dr. Silvertz appeared in September in "Canadian Chemistry and Process Industries."

WAR SERVICES DRIVES GO BEYOND GOAL

Granville-Barker Discusses Bard's Vision Of Future In Alexander Lecture

Coriolanus, Shakespeare's Last Roman Play, Is Subject of Talk by Former Director of British Institute at Paris U.

FIRST LECTURE OF SERIES

In his plays about Rome, Shakespeare found a mirror for the cognate things of his age and the cognate things that would come in our age, when Elizabethan censorship forbade him to write of Elizabethan politics and religion, Harley Granville-Barker, formerly Director of the British Institute of the University of Paris, said in the first of the present series of Alexander Lectures yesterday in Hart House Theatre.

Dr. Granville-Barker said that when Shakespeare looked back on the great past of Rome, he could also see the great future that would be. While it is hardly to be thought that he actually dreamed of a British Commonwealth of Nations, he must have seen in the developing character of the British people promise of glorious days, he said. "Else how have his plays so great import for us?" he added.

Dr. Granville-Barker was speaking especially on Coriolanus, the last of Shakespeare's series of Roman plays. He pointed out that the play, coming after a group of masterpieces, Hamlet, Othello, MacBeth and Anthony and Cleopatra, shows signs of strain. He said that it was not in carelessness, but in an over working of the ideas and constructions that the fault lay. "Coriolanus is the work of a man's brain, a solid, logical whole," he said.

"It is a play not about individual characters and their clash," he said, "but the exposition of an idea, and unity of subject is pre-eminent." The subject is order in society, a problem much in the minds of Englishmen of his day, the speaker said.

The second lecture will be given today at 5 p.m. in Hart House Theatre.

Warden's Dinner Set For Dec. 17

The Hart House Warden's annual Christmas Dinner for all members who cannot go home for the holidays will take place Thursday, Dec. 17, in the Great Hall at 6:30 p.m., Acting Warden J. R. Gilley announced yesterday.

Every member wishing to attend the dinner is asked to sign the list at the Warden's office as soon as possible. Admission will be by ticket only.

An invitation has been sent out to all men listed in the directory as coming from distant parts of Canada or from outside the Dominion. Mr. Gilley stressed that any undergraduate member who did not receive a card may sign the list in his office regardless.

The custom of holding a Christmas Dinner was instituted 17 years ago by Warden J. R. Bickersteth, now on leave of absence for the duration of the war. He is at present Director of Education for the British Army.

Wan Ghost at Varsity Stadium Yearns Over Past Glories of Bowl

By George Elliott

There's an air of expectancy up on Bloor St. this morning.

Men in charge of the University Athletic Field ask each other, "Is there really going to be a big university game?" Then smiles come to their faces as they recall the big games of yesteryear.

In an obscure corner under the Bowl, a tattered page from the last Inter-Collegiate Rugby program lies ignored. Part way down the line-ups is the name Lou Somers which brings back that fall day in 1939 when little Lou drifted through the Tricolour front line time and again. Lou drifted through the Queen's men, right out of the stadium and into an Air Force uniform. He's Pilot Officer Somers now and he's drifting through the enemy with the same abandon.

Other sportsmen beat their heads against the wall when they remember the day "Long John" Sinclair snared a ball on the run, over his shoulder, then turned around and hoofed the ball over the line to set another Queen's team back on its heels by one point in the last second of play.

Some years after that epic performance saw the striped sward resound to the heels of Johnny Copp. In every game he played, Johnny's play was termed "the best ever," "effective," according to back issue of The Varsity. Copp was cruelly shot the following summer while trying to apprehend a burglar.

Going back into the annals of 10 years ago, we see the line-ups for a junior interfaculty game and there are the names of Cam Gray, Gus Greco, Jack Holden and many others who, in their senior years, led the Varsity Blue to victory after victory.

Many fleet-footed Achilles have carried the Varsity ball against other colleges on this playing field. There are some on the campus who like to recall

Ribbons Flutter In I.S.S. Drive

Yesterday's War Services Day drive for the I.S.S. brought out the campus' most beautiful co-eds to sell University and faculty ribbons. Typical scene pictured here shows one of the comely throng pinning a set of ribbons on the lapet of Frank Walden, IV U.C.

Another typical incident at yesterday's festivities is shown above, as a book laden co-ed places her contribution to the Book Harvest in the silo before Hart House. The truckload of volumes she and many other students contributed will be sent to provide servicemen with sparetime reading.

Rae Weatherwax, II Occupationol Therapy, smiles after being chosen "Most Typicol Co-ed" from a field including the assembled pulchritude of all the colleges and faculties. Her prize wos a tastefully arranged bunch of carrots presented by head judge, Warren Stevens, at the noon hour ceremony in Hart House Theatre.

Ribbon Sellers Cut Wares To Supply All Buyers

Like the unknown soldier are the hosts of unrecognized co-eds who froze hands and braved campus wolves to sell ribbons Wednesday for the International Student Service Campaign on the campus. By their efforts, over a thousand dollars were culled from students and profs.

"It was really fun," reported two Vic Sophs, Phyllis Glennie and Dorothy Beggs. "Of course the best hours were between 8:30 and 10:30, but the ribbons sold very well all morning."

"Everyone wanted them," enthused Pat Beaton, I Physiotherapy. "We didn't even have to ask people to buy."

The two sets of ribbons, the I.S.S. one and the faculty colours, usually went together. "If the students got the one, they wanted the other," said Elinor Erskine, I Pass.

Most of the girls reported Schoolmen to be their best customers. Two vendors, forced upon School's hospitality during the alert, were escorted through all the lecture rooms and bought out by generous wielders of the slide-rule. Long before noon, ribbons had to be cut up into halves, and even thirds, to supply Engineers with bits of Blue and Gold.

Students of all faculties were polite, although some heckled the girls for dates and phone numbers. "They liked our pinning the ribbons to their coats most of all," smiled Dorothy Benjamin, II Pass.

Non-Trainees Discuss Stand

Winnipeg, Dec. 9—(CUP)—Twenty-five students of the University of Manitoba who do not take military training because of their religious beliefs or political opinions, met this week with President Smith to discuss the stand the University is taking with regard to Section 17 of the National War Services Mobilization Act.

These students who will not join the University of Manitoba Training Unit must go before the National Selective Service Board. If they can substantiate their claims that they are Mennonites, Doukhobors, or conscientious objectors, they will be sent to a work camp. If they cannot, they will be drafted.

"The matter rests in the hands of the National Selective Service," said President Smith. "It appears that you must either join the U.M.T.U. or lose your status as a student in the University. Each one of your must personally decide for yourself what stand you will take."

About 32 students belong in the category of conscientious objectors. Four of these have already been called before the National Selective Service Board and have refused to take up arms.

Student's Gala Response To I.S.S. And Book Harvest Breaks Last Year's Record

I.S.S. Sale of Ribbons Grosses $1,235 with Three Faculties Holding Sales Today, Meds and Pharmacy in January; More than Truckload of Books Jam Harvest Silo Before Hart House with More to Be Collected

RAE WEATHERWAX "TYPICAL CO-ED"

By Doc Savage

In a gala, colourful day heightened by the pipe band, street dancing in front of Hart House, a "typical Co-ed" contest, conga lines, and even an unexpected air-raid alert, the students of the University of Toronto turned out in force yesterday to make War Services Day a success even greater than last year's March of Dimes.

Colourful University and faculty ribbons—fluttering from every lapel—represented a mass donation of well over a thousand dollars for the International Student Service; and a truckload of books was driven off for the men in the Armed Serviees, with many boxes still to be gathered.

Not all faculties were represented in this great display—Meds and Pharmacy are in the midst of exams and will hold their drives sometime in January—while Emmanuel, School of Social Work and O.C.E. will have their ribbon sales today.

The ribbon sale mounted to approximately $1,235, which, when expenses have been deducted, should gross about $1,020, as compared to the $1,012.60 worth of dimes raised last year. But the count is still not complete for, in addition to this must be figured the sales of today and January, and the sums donated by organizations. Various organizations have to date contributed $164 with more definitely promised, to be turned in sometime this week. The committee predicted a possible $1,250 if every student contributed.

It is impossible to estimate the number of books that have been turned in. A well-laden truck was driven away yesterday and there are many collections of books still on campus that have not been turned in as yet, or were brought in too late to make the truck.

Rush on Ribbons

Sales of the ribbons started in the early grey dawn with co-ed volunteer workers spotted about the campus and in the various buildings. The demand was so great that in most cases the girls ran out of ribbons before noon. The committee hastily cut their available faculty ribbons in half and used plain white ribbons and even white paper as a substitute for the University ribbons. However, a hurried roundup of unsold ribbons in the outer areas of the campus enabled them to get enough to carry through the day.

The rally was opened at 12:30 when President Cody was met at Simcoe Hall by Eileen Aoton, Chairman of the committee, Don Rowat, IV U.C, and the University pipe band. He was conducted to the front of Hart House where he donated a basket of books from his own library and then went into Hart House Theatre where he formally opend the rally.

After a brief speech the President made a donation of $25 to the I.S.S. and in return was presented with the various faculty ribbons which were pinned on him by co-eds representing those faculties in the contest.

Then, mid the cheers and applause of a predominantly School audience, the girl contestants paraded across the stage, being judged on 11 points by Warren Stevens, M. G. Griffiths and J. E. McCutcheon, all of the Athletic Board.

R. D. Weatherwax, II Occupational Therapy, a beautiful young miss hailing from Orilla, was adjudged the winner in a close contest, and was presented with a "Beauty" boquet composed of radishes and carrots. She calmly marched carrots as her picture was taken and students voiced their approval of the choice.

Surprise from School

The runner-up was Miss Jessie Pickard, V Mechanical Engineering, a very fetching young miss, indeed, and the sole entry from School. Miss Pickard came as a surpise to all, ber real name being Jim Pickard, II Civil Engineering.

In the interval when the judges retired to make their decisions, the cast of the Vic Bob presented their "Harvest Ballett."

The books were piled on the truck by volunteers and arrived in every mode of transportation conceivable, the most colourful perhaps being via conga line from Loretto College.

After the indoors rally, crowds of students flocked to the street dance in front of Hart House Theatre. An unscheduled feature of this was a very small boy with a wagon who kept driving his miniature juggernaught into the crowd at full speed, sometimes with phenomenal success.

Eileen Acton, IV Vic, Chairman of the Joint Committee appointed by the S.A.C., expressed the complete satisfaction of the committee and added, "The student response was exceptional and everyone co-operated as best they knew how."

Organizations contributing $5 or over will receive certificates from the committee. To date those whose checks have already been received are the U.C. Players' Guild, Student Parliament of Dents, Knox College Association, the Board of Governors at Trinity, Class of 4T4 Vic, Annseley Student Government Association, U.C. Men's Residence, Co-op Residence, Engineering Society, Delta Kappa Upsilon, Phi Theta Upsilon, Theta Sigma Rho and Kappa Sigma. Personal checks amounting to $35 have also been received.

Over The Top

As the greatest day of the fall term passes into the files of campus history we can look back at a series of achievements of which the University as a whole may well be proud: $1,235 grossed in the sale of University and faculty ribbons for the benefit of the I.S.S., with three faculties yet to be heard from and Meds and Pharmacy yet to hold their sales; over a truckload of books of all kinds collected for the Canadian forces; and last, but not least, a thoroughly good time enjoyed by everyone.

University spirit fostered by the day's festivities and War Services drives was perhaps the most notable contribution to the whole day, which was blessed equally by the I.S.S. and Book Harvest committees, the University authorities and the weatherman.

University spirit reached a record peak for the war years at the ceremonies at which the judges chose Rae Weatherwax of Occupational Therapy, as U. of T.'s "Typical Co-ed," to the accompaniment of cheers, University yells, Toike Oikes, and enthusiasm for the winner and "Jessie," School's outstanding contribution to campus pulchritude, who was runner-up in the contest. On this occasion, at noon-hour yesterday, Hart House theatre played host to an audience whose size and good spirits have not been matched since the days before war sobered the campus, and an audience which would in all probability not be matched for many months to come, even if the theatre were to remain in operation.

At the beginning of this academic year when our President asked that the students confine their social activities to the campus as far as possible many of his hearers feared that his request rang the knell on extra-curricular fun. We pointed out at the time that this was far from what Dr. Cody meant. Yesterday's festivities, led by the President himself, proved that students on this war-time campus can not only rally to make a great success of an important occasion like War Services Day but also that they can enjoy themselves enormously while doing so.

In our enthusiasm over that commendable show of University spirit we cannot lose sight of the more serious purposes of the Day: aid to our less fortunate student colleagues, both Canadian and foreign, especially in those countries which are under the heel of an alien conquerer. While their plight is a silent one it is no less pressing, and the only official helping hand held out to them in scholastic matters is that of the I.S.S. By the contribution which we made yesterday to that hard working body we also hold out helping hands.

The second purpose of the day, that of collecting books for our friends and compatriots in the armed services' training camps in this country, has also been successfully achieved. In common with the rest of the city we have contributed much of the finest reading material to the I.O.D.E. drive for books for the forces. A glance at random over the titles of some of the books contributed showed even the most sceptical that the quality of the books was high: serious volumes of university calibre were in the majority; pictorial, historical and geographical magazines as requested by the forces were also there in plenty. The University was asked especially for serious reading material since it was felt that lighter reading matter would probably predominate in the contributions of the general public, and the University rose to this request as it did to that of the I.S.S.

Comparison between yesterday's War Services Day and last year's March of Dimes is inevitable. Many people felt before yesterday that it was unlikely that the University would better the record of last year, but it did. The I.S.S. drive has grossed slightly more than the March of Dimes; with the Book Harvest also counted, yesterday may be viewed as a considerable advance over last year.

Finally, in assessing yesterday's accomplishments we must thank many tireless people who put in the spade work without which there could have been no War Services Day. Those on the joint committee for the day. Walter Lyons, Jim Cawley, Maurice Aykroyd, Marg McDonough and Don Rowat, under their capable chairman, Eileen Acton, are to be especially congratulated, but the many others in each college and faculty who collected books, sold ribbons, and made the day's proceedings run smoothly all deserve our grateful thanks.

Reaching For The Cup

Football fever has been late in hitting the campus this season, but the scene at Varsity Stadium Tuesday, where four teams battled in the Mulock Cup semi-finals, was heartening reminiscent of an era which will not be restored on the campus for some years to come.

Perhaps for the first time this season, there was a fair-sized and enthusiastic crowd in the stands to watch a college game. The vast expanse of the bleachers, packed with spectators in the inter-collegiate days, were bare and wind-swept, but in the covered stands there was organized cheering, a prevalence of coloured ribbons and a general atmosphere that has been lacking in the small-sized and half-hearted crowds that watched most of the Mulock Cup games to date.

Today's final promises to bring out more of that spirit. The University's energies need not be so completely thrown into its war-time duties that it cannot relax for part of an afternoon to enjoy a good rugby game.

And indeed, the brand of football offered by the interfaculty finalists is of excellent calibre. Both of the semi-finals were colourful, well-played games, despite far from ideal playing conditions. And we can be reasonably certain that the final will also be well worth seeing.

Correspondence

Editor,
The Varsity.

Dear Sir:

I got into a Hill bus north of St. Clair Avenue on Thursday morning, Dec. 3. The bus was quite crowded and I passed two University boys sitting comfortably in their seats while a woman past middle age swayed back and forth as she held on to the mental rod attached to the ceiling of the bus. Both of these boys appeared to be physically fit and one of them had an unopened note book on his knee marked "Second Year Laboratory." The lady in front of them had difficulty maintaining her balance as the bus swept around the corners proceeding south on Poplar Plains Road. At the foot of the hill a man, whom I understand was blinded in the last war, entered the bus guided by a lady. The middle aged woman who had been standing in front of the two University boys moved down the bus in order to make room for the blind man and his escort and these two then took up their position in front of the two University boys and they clung to the metal rod attached to the ceiling of the bus and had difficulty maintaining their balance. The boys appeared to be unabashed and when they came to the University, they rose from their seats and graciously allowed the blind man and his escort to occupy them.

The time has arrived when someone should direct the attention of the University authorities to such conduct. If young men of the University are so essential that they must remain and conclude their education, they should at least endeavour to adhere to and maintain some of the decent standards of life. I would strongly urge upon the University authorities the necessity for creating a Department for this purpose which might possibly be presided over by this gallant blind gentleman who fought for the liberty of all of us in the last war and who, during this war, must stand in a bus while University students remain seated.

Yours very truly,
Robert Fennell,
Toronto, Dec. 4, 1942.

Readers' attention is drawn to the fact that the signator—despite the similarity in name—is not the University Registrar.

To Mr. Fennell, we would suggest that it is perhaps unfair to judge all the young men of the University by the conduct of two. It has been our experience that college students are at least as courteous as any other occupational group. We condemn, with Mr. Fennell, the action of the pair in question, but believe it to be a most unfortunate example from which to assess the decency of the student body.

Dear Sir:

In regards to the article printed in "Hither and Yon" of the 7th inst. we wish to make the comment that we were not aware that any louts (or was it louse), were invited to the St. Hilda's Formal.

Yours sincerely,
"113."

To anonymous "113" we point out in indignant rebuttal that one one occasion—in January, 1940—the present Editor-in-Chief was invited to — and event went so far as to attend—a St. Hilda's Formal.—EDITOR.

The Varsity In Six Easy Lessons

LESSON TWELVE

SPEAKING OF SPORT

By Roger Hepburn
(Oops! Sorry, that was last year!)

THIS IS IT, FELLAS

Well, after all these months of hair-tearing it looks as if we're going to have a rugby final after all! For a while it looked as if Mac McCutcheon was simply going to have to lead the athletic directorate up to the top of the Bank of Commerce Building and silently jump off, without ever finding out who was going to steal Sir William's silverware.

VIC'S A SHOO-IN

As to the outcome of the game, anyone who's been following the fortunes of the footballers at all will be putting his mazuma on that power-packed Searlet and Gold aggregation to repeat for the battered old Mulock Mug. With overwhelming aerial attack, a devastating line and bone-shattering plunging power, the Vicmen simply can't be beat. Furthermore, they beat St. Mike's, and anyone will tell you what St. Mike's did to U.C.

COLLEGIANS CAN'T LOSE

Scientific students of the game are unanimous in declaring that U.C.'s fighting twelve is a cinch to take it all. With a dazzling backfield, an impregnable line and bone-shattering plunging power, the Red and White figure to roll over the Methodists by at least two touchdowns. Furthermore, they wihpped Senior School, and anyone will tell you the score when the Schoolmen played Vic.

MAKE MINE VANILLA

So as the wiseacres gather in their ill-gotten gains and we move around the pool room assuring the suckers that we told them so, another epic football season will pass into the glorious pages of history. G'bye now, I gotta write an essay.

—EGBERT.

Warden's Christmas Dinner

For many years past the Warden has arranged a Christmas Dinner for those undergraduate members of Hart House who live in countries other than Canada or in distant parts of the Dominion and thus are unable to spend any part of the Christmas vacation at home. Every member wishing to attend the dinner, which will take place at 6.30 p.m. on Thursday 17th December in the Great Hall, must have an admission ticket. This may be procured on signing his name at the Warden's office. These members are asked to do so as soon as possible so that Mr. J. R. Gilley, the Acting Warden, may know how many guests to expect. A card has been sent to all men shown in the directory as coming from distant parts of Canada or from outside the Dominion. If by any chance there are undergraduate members who have not received a card, it is hoped that they will take this notice as an invitation to come in and sign the list in the Warden's office as soon as possible. There will be a small gift for everyone present. Mr. J. B. Bickersteth, who instituted this function 17 years ago, regrets that he is unable to be present again this year. He is Director of Education for the British Army and on leave of absence for the duration of the war.

U.C., Vic Clash Today For Mug

Strong Defensive Red - and - White Team Has Had Only 12 Points Scored Against It in Season; No Touches

SCOTT MAY BE BACK

By Phil Shakleton

Whether or not U.C. wins today's clash the team will most certainly put up a scrap well worth watching. Getting off to a somewhat shaky start, the Redmen steadied themselves after the first few games and by the time they had entered the playoffs they had settled down to hard-hitting rugby. Their regular season record shows two wins and two losses which grouped them with Dents and Jr. Meds in second place in division two. Said sharers of number two spot were eliminated in three games and then as a crowning triumph, the much heavier Sr. School team was taken for a 6-5 semi-final loss.

A glance at the score sheets reveals that U.C. has scored 53 points in eight games while only 12 points have been chalked against them. Another distinction to be earried into the final game is that no team has yet seored a touch against them.

Now to take a squint at these fabulous Artsmen who have humbled a School rugby team. The backfield features specialists in the various departments. Jimmy Bitove, fastest man in the league, will be hard to stop if he breaks away. Sammy Stellman should be good more than once for plunging to first downs, and Don Smith's passing and kicking has been instrumental in several U.C. victories. Rumor, on good authority, has it that Stu Scott, injured in the opening game of the season, has been out for light practice and will probably see action today. Scott has been sorely missed all season and his return may give the Red and White that added impetus needed to squelch the big Viemen.

Bill Wade was unfortunately put out of action in the School game and snap duties will fall entirely on Ronny Bronston. Jack Amell will be out there waiting for passes from Scott or Smith. Two quarters are both small but scrappy and quick thinking. Their monickers, Russ Tartaglia and Jerry Rafelman. The outsides are led by starry Dalt Nesbitt, probably the hardest tackler in this league. Frog Warren usually teams with Nesbitt as well as pulling in some nice forwards. Lloyd Cutler and Shaver, two more ends, are light but steady and hard tacklers.

Jerry Morton, Hal Pohl, and Bucky Zierler are three steadfast middles, Jerry supplying one of the few beefy frames for blocking, Hal the drive necessary to break up Vic plays, and Bucky, all-round ability on offensive or defensive. At inside are Alee Dixon, who would finish the game come hell, high water or ice, Frank Watson, who is doing some great line tackling, Garrent, going great after a late start, and Nichol, who has been holding exceedingly well.

Speaking Of Sport

By Roger Conant

Here we are—the last game of the season—that is, if the north pole hasn't shifted south again by the time this edition hits the stands—the season all over—and its about time we put ourselves out on the usually precarious limb that custom dictates at this time of year. For they tell us we should glean our dream team about now. Obligingly we went about our onerous task—but this year we undertook to get something of a Gallup Ballot by contacting the managers of the teams and some of the referees.

The selection was made on the basis of who the chooser thought would comprise the starting line-up of the Varsity Blues if the good old, and in some minds mythical, intercollegiate days were back with us again. Well, gulp, here goes—we're a sucker for a left:

Quarterback	Glen Munro, Vic
Halfback	Bob Bundy, Vic
Halfback	Vern Booth, Jr. S.P.S.
Halfback	Herb Stricker, Jr. S.P.S.
Halfback	Sammy Stellman, U.C.
Snapback	Harv Rutledge, Vic
Inside	Ken Gow, Sr. S.P.S.
Inside	Buck Zierler, U.C.
Middle	Gord Hay, Vic
Middle	Beefy MacMillan, Sr. Meds.
Outside	Dalt Nesbitt, U.C.
Outside	Weed Quittenton, Sr. S.P.S.

The quarter spot was never in doubt, especially after Munro's effort on Tuesday. He is the canniest field general on this campus and an all-round spectacular player.

In the backfield Verne Boothe, Bob Bundy and Herb Stricker were decided on the first count and indeed were unanimously handed first string assignments. For the fourth back much discussion was waged for Sr. Meds' Arnup and Lewis, Jr. School's Lawrence, St. Mike's Dunlop and Sr. School's McIntyre and Parchello. But the fight finally narrowed down to Jimmy Bitove and Sammy Stellman of U.C. Both are main cogs in the Red and White steamroller that has surprised everyone of late. However, the plunging of Stellman got the nod by a half a twitch.

For the snapback, since Beefy MacMillan has shifted around to be of most value he has relinquished his formerly mortgaged abode and moved over to another position. So the next person naturally was Harv. Rutledge of Vic who comprises half of the Scarlet and Gold's defence. The minute he came back from the west Vic started to win games and it wasn't all luck either.

For the linemen it was very easy to chose Ken Gow, Gord Hay and Beefy MacMillan, for those three we wager are the equal of any linemen that we saw rolling around the Bloor Bowl any time we got out from drill early on Saturday. Many other good men were mentioned: Vic's Guthrie and Ivy, Sr. Meds' McNiel, Jr. Meds' Faigman, Sr. School's Henry, Jr. School's Cross and U.C.'s Dixon. But Bucky Zierelr, captain of the U.C. finalists gets the call for his expert defensive work and his general aggressive qualities that keep his teammates from folding in times of strain.

The ends also seemed practically unanimous—Weed Quittenton being easily the cleanest, hardest and most effective tackler seen catching shoe-strings this fall. And Dalt Nesbitt wasn't very far behind as especially exemplified in his work Tuesday. Vic's ends, Comiskey and Jones got honourable mention as did Senior School's Webb.

Thus do we proclaim that if the chance had been presented the above-mentioned exponents of the ancient and honourable art of muscle-crashing could take full measure of any intercollegiate squad wishing to challenge. And, for that matter, we believe that the Blues could have made a very good showing this fall if the DeGruchy Trophy had been up for the highest bidder. It would have been one swell group with Hurricanes, Navy, Malmies, Indians and Varsity Blues mixing it up—and wouldn't be too far from the top either.

PROGNOSTICATIONS?

The wagers will be flying between the Arts Colleges this morning. And from Butch the Bookie we learn 7-5 is the price so far on Vic. But we wouldn't like to take anyone either way. It's a foregone conclusion that both aggregations will be putting everything into it. For U.C. it is a great thing to get in the finals for it has been 31 years since the Royal College has even come within shouting distance. They have won the mug five times—way back in '97, '03, '04, '08 and '11 and since then—oblivion. Vic, on the other hand, is a steady customers—nabbing it in '09 and nine times since 1920. Which is quite some record. The relative merits of the teams have been discussed in other columns so we shall give out our own conclusions—and climb out on another limb. The crystal ball gives us the image that if Glen Munro and his plays and passes can be stopped, the cup is U.C.'s, but it also conveys the impression that it will take an even stronger team than U.C. has fielded so far to do the aforementioned stopping.

Vic's Starting Line of Rutledge, Ibey, Saunderson, Guthrie and Hay Rated Most Solid Wall in Intramural Rugby

MUNRO CALLS SIGNALS

By Bud Smith

Today finds Vic on the threshold of their second successive Mulock Cup Championship. The Scarlet and Gold face but one more hurdle, that being the battling U.C. team. All odds are in favour of Vic, whose offensive power would seem too strong for the Red and White to withstand, despite U.C.'s brilliant showing in disposing of Senior School in Tuesday's semi-final.

Last year Vic ended the regular season as winner of Group II, which consisted of U.C., Jr. School and Vic. They then turned back Senior School in the first round of the playdowns in a rather close contest which was featured by the kicking and passing of Glen Munro. Vic then met the Group III winners, Trinity, in a two game series for the Mulock Cup. Vic had to go all out to overcome a supposedly weak Anglican team. Both games were hard fought struggles and the turning point was Don Jones' second game touchdown on an interception of a Trinity forward.

This year Vic's start was rather unimpressive due to the harvesting excursion. They dropped the opener to Senior School 6-5, a very close contest. Meds then overcame the Scarlet and Gold 9-0 to hand them their second straight loss. That was the last game Vic lost however. Their harvesters gradually began to return and their attack began to roll. They eked out a 1-0 win over Junior School in a crucial contest that tossed the losers into the discard as far as winning the loop was concerned. Back at full strength the Vic boys pounded out a 13-0 victory over Senior School team that had been weakened by the loss of their sparkplug, Don Grosskurth. It was Meds' turn next and the Scarlet and Gold got ample revenge for their previous defeat by smashing the Doctors 22-0. In the final game of the schedule Vic turned in a somewhat slim 9-7 win over the luckless Junior School crew.

In the semi-finals on Tuesday, Vic had no difficulty beating back the challenge of St. Mike's 13-1. The score would have gone higher but for the fact that Vic "played around" considerably in the last half. As usual, Munro's passes had a lot to do with the margin of victory, as Vic marched down the field on forwards for both their touchdowns.

The starting lineup for today's game will remain the same as that for the St. Mike's. Rutledge will handle the snap duties as well as stopping traffic through the centre of the line. He will be flanked by Ibey and Saunderson. The middle spots will be handled by Guthrie and Hay. These five form the most solid front wall to be seen around the interfaculty loop for many a year. Patrolling the ends will be Jones and McConisky, two very able ankle-grabbers who can snare the pigskin with the best of them. Glen Munro will call the signals in his usual quarterback position. On the half line will be Bundy, Fitzgerald and Burford. The flying wing slot will be in the capable hands of Don Shugart. This backfield has all 'round ability. Munro handles the passing and kicking. Bundy carries out his lurs-smashing plunges. Fitzgerald and Burford look after the running, while Shugart blocks and makes the occasional plunge. For alternates Vic has Thomson and Wickware at ends, Austin and Doner in the line and Wilson and Burwell in the backfield.

School Jumps 400 Points In Race For Reed Trophy

School of Science made a big jump in their position in the Reed Trophy Race in the last month when they gained over 400 points on Trinity who still leads by almost 300. School's big boost came on Monday when they grabbed off 316 points in the Junior Intramural Swim Meet by sweeping every event except the diving.

Vic managed to creep ahead of U.C. for sixth place by exactly four points. The results of today's gridiron encounter will mean a lot in their future standing. Only other change is in Pharmacy's drop two pegs to tenth spot.

Critics Swallow Early Forecasts On Rugby Scene

The interfaculty loop took a crack on the head when it began Oct. 14, this fall. The Arts colleges were particularly hard hit to field teams and suggestions were made of 6-man squads for these colleges, because the "huskies," the fellows who ate their bread crusts, were all out West tossing hay. Thus, preseason predictions lopsidedly favoured Meds and School. The Scarlet and Gold Mulock Cup holders lost Gord Hay, Harv. Rutledge, Murray Tompson and Tom Nixon. U.C. was rated for the bottom rung, St. Mike's were rubbing their wounds, and Trinity muttered—one regular was missing.

Hopes looked big from the south end of the campus with Plaxton and Grosskurth for Senior School hitting the streamers. Vic were edged in their first game 6-5, and Sr. S.P.S. was the team to beat—even the loss of the big battery of Plaxton and Turk Grosskurth to the Services didn't seem too great, for Weed Quittenton and Punchy Parchello filled the breaches, brought the squad from the air to the ground so that from sheer weight they held their superiority.

Jr. S.P.S. rated hight with Mike Rodden handling the coaching duties. Some protest was logical from the grouping in the Group I, for the two Engineering teams were cutting each other's throats. By Nov. 5, the Junior gridders had lost their last mathematical chance of entering the finals by a loss to Sr. Meds 13-7. The latter team seemed to hold the balance and keep things in the air for they came through most unexpectedly in their games. It was a brilliant squad and George Lewis, 160-lb running balf covered himself with glory in many of the gory tussles.

The Senior group shaped up in the last few games when Vic turned the tables on School, but still had to win every game to get in the playoffs—they did, and that is a solid reason why they are again Mulock Cup finalists.

Stadium Ghost Yearns Over Past

the bright sunny fall days when Big Bob Isbister and Cam Gray, Doug Turner and Red Brebner wore the Blue and White to win the 1936 championship.

These are but few of the personalities who battled on the Bloor Bowl. There are many more; and of these, a great number have been fighting a bigger battle during the past three years. Some are in the army, in the navy and in the air force. A few will not be back to see the bleachers and hear the roar of the crowds again.

Yesterday afternoon The Varsity talked with the Ghost of Intercollegiate Sport up in the stadium. He is a wasted figure now. It's been over three years since he took over the job of haunting the rugby field. "There," he pointed a dejected finger at the field, "lie the loneliest two acres in the world."

It was surprising the Ghost said "acres" because the rugby field used to be an experimental farm. After that it was a part of a nine-hole golf course that criss-crossed from Trinity to Avenue Road and Victoria College. The present stadium was constructed to take care of the great crowds that came to the intercollegiate games back in 1910.

The Varsity and the Ghost exchanged stories about the intercollegiate greats of yesterday and the names of Leadley, Szumlinski, Sprague, Batstone, Mullins, Westman, Sinclair, Thornton appeared out of the not so distant past. The Ghost of Intercollegiate Sport shed a reminiscent tear on his ectoplasm and said, "Don't worry, I'll be back . . . bigger and better than ever before . . . with well-played games, drum majorettes, peanuts, tumbling cheer-leaders, fur coats, ribbons and a good loud 'Toronto, Toronto, Toronto Varsitee!'" He cheered up and added, "This Muloek Cup series tomorrow should be good!"

hither and yon

with rex wilson

Do you suffer from spots before your eyes! We were very happy about our three column billing yesterday, but the graduated dots had a lot of people guessing. The best title for that heading so far comes from the A.M.D. Department whose editors suggests it is meant to serve the ladies who knit in lectures as a needle gauge.

Well, we gotta get something to make people read the hither.

And some people do. We were innocently rubbernecking after items in a certian Harbord street sweetery yesterday, and inadvertantly put one awkward foot up on the bench when we heard a cutting voice commending the poisoned chalice to our own lips with the commiseration, "It's too bad you don't have sheepdog bangs."

* * *

Murder is peachy, we'll admit under pressure, but we bet the sponsors of the Alexander Leetures don't like it piped into the middle of their series. During the opening in Hart House Theatre yesterday distinct groans of pain were heard coming through the ventilating grills in the ceiling. The body has not yet been found.

The gravel path (that asphaltic trail that leads south from the Economics building) is a happy hunting ground for people who like to cadge weird bits of conversation. For instance, a co-ed's voice was heard pushing this plaint through the raw and gusty wind yesterday, "So help me, if this keeps up I'm gonna get a nosebag!"

* * *

Overheard in a vexed discussion as to why women's Greek Letter socities are locally called fraternities, we heard this remark, "Well, anyway, I like to think of myself as a fraternity!"

Her name is legion.

A lady we heard of (a Senior no less) who likes to think of herself as very grown up, had a lovely new skirt of a rough sort of cloth of which she was very proud. Imagine her feelings when a friend in Household Ec. remarked, "Yes, it is nice. They call that Diaper Weave."

let's go places

Alexander Korda and Michael (49th Parallel) Powell took a familiar phrase from Air Ministry communiques into the studios and the result of their work," "One of Our Aircraft Is Missing," is playing at the Uptown now. The picture, fine intelligent entertainment in itself, serves two purposes. It is a faithful document on the Bomber Command and a stirring tribute to the still-fighting Hollanders.

UPTOWN
"ONE OF OUR AIRCRAFT..."

Rather than show relatives' reactions to such a message, an exceedingly capable camera takes you with B for Bertie, a Wellington bomber, and its crew of six, through some plausible adventures in Holland and on the North Sea, as the crew escapes to England and the giant new Laneaster bombers that await them.

Though the actors are unfamiliar and the title misleading, go and see "One of Our Aircraft." Like the well-known weed, it'll give you a lift.

If you like a picture with no plot to speak of and lots of tropical cheeseeake and Allan Jones, "Moonlight in Havana" will fill your order. But I still wonder about Charlie who repeatedly proclaimed that his pal George was a "good ol' George, mus' go downa Havana 'n' see him."

The Suban dancing scenes are worth the price of admission as long as you go before one o'cloek.—G.E.

House Committee Gives I.S.S. $257

The University War Services campaign, which came to a spectacular close yesterday, took a substantial step towards its goal a week ago, when the House Committee of Hart House presented to the I.S.S. the sum of $257, representing about two-fifths of the proceeds from the All-University Dance held Nov. 23.

Sixty dollars of the remaining dance money went as an unofficial payment to the C.O.T.C. pipe band to purchase drums. Another $257 went to the University Settlement.

In past years, it has been the custom of the House Committee to buy paintings to hang on the walls of Hart House. This is the first year that the profits of the All-Varsity Dance have been turned into war services' channels.

Morning's Alert Dimmed by Events

The second daylight air-raid alarm of the year was submerged by yesterday's colourful events. Many students were unaware of the sirens and few classes were stopped.

In Hart House the P.T. classes were herded into the locker-room. The campus was cleared by vigilant wardens redundant taggers being the chief victims.

It is unofficially reported that a new record was set for attendanee at 10:30 leetures as resident students were awakened before their regular schedule. On the other side of the ledger, many students arrived at their classes 15 to 20 minutes late due to the stoppage of the street-car service.

Full war-time preeautions were not required by campus officials and the few deerees were observed to the satisfaction of those concerned.

Hart House Theatre Housed Repertory Group

For 18 years, from 1920 to 1938, the University housed a repertory theatre group in Hart House Theatre which set a standard for amateur theatricals throughout the Dominion. Produeing eight plays annually, the group staged every kind of dramaties from the most farcical modern comedies to the tensest Shakespearean tragedy.

The Repertory group funetioned quite simply, according to Norm Nichol who has been acting manager of the Theatre this term. All the talent was amateur, with the Theatre employees and the directors alone paid for their work. Mr. Nichol recalled some of the past successes, Once in a Lifetime and Hounded by Hate.

In the early years, Raymond Massey aeted with the Group. Among the other performers who have since hit the bright lights are Judith Evelyn, now on Angel Street, New York; Ivor Lewis, Lorna McClean and Jane Mallet. Among past directors are Walter Sinclair, Edgar Stone and Nancy Pyper.

ART MUSIC Drama

. . . of Things to Come?

.... St. Mike's Drama

If last night's production of "The Late Christopher Bean" by the St. Michael's College Players is any indication of the shape of things to come in campus drama now that Hart House Theatre seems doomed to close, great things are in store. Because they were so late in choosing a play the Players were unable to secure suitable bookings in Hart House Theatre and had to use Loretto Brunswick Auditorium.

Despite the devious route to get to the auditorium and despite the material limitations, the play is well worth seeking out. There was some doubt the first act as to aptness of some of the casting, but the exact nature of these doubts fades from mind when the general excellence of the acting is recalled. To begin with, the play is a good one, and gives the Players something to sink their teeth into. The choice of this story of a neglected, consumptive painter (the title character, who never appears) and the effect of his recognition on the family of an honest country doctor who had befriended him, is the happiest one made to date this year by any dramatic club on the campus.

To try to evaluate the acting of so well-integrated a group is difficult, so we must resort to praising with damns. The first, and loudest of these we direct against the lighting. It is undeniably bad. The second goes in the direction of the make-up department whose work is undistinguished. Two additional ones are merited by Bill Moir as Warren Creamer for his unwarranted superman feat of lugging a steamer trunk aeross the stage by the rope binding, as poor a piece of business as we've seen in a long time, and by Joan Mackenzie as Abby for walking on eggs all evening. Miss Mackenzie's performanee otherwise leaves nothing to be desired, and her single sin is shared by the other female characters as well. Possibly the small stage is at fault, or maybe the flooring is weak.

The auditorium leaves much to be wished for, and the seats certainly are hard, but that doesn't really matter, because you only use the edge of them.

Rex Wilson.

Perfection Guaranteed

Hart House String Quartet

It would be trite to say that the Hart House String Quartet is one of the most musicianly groups in this city of music. So eall it trite and consider it said. Their reading of the Mendelssohn Quartet in E Flat Major, first item of the Fourth Subscription Concert last night, was Victorian eleganee epitomized. In the canzonetta of the second movement, a sprightly bit of bowing exercise was tossed from instrument to instrument with easual frivolity. The whole thing was obviously as enjoyable to the performers as to the audience.

My colleague, N.M., has previously mentioned the Dohanyi Quartet. Let me add that it was done with the same dynamies last night.

Schumann's Quintet in E Flat Major was the big work of the evening. It was big in every sense. Gertrude Huntley at the piano attacked precussively, brushed in the legato passages with superb tonality, was completely en rapport with the four gentlemen of the strings. Co-operation of this sort comes once in a blue moon.

Brock Brace.

VIC TAKES MULOCK CUP 13-1

Powerful Victoria Attack Wears Down U.C. Defence In Third-Quarter Drive

Munro's Superior Kicking and Passing, Plunging by Bundy, Overcome Losers' Competent Line Play After Tightly-Played First Half; Royal Collegians Threaten in Last Quarter Rally

STELLMAN, BITOVE LEAD U.C. GROUND-GAINERS

For the eleventh time Victoria College's name went up on the Mulock Cup as the Scarlet and Gold climaxed one of the longest and most thrilling rugby seasons by overpowering a scrappy University College twelve to the tune of 13-1.

Before a crowd of 500 shrieking eds and co-eds who were led by a group of comely cheers leaders the odds-on-favourites from Vic staged two sustained power drives with Bob Bundy and Glen Munro leading the attack to sink U.C.'s valiant effort.

The Royal College squad, who had surprisingly edged Senior School on Tuesday for the playoff berth, were outplayed in the second half by a large margin as Bundy and Munro swept down the field. Bundy made first downs several times and made the touches, while Munro flipped numerous passes to Burford for large gains. The U.C. squad held their heavier opponents in the first half as Sammy Stellman and Jimmy Bitove made first downs but Munro outkicked Smith consistently to keep the Red and White at bay. Speedball Bitove made several spectacular runs and a flicker play from Stellman in the last quarter which went for 50 yards was one of the prettiest of the game. In fact this was about the only realy U.C. scoring threat and it ended

23rd Dentantics Goes On Tonight

The twenty-third annual version of Dentantics, largest variety show on the campus, will be presented in Hart House Theatre this evening.

This year's version again features the fifteen-piece Dentantics Band which will later be heard after Christmas at one of the Athletic Nights in Hart House. The program consists of musical numbers in both classical and novelty veins, songs by the Glee Club under the direction of Robert Green, and skits, written and produced by each year in the Faculty. The dental nurses have again produced a trio of songsters, while Ferol Elliott of this year's class will be the soloist with the orchestra.

Meds Must Take Training

Instructions have been received recently from the Department of National Defence regarding the military training of medical students. The principal changes which must be made in the existing system of military training as a result of these instructions are as follows:

1. All physically fit men enrolled in the Faculty of Medicine must, in the future, take military training regardless of age or enlistment in the R.C.A.M.C.

2. All physically fit men enrolled in the First Year will take the authorized basic training with the C.O.T.C. of 110 hours intramural instruction followed by 15 days in camp.

3. All physically fit men enrolled in the Second and Third Years will be instructed in special R.C.A.M.C. subjects, and will receive a total of approximately 184 hours of instruction in the two years.

4. All physically fit men enrolled in the Fourth, Fifth and Sixth Years will be required to perform one period a week (45 minutes) of drill in addition to the instruction in Military Medicine which they receive as part of their academic course.

Accordingly, the attention of all medical students is drawn to the following instructions issued by the President's Committee on Military Training:

1. All physically fit men enrolled in the First Year in the Faculty of Medicine will be required to take military training during the Easter term regardless of age. Any who have not taken military training during the present term will enrol at the Orderly Room of the 2nd Battalion, Hart House, before the close of the term on December 18th, 1942.

2. All physically fit men enrolled in the Second and Third Years in the Faculty of Medicine will be required to take in the Easter term a special course in R.C.A.M.C. training instead of the military training now provided. Any who have not taken military training during the present term will enrol at the Orderly Room of the 2nd Battalion, Hart House, before the close of the term on December 18th, 1942.

3. All physically fit men enrolled in the Fourth, Fifth and Sixth Years in the Faculty of Medicine, whether enlisted in the R.C.A.M.C. or not, will be required to perform one period each week (45 minutes) of drill in addition to the courses in Military Medicine given in the academic course. Instructions with regard to this training will be issued at the commencement of the Easter term.

University Registrar,

December 10th, 1942.

Women Must Take A.R.P. Training

All women students in the University with the exception of O.C.E. students in the Teachers' Course, and of those students enrolled under the National Service Training programme in the Canadian Red Cross Corps, in Hospital Aids either term, and in A.R.P. first term, are required to attend a course of three lectures in A.R.P. training in accordance with an instruction received by the President from Dr. Marion, National Director of Civil Air Raid Precaution. These lectures will be held in Convocation Hall on Tuesday, Jan. 5, Thursday, Jan. 7 and Tuesday, Jan. 12, from 4:40 to 6:00 p.m.

For students enrolled in the National Service Training programme these lectures will count as part of the Easter Term requirement, and lecture courses and field work will be shortened accordingly.

Governors' Ban Removed As Ottawa Permits Aliens To Take C.O.T.C. Training

Students Required to Join 2nd Battalion Without Attestation; Will Join Regular Companies on Same Basis as Regular Trainees; Approximately Half of Original 18 Still Ready to Commence Studies at Toronto

CODY, McLAUGHLIN EXPRESS PLEASURE

The group of friendly aliens formerly barred from admission to the University well be allowed to enter on condition that they take military training without attestation, Dr. D. Bruce Macdonald, Chairman of the Board of Governors, announced yesterday.

He released the following statement to the press following a regular fortnightly session of the Board:

"The Minister of National Defence having now advised the Board of Governors that the released internees are now permitted to take the same military training as other male students attending the University, the objection to their entrance has been removed and consequently the released internees are to be advised immediately that they may register and commence their studies."

President H. J. Cody, who made the original motion that the aliens be admitted—which was defeated by a tie vote Nov. 12—said last night:

"I am delighted at the decision which the Board — with practical unanimity —

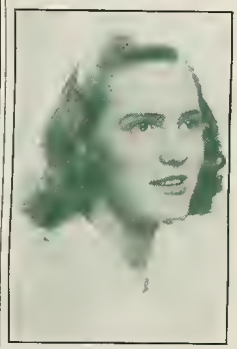
First Plenary Session

Tonight's plenary session of the Student-Staff Conference will be held in Room 43 in th Physics Building, not in the Big Hall of the Economics Building, as previously announced, Tom Nixon, Vice-Chairman of the Permanent Executive Committee, announced last night.

He added that all students and staff members— not merely those who have been named as Conference delegates — would be welcome at tonight's discussions. Meeting will begin at 8 p.m.

Closing Theatre Cancels Festival



The scheduled closing of the Hart House Theatre next year rings down the curtain on a drama begun in 1939 when the Central Ontario Region of the Dominion Drama festival was forced to suspend activities for the duration.

Annually, from 1933 to the outbreak of the war, the Theatre was filled by an enthusiastic audience who came to encourage amateur actors. Judith Evelyn, now on the New York stage as star of "Angel Street," and recent winner of the award for the best performance on the New York stage, was one of their number. On one occasion she went on from Hart House to win the dominion award for the best actress in the finals.

Amateur groups which had been organized for two or three years and which measured up to a certain standard were eligible. The regional festival laster four days, then the plays with the highest rank would be invited to the final Dominion Festival. Five times the finals took place in Ottawa, and once each in Winnipeg and London, Ont.

The highest award, the Bessborough Trophy, was given for the best performance in either English or French. Then there were awards for the best plays in English and French, exclusive of the Bessborough Trophy winner. Best Canadian plays entered in the festival was rewarded by a trophy presented by Sir Barry Jackson, and individual awards were given for the best actor and actress.

Barker Speaks On Coriolanus

Harley Granville-Barker, distinguished Shakespearian scholar who is at the University this week to deliver the Alexander Lectures, continued his topic of Shakespeare's "Coriolanus" in the second lecture of the series in Hart House Theatre yesterday afternoon. The third and final lecture will be given this afternoon at five o'clock.

Introduced by Dr. Cody at the beginning of the series as play-wright and actor as well as critic, Mr. Granville-Barker accompanied his commentary on the development of the dramatic action and characters with direct readings from the play itself.

Terming the play as "a master-piece of stage-craft," Mr. Granville-Barker remarked how events that seemed on a first reading to depend on chance incidents will be seen after study to be the outcome of character, and pointed out Shakespeare's economy in planning his play in his avoidance of the repetition of similar scenes.

Two Tons of Books Is Varsity Total

At least two tons of books have been contributed by the University in Wednesday's Book Harvest, it was estimated yesterday by Miss Bizzic, Camp Library Convenor of the Municipal Chapter, I.O.D.E., in charge of sending books to military camps.

(The driver of the truck which took the load from the campus estimated its weight as three tons. A number of books which missed the truck still remain to be collected.)

"We are extremely grateful for the University's contributions," said Miss Bizzic. "Many of the books were of very fine quality.'

Uncollected books can be brought to Room 82, University College, and will be collected there, a member of the Book Harvest committee said last night.

A Mistake Corrected

When a newspaper finds itself at the end of a long and hard struggle in which its aim has been achieved, there is not much left to say.

The Varsity first voiced student opposition to the Board of Governors' decision to bar the 18 friendly aliens from this University. Students almost unanimously rallied to defence of the principles of liberal education, which they felt were being disregarded by the decision. Downtown newspapers took up the battle. Large sections of public opinion swung to agree that to bar the men who had already suffered under the Nazi regime was inhumane and unfair.

And in the meantime, the Senate of the University and the heads of the Federated Colleges raised sharp protest at what they considered gubernatorial usurpation of vested rights and prerogatives.

Together, resolutions from the Senate and the Students' Administrative Council were forwarded to the Board. The combination of legal and ethical reasons advanced for the reversal of the Board's decision apparently took some effect for—judging by the wording of yesterday's official release—the one objection which remained was that the aliens in question were not required — or allowed — to take military training.

That objection was removed when Col. Ralston agreed to allow the men to take military training without going through attestation ceremonies—in a manner similar to that required of other friendly aliens on this campus.

And so the Board has reversed its decision. So much for the case issue of the controversy.

We only add that we congratulate the Governors for coming to their final judgment. It is a wise one. We regret that the University has already lost much prestige in the eyes of other academic centres where once our good name stood so high, through its even temporary adherence to the first decision, but we can hope that our present admission of the aliens will do much to establish our reputation as a liberal university.

We congratulate the student body as a whole for the stand they took in relation to the question. Under the pressure of heightened wartime study, it would have been understandable if they had been apathetic to the misfortune of 18 men whom most of them had never met. It is greatly to their credit that they voiced their opinion so readily and firmly.

We thank sincerely those other journalistic supporters of the demand for admission—The Daily Star and Saturday Night, and also those other collegiate papers who have given our campaign sympathetic attention—for their consistent support.

And finally a tribute to the man most largely responsible for the admission of the 18—President H. J. Cody. It was he who first moved that they be granted permission to enter, and it was he, we believe, who was the greatest advocate for reconsideration in the weeks that followed defeat of the original motion. Dr. Cody deserves the congratulations of us all, as congratulations are exchanged freely among those of us who fought for the right of free admission to a higher education for men who are worthy of it.

Curtain Going Down

Today a capacity crowd will fill Hart House Theatre to hear the last of a series of lectures by an internationally known Shakespeare critic. Two days ago, the theatre was jammed as a "typical co-ed" was chosen from a group of contestants, as part of a charity drive. The same evening another crowd sat in the same seats to listen to a concert by the string quartet which bears the name of the House and has always made the theatre its headquarters. And a week ago the theatre stage was the scene of a college production of Shaw.

Every student on the campus has his own memories of Hart House Theatre. They concern anything from a skit in the U.C. Follies or Vic Bob to a Wilson Knight production of Shakespeare or a speech by a distinguished campus visitor. Hundreds of undergraduates have nostalgic memories of the atmosphere backstage.

Those memories will probably have to keep for the duration. When the spring term opens, the theatre doors will be locked, and there seems little hope of their re-opening for some time to come. The manager of the theatre at the outbreak of the war, Willard Thomson, has died in a German prison camp following the Dieppe raid. One of his successors has already joined the active forces and a second will soon follow him. Under the circumstances, the Board of Syndics has seen fit to close the theatre, tentatively, until next June, and probably for the remainder of the war.

There is still a faint possibility that the theatre may be re-opened. A suitable manager may be found, or possibly some arrangement could be made for the running of the theatre by a committee of students or graduates on a part-time basis.

People within and without the University who have taken advantage of the theatre's many facilities will miss it sorely. It is hoped that some solution can be found enabling one of the most valuable cultural centres of the city to carry on its work of constructive recreation.

GREEN

Today The Varsity greets its readers in its most verdant ink as it celebrates the oncoming season with the traditional Christmas Literary Issue. It is of satisfaction to us to see that students—despite all the hustle and bustle present on a campus geared for war—are still capable of turning out literary and artistic creations worthy of publication.

One feature of other years is lacking. In the judgment of Dr. Barker, there were no contributions in the Light Verse section worth reprinting. We regret that our readers no longer care to dash off the odd modicum of Parkeresque or Nashian fantasy, but, perhaps, c'est la guerre. We hope sincerely that next year's Editor will be able to note with approval that Light Verse has made its return to the 1943 Green Issue.

Our thanks to the judges who took time from their more pressing duties to give us the benefit of their more mature judgment in deciding the prize-winners. Our thanks and congratulations to those prizewinners. And our thanks to the other contributors who didn't win. Thanks all around to everybody, from the Board of Governors to our longsuffering linotypist and compositor, and a Merry Christmas to you all.

Homage To Schumann

Lubka Kolessa

Two works of Robert Schumann comprised Madame Lubka Kolessa's last concert for the fall term at the Conservatory. As usual, they were both performed flawlessly.

The program commenced with the Etudes Symphoniques, which showed a great flexibility of mood and theme. It began pensively, almost broodingly, with a slow peaceful air which was extremely beautiful and arresting. Then followed a lively passage, demanding great technical skill, followed by a stirring martial motif. The next part was light and gay, similar to the classic gavotte, but this soon reverted to a fast and turbulent air which holds the listener enthralled. After the minor theme which follows, it builds up to a strong, forceful conclusion. As a composition, it is brilliant; and it could not have had a better artist to emphasize its spirit in spite of the technical

"No," I replied, turning away, and retching.

When faced with problems, we Canadian students must face them with a bold face. We must be broad-minded, not bigoted, dynamic, not static, blonde, not brunette.

And then there is the problem of what to do with our spare time. We often lie awake at night and worry about that particular problem. But never again. We are too sleepy.

Canadian students should be alert, not sleepy. They should face all these problems which face them with a bold face.

Schoolmen All

By Maurice and Peter Aykroyd

"School!!!" and fourteen hundred enthusiastic engineers rend the heavens with a "Toike Oike" that leaves in oblivion more intelligible yells.

"School!!!" and fourteen hundred excited engineers are on their toes thirsting for Med's and Art's gore.

"School!!!" and fourteen hundred enthused engineers cheer on that loyal team to victory.

"School!!!" and five thousand engineers from every clime, country, and calling, look back with love and loyalty upon that "Old Red School-house".

What is this intangible yet intrinsic and dynamic feeling that lays hold upon our innermost beings by that word School? What is the reason for this friendship and fellowship, this inherent feeling of affection so symbolic of Schoolmen, young and old? Does it not find its origin 'way back in the olden days, 'way back in the years that have produced some of the most illustrious engineers and leaders in Canada and other nations?

We are proud to uphold the traditions and ideals of our Alma Mater, handed down to us by our engineering forefathers. We cherish the memories and the successes of those men who not only brought into existence "School" and "School Spirit" but who have gone out into the world and laid the foundations of that practical science upon which we students are learning to build.

Let us turn back to those pioneer days. Let us have a squint at some of those prominent engineers at School. From our humble and inexperienced position we look with awe upon their success and accomplishments and we often wonder to ourselves what antics they were up to in their youthful days.

What were their counterparts for the Meds fight or the raids on Whitney Hall, or the freshmen dunking, or the parades to the opera, or the de-trolleying of Major Tate's cars? In times like these when such rollicking pranks are considered unwise, it may cheer us up to look back on the antics of our forefathers.

"When great men die
For years beyond their ken
The light they leave behind them lies
Along the paths of men".

A few rays of light, true gems of reminiscence are herein presented in a new setting. Handed down throughout the dimming years by written word or spoken thought—we reassemble them—for us—to-night.

The first man to receive the diploma of the School of Practical Science was Mr. James L. Morris. In 1922 in a letter to the editor of the "Transactions", he wrote about some of his undergraduate experiences. It seems that from 1880 until 1886 no S.P.S. student other than a scholarship man ever passed in Chemistry nor was a supplemental exacted. In fact, in one year the chemistry professor plucked every man in School and the University. The Easter exams in 1886 showed that sixty-four out of sixty-five students knew nothing about Chemistry.

This was the first attempt of Schoolmen to assert themselves as part of the forces of the University.

The traditional rivalry between School and Meds and between School and Arts has a history. As early as '91 the feud centered between Arts and Meds with School standing by as reinforcements for the losers. The three faculties took lectures together in the circular west room of the old Medical Building (on the site of the present Biology Building). The result was that accommodation was very scarce and the first ones in were the winners; a free-for-all fight developing when the Meds, who were usually late, arrived. Arts formed a sort of secret service and when Meds were expected in large numbers an S.O.S. would be sent to the School, who at that time were backing up the Artsmen. The Professor in charge would have to summon Sir Daniel Wilson, the President of the University, to quell the uproar. After a clash the place would be littered with hats, coats, and other torn wearing apparel. Later in 1893 S.P.S. united with Meds in a battle royal at U.C. against the Artsmen. Practically every student in the University was involved, and had to be driven finally from the lecture rooms and halls by the fire hose. The campus was occupied all day and no lectures were attended. The day after the big fight, the campus and buildings were guarded by a considerable squad of city police. This act only roused the argument again and all hands united to round up the "law" who soon retired to one of the neighbouring houses. Once again Sir Daniel, the President, had to be called out and since he was intensely popular with the students they dispersed with three cheers, while the police slid out the back door and went home.

But all these activities were in the early days before phonographs, movies or the automobile, when even the electric light and telephone were in their infancy. In these early days previous to 1890, there were few buildings in Queen's Park devoted to education and the western side of it, surrounding the University, was more or less bush, intersected by a ravine extending from Bloor to College street through which ran a little stream, the Taddle, where freshmen were baptized every fall by their seniors. This was the beginning of our modern tapping. Most of the students preferred a walk in the open air or a game of football to a session in the gymnasium which was merely a room in the cellar of the old Medical Building. Walking was the commonest amusement, and the most popular was a walk to Hamilton in company with congenial friends.

Favourite stars in the '90's were Rose Coughlon and Lilley Langtry. The Prince George was the leading hotel and most of the well-known actresses

La Premiere Danseuse

By Rose Rabkin

On Saturday morning, Mrs. Cavers came in while Joany and Donna were having breakfast. She sat down and made an announcement to her daughters in her rich liquid contralto.

"Girls, do you know what we're going to do to-day? We're going to the ballet!"

Donna made a dainty little lunge at her mother and kissed her on the cheek, shrieking pretty things like, "Oh—w! Mummy! How wonnerful!" Joany gazed musingly at her bejammed toast and didn't say anything. Joany was twelve: an age which requires dignity on any occasion when your nine-year-old sister is being young and frivolous. Mrs. Cavers looked at Joany and said a bit sharply,

"Don't you want to come, Joan?"

"Yeah, Mom. Sure. Sure I wanna go."

"Say 'yes' instead of 'ya', Joan, dear." Mrs. Cavers was thinking, "Probably she'd rather play hockey with the boys. Donna is so much more a little girl."

Donna began to chant:

"We're going to see the ball-é
We're going to see the ball-é——
Mommy, I want to learn to dance, too!"

"Yes, darling, maybe you can some day." Mrs. Cavers got up. "I think I'll phone and ask Ellen Bradley to come too. Joan, don't leave the table until you've finished eating."

"Yes, mother." Joany stopped chewing her mouthful obediently, and went out to the kitchen to talk to Helmi. She sat down on the chair-ladder near the sink where Helmi was washing dishes. She told her:

"Helmi, Mom is taking us to the ballet, this aft."

"Yaa, my Joany, you weel like de dancers. Dey are varry by-ootifool."

"Have yuh even seen it, Helmi?"

"Yaa, vonce in Helsingfors. Oh yaa, dey are vonderfool." Helmi gazed out of the window over the sink and murmured, "My brodder und I vent."

Joany said, "I was going to see Gene Autry, with Tommy and Jimmy Henley."

"Never mindt," Helmi told her, "you can see dat Gene Autry ahny time."

"Yeah, sure! I think I'll like the ballet, Helmi." She grinned at Helmi and took a muffin from the bread tin. Then she ambled out the back door to see Jimmy and Tommy.

In the afternoon, Joany got into her plaid dress and reefer and her calot with the tall feather. Helmi was helping Donna into her peach dress with the red smocking. Joany hated smocking and little flounces.

"Kid stuff, alright," she muttered. She went down to help her mother back the car out of the garage.

"O.K., Mom, swing her round to the left, fast!" Joany yelled. This was always exciting. Mom usually scraped the fender when Joany wasn't around.

When they drove out to the front, Donna was standing with Miss Bradley, holding her hand. She was carrying a small blue handbag on a little metal chain.

"Holy jumpin' catfish!" Joany breathed out and thought, "trying to be grown up with that purse." She got out and got in the back with Donna so Miss Bradley could talk to her mother.

At the theatre, Joany sat and watched the colours in the women's clothes. She noticed there were a lot of kids with their mothers. This wasn't bad at all. Some of the people looked sparkly and expectant, so Joany watched them and then read the programme. Donna asked her mother and Miss Bradley a lot of questions about the ballet, and the people and the theatre. Joany couldn't help wondering why she just didn't wait and find out for herself.

When the curtain went up, they danced Swan Lake. Joany became fascinated by the blue light and by the long-legged dancer Toumanova, the Queen. She inched forward in her seat, gradually, until her mother poked her and told her she would fall off.

The way the man held the girl was wonderful: as if she were made of that fine bone china Mom always talked about. Her head became dizzy with the motion and swaying of the dancers. She wanted somehow to cry because the beauty of it made an ache in her.

Spent with her first appreciation, she sat quiet and moody-eyed during the intermission. Mrs. Cavers let Donna get up and play in the aisle. She whirled around and skipped daintily up and down. Mrs. Cavers and Ellen Bradley were impressed with her possibilities. They beamed at her performance and Donna's mother said, "Ellen, don't you think I should give Donna lessons?"

"Of course, Mary. She'll make a wonderful little dancer."

"I think this has had quite an effect on her. They danced well, didn't they?"

"Yes, I'm so glad you asked me to come. Yes indeed. Look Mary, isn't she cute?"

Joany looking at Donna had a moment of stinging hate for the frilly, bowing little body, but the people around smiled at Donna and said what a pretty child she was.

After dinner, Donna told her father a long story about the funny

The Ballad of Kate the Witch

By Margaret R. Gould

In the dark deep forest in a tumble-down shack
Lived old Dame Kate; and her gaunt bent back
Was seldom seen in the village street
For halt was the sound of her thin lame feet.
Kate had hair that was red and white;
Her eyes shone green like a cat's in the night;
Her nose was long and her knuckles thick,
And she leaned over double on her gnarled oak stick.

On clear-lit nights when the moon was full
She went to the garden her weeds to pull;
She went to the church by the grass-grown lane
And the graveyard echoed with a mandrake's pain,
For Kate was wise and her spells were strong
And the man she cursed wasn't quick for long.

Kate was old and her skin was grey,
Her flesh had twisted and wrinkled away,
But the full-moon coven of the black witch horde
Brought youth and wonder where age was scored.
Her back was straightened and her face reborn
And her mouth lost the twist of an evil scorn;
Her hair flew long and reddened the night,
And blew like a wind-strown scarlet light.
Kate was young and Kate was free
And the forest trembled with her ecstacy;
She met her lover, the tall black man
Who had made this coven with a twisted plan;
They danced to the sound of the wild witch song,
And knelt in the shaggy goat-hooved throng;
They drank from the cup and they prayed; and after
Left behind them the mad hot laughter.

Kate took a fancy to a young slim youth
Who rigidly, earnestly sought for truth.
She met him once in the weed-grown lane
And she looked in his eyes till he blinked in pain,
And he called her Mother and Teacher then
And boasted of his power-to-be with men.
But Kate smiled slow and her green eyes shone
As she stared in the fire, put the kettle on,
And boiled strange herbs; and the black cat lay
By her withered side till the break of day.

The young man came, and he found Dame Kate
Beautiful, glowing, clean of hate,
And they went in the forest, and she danced with him;
But her own dark lover by a black pine limb
Threw a curse and a thought, and the youth fell dead.
Kate went home and slept in her bed.

The village folk came to her tumble-down shack
And found old Kate; though her gaunt bent back
Was seldom seen in the village street
They hated the sound of her thin lame feet.
They burnt her at the edge of the village square:
She screamed and moaned for an hour there;
And they took her ashes and the few scorched bones
And threw them in the river, weighed down with stones.

The shack they burnt in the full-moon light
And it filled the forest with a red-glow light;
And only the half-starved black cat knew stayed there. Rose was a great favourite with the University boys. After the show, on a particular night, the enthusiastic Schoolmen and others unharnessed the horses from the immense carriage, which was taking her to the hotel. About a hundred of them dragged it to the Prince George, up the wide front steps into the rotunda to the foot of the main stairs and carried her up the stairs to her room.
When Kate's dark lover came, and cursed them too.

One of the students' favourite sports was held at the expense of the local transportation company. "Bob-tailed" cars were being used on College Street in 1890,—very light cars pulled by a single horse. One of the stunts in vogue was to rush down from the School Building, board a car at the rear and set the brakes, thus preventing the horse from moving. Then while the driver was around loosening the brakes the boys would unharness the horse and chase it away. While the driver pursued his horse several of the group would go to each end of the car and lift it off the tracks.

Annual elections of the Literary and Scientific Society were a big event. There was at that time what was termed a "Brute Force Committee" representing each side, the inside party and the outside party. At some downtown hall the inside party committee would gather and let no one but their own supporters in to vote. The winning of the elections were dependent on the strongest "Brute Force Committee", which may account for the predominance of miners in the election field today. These elections are not to be confused with those of the Engineering Society which were quite formal.

In February, 1890, part of University College was destroyed by fire, which accounts for the extra towers on one wing. It was the evening of the Annual Conversat, when a caretaker carrying a tray of trimmed oil lamps, the sole illumination of the time, tripped and fell in the basement and set the whole place on fire. The nearest hydrant was fourteen hundred feet away and ten thousand people stood helplessly in evening clothes and watched the building burn down. Rumour has it that "Game" Goodwin, the assistant S.P.S. Janitor, dropped the tray of oil lamps and so thoroughly fired the college. There was a splendid demonstration of cultured bone headedness at the fire, suggesting "presence of mind" as a compulsory study. The recklessness with which the mattresses and pillows were carried down the stairs from the residence in the Cloisters (where Miss Krieger now has her office) and the care exercised in hurling carefully articulated skeletons from the Museum windows, was truly beautiful in a satirical way of speaking.

A noteworthy event of exactly half a century ago, was the construction of the southerly portion of the present Engineering Building to meet the demands for space. The building was

The Old Man and Me

By Rigmore Christopherson

The old man upstairs
With the Mona Lisa smile
Plays all night on the piano
In a strange Wagnerian style.

His face is thin and shadowed
With lines of etched despair;
His hard bright eyes are fixed
In a sleek accusing stare.

I turn on the radio loudly
But cannot silence the din;
I cower beneath the pillow
But the notes keep shuddering in.

The old man upstairs
No one but I can see,
For ours is a haunted house,
And he is the ghost of me.

Sara Green

By Margaret R. Gould

Sara Green left the house. Dark firs spiked the wind torn sky, and the line of the roof broke the pattern of evening. Dull red and pearl and far-streaked black filled the air as she ran down the path.

Sara Green was small and strange. Her eyes were clear grey, and her hair was brown. Her face was pale, with straight firm brows and quiet mouth, and no child played with her, for Sara Green did not play: she thought.

The house she had left strained after her. She looked back with a faint impatience; it was getting too strong for her to control, and she was beginning to be afraid of it. Once the house had been inarticulate, a narrow force bound in by unbelief, a smooth wall cracked with strange corners and hidden stairways, and dull awareness in the narrow windows. When she had seen it first she had nodded, recognizing it as the house of her inner thoughts. She knew the rooms before she saw them: not their shape, or furniture, but the position of the windows, and the odd air of expectancy. She went through the house that first night touching it, making it her own, proving her sleep-long vision, and the dark rooms became a part of her, and the steps were the levels of her mind. The house was old and hidden with pines; the garden was old too, and the twisted tree-shapes seemed one with the shadow-walls. To the other people in it, the house was indifferent, but it had become a reality to Sara Green. She believed in it.

She was still running, jumping over the small snow mountains and sliding on the ice, without slowing her pace. The sunset paled to gold and grey. The house had been timid at first, when she had not quite realized its possibilities, but as she trusted it more it had gained in confidence; and now it had become stronger than she, and slowly she recognized its evil. It was no use to ignore it, or hope to evade it. She had called it into meaning and could interpret it; she must stay in it forever. Even away from the physical sight of it she could feel it demanding, pleading, enforcing her return. It would not leave her alone; she could have no will. Sara Green was tired of thinking.

Two children were building a small fortress in an empty lot. They were absorbed in their work, and created a minor pattern of perfection. They had bright red hair, and laughed and shouted to each other. Sara Green walked over and watched them. At first they stared at her and whispered, but in a moment they went on, making it higher and higher, until at last it was finished, all but the flag that was to go on the top. Neither of them could reach it. Sara Green stood silent and dark, her white face as still as the one-starred sky. The younger gave her the flag, and began asking her to put it up for them, but she was staring at the fortress with a sudden look of recognition, and did not hear. This was another set of walls, another spirit demanding help and power. It too could grow, could control. She did not know whether it was for good or evil; there was no time. The other was permanent, but this she could destroy. Soon there might not be even that ability. She dropped the small flag, and kicked and shoved the walls fiercely, with bitter pleasure. The children protested, but were stilled by her distant eyes. The younger began to cry. Sara Green trampled the fortress beneath her feet, leaving a mound of crushed and tarnished snow, then turned slowly home. The call was too insistent to disobey.

The sky was dark, and set with winter patterns. Through the lighted windows she saw the house watching her, triumphant.

officially opened in 1892 and it was an auspicious occasion indeed. The whole building with the newly equipped laboratories in Mechanics of Materials, Hydraulics, Electricity and Thermo-Dynamics was thrown open to visitors and budding engineers of the graduating class shone forth in great splendor as, arrayed in blue jean overalls, they operated the machines which they understood little better than did the spectators.

In the fall of '98, a band of spirited Schoolmen, driven by the autumn rivalry between Faculties, succeeded in stealing the cannon from in front of the Parliament Buildings. They took it up to School where it reposed for one day only, when Meds obtained possession and transported it to their front lawn. The old cannon frequently passed from Meds to School and back again and when last seen was in the basement of the Medical Building for the summer.

Taking a calliope through the hall of the School and thence into the lecture room was tame compared to the time a full fledged Highlander playing the pipes was ushered into the gallery at the Parliament Buildings while the House was in session. Why this was done, no one seems to know but there must have been a reason. There was always a parade downtown when good news arrived. When Kruger, President of the Transvaal, was captured by the British, a large wagon was obtained by the students and a big cage placed on it. A rather quiet fellow in the first year was "selected" to act as Kruger and he was put in the cage and it was tied down. He wore a beard and really looked the picture of Kruger. The placard on the cage stated that this was the real Kruger. All went well until the procession of Schoolmen reached King and York and then a mob of kids plentifully supplied with rotten eggs and fruit bombarded Mr. Kruger. The cage was open on four sides and poor Kruger took a horrible beating.

Reference to the two outstanding figures during these early days must naturally be made. The late Dean Galbraith and his intimate friend and colleague, the late Dean Ellis. These men found an abiding place in the esteem and affection of their students. Their aims and objects were to build up an institution worthy of its name and to aid all who sought its benefits. Their achievements in this respect are a challenge and inspiration to all those who follow.

If one were to ask the "Little Red Schoolhouse"—"Have you anything to declare?", her answer would be, "The thousands of graduates who have gone into the field in research, in industry, and to the far flung battle fields of the world. The happy days at School which live in every Schoolman's heart. The School Spirit which lives on today as it did in the early years of our history".

These are her declarations.

The Season

Women's Residence Ready For Xmas With Parties, Dinners and Presents

Although Father Christmas has failed to advertise the approach of his annual visits with his usual snowy signs, the various women's residences around the campus have more than compensated for his lack of interest.

University College leads with the number of events lined up to fete the advent of Mr. S. Claus. The fun begins this coming Sunday at Whitney with a Christmas breakfast, followed by a tree and gifts for all. The next and most important event is the Dean's annual Christmas party to be held on Dec. 14. In each of the houses of Whitney there will be a Christmas dinner at which their patrons will be present as guests of honour—Lord and Lady Falconer, President and Mrs. Cody, and Mrs. Wallace representing Sir Wm. Mulock. After dinner there will be carolling and a dramatic program in the Women's Union. On Dec. 15 there well be a Christmas tea at the Women's Union in honour of Sir Wm. Mulock, thus concluding the round of parties.

They're going formal at Vic to their annual Christmas dinner—given by the deans and dons. This year a new note will be introduced: the dinner to which various members of the U. of T. staff have been invited, is to be held at both Annesley and Wymilwood, due to the large number of girls enrolled.

Following dinner, at which Santa presents the honorary guests with comic tokens, there will be carolling interspersed with numbers by the resident choir and a Christmas play.

Loretto and St. Joseph's introduce a new note into the Christmas theme song with Christmas spirit doled out to the poor. At Loretto it's in the form of a party on Saturday to which 40 needy tots will be invited for games, presents, candy, "and best of all, Santa and a tree." This year St. Joseph's are giving hampers to needy families, instead of their usual Christmas party for children. At Loretto the girls draw for gifts distributed by Santa at their Christmas tree. St. Joe's and St. Hilda's introduce their Christmas parties with dinner in grand style, and they, too, have a Christmas tree and a sing-sohg. St. Hilda's introduces a novel form of entertainment with its nativity play written in Mediaeval English.

These gay parties will bring us closer to Dec. 18 and home for most of the girls. The "poor unfortunates" who are far from home are in the minority and every College is empty on Christmas day—thanks to kind friends. At Vic, Wymilwood is left open for those remaining over the holidays, while at other Colleges no extra provisions are necessary.

NO. 1 ON THE GIFT PARADE—

AN ADAM HAT CERTIFICATE!

"Me for an Adam" hundreds of thousands of men say about their hats. And now you can give him his favorite hat without worrying about size, color, style or weight. Do it with an Adam Hat Certificate, which you place in his Christmas stocking. He does the rest; at his leisure picks out the one he wants at Disney (Adam Hat Headquarters)—returns home and gives you a big kiss! A great gift at a modest price. $3.95 and $6.

Ticket Lists Now Posted

The lists have just been put up in the registrar's office in the different colleges for those who wish to get the special vacation railway fares, and so far only 145 (from U.C., Victoria, Trinity, S.P.S. and Medicine) have signed.

Most of the out-of-towners, from A to Zed (Velmore M.—3rd Meds) will be leaving but find it difficult apparently to make up their minds until the last minute.

According to the registrar's secretary at Victoria, 175 or so are expected to go from that college, although only 37 have yet signed. "The other 128 will probably all come dashing in the day before they leave," said she, resigned to the impracticality of students.

Statistics prove a few mildly interesting things: that Trinity students seem to be heading mostly eastwards, around Ottawa and Quebec; that many Meds seem uncertain of their goal, and put either a blank or a question-mark as their "Destination"; that Engineers, as you might suspect, come chiefly from mining-towns like Cobalt, North Bay and Sudbury. About a dozen lucky people are going to be in New York.

The fellow who's going to have the longest jaunt is Bill McCarter, I U.C., who will have to take a three and a half day transcontinental trip to Victoria.

"It's one long, almost unbroken journey," he says, "except for a half-hour break at Winnipeg. I've only made the trip once but I didn't find it so bad. It was crowded when I came down, with a lot of men taking air-force training, and people constantly getting on and off."

jumping men in Scheharazade and about how she wanted to take dancing lessons.

"Miss Bradley said I'd be good, too, Daddy."

"I've no doubt, chick," said her father.

Mrs. Cavers told the girls to go up to bed. Then: "I'll discuss the matter with your father, Donna. Good-night, my dears."

In the bedroom the two girls shared, Joany sat for a long while on her bed saying nothing. Then she took out her white flannel nightie. Joany always wore pyjamas so her one nightie had become a little short for her.

Donna chattered away about her dancing lessons.

"Joany, Mommy said to keep it a secret but she might take me to see that Russian man Collranski on Monday if Daddy says it's alright."

Joany pulled up the Venetian blind and turned off the light.

Later Donna murmured sleepily, "I'll bet Daddy'll be glad he's goin' to give me dancing lessons when he sees me in my fairy costume that I'm going to have."

Joany lay tense and still, saying nothing, pretending to be asleep.

Much later, when she was sure Donna was asleep she crept quietly out of bed. Light from the street lamp made a puddle of colour on the carpet. Downstairs the radio was playing some sort of music which kindled high white flame in her blood. She began to dance moving her body and her arms and legs and head, weaving a pattern on the carpet in the spotlight from the window. In the white flannel nightie with her bare ankles sticking out she looked rather like a gaunt tired Pierrot; but somewhere inside her pulsed the infinite long-limbed grace of Toumanova, the Swan Princess.

When Helmi came up to investigate the floor-creaking, she found Joany, a white huddled figure, crying silently on the floor. In between gasps, she said,

"Oh Helmi, I looked in the mirror and I didn't dance like her at all!"

Tin Signs Serve For Toboggans As Schoolkids Frighten Reporter

By Frank Rasky

"The North wind doth blow.
And we shall have snow.
And what will poor robin do then, poor thing?"

"If she's a wise little bird she'll wing her way to the 125-foot hill adjoining the University library, and laugh off her troubles by watching the public school small-fry scuttle down the icy slopes.

The youngsters meet here daily, weather permitting, after Bloordale School's let out, spending three hours tobogganing. The sleds are homemade, and are merely battered tin display signs.

The kids aren't class conscious, though. If you ask them in a nice way, and if you seem to be a regular fellow they'll be only too pleased to let you have a go at sleighing.

"Remember to keep yourself glued to your sled," warns nine-year-old Pete Bryee. . . . "Keep your eyes peeled for that bump and hold on tight," advises freckled Bill Simmons. . . . "For heaven sake, don't look so scared," laughs eight-year-old Dick Duncan. "It's like taking candy from a baby."

They will flop you flat on the tin sign. They will pat your back encouragingly. They will wish you good luck. And then they will push. . . .

A big wind brushes along your back with the force of your Aunt Sadie's vacuum cleaner. The icy slope grinds under your stomach. You twirl about like a horse from a merry-go-round gone on a drunken spree. The big bump flips you like a flap jack . . . Whee-ee . . . There it's all over.

"Say, that's rip-roaring fun. Give me another try," you say, picking the flakes of ice from your teeth, and trying to hide the hole in your trouser leg.

"See what I mean," beams young Dick Duncan while helping you to your feet. "Like taking candy from a baby."

Men's Christmas Needs Are Various; Would Like Co-eds, Skis, Exam Papers

With only 12 more shopping days until Christmas, most students first wish is something money cannot buy—to pass their examinations. As Vernon Pew, I S.P.S., said, "I want to be able to stay at University."

A copy of the final examinations will satisfy Art Malcolm, III Meds. And some students, for example, Dick Muller and Don Allin, both IV S.P.S., would like to find a completed thesis in their stockings.

Dorcas Beaton, II Meds, wants a bright plaid kilt since she cannot have the Christmas holidays extended until Easter. Pat Dunlop, another II Meds, wants 120 marks in Anatomy. Georgette Brown, III Pass, just wants a new sweater. Mary Christilaw, I Pass, has one wish, "A simple little powder blue roadster with a horn that plays 'The Strip Polka'."

Lonely Al Patterson, II S.P.S., wants "The girl who won the beauty contest Wednesday—what a lovely co-ed!"

"I want a nice little five-foot-four blonde. If I wake up and find her in my Christmas stocking, I'd be the happiest little boy in the world," was the wish of Norm Frowler, I S.P.S.

One boy, who refused to give his name, grinned widely and said, "Hedy Lamarr wrapped in white celephane." A Schoolman no doubt.

Three cuties from Trinity hoped that there would be "Oodles of airmen in their hometown, Dunnville."

All kinds of wishes were expressed for snow, skis, skates, and a ski trip to Collingwood. Gwen Innis from Trinidad, II P.H.E., said, "I want a pair of skates. I'm just learning and it is so much fun."

One campus dude with sly smile said, "Oh, I want a real gold six foot chain for my zoot suit."

And George, IV S.P.S., a Senior School ruby player, wants "Twelve good imports for the Senior S.P.S. rugby team."

Don Haines, strictly Airforce, wants what every serviceman dreams of, a 14-day leave at Christmas.

One professor spoke for all of us, when he said, "I pray for peace on earth."

Judges Comment on Green Issue Copy No Prize Awarded For Light Verse;

Varied impressions were expressed by the staff members who undertook to judge contributions to The Varsity's Christmas Literary Issue. Dr. J. D. Robins of Victoria College who selected the prose and Dr. A. E. Barker of Trinity who judged the poetry, reported fully to The Varsity on their findings. Prof. C. F. Comfort of the Department of Fine Art, who judged the arts contributions, was able only to turn in a simple verdict because he was called out of town unexpectedly.

The awards in the Art Department were made as follows: First, P. Gardiner's pen and ink landscape; second, K. E. Grinyer's smaller tree sketch; and third, M. E. Nylin's timely Madonna.

Fullest comment came from Dr. Robins who found that the University's prose writers showed a good deal of evidence of concern with actual problems of existence. "They possess something not usually found in young writers," he said, "The realization of the artistic possibilities of their own campus experiences." These entries, however, he pointed out, were kept from the prize-winning class by their technical defects.

Of the two prize short stories Dr. Robins said that while he considered the Second Prize selection, Margaret Gould's "Sara Green", to be by far the better written of the two, the First Prize selection, Rose Rabkin's "La Premiere Danseuse" was much more of a story. The winning story has more action, more characterization and more plot.

Of the essay section Dr. Robins remarked that there had been only four entries and all but the winning one, by Mauriee and Peter Aykroyd, were rather discouraging.

Of the winning entries, "The Ballad of Kate the Witch," by Marg Gould and "The Old Man and Me" by Rigmore Christopherson, in the poetry section Dr. Barker had little to say except that in his opinion the title of the last was execrable grammar.

In pointing out that all he had chosen were serious Dr. Barker said that the humorous verse was a painful subject. "I don't think any contribution in this vein should be mentioned—certainly not honourably."

"Good King Wenceslas" will shake hands with a host of other old-time carol characters Thurs., Dec. 17, from 12.30 to 12.45 p.m., when the Hart House Glee Club will awaken Christmas cheer with a round of carols to be sung in the Great Hall at Hart House. All students inclined towards wassailing are invited to participate.

The Glee Club will also be heard over a C.B.C. national hook-up from 7.15 to 7.30 p.m., Dec. 17, as they sing carols at the Hart House Warden's annual dinner for students who are unable to go home for Christmas vacations.

This will be the fourth year that the Glee Club has been privileged to sing carols over the C.B.C. In past years, however, the carol session was held at noon-time and not in the evening.

Governors Admit Alien Students

made at today's meeting."

The men in question will be allowed to join the 2nd Battalion of the University of Toronto Contingent, Canadian Officers' Training Corps, Lt.-Col. H. H. Madill, Officer Commanding the Contingent, said. "We are authorized to enrol them by National Defence Headquarters," he said. "They will join regular companies, and will be treated just like anybody else."

"We are naturally very pleased at the decision of the Board of Governors," commented Father T. P. McLaughlin, Superior of St. Michael's College. "I don't know how many of the men concerned are still in Toronto. Two who applied to enter St. Michael's have now gone to St. Francis Xavier University."

(An unofficial count last night showed approximately half of the original 18 men still to be awaiting admission to this University.)

The 18 aliens—all of German nationality—are men originally interned in England shortly after the Fall of France in 1940, who were sent to Canadian internment camps soon after. They have been released following individual examination by officials of the British Home Office and the Canadian Government officials specifically to enter universities, where, it was considered, they could best serve the interests of the community by furthering their education. Other friendly aliens, similarly released, have already been permitted to enter several other Canadian universities.

The Varsity Reviews

Acta Victoriana

December, 1942

If many more issues of Acta Victoriana appear in as rapid succession as the first three this column will be forced to consider the magazine as a dangerous competitor of The Varsity and boycott it accordingly. Actually, no end of credit is due to an editor who is both enterprising and insistent enough to produce enough good-quality material from his constituents to fill an issue every two weeks or so.

One of the features of the magazine of which the reader is less fond, however, is the regular appearance of long pieces of informative prose on non-college subjects and by non-college authors, inserted apparently with a view to stimulating the reader's social conscience. If Vic students wish to refresh their memories on the subject of What We Are Fighting For, there are a number of excellent sources of information available, at no cost to the reader.

The fiction section, hurriedly reviewed in proof, presents Rigmore Christopherson's We Authors, an ably written piece of fantasy which didn't quite jell with this reader. A powerfully written story is Broken Wing, by Gord Rattray, which probably has a less limited appeal.

Paul Fox presents the second in his Made Easy series, an amiably confusing treatise on economics. An anoymous and bad tempered essay on professors seems to be written by a somewhat sophomoric author who complains that the unfortunate pedants fail to inspire him. A long and apparently thorough article on price control cannot be thoroughly dealth with here due to space and time limitations.

The poetry is generally excellent, a sonnet by N.M. striking the reader as particularly impressive.

fair. This number was vigorous and captivating throughout, capturing the gaiety and life of a crowd in pursuit of pleasure.

A larger crowd was in evidence at this concert than at the previous ones. Perhaps this is a sign that the music-lovers of Toronto are beginning to discover the marvellous opportunity of difficulties entailed.

The other number was the Carneval, a series of musical sketches depicting the colourful pageantry to be seen at a fered by these concerts.

(85) INSPECTION AND BADGE CEREMONY

The U. of T. Detachment, C.R.C.C., will be inspected by the Provincial Commandant, Miss Isobel Pepall, on Tuesday, Dec. 15, at 8 p.m. in Hart House Gymnasium. Following inspection, Red Cross cap badges and N.C.O.'s chevrons will be distributed.

Assembly

Members will enter Hart House through the West Door not later than 7:40 p.m. and will proceed to the Wrestling Room which will be used as a cloak room. Members will then assemble in gallery outside the Great Hall, maintaining silence while going through halls.

Forming Up

Detachment will fall in on markers at 7:50 p.m. facing West in corridor. Roll will be called by Sergeants. Detachment will march off in three without spacing and take up position in gymnasium in two lines. Dressing will be at two-foot intervals.

Procedure

Following inspection, Detachment will march past the saluting base in threes and again form up in two lines for distribution of badges. After address by inspecting officer, Detachment will be dismissed.

Guests

Accommodation for guests will be available in the gallery and all friends of the Detachment are cordially invited. Cards will not be issued.

(86) CHRISTMAS VACATION

There will be no further duties until after the Christmas vacation. No instruction will be given before Thursday, Jan 7, except for those required to take special A.R.P. lectures or those enrolled in other National Service Training courses.

(87) COMPULSORY A.R.P.

All members who have not already completed the Basic Course in A.R.P. either at the University or elsewhere, will report to the Commandant in person or by telephone as soon as possible in order to make arrangements to take the lectures of the Compulsory course to be given at the beginning of next term.

(88) MEDICAL CERTIFICATES

Any member who has not reported to the Medical Adviser for her medical check will automatically be dropped from the Corps after Christmas.

Russian-Born Painter and Patriot Holding Exhibit For Charity Fund

By Brock Brace

Paraskeva Clark Russian-born painter and patriot, is holding a representative exhibition of her paintings at the Painters Loan Society. The net proceeds of their sale is to go to the Aid-to-Russia Fund and several canvases have already been sold.

Mrs. Clark was born in Leningrad and received her early art training there. While attending high school and working as a book-keeper she received practical training in the studio of Vassily Shoukhaiev, foremost neo-classic painter of Czarist Russia.

Came the Revolution, and the Imperial Academy of St. Petersburg was transformed into the people's art school of Leningrad, open to the poorest in the land, with free lessons from the most talented masters, conscripted by the Soviet. Even while fighting a bitter war for survival, reports Mrs. Clark, the government car-marked funds to subsidize art for the masses. During the succeeding years, until 1921, the development of the school was retarded, there being no examinations or curriculum, as some of the more important teachers, including Shoukhaiev, had fled to Paris.

Mrs. Clark herself lived in Paris from 1923 to 1931, working first as a domestic and then as salesgirl in a Venetian glass shop. It was here that she met her present husband. She also lived for a time in Chatoux, a suburb of Paris, frequented at that time by many of the Impressionist painters.

Coming to Canada in 1932, Mrs. Clark was given a warm welcome by the Canadian art colony, and entered upon her period of greatest creativity. She had conformed to the contemporary trend of landseape painting, but is known for incisive satirical drawings and art of social import.

The curator of the galleries where these paintings are shown has suggested that interested groups of students might buy some of these paintings by subscription, and so contribute to what is undoubtedly a worthy cause. The exhibition is open from 2 till 9 daily, until Dec. 17; the Painters Loan Society is at 3 Charles St. West.

ARTS WOMEN

All students enrolled in Second Term Hospital Aids course are required to report at once to their respective Deans of Women for the purpose of filling out necessary forms in connection with the course.

All other women in National Service Training courses except those in the Canadian Red Cross Corps and Red Cross Sewing, are also required to report to their respective Deans of Women on Friday, Dec. 11, to fill out application blanks for the courses to be taken in the Easter term.

Speaking Of Sport

By Roger Conant

POME?

The captains and the lines depart—
The tumult and the shouting dies—
And Christmas comes but once a year—
All dressed up in Santa's guise.

—Ibid.

Oh well, the first half was good football and close at times, too. And after that your attention could, with little persuasion, be transferred to the co-ed cheerleaders. And gee, hardly any fumbles to stir up the chips. Even Mr. Burwell got kinda bored in the third stanza and wandered across the field—probably to date up one of said comely cheer conducers for tonight's brawl. And speaking of the fall 'ball brawl, that Vic social instigator was so ear-splittingly propounding between plays—we think it mighty magnanimous of the winners to come through with a wad of Annie Oakleys for the U.C. players—that's what you call the spirit between the Arts Colleges.

Well, to get back to the fricassee of football itself—one can perform an autopsy from either or both viewpoints—the victor or the vanquished. Let's start with the mortgage holders of the silverware. To the uninitiated one might wonder if the two teams were in the same league. Well, 'ell, Elmer, they aren't, weren't and probably never will be—for it seems that for thirty years twelve top men have never been enrolled at the same time in the honourable portals. Then, when a team begins to shape up, members decide School or Meds pay better dividends or else their pass course has run its term. So it was just by the grace of Olympus (someone thought it was by the grace af Bacchus—but of course we only hear rumours) that Senior School was hurdled. So it was just a good determined team full of fight against a superior machine that put the score on the books. The line of the winners was extremely strong and it shows in the statistics how Stellman et co. were stopped. For Hay, Rutledge, Saunderson, Guthrie and Ibey make up a stonewallian defence, besides being a terrific driving power in opening up holes for Bundy. Tubby himself owes much to them for the defence they gave him on the pass formations—and the fact that he rarely seemed to be hurried means a lot. The ends—Jones and McComiskey, were slightly hot—witness that although eleven kicks soared U.C.'s way a grand total of only 15—count them—15 yards was eaten up all afternoon by the harrassed backs. When we speak of the backs we just go into a trance about Bundy and Munro, so we'll stay sober and take a look at Jimmy Fitzgerald who covered a lot of ground, Don Shugart with his plunges and defensive work and Fred Burford's plunges. This aggregation all adds up to Mulock Cup calibre and it sure did yesterday at one o'clock.

Now to shed a tear and add a cheer. For the Royal College has done some fine work this fall. Despite harvesting they started strongly, taking the first two games. Two one-point decisions put them back in a second place tie with two other colleges. It took three games to get in the playoffs—then winter set in. After a week of apprehension, it finally warmed enough to get two games over with last Tuesday and the Red and White surprised everyone, including themselves, by holding off Senior School and making good on a School miscue to cop the honours. Then in yesterday's set-to they showed great fight and made the game a real contest. For the score didn't indicate the game. And even though down a dozen points, they came back in the last quarter and took command; for instance, they made 62 to Vic's 6 yards by rushing. Of course this was a great reverse from the third, when Vic ploughed 63 yards for four first downs. So it seems that they couldn't solve the No. 42 which was the Munro-Bundy flip that scored yards and the second touch. However, Bucky Zierler deserves a lot of credit for his lads' great showing this fall. Nesbitt, Dixon, Warren, Smith, Bitove and Stellman displayed great football and put up as good a fight as anyone could against the Scarlet and Gold machine.

Powerful Vic Machine Repeats For Mulock Cup

in their only point.

The Scarlet and Gold left little doubt in the minds of everyone as they had the edge in every department. Bundy Burford and Burwell made large line gains; Bundy and Munro skirted the end for more and Glen Munro booted them high, wide and handsome. But the U.C. aggregation made the game closer than the score indicated for the forward wall stood up well—the right side especially of Nixon, Zierler and Nesbitt. And the backfield of Tartaglia, Amell, Smith, Stellman and Bitove played heads up ball. Dalt Nesbitt was the best tackler on the field, dragging Bundy, Fitzgerald and Munro onto the frozen earth. However, it was a plain case of a heavier and more experienced team led by a couple of great players that rode over a light but scrappy team that made the difference between victory and defeat.

First Quarter

Bob Bundy kicked off to Stellman on the U.C. 15 who clipped off five yards. Plunging star of the semi-finals, Sammy Stellman hit the Vic centre for six on two plunges. Smith hoofed to Munro on the Scarlet and Gold 50. Bod Bundy hit centre for no gain, then Munro rocketed the first pass of the game to Fred Burford who galloped 20 yards to the Red and White 35. U.C. line held Bob Saunderson, Munro's pass went wild and he kicked to Tartaglia at the goal line. Bundy dropped the receiver on the five. Bitove gained five around the end and Stellman ground off eight; Amell and Stellman hit hard again for another first down. Don Smith's pass to Amell was downed, Tartaglia went for two and Glen Munro took Smith's hoist on his 50 stripe. Bundy sidestepped through the right end for 28 yards to bring the ball to U.C.'s 31. Jimmy Fitzgerald was stopped heavily in a buck. A short flicker pass, Munro to Burford, went for five but failed to move the sticks. Vic attempted to capitalize on an onside kick and Bert McComiskey leveled Stellman on the Red and White five. Amell was halted at the line of scrimmage and Smith kicked to Munro on the U.C. 40, who plowed to the 25 on the runback. Bundy went through the left end to the 14 and a first down, but was held for three around the right end. A grounded yass from Munro ended a scoreless first quarter.

Second Quarter

Scarlet and Gold strategy called for an onside kick. Bitove received Munro's boot well back of the goal line where he was mobbed for a single—the first point of the game. U.C. lunged out with a long pass, but Burford was in the way. Stellman bit off three, and Don Smith lofted to midfield where Munro gathered in the pigskin. Yards rewarded Fred Burford's plunges through the line. The Red and White line held Bundy for no gain. Victoria's much feared aerial attack made itself evident as Munro threw 25 yards to Burford who, about to be tackled, passed to Jimmy Fitzgerald who took another five, and the ball was on U.C.'s 10. Being held on a cutback, Vic attempted a placement which went wide and short, and Stellman fell on the ball on the eight. Amell was stopped in his boots and Smith relieved the pressure on a kick to his 40. Burford ran back five yards. Munro pulled a quarter sneak for three and then threw two passes that were squelched by the U.C. secondary, and the Royal College took over on their 32. A futile forward and Stellman dropped by Ibey on the line with a flying swan forced Smith to kick. Munro received and lateralled to Freddie Burford who broke away for a beautiful 47 yard run. Vic added eight yards on a quick pass, Munro to Burford on the five yard line. Two forwards were knocked down, the second over the goal line so that U.C. was awarded the ball. Stellman had carried the leather to the 30 when the half ended

Half time score—Vic 1, U.C. 0.

Third Quarter

U.C. started the second half, their first kickoff rolling outside for a ten yard penalty. The second attempt was taken by Bundy on his own 40 and carried by him to the U.C. 52. Carrying on where he left off in the first half, Bundy plunged for three which added to a four yard buck by Don Shugart and a U.C. offside penalty gave the Scarlet and Gold a first down on the U.C. 46. The ball moved forward another 13 yards as Tubby Munro crashed through the line on a quarter sneak. Durable Bob Bundy hit the U.C. line for 18 yards on four consecutive thrusts. The march continued as Freddie Burford's four yard gain moved the sticks for the third time and left the ball resting within striking distance of the U.C. five yard stripe. The Red and White line dug in to hold Jim Fitzgerald to no gain, and then stopped Bob Bundy at the one yard line, but on the next play, Bundy crashed through right end for the first major score against U.C. of the season. Completing his effort, Bundy split the convert columns to make the score 7-0.

U.C.'s short kickoff was received by John Burwell on the Vic 32. The ball was carried to the 37 by Burwell, but this gain was nullified by a Vic offside. Munro's punt travelled to the U.C. 53 where Jimmy Bitove was dropped by Murray Thompson. Two plays, an incompleted forward and an end run, failed to advance the ball and Don Smith was forced to kick to Munro on the Vic 35. The runback moved the ball to the 40, and Burwell's plunge for five brought the ball as far as the Vic-men were able and Munro lofted a long spiral that soared 45 yards to Jimmy Bitove who was hit hard by Gord Hay. U.C.'s attempted pass was knocked down and Smith kicked on second down to Fred Burford who was brought down by Alex Dixon. The powerful Victoria attack appeared again as Munro rifled a pass to Burford in the clear which moved the ball to the 25. The quarter ended with another attempted forward being knocked down.

So here we are with visions of sugarplums and dreams of a white Christmas dancing through our heads to wish you all a VERY MERRY CHRISTMAS as real honest to goodness snow covers the ground in a thick white comforter (First Prize, Descriptive Literature—Ed.)

We really don't need to wish any Merry Christmases in the direction of Vic. This afternoon we saw one of the Scarlet and Gold's Big Athletic Type Men hustling through Queen's Park with a bigish sort of silver thing like a soup tourean under his arm and a broad grin on his face. "Did Vic win the cup finals?" we asked. "Did we ever," he enthused, "13-1."

We still don't know what he wanted with the tourean — somebody named Mulock had scratched their name on it (quite neatly though) with the date 1894 underneath it.

This whole department's cynical old heart was softened by the experience of one of its members as the snow fell soft and silently simultaneously with the dusk over the campus yesterday. Down near the press he met a little chappie about curbstone high who sniffled that he was lost and wanted to get home to his Mother. The only trouble was that he didn't know the name of his street and seemed to think every corner he came to was his own, which it obviously wasn't down in that part of the campus. Getting nowhere this kindly newsman decided to turn the matter over to the astute mind of the University Police.

He found him down in the basement of Simcoe Hall and explained the situation. "Poor little beggar," muttered the Police out of the corner of its mouth, and then, turning efficiently to the task put the first methodical question. "What's your name, sonny?" "Tommy," was the weeping reply. With confidence the Police pursued its method. "What's the rest of it?" "Brown."

"I guess I'd better take him over to Police Headquarters," said the officer, in the same cool, efficient manner.

YA, TOUGH CASE.

It was quite a surprise to find this wee lad making his way about on foot. We had thought all these pint-sized juveniles were mechanized long ago, like the juvenile cavaleade mounted on scooters which bore down on a lady the other day on Younge Street and nearly bowled her over. As she was recovering her purse and her composure, the leader of the baby blitzkrieg piped shrilly, "'Scuse me, lady, but is this th' way t' Santy Claus?"

* * *

At the door of Hart House Theatre Wednesday, a Schoolman was heard to exclaim—"Hey fellas, come on in and let's look at all these beautiful babes —FREEE!"

CHRISTMAS COMES BUT ONCE A YEAR.

After the contest a couple was observed in a booth in a Harbord Street sweetery—the winner of the contest and —another girl.

Manpower Shortage,

Eh fellne?

So the newsbreak of the century comes into the humming Varsity office—SENATE ADMITS FRIENDLY ALIENS TO UNIVERSITY! A general shout, like in "Julius Caesar," then a short silence broken by a terrific excited solo shout from a sports columnist — "YIEE! DOES THAT MEAN VIC'S BACK IN THE SOCCER FINALS?"

* * *

Recently a rather elderly gentleman wandered into the Women's Reading Room at the Library, and sat there reading for several hours. A passing reporter asked one sweet young thing why someone didn't explain the conventions of the place and show him to the Men's Reading Room. "We would," said the S.Y.T., "but a man's a man these days."

"But he's got gray hair," the reporter protested.

"Still," she replied, "A MAN'S A MAN FOR A' THAT."

But things aren't equally bad all over. Over in The Varsity Women's Office yesterday a bewildered little girl reporter walked in and found the place inhabited by one cub reporter and three wolves (beg pardon—editors). "I was just over at Hart House and there wasn't a man in sight, and now I come over her and the place is swarming with them!"

* * *

One female member of the staff got a letter from her Mother (who happens to be taking a first-aid course) which ended with, "Good-bye now, dear — I MUST GO AND STUDY FOR MY EXAMS."

These Chritmas Mails sure da get mixed up.

And finally, since we know you're all worried, we have it on the most reliable authority that Superman really will bring Santa back from Berlin, so—

A MERRY CHRISTMAS and
A HAPPY NEW YEAR!

Munro's Passes, Bundy's Plunging Fatal to Hard-Fighting U.C. Squad

behind the U.C. line and he was rouged on a tackle by Bundy. The score was now 8-0 and the U.C. team was forced to a desperate passing attack in a bid to obtain the equalizers. Russ Tartaglia was thrown by a driving Vic line for a three yard loss, and Don Smith's pass was gathered in by Munro who made 10 yards before being stopped on the 35. The next play clinched the game as a 15 yard pass was taken by Bundy near the side-line and he raced 20 yards to his second touch of the day to seal the doom of the Red and White's title hopes. The play climaxed the game's scoring as the convert attempt went wide.

Guthrie's kickoff was taken by Jack Amell who advaneed it to the U.C. 40. Amell figured in the next play too as he plucked Smith's forward out of the air and added 15 yards. One pass was knocked down but Jerry Rafelman kept the U.C. cheer leaders' enthusiasm alive as he took another Smith pass for a nine yard gain. Sammy Stellman made it a first down through centre. The U.C. threat was turned aside as young Jim Crang intercepted a pass on the 23 to take Vic out of immediate danger. Bundy hit for 6, but a fumble held the next play to no gain. Russ Tartaglia took Munro's kick on his 45 and made five yards on the runback. U.C.'s bid for a touchdown was barely checked as Don Shugart bounced Jimmy Bitove out of bounds at the Vic 20 after Stellman and Bitove had combined on a sensational 45 yard play. The U.C. team continued rolling as Stellman rumbled through centre for yards. A whitewash was averted however as Don Smith lofted a high spiral that arced behind the Vic deadline to make the score 13-1.

The Vic ground-gaining attempts by Munro and Burwell were held in check at the 25 yard scrimmage with Munro punting the ball to the U.C. 50. Another Stellman to Bitove play was attempted but Bitove was hit hard before he received the ball. Vic dribbled the ball 45 yards to the U.C. five but the play was called back. From their own 50, U.C. took to the air but the Vic secondary allowed only one, Smith to Bitove for 10, of the three passes to be completed, and the game ended with Vitcoria in possession near midfield.

It was a great night for the gals in Blue from P.H.E.—II Year and III Year being the victors in the semi-finals against their sisters from the Royal College. II Year P.H.E. took their game 31-4, making the score on the round 47-19. Their Seniors scored 16 to the U.C. Freshies 9—and so totalled 37-19 for the series.

Now for a brief glance at the games. The first game saw the deadly aim of Joan Davies and her cohorts find the hoop time and time again in spite of the valiant efforts of Mary Stock. She, with Joan Carter, gave their all in what was probably their last appearance as undergraduates, but their lack of "subs," coupled with the brilliant defence led by Jean Barnhart and Nora Sharpe, made their efforts in vain. Last night's feature lacked the thrills and tension of Monday when P.H.E. eked out a 16-15 win, but all in all was a good game.

The second tilt saw much close checking by both teams. P.H.E. got off to a good lead and at half time the seore was 13-5. The last half both teams bore down, as the final score of 16-9 indieates. Betty Allen, collecting 10 points for herself, led P.H.E., while Kay Cunningham did a splendid job of checking the elusive "13" (to whom it may concern—this lass is also known as Kay Spencer). The Freshie forward line of Reid, Carew, Scott and Spencer played very well—as did the whole team. These kids were really good but the experienced P.H.E. gals were too much for them.

Friday night at 7:30 in Hart House, II P.H.E. faces III P.H.E. in the finals of the interfaculty basketball. Phyllis Griffiths will make her first appearance on the eampus for this year and Birna Christie will act as umpire. From the semi-finals—the games should be good. So drop in—you won't be disappointed.

By Betsy Gowan

It's always fun to speculate—and that is just what we've been doing during the last few weeks. As the basketball season is drawing to a close and we are all dreaming about sleigh bells and suprise packages, we thought it would be a very opportune moment to summon forth our All Star Basketball Teams.

In choosing the players for these teams, we considered their team-work as well as their actual shooting and guarding ability, and have tried to make them representative of the University as a whole. We must admit that while doing this we recalled time and time again the happy days of intercollegiate sport—when teams like these really existed. (But, let's not get off on that tangent again.) There they are in all their glory—and you can imagine what fun they might have playing against one another.

SENIOR OR I TEAM

Centres: Florence Cooper, St. Mike's; Natalie Staron, Meds.
Wings: Betty Allen, III P.H.E.; Jean Campbell, Vic Jrs.; Jean Stinson. II P.H.E.; Connie O'Connor, II P.H.E.
Guards: Nesta Chapelle, St. Hilda's Srs.; Marg Stoek, U.C. Srs.; Zoe Christie, III P.H.E.; Aileen McNally, St. Mike's.

FRESHIES OR II TEAM

Centres: Doris Clarke, P.H.E.; Mike Mahaney, St. Mike's.
Wings: Anne Corrigan, St. Hilda's; Rosemary Cunningham, St. Mike's; Kay Spencer, U.C.; Pat Flynn, P.H.E.
Guards: Laura Fletcher, St. Hilda's; Rowena Smith, Vic; Lois Bouson, I P.H.E.

Before we go, a brief word about Volleyball. U.C. and Vic both have teams, but are waiting until after Christmas to draw up a schedule in the hope that some of the other faculties will be able to enter teams. Will anyone interested contact Florence Joy at Vic? It is not a difficult game to learn and Freshies are given P.T. credits for playing, so come on gals, let's have a real active league. With this we leave you for a short while—and wish our readers, one and all, a very Merry Christmas.

Certain Students Expelled From Queen's, Manitoba Due To Term Exam Results

Toronto Professors to Submit All Unsatisfactory Academic Records to Council of Faculty of Arts by February Meeting

ALL YEARS AFFECTED

Winnipeg, Jan. 7 — (CUP) — More than 90 students of the University of Manitoba have been asked to withdraw from classes following publication of the results of the Christmas examinations, Dr. W. J. Spence, Registrar of the University, announced Monday.

Other students have been asked to drop one subject, while still others have been warned that their suspension is imminent unless they put forth a greater effort. Dr. Spence announced that the students may appeal their cases, and many seem to be already doing so for there are "lineups of the penitent" outside the offices of the Deans of Arts, Science and Engineering.

The Registrar also pointed out that students thus expelled from the University of Manitoba will be liable to military service immediately on receiving their callup notices.

90 to Leave Queen's

Kingston, Jan. 7 — (CUP) — Ninety students of Queen's University have been asked to withdraw from classes following publication of the results of Christmas examinations, university officials announced early this week. The total number of students affected comprises five per cent of the total registration.

Of 700 students registered in Arts, 56 have been plucked. Nine of these were freshmen and 34 were women, 21 of them from the first year. In the Science faculty 25 of a total registration of 640 were expelled. Eleven of these were freshmen and 14 sophomores, In the Medical faculty nine students out of 290 were asked to leave, these nine comprising four freshmen, four third year students and one from the fifth year.

Professors to Report

At the University of Toronto, the Council of the Faculty of Arts has asked professors to submit, not later than the Council's February meeting, the names of students of all years whose work during the Fall Term has been found to be unsatisfactory.

The Council has asked for these names in accordance with Sub-section (3) of Section 17 of the revised National War Services Regulations which requires that any student who fails to pass any term or annual examination shall be called out under these Regulations. No regular term examinations are given by the University, although term tests in some subjects are held at the discretion of the individual department.

Professor H. A. Innis President of Association

Professor Harold A. Innis, head of the Department of Political Economy, University of Toronto, has been elected President of the Economic History Association, in succession to Professor E. F. Gay of Harvard University, President Cody announced recently.

The Economic History Association recently held its second annual meeting in Williamstown, Mass. Dr. Innis presented a paper there on "The Newspaper in Economic Development."

NEWSFRONTS

Moscow—Russian troops advanced at rate of one mile an hour in the last 24, to drive within 75 miles of Rostov in their effort to trap the German armies anchored in the Caucasus.

Algiers — British troops have been driven from the Jebel Azzag heights dominating their positions on the road to Mateur after holding them for only one day, it was reported yesterday.

Melbourne—Government sources here reported yesterday that a huge Japanese force was concentrated at Rabaul.

RECREATION MATERIAL

Recreation material ordered by the women students who took the fall course in Recreation Leadership, is now available at the University Press.

COTC Ski Troop Formed at Alberta

Edmonton, Jan. 7 — (CUP) — The University of Alberta is forming a C.O.T.C. ski troop this term, in which a group selected from the best skiers of the university will be given military training as ski troopers in place of the regular C.O.T.C. training.

Throughout the winter the men will receive instruction in the military way of skiing, as precise a drill movement as infantry squad drill. In addition to military ski discipline, such elementary movements as "slope skis" and "stack skis" will be taught, advancing to more difficult manoeuvres such as cross-country marches with full pack and rifle, and tactics under combat conditions.

The troop has been limited to those who have skis and can ski, although those who join do not have to be expert skiers, as it has been found that the downhill and acrobatic type of skiing, as practised by civilians, is of little use in the army.

CUP Conference Held at Queen's

Measures for increasing the efficiency of transmission of news and features between Canadian university newspapers were discussed at a national conference of the Canadian University Press held at Kingston Dec. 19-22.

Representatives of seven college papers attended the conference. Michael O'Mara, Editor-in-Chief of The Varsity, president paper of the CUP, was in the chair. Other delegates of The Varsity attending were Edgar Simon, Managing Editor; Jean Southworth, Women's New Editor; Harriet Leigh-Mallory, CUP Editor; Vernon Lang, Assistant Managing Editor and Marion Jack Salter, Assistant Women's News Editor.

Discussions at the conference centered around a report presented by H. Dent Hodgson, former Editor-in-Chief of The Varsity, who had completed a nation-wide tour of CUP member papers a month earlier and had prepared detailed information on the general state of the CUP and some recommendations for its improvement.

The possibility of a scheme of national advertising for college papers was discussed and a committee was appointed to investigate the feasibility of such a scheme.

It was decided to amend the constitution of the CUP to admit papers to affiliate membership which publish less frequently than once each week. This amendment was moved with a view to making CUP facilities available to French-Canadian college publications.

It was also decided to establish the CUP as a clearing-house for aspirant college journalists and that a list of all who wish to make journalism a career be made available to the professional press, together with letters of reference from the editor of the college publication of each applicant.

Member papers sending delegates to the conference were The Xaverian, The McGill Daily, The Queen's Journal, The Varsity, The Western Gazette, The Manitoban and The Sheaf.

Joint Army-Navy Program Makes Sweeping Changes In American Universities

(The following article is a roundup of the general features of the policy regarding Universities which was announced by the United States Government toward the end of last term. Lack of space in today's issue prevents the inclusion of more details of the policy; such details, however, will be published at an early date.)

By Rex Wilson

Sweeping changes in United States college life were announced by the War Manpower Commission on Dec. 17. Under a new joint Army-Navy program the educational careers of approximately 250,000 male undergraduates will be affected.

The new plan is the outcome of long debate and discussion between educationalists and representatives of the armed services, and came just as classes in many colleges were graduating under accelerated programs. The plan will serve the primary purpose of placing the full educational facilities of college plants at the disposal of the military authorities who will seek to use them to the greatest immediate advantage in winning the war. A secondary purpose of the plan will be to sustain financially many of the smaller colleges which were faced with c closing due to the lowering of the draft age.

The plan, as announced in a joint statement by Henry L. Stimson, Secretary of War, and Col. Frank Knox, Secretary of the Navy, is expected to get under way about Feb. 1 "on a broad, democratic basis." The Army and Navy will shortly enter into contracts with selected schools to provide courses prescribed by the respective services for the instruction of qualified young men in academic and military subjects.

Meanwhile a committee of college presidents under the chairmanship of Owen D. Young of the General Electric Co. is meeting in Washington to select the colleges to be used under the joint Army-Navy plan.

No direct action has yet been taken under the plan and American students remain in a state of uncertainty. Most university authorities are advising men to remain in college until called, pointing out that the more education a man has the better his chances would be of obtaining the type of training he wants under the new plan.

Colleges are also making provision for refunding part of their fees to men called up by the forces.

The plans themselves have been viewed with dissatisfaction by college heads and Secretary Stimson admits that liberal education as now enjoyed by able-bodied men of draft age would be destroyed, but he promised it would not suffer in the long run. Comment in The Harvard Crimson, which brought out a special issue when the plan was announced, says that the final form of the plan is essentially as the military desired it.

FACILITIES FOR CHEST X-RAY NOW SUPPLIED FOR STUDENTS

First Year Students Especially Urged by Health Director to Take Examination Aiding Prevention of Tuberculosis

LIMITED TIME AVAILABLE

Opportunity for an X-ray of the chest for tuberculosis has been provided the student body for the second time by the University Health Service in co-operation with the Tuberculosis Prevention Division of the provincial Department of Public Health.

Due to the heavy demands of industry, the equipment will be available for a limited period and examinations must be completed by Jan. 15. Schedule for the examination by faculties and other instructions. No further opportunity for X-ray examination will be available this year.

Appointments must be made by students at the office of their faculty or college registrar, where the students will be provided with envelopes to be filled out and presented to the X-ray attendant.

Examinations are being conducted in the East Block of the Parliament Buildings.

The University of Toronto was the first Canadian university to institute these tests in February, 1942. Other universities, among them Queen's and Western, have since adopted X-ray examinations.

All students who did not take the test last year are urged to apply for appointments on the days assigned them, Lt.-Col. R. W. I. Urquhart, director of the University Health Service, said yesterday. First Year students are particularly urged to take the examinations.

Dr. Urquhart pointed out that last year's tests revealed a small number of positive cases a few of whom had to be removed to a sanitarium immediately.

Former Managing Editor Returns to Canada

Pilot Officer Norman Altstedter, Managing Editor of The Varsity in 1940, has returned to Canada.

Leaving the University in 1940 PO. Altstedter joined the R.C.A.F. and proceeded overseas the next year.

For 14 months he was navigating Hampden bombers and in his spare time, writing a squadron column for the Air Force publication "Wings Abroad."

PO. Altstedter, on official business for the R.C.A.F., declined to comment on his overseas' experiences beyond saying he was in a torpedo squadron operating over the North Sea.

It has been announced that PO. Altstedter is one of a group of Canadians who have arrived from overseas to start a torpedo squadron in Canada, the first to be formed on this side of the Atlantic.

Altstedter's predecessor as Managing Editor, Lloyd G. McDonald, is also with the R.C.A.F. overseas with the rank of Pilot Officer.

President Going To Ottawa For Universities Conference With Dominion Officials

Academic Heads and Labour Minister to Discuss Needs of War in Relation to Student Enrolment and Requirements

WILL RETURN SUNDAY

President H. J. Cody will lead a delegation of academic heads of the University of Toronto to Ottawa tonight for a meeting of Dominion Government and Canadian University officials being held to consider the relationship between military necessity and academic enrolment and standards.

Labour Minister Humphrey Mitchell is scheduled to address the University delegates and it is understood he may outline to the meeting possible changes in wartime higher education.

Forthcoming deliberations were termed by Dr. Cody earlier this week "highly important to the future of the country."

Accompanying the President to Ottawa tonight as U. of T. delegates will be Dean S. Beatty of the Faculty of Arts; Dean G. S. Brett of the School of Graduate Studies; Principal M. W. Wallace of University College; Professor Chester Martin, Head of the Department of History; and Professor H. A. Innis, Head of the Department of Political Economy.

Representing the Federated Arts Colleges will be Principal W. T. Brown of Victoria College; Provost F. H. Cosgrave of Trinity College, and Father T. P. McLaughlin, Superior of St. Michael's College.

A. B. Fennell, Registrar of the University, will accompany the delegation in his capacity of Secretary of the Universities' Conference.

Lt.-Col. H. H. Madill, Officer Commanding the University of Toronto Contingent, Canadian Officers' Training Corps, will travel to Ottawa for a Sunday gathering of heads of C.O.T.C.'s.

It is expected that the other Toronto delegates will return Sunday.

1ST BN., ARTILLERY WING

There will be a voluntary parade of the Artillery Wing at University Ave. Armouries on Saturday, 9 Jan., 1943, at 1400 hours.

Conference Report Given to Dr. Cody

Report of the Staff-Student Conference, concluded late last term, is now under consideration by President H. J. Cody of the University of Toronto.

A delegation of three students and two staff members presented the Report to the President and Registrar A. B. Fennell following the conclusion of the Conference.

Members of the delegation were: Professor Barker Fairley, Professor H. Wasteneys, Tom Nixon, Jim Weld and Bryant Kassirer.

It is believed possible that Dr. Cody will acquaint delegates to tomorrow's Universities' Conference at Ottawa of some of the suggestions embodied in the Report.

Medicine Professor Dies During Holidays

Dr. Jabez Henry Elliott, professor of the History of Medicine at the University and president of the American Association of the History of Medicine, died at his residence here Dec. 18.

Internationally known for research work in internal medicine, Dr. Elliott was the physician-in-charge of diseases of the chest at the Hospital for Sick Children and St. Michael's Hospital.

Born in Hampton, Durham County, he graduated in medicine from the University of Toronto in 1897, winning the gold medal and the George Brown Memorial scholarship and leading his class in medicine each year.

In 1900 Dr. Elliott was a member of an expedition sent to Nigeria so study malaria and other diseases.

A.R.P. Lectures Taken by Coeds

"Better Co-operation with the Warden" is the purpose of the series of lectures being given to University students, A. J. Butlin, University A.R.P. head, told The Varsity.

Dr. R. J. Manion of the Civil Defence headquarters at Ottawa wrote President Cody and asked that as many students as possible take the training. The matter was brought before the Deans of Women of all the Colleges who decided that, with a few exceptions, these lectures would be compulsory to all co-eds.

The exceptions include the Hospital Aids (who already have rigorous hours), The Canadian Red Cross Corps, O.C.E., The Teachers Course and first term A.R.P.

The first lecture was given by Mr. Butlin on "Organization," and by Mr. D. Tennant, chief engineer of the Dominion Bridge Co., on "High Explosive Bombs." The second lecture was delivered by Dr. J. H. Couch, Senior Demonstrator in Surgery of the Faculty of Medicine, on "First Aid," while the third talk will be given by Professor F. R. Lorriman of the Department of Chemistry, on "Incendary Bombs and Gas."

The girls who take A.R.P. this term are to consider it as the introduction to their course. The men will receive the training as part of their C.O.T.C. curriculum.

V.C.F. Conference Starts Tomorrow

Tonight will mark the beginning of a three-day missionary conference to be held on this campus under Varsity Christian Fellowship auspices. This evening's meeting is to be held in Student House, 624 Spadina Ave. The conference will continue with speakers and discussion groups through Saturday afternoon and evening, and concludes on Sunday with a tea at 4:45 p.m. in the School of Missions, 97 St. George St.

Notable among those who are taking part is Rev. Zacharias P. Carles, B.A., L.Th., S.C.I., a refugee from his homeland, Spain. Mr. Carles, a brilliant scholar, is a graduate of the Spanish Baptist Theological Seminary, with degrees as well from the Universities of Madrid and Barcelona. Prevented by the Civil War from taking advantage of a large Government scholarship, he hopes to return to his work in Spain following the war. He will address tonight's meetings.

Saturday afternoon at 3:00 p.m. Rev. J. E. Mallis, missionary from India, will speak; discussion groups are to follow, led by missionaries from China, Africa and South America, after which Mr. Douglas Percy of the Sudan Mission, will deal with the topic "What Have We to Offer?" In the evening Mr. Percy will show coloured movies of missionary life in Nigeria; this meeting takes place at 7:45 in the lecture room of Knox Presbyterian Church.

The final address of the conference is to be brought by Dr. Northcote Deck, who served for 19 years as a missionary in the Solomon Islands, and is well-known here as a Bible-conference speaker. Miss Molly McIntyre, soloist from Cooke's Church, Toronto, will sing. "We feel that we have been very fortunate in obtaining a group of speakers so well qualified to present the missionary challenge of our day," Dan Firth, V.C.F. president, told The Varsity.

Return To What?

Back to the campus this week came the students of the University of Toronto, rested—or exhausted—from the holiday season, and prepared for the grind of another term. Outwardly, things are very little changed from their December condition. But under the surface, where all autumn there seethed the possibility of sudden and drastic change, the cauldron of contingency is approaching the boiling point.

President Cody and a 10-man delegation leave here tonight to attend a meeting with Government officials concerning the academic future of the country. What proposals Government spokesmen will put forward, and the degree of opposition which will be brought forward by delegates from the Universities if such proposals are unpalatable remain to be heard. But it is impossible to overlook the fact that we seem to stand on the very brink of revelation of what the Government actually intends toward Universities. And after months of hints and rumours, interspersed with trial balloons and the necessary hot air with which to inflate and elevate them, even bad news in this regard may come as a certain relief.

We Aren't Really Angry...

While The Varsity relaxed through the holidays, some of our contemporaries disported themselves on one of their favourite stamping-grounds. Returning to take up the editorial quill with the built-in cudgel yesterday, we ran into a Globe and Mail editorial lifting the old wail that universities are in grave danger of becoming havens for draft-dodgers. And delving further into the pile of scrap paper on the desk, we were amused by a charmingly inaccurate diatribe in NEWS all about imaginery students in pre-war Hollywood-type universities, entitled "Low-brow High-brows."

First of all, The Globe and Mail. Here we find that journal bemoaning the fact that university students have been draft-free to date and pointing to the obvious injustice that this freedom is traceable to students' parents' ability to pay his tuition fees. That a discrepancy here exists we cannot deny, but we suggest that it is unfair to lay the fault at the door of universities already doing all they can to provide bursaries for needy scholars.

In addition, we believe that The Globe and Mail has fallen victim to an over-prevalent fallacy in implying that to draft artsmen would assist recruiting very materially. Total registration in the Faculty of Arts this year on the Toronto campus, exclusive of Teachers' Classes and Occasional students, amounts to just under 2,600, of which, one assumes, about half are women. (Important to remember is that this figure includes some science students.) And this is the largest University in Canada. The Globe and Mail refers—with technical accuracy but with deplorable lack of ability to interpret statistics—to Arts registration as "by far the largest in number," as compared with, for example, School, where 1,378 students are registered, of which fewer than half-a-dozen are women.

The Globe and Mail has, as is its custom, an apparently sound thesis with which to begin; but we believe that close examination reveals flaws in its superstructure which cause the intelligent reader to doubt the authenticity and sincerity of the whole.

And now for the more enjoyable task of considering the phenomenon of Miss Robinson's publication barking up the same tree of knowledge as is the organ of her former employers.

R. E. Porter has turned in an amusing—except that it is insulting to the intellect—article designed to tickle the underprivileged intelligences of NEWS' regular readers, by complaining that universities are not for poor men and are becoming progressively undemocratic.

There are several gems of inaccuracy crammed into the short space of less than one page; and we regret that space will not permit reprinting more of them. We chose as the most striking example of the writer's inimitable style: "I am told that there is more cheating at examinations than there was ten years ago, more disappearance of library books, cruder jokes in the college papers."

On the first point: the Registrar of the University told us yesterday that he "had no reason to believe" that such was the case, and said that statistics of those caught cheating on finals showed no such increase.

On the second point: the Librarian of the University remarked: "I don't know what he based that remark on," and added that actually there were less thefts of Library books than 10 years ago.

On the third point: we speak with some feeling when we say that the jokes appearing in college papers are the same jokes that appeared there ten years ago, and ten years before that.

We humbly suggest that Mr. Porter has been misinformed.

Black Magic

Dr. George Washington Carver of Tuskegee has died, one of the world's great men.

The Negro scientist, sometimes called "The Ebony Pasteur," was the son of slaves, and all his life he worked to free his own people and as many others as he could, from a slavery that was almost as bad as that his parents had known, poverty in the midst of plenty.

His problem was that of making the natural resources of the south profitable to the people. He is said to have discovered a thousand uses for the peanut, among them the peanut-oil massage for the after-treatment of infantile paralysis. He found new uses for the coloured clays of the south, and he advanced the methods of agriculture.

The world his given him honour and wealth, but he put both, together with his whole life, into the task of bridging the gap between the serfdom he was born too late to suffer, and the equality of his people he died too soon to see fully recognized.

For Your Protection

The X-ray test for tuberculosis now being offered by the University Health Service in conjuction with the Department of Public Health give students an opportunity which may not be repeated for some time to safeguard their own health and the health of those around them. The test is being given without cost to students, the entire financial burden being borne by the University Health Service.

The heavy demands of industry make it impossible for the University to maintain the X-ray facilities any longer than 10 days, so it is essential that the examinations be concluded by Jan. 15. The schedule by faculties which will be published makes it possible to examine 400 students a day, giving ample opportunity for those who did not take the test last year to be examined. All of these students are urged to make appointments with their faculty or college resistrar without delay.

Last year's tests disclosed a number of positive cases, including a half-dozen students who had to be rushed to a sanitarium as they were dangerous to those around them. For their own protection and the protection of all persons with whom they come in contact, it is essentional that all students take the X-ray examination.

ART MUSIC Drama

The Good & The Bad

Toronto Symphony Orchestra

Last Tuesday night, the Toronto Symphony Orchestra, Sir Ernest MacMillan, and Ida Krehm opened the Toronto music season for 1943 with a bang. The bang was Brahm's First Piano Concerto, which Miss Krehm played as perfectly as anyone could have demanded.

The orchestra was not far behind her either, and the resulting union was something for Toronto to remember with pride.

John Weinzweig's The Enchanted Hill (capturing the moods of de la Mare's poem) failed to capture me. It sounded like the background for a film, a technique in which Mr. Weinzweig has made himself adept.

Tschaikowsky wrote a trio (opus 50) "In memory of a great artist" and this has been arranged for orchestra by Rapee. The arrangement was needed, for the trio just scarcely comes off, but Rapee was not as successful as he should have been. He started off well (and the composer had given him beautiful material) but he grew too cloyingly sentimental.

Yehudi Menuhin

A greater disappointment than last night's recital by Menuhin could scarcely be imagined. For a person with the reputation he has acquired to play such a program, and so poorly, comes as a shock.

The only part of his recital at which cavil cannot be made was the second movement of the Mendelssohn concerto. In it, he retained a satiny tone which he never allowed to cloy.

The trouble with a great deal of the music (noted mostly in the Dvorak Sonatina and the group of short numbers with which it closed) was the amount of schmalz which Menuhin spread over it. The result was a sticky, formless, goo which was not music. As a supreme example of this technique, the Bach Air may be cited; it sounded fully as much like Bach as it did like Kreisler.

The rest of the program was a display of technique, and the fury signified nothing. The Enesco Sonata No. 3 was an attempt to make a lone violin play the incidental music to The Tempest. The resulting storm in a tea cup may be imagined.

The audience liked most of the program, but perhaps it was only fooling itself. The out of tune notes were what bothered me most, along with an annoying habit of sliding into notes from a previous position and using a bowing technique which often proved that the strings really were catgut.

NEIL MACDONALD.

ODE TO A NEW YEAR'S CELEBRANT

(OR)

HOTBEDS OF EVIL

Your ambulations circular
Do not mean you're tubercular;
Your paces somewhat parabolic
Are merely symtoms alcoholic.

But on New Year's afternoon
Sobriety comes but all too soon,
When contemplations academic
Are displeasing to the stomick;
So, feeling anti-democratic,
We hide ourselves up in the attic.

PUBLISHER'S FELLOWSHIP OFFEREO FOR COMPETITION

A fellowship of the value of twelve hundred dollars is being offered for competition to American and Canadian college students intending to become professional writers by Dood, Mead and Company, American publishing house. The subject for competition will be a novel, the winning manuscript to be published by the company. Competitors must be regularly enrolled students of at least two years standing.

The award will be made on the basis of promise shown in the work submitted, although a complete manuscript is not required. There are no limitations as to subject, but the preferred length will be 60,000 to 100,000 words. Application forms for this award may be obtained at the officers of the college registrars.

WYMILWOOD MUSICALE

The first Wymilwood Musicale of 1943 will be held on Sunday, Jan. 10, at 9 p.m., and will feature the second Toronto appearance of Helmut Blume, noted Swedish pianist. Mr. Blume was a pupil in Europe of Paul Hindemith who said of him, "Helmut Blume will be a very valuable addition to the musical life of Canada."

Mr. Blume's program will include:
Bach-Tausig—Toccata and Fugue, D minor
Brahms—Sonata F minor
Debussy—Children's Corner

Students of all faculties welcome.

EVANGELINE SHOPS

SPEAKING OF SPORT

By Roger Conant

IN A RUT?

From the drop of the first slug of '43 the ole squeeze play on sports space begins all over again—however its a year of rationing anyway, so we'll try to ration the hot air this year. Remember, its not a promise but just one of those New Year's resolutions that are conjured up over the old festive bowl.

When one begins the old grind again one may be prone to reminisce and when we fall into that state hereabouts one takes a startled jump forward and perceives on even closer examination that the fall of '42 was one of repetition. Yes, it seems that the mortgage company idea has even permeated the minds of the college students—for, lo and behold, practically every championship copped a year ago has a repeat performance.

In the first few days—forgotten in the freshmen's confusion of initiation—Trinity started her climb for a repeat at the Reed Trophy by grabbing the golf honours out at the Woodbine assoult course. Then Vic eame up with the next bill of fare by means of Messrs. Saba, Waugh, Bryce and associates to retain the Victoria Tennis Club Cup. Keeping up with custom, Engineering hordes swept the outdoor track scene. Likewise School amassed more Reed points when their Junior swim squad outsplashed their big brothers to become all-campus champs. Still keeping on the School vein we find that the Dafoe Cup remains in the little red schoolhouse for another year, guarded diligently by a bunch of vociferous lacrosse adicts. The long volleyball road finally eame to an end a few hours before '42's curfew as the perennial holders from the College Street Aeademy of Bicuspid Butchery found their way across the snow-piled campus to take their annual toll.

In the oudoor ball games, if memory is still retained—and certain people will have nightmares for some time—the leather pouncers had a tough job finding a winner. In fact the Arts Faculty Cup was declared a tie between Trinity and last year's holder—School. Then of course the Mulock Mug was in danger of a "no decision" sign as five teams were still in the running with an ice-bound gridiron awaiting them. However, Vic did a repeat on '41 when they tacked another shield on the silverware.

Well, despite everything, including harvesters and exams and the C.O.T.C., it was a pretty fair fall of athletics, and if Mac, Steve, Hec, Charlie, Chesty and the many others that go to aid in the handling, serve up as good a dish this spring we can be mighty proud of our sports program.

Trinity and SPS I Share Soccer Mug

Althought badly bruised and generally pushed around by old man winter, the final game of the soccer playoffs was eventually staged before the end of 1942. But the best the field of sand, snow and ice would allow was a scoreless tie for the finalists—Trinity and S.P.S. I. Thus for the second time in three years the Arts Faculty Cup, emblematic of inter-faculty soccer supremancy will be held jointly.

Although the elder Engineers were favourites in some quarters to finish on top, the Trinity team deserves much eredit for an uphill fight to its shared success. Winning Group I, .S.P.S eliminated Emmanuel in their only prefinal game, but the Red and Black had to discard Meds and S.P.S. II in two hard games—one on snow—the other in mud.

School played most of the final game lacking three key players and during that time Trinity threatened to snatch the teapot. However, at full strength for the last 15 minutes the Blue and Gold turned on the heat and it was only the untiring efforts of Max Clarkson and the superior net-minding of John Riley that kept them off the scoresheet.

Dents Cop Cup In Volleyball Final

For the second consecutive year the Faculty of Dentistry can look with pride at the shining Victoria Staff Cup as it nestles sedately in their showcase. For the Dents "A" did it again just before Christmas without the aid of Jack Mullet but by means of a well-balanced and powerful sextet that swept all opposition aside.

On the first rung of the playoff ladder Jr. S.P.S. liquidated St. Mike's "B" 15-9 and 15-4. On December 14 the winners eliminated their big brothers, Sr. S.P.S., by 15-11 and 15-13 scores. Then in a thrilling and surprising match Trinity "A" defeated Sr. U.C. 15-12, 1-15 and 15-10. Then for the semi-finals the eventual cup-winners put out the Trinity sextet with 8-15, 15-9 and 15-10 scores.

Thus Dents "A" and Jr. School entered the last round after a strenuous playoff schedule. The Engineers began strongly and managed to take the first game 14-16 but the Molarmen came rigbt back and walked away with it in 15-9 and 15-8 games to snatch the mug for their satchel.

Athletic Wing Idle During Holidays

Activities in the athletic wing of Hart House usually take a nosedive over the holidays, and this year was no exception, the staff in the Athletic Office informed The Varsity yesterday.

The two-week layoff was used to straighten things around to usher in a new sport season. After the University Settlement Party on Friday, Dec. 17, the pool was drained, cleaned and refilled (the last operation was considered essential). Mr. Rimmer utilized the breathing space to straighten up the P.T. attendance records. Airforcemen at the University were the most consistent muscle-benders during the holiday.

For the second year the Graduate New Year's dance was cancelled, so the wing was even "deader than usual." But there are strains of new beginnings —with the nightly practices of the '43 edition of the Varsity Blues.

There was a constant stream of applicants for Toronto Ski Club memberships, about 200 of these have been recorded.

Ross Workman, manager of the Stadium, is quite optomistic about the skating this season which began just before New Years. So were the 2,000 patrons who crowded the ice last Saturday night.

NO IMMEDIATE RESTRICTIONS FOR ARTS SELECTIVE SERVICE HEAD TELLS DELEGATES

Mid-Term Exam Casualties Slated For Selective Service Decide College Faculties

Over 400 Canadian University Students Who Failed Christmas Exams May Expect Draft Notices; Decision on Toronto Students Will Be Made in Early February, Say Local College Authorities

MANY IN OTHER CENTRES "GO ACTIVE"

By The Canadian University Press

Names of more than 400 Canadian university students have been forwarded to national war service boards following publication of Christmas examination results and term marks. Call-up notices for many of these students are already in the mail while others have already enlisted for active service.

Largest group of students required to leave as yet are 152 from the University of British Columbia, which has an enrollment of about 3,000 undergraduates. The University of Manitoba, with approximately the same enrolment, has asked 97 to withdraw and has warned others that suspension is imminent unless their work improves.

Highest percentage of student "casualties" is reported from Queen's, where 90 students—five per cent of the total registration — have been dropped. Seventy-six University of Alberta students have been instructed to report for compulsory military training Wednesday. Eleven freshmen at the Ontario Agricultural College at Guelph, comprising one-seventh of the first year registration, have been asked to leave, but will be permitted to return next fall "providing they fulfill National Selective Service regulations," according to Dr. G. I. Christie, president of O.A.C.

Several universities have taken no action as yet. A meeting of the Council of the Faculty of Arts at Toronto in February will deal with cases of Arts students reported as unsatisfactory by their professors. Other students are being considered by their respective faculties. Examinations at the University of Saskatchewan fall between Jan. 18 and 23, with term work playing an important part in the gradings.

President Smith Releases Resolution

Final draft of a Universities Conference resolution adopted at Ottawa Saturday was released by Sidney E. Smith, President of the Conference and President of the University of Manitoba, on his arrival in Toronto en route home yesterday.

Salient points of the resolution were:

1. Appreciation of the Government's policy with regard to the maintenance of higher education.
2. Determination to co-operate in the Government's war effort and make further adjustments as war exigencies may demand.
3. Gratification respecting a number of statements embodied in the address of Arthur MacNamar, Director of National Selective Service, in his address to Conference delegates Saturday.
4. Assurance that the Universities will co-operate in making higher education "worthy of the name."
5. Recommendation that in the event of emergency necessitating revision of manpower policies by the Government, a special Conference session be held.
6. Appreciation of governmental recognition of the importance of adequately-trained teachers, especially for the secondary schools, and suggestion that students in liberal arts courses wishing to enter the teaching profession be encouraged to do so and not be called out for military service.

O.T. Graduate Heads Rehabilitation Centre

Deborah Craig, who graduated with a diploma in Occupational Therapy last year, has been appointed head of the Rehabilitation Centre, Glen Eagles, Pethshire, Scotland.

Miss Craig, a native of Scotland, was visiting her grandmother in Toronto when war broke out. Not being able to return, she entered the Occupational Therapy course. In October last year, she proceeded overseas, along with her sister, in the R.C.A.M.C.

The two girls, nieces of Mrs. H. J. Cody, are probably the youngest occupational therapists on active service.

Arts and Letters Club

The Arts and Letters Club of the Medical Society cordially invite the students and staff of all faculties and colleges to its meeting at Wymilwood Tuesday night, 6:30 to 8 p.m.

The Medical Society has endeavoured to bring the best speakers possible on the most varied subjects. This session we are attempting to secure guests of both local and international importance and to ensure the permanent foundation of the club as the University's Arts and Letters Club.

We hope that in the months and years to come this attempt of the Medical Society to broaden the outlook of Medical Students will come to embrace students of all faculties and mak a really worthwhile contribution to the extracurricular life of the campus.

CONFERENCE RESOLUTION

Following resolution of the Universities' Conference was released yesterday by Dr. Sidney E. Smith, President of the Conference and President of the University of Manitoba:

Resolution adopted unanimously at a meeting of the National Conference of Canadian Universities held in Ottawa on Saturday, January 9th, 1943.

The National Conference of Canadian Universities wishes to express (1) its appreciation of the enlightened policy of the Government of Canada with regard to the maintenance of higher education; (2) the determination of its member institutions to co-operate with the Government in the prosecution of the war in every possible way, and to make any further adjustments in their work that the exigencies of the war effort may demand; (3) its gratification in respect of the statement of the Director of National Selective Service that the Government recognizes (a) the value for the war effort and national welfare of those creative forces which flow from sound education, and (b) the worth of the war service already rendered by the Universities, and (c) that "if the Universities will ruthlessly weed out the incompetent . . . students, . . . continue to require that all students take their military training while at the Universities," and that, "if it can be understood that, when the requirements of the Armed Forces or the industrial war effort so necessitate, National Selective Service would be authorized to call up students even though that interrupts their courses, no immediate further restrictions would be necessary."

The Conference wishes to assure the Government that it will co-operate whole-heartedly in this effort to make higher education worthy of the name.

The Conference recommends that the Executive Committee of the Conference keep in close touch with the Government and that in the event of any emergency calling for a revision of the man-power policy of the Government in relation to the Universities, a special meeting of the Conference be called.

The Conference wishes to express also its appreciation of the recognition by the Government of the importance of adequately trained teachers especially in the secondary schools, and would urge that students in liberal arts who wish to enter the teaching profession, be encouraged to do so, and that those doing so be not called for military service.

(Passages of the resolution printed in quotation marks are reproduced from the address of Arthur MacNamara, Director of National Selective Service, to the delegates to the Conference.)

Hart House Theatre Closed 6 Months; Vic Music Club Production Cancelled

While the Hart House Theatre is closed during the next six months it will be administered for public lectures by a three-man committee composed of Professor Gilbert Norwood, chairman of the Board of Syndics; J. R. Gilley, Warden of the House; and Col. A. D. LePan, Superintendent of Buildings and Grounds, The Varsity learned yesterday.

This administering committee was selected by the Board of Syndics in consultation with the President. It will be in charge of granting the use of the theatre to groups wishing to use it for some simple purpose such as a general meeting or a public lecture.

Inventory of all properties, scenery and other equipment belonging to the theatre has been taken by the retiring manager, Norman Nichol, and they have been stored away until such time as the theatre reopens.

Production of Gilbert and Sullivan's "H.M.S. Pinafore" has been cancelled by the Victoria College Music Club, Doug Stewart, the club's president, told The Varsity yesterday. The first definite fatality traceable to the closing of Hart House Theatre, withdrawal of the club's production is also to some extent due to lack of time for rehearsing under the extra pressure of term examinations this year.

Stewart said that the club had tried to obtain other halls, but found them rushed by other groups, many of them affected also by the theatre's closing.

Although the major production is definitely off for this year, the club will continue with other activities and may attempt some form of small production later. The club's annual dance is still on the schedule, Stewart said.

Two Piano Team At Sunday Concert

Toronto's popular piano team, Scott Malcolm and Reginald Godden, will give the programme at the Sunday Evening Concert on Jan. 17 next at 9 p.m. in the Great Hall of Hart House. The programme will be as follows:

Bach—Prelude from the Sixth Sonata for Violin
(arr. by Malcolm-Godden)

Bach—Sheep May Safely Graze
(An arrangement for two pianos by Mary Howe of a soprano aria from the secular cantata "My Hearts is in the Merry Chase")

Bach—Tocatta and Fugue in D minor

Saint-Saëns—Variations on a Theme of Beethoven
(arr. by Malcolm-Godden)

Manuel Infante—Sentimiento

Debussy—Fêtes

Arensky—Reverie

Paganini-Liszt—La Campanella
(arr. by Malcolm-Godden)

Representatives of the various colleges and faculties are requested to call at the Warden's office between 11:30 and 1:30 p.m. today (Monday, Jan. 11) for their allotments of tickets for the concert.

Every member is urged if he finds he cannot use his ticket to return it to the hall porter's desk before 1 p.m. on Thursday next, so that it may be given out to one of those on the waiting list.

Says "Full Consultation" With University Heads To Precede Any Changes

Government Never Planned Discontinuing Arts Courses or Excluding Physically Fit Students from Courses Not Directly Connected with War Effort, Arthur MacNamara Tells Universities Conference

MILITARY TRAINING "REASONABLY" SATISFACTORY

Ottawa, Jan. 10—(CUP)—No basic change in government policy regarding university arts courses will be taken without full consultation between government officials and university authorities, Arthur MacNamara, Director of National Selective Service, assured delegates to the Universities Conference here yesterday.

Mr. MacNamara also told 40 officials of Canadian universities that no call-up in the middle of an academic year was projected.

The Selective Service director asserted "dogmatically" that Canada's manpower needs are not so pressing that they require anyone under 16 "or perhaps even 18 years" who can profit from continued education to sacrifice it during wartime.

"We need today and we shall need even more after the war not only men and women trained to do particular jobs competently, but men and women who have been educated," Mr. MacNamara said. "We must therefore strike a balance . . ."

"The greatest asset of our nation is its younger generation," he continued. "On its quality our whole future depends and we must make every effort to maintain our educational standards to ensure maintenance of its quality.

"We cannot afford under the stress of war-time conditions, to overlook the problems of post-war reconstruction in which, I am sure we will all agree, education will play so vital a part."

Mr. MacNamara pointed out the possibility of further restrictions in arts courses but emphasized that "no basic change in policy will be undertaken except in the common sense way after full consultation with university authorities."

"At the worst it may be hoped that male students not liable or not fit for military service, female students and a steadily-increasing number of discharged men, will maintain the student population at a level sufficient to permit maintenance of staffs and educational standards."

Mr. MacNamara gave unofficial assurance that if the universities "ruthlessly weed out" incompetent and mediocre students, if they continue the policy of compulsory training and if it is understood that National Selective Service is authorized to call up students for military service or essential war work in case of emergency even though their courses are interrupted, no further restriction is immediately necessary.

He declared that the present military training regulations are meeting with "reasonable satisfaction of all concerned."

The Selective Service Director referred to suggestions that the Government planned to recommend to require discontinuance "at least for physically fit male students" enrolled in arts courses not directly concerned with the war as having "no foundation in fact."

"They do not arise from official consideration of any such plan by the government or any of its agencies," he said.

(L. Austin Wright—then Assistant Director of National Selective Service—released to newspapers an advance copy of a speech he was scheduled to deliver at Kingston Oct. 17 to the Alumni of Queen's University. The speech—never actually delivered, but

Tuberculosis Tests This Week Only

Out of 2,060 students taking the X-ray examination for tuberculosis last February, 14 positive cases were discovered, six of them open cases necessitating immediate removal to a sanitarium, Lt.-Col. R. W. I. Urquhart, director of the University Health Service, announced last week.

X-ray examinations for students who did not take the test last year are being offered this week by the University Health Service in conjunction with the Division of Tuberculosis Prevention of the Ontario Department of Public Health.

Apparatus for the test will be available for a limited period and all tests must be completed by the end of the week, Dr. Urquhart said. Appointments may be made at college and faculty registrars' offices where students will receive envelopes to be filled in and presented to the attendant when the examination is taken. Examinations are being carried on by faculties, with special times being allowed to each.

Four hundred examinations a day can be given with the existing facilities, Dr. Urquhart announced. Heavy demands of industry make it impossible for students to get another opportunity to have the X-ray test taken.

Full instructions regarding the examinations are printed elsewhere in today's Varsity.

Miss M. Wrong Speaks on Africa

Miss Margaret Wrong, the first Dean of Women of University College, is visiting Toronto, and will address groups of students on Monday and Tuesday of this week.

"Africa and the New Order" will be Miss Wrong's topic when she speaks on Monday at 5 o'clock in the Board Room of Trinity College under the auspices of the Student Christian Movement. All students and faculty are invited to attend.

Miss Wrong is at present Secretary of the International Committee which prepares Christian Literature for Africa south of the Sahara.

On Tuesday evening at 7:15, Miss Wrong will address the Women of University College (residence and non-residence) in Falconer House Common Room.

Miss Wrong took her B.A. at Oxford and her M.A. at Toronto, after which she became a member of the History Department. In 1916, she established the Women's Union, and later Argyle House and Hutton House. She is the daughter of Professor G.M. Wrong,

No Change Yet

The news from Ottawa over the weekend was unexpectedly good. The address of the recently-appointed Director of National Selective Service to the delegates to the Universities' Conference at Ottawa Saturday showed intelligent appreciation of the present worth of universities and the value to the nation of future university graduates. It showed, too, a willingness to give universities a relatively free hand in the administration of their affairs under existing manpower regulations, and an unwillingness to place drastic restrictions upon the present work they are doing. It was a speech in almost complete contrast to the now-famous "address-that-was-never-delivered" by L. Austin Wright—a former National Selective Service official—at Kingston last October.

For their part, the university delegates have demonstrated their goodwill and appreciation of the justice of the government stand through the resolution unanimously adopted by the Conference carried on Page 1 of this issue.

In effect the result of the Conference session is that the status quo is retained for the moment, with the mutual stipulation that the situation may change with the tightening of the already-pressing manpower lack. In the meantime, as before, university men of draftable age and medical category remain exempt as long as their academic status justifies such exemption.

The result is extremely satisfactory. The Varsity has already expressed approval of the fairness of the stringent government regulations relating to students and has also urged that no further restriction be imposed without proper consideration and then only under more straightened circumstances than the present ones. Mr. MacNamara has promised such "full consultation" and the Executive of the Conference has been instructed to call a meeting immediately that such steps seem necessary. The Universities and the Government are operating in close harmony on the question and the result of Saturday's session is extremely satisfactory.

P.C. 9566

Today we tardily reprint P.C. 9566, a government regulation placing cast-iron restrictions on the actions of men graduating from technical courses which was announced last month too late for publication in The Varsity then.

Unless such men—if they are able-bodied—volunteer for active service, they will be directed into essential war-work channels by the Department of Labour without opportunity to seek out desired employment for themselves.

In other words, these regulations mark probably the high-water-level to date in the government's attempts to solve the problems attendant upon the manpower shortage. They are extremely strict; but they appear to a large extent justified by the present needs. If the Government were to apply such stiff measures to all the men of Canada equally, there could be no possible complaint.

House Lights Up And Out

Dust will settle on the gilded goblets and the phoney weapons in the property room of the Hart House Theatre during the next six months and students who have a yearning for the fascinating make-believe they represent will be confined to smaller and less elaborate stages and shorter productions until the great central home of campus drama once again opens its doors to University theatregoers. The theatre will not become completely dead and no tired phantom of the opera will be able to find peaceful lodgement there for the University and the Board of Syndics have made the theatre available as a lecture hall for those desiring one so large.

But the more noble, although perhaps less hard-headed, purpose for which it was built will find usage in it no more for half a year, or perhaps more. Hart House Theatre has become a victim of the war and its magic has passed away. But there is a majic which cannot die as long as there is sentient beings on this earth. It will return.

The Board of Syndics, headed by the campus' jovial critic of the annual drama festival, Professor Gilbert Norwood, must have felt sincerely the regret they expressed in their announcement of the closing of the theatre. Their position was an impossible one as they must have seen it. The theatre is a repository of thousands of items of equipment and properties requiring six pages of inventory to list, and that including many etceteras and miscellaneous classifications. To carry on such an institution under a full time schedule without a professional manager is obviously an impossible undertaking. The decision to close it is not surprising.

What is surprising is the equanimity with which this decision was accepted by the dramatic groups of the campus. All expressed themselves shocked at the news of the closing and some sort of new basis for operating the theatre for occasional productions was everywhere hoped for. It was natural, then, to expect the University Drama Committee to spring to action and meet to evolve some such plan to submit to the Board of Syndics. Nothing of the sort happened. The only group to put up a fight was the Victoria College Music Club, an interested party, but not a member of the Committee. The Music Club fought the issue on the extremely narrow ground that the theatre be opened for its production then in rehearsal. It failed and hence has had to abandon its production.

Whether the other clubs failed to act mainly because of lack of interest, all, with the exception of Trinity, having produced their plays, is a charge unpleasant to speculate on. The presidents of all the clubs express surprise that the committee did not make some sort of move. Yet apparently not one of them thought to set the move afoot. They all, however, are undaunted by the closing of the theatre and drama will continue to flourish though dispersed. One must admire their adaptability to unfortunate circumstances even though their lack of initiative appals.

ART of MUSIC Grand

Of The First Magnitude

Wymilwood Musicale

A new pianist has appeared on the Toronto musical scene, and a good thing he is. Helmut Blume is one of the most enjoyable musicians we have recently listened to. He, of course, showed up deficieneies in the Wymilwood piano whieh the more ordinary musician would have been unable to discover, but he definitely is someone whom I want to hear again.

The program opened with the Tausig arrangement of the Baeh D Minor Toccata and Fugue. The Toccata suffered because of the limitations of the piano, but the Fugue showed the remarkable skill of the pianist.

The early Brahms Sonata, opus 5, opens and closes with two rather dull movements but contains three interesting sections in between. The second movement, Andante Expressivo, was the most perfect music on the program. Even the "dull" movements were played, however, so clearly and so intelligently that they were worthwhile.

Debussy's Children's Corner elosed the recital. In the fourth part, Mr. Blume showed a delicacy of touch whieh at least equals that of any other pianist I have heard. And the humour with which he interpreted all these Debussy numbers had to be heard to be appreciated.

The most striking thing about Mr. Blume's playing (outside of his technique, which almost bowls one over) is the remarkable number of tone colours which he extracts from his one instrument. He is so thorough a musician that one approaches his interpretations with the same feeling as that for a new composition: more listening acquaintance is demanded before one can understand all their subtlety. And with all his subtlety, his playing is completely enjoyable on first hearing. Everyone can find something for himself in it.

NEIL MACDONALD

Professor Found Framed

Charges of fraud have been laid against a member of the University staff, Claudius Clasterpast, Associate Professor in the Department of Sculpture and Applied Pipe-Threading. Prof. Clasterpast yesterday applied for a patent on a process which he called Candid Sculpture, submitting models.

The two sculptures sent purported to be candid representations in three dimensions of D. Vinity Batchelder and Les Passmore-Beare, Wycliffe students.

Prof. Clasterpast claimed that these plaster effigies had been made without the knowledge of the subjects. The office was about to grant letters patent when the fraudulent nature of the scheme was revealed by I. T. Verbos, M.P. (Cons.—Estimate).

The facts of the whole case eventually pieced together by police tell how Prof. Casterpast, a University of Toronto air raid warden, had discovered the two frost-whitened bodies along with those of 18 other Wycliffe students who had frozen to death while waiting to be evacuated by the Auxiliary Transport during Wednesday night's blackout.

TORONTONENSIS

The entire production of Torontonensis is being seriously delayed because some biography cards are not yet in the Editor's hands.

The names of those faculties whose cards have not reached the S.A.C. Office by 5 p.m. to-day will be published in to-morrow's issue of The Varsity.

UNDERGRADUATE LOAN FUND

Operated by the Students' Administrative Council

This fund is open to students who pay the S.A.C. fee and are in either of the final two years of their courses. The maximum loan is $100.00. Interest is charged at 5% from date of leaving the University. Applicants will be interviewed and loans granted in January. Those receiving loans must sign a note, and a satisfactory endorser is necessary. Application forms are now available in the S.A.C. Office, Hart House.

INSTRUCTIONS TO STUDENTS

Every student must immediately make an appointment for this examination. This appointment should be made at the office of the Registrar of the student's College or Faculty, except in the case of women registered in Arts Colleges in the second, third and fourth years, who will make their appointments with their Deans of Women.

At the time of making the appointment the student will receive an envelope, on with the following information is to be noted:

(a) College or Faculty and year (under the heading "Division of Tuberculosis Prevention")
(b) Name (surname followed by given names)
(c) Age and Toronto address
(d) Name and address of personal physician (if any)

No other entries are to made on the enevolpe by the student.

The envelope, filled out as directed above, MUST be presented to the X-ray attendant prior to the examination.

Each student will present himself promptly at the hour of his appointment at the X-ray room in the basement in the south-west corner of the East Block of the Parliament Buildings; he will enter by the south door and take the first turn immediately to the left, proceeding to the end of the corridor; he will then go downstairs on the right to the X-ray room, which will be marked.

In cases where the film is not of proper standard, a student may be asked to return for a second examination. No apprehension need be felt over this routine procedure.

Varsity Blues Win First Game

The 1943 edition of the Varsity Blues made their first appearance Saturday afternoon as they mauled a West End "Y" quintet in the big Hart House Gym. The wearers of the blue looked very impressive as they walked away from their opposition, which, by the way, was led by Hal Oxon—member of last year's great Varsity squad and one of the best guards to trod Hart House planks in recent years.

Althought losing Don Finlayson, Hal Axon, Bill Roberts and Jack Lavarnway from last year's squad which lost only one game all season, and that to Wayne, the Stevensmen seem to be plenty hot. Don Gibson—one of last year's highest scorers, Stew Scott, Whitey Clayton and Ken Tettmar were the only venterans out Saturday. Murray Thompson and Bill Dewar, from 42's team, weren't able to make the first exhibition game.

Gene Durocher started the scoring soon after the tip-off and Hank Goldstein and Ken Tettmar followed suit. Goldstein netted another on a long looping shot before Saunders got West End's first score. Stew Scott and Gene Durocher added to the score before the "Y"s Wynn could capitalize. Then the play began to get more ragged and end-to-end rushes were in order. Ken Hettmar sank a long one. Saunders came back with a foul shot. Hank Goldstein counted before Maple hooped one at the whistle to make the score 18-7.

The second half saw some wide open scoring as the Blues, and especially long Don Gibson, found the range of the basket. Ken Tettmar began the scoring with a long shot, then Gibson started the adding machine going. He got one on a jump and another on a breakaway before West End's Scott gathered a scramble-ball and bulged the twine. Then in the next five minutes Gibson gathered in eleven points while Tettmar and Scott got a basket apiece. For the last eight minutes a completely new team carried Varsity's hopes and handled the job proficiently. They lacked scoring punch however and only Whitey Clayton managed to get three points. However when Patterson, Donnelly, Turner, Booth, Stellman and Clayton start to find the position of the basket a lot will be heard from them.

Final score was 44-11.

West End "Y" — White, Maple 4, Martin, Wynn 2, Saunders 3, Axon, Scott 2.

Varsity — Goldstein 6, Durocher 6, Donnelly 2, Gibson 17, Scott 5, Tettmar 7, Clayton 3, Patterson, Peterkin, Turner, Booth, Stellman.

Sportswoman

By Helen Stewart and Betsy Gowan

Before opening a new year of sport —ice hockey, badminton, volleyball—and all that, we just have to say a few words about the climax of the basketball season, which, as you know, took place after our Green Issue.

A glance at the score shows that the final tilt ended in a win for P.H.E. Seniors by 43-32 on the total round. Congratulations are indeed in order even if a bit late. The game definitely got better as it went along and the first half was a better one for the valiant Juniors. Betty Allen for the Seniors and Joan Davis for the Juniors netted the most baskets and played very well indeed, backed up by a staunch defence in top form—Sharpe, Barnhart and Davis. Zoie Christie was outstanding in checking the Junior forwards, but it was particularly hard to see separate stars in this game which indeed boasted a galaxy and wound up the basketball season admirably.

Speaking of Sport

By Roger Conant

HERE WE GO AGAIN

The old machine, after a three-week lay-off, has a change of oil, a general tone-up job and a simonizing—and the starter will be pressed today. For the 58-team baseball league and the 64-team basketball schedule are thrown into gear, along with Hec Phillips' growing group of pavement-pounders. And the machine gathers way during the week with the 20-team hockey and 13-team water polo leagues gathering steam.

And not only is the intramural machine getting under way but also Varsity teams. Warren Stevens trotted out his basketball squad Saturday. They showed promise and it augurs well for the Blue and White during the coming season of exhibition games. Ken Tettmar, a regular from last year's great squad, appears to have a fine season ahead of him as we noted some beautiful defensive work. On top of that he hooped more than a few of them—and from quite a way out, at that.

Stew Scott showed up very well in the initial game and should pack a lot of power at Tettmar's side. Gene Durocher, who hails from down Assumption way, came in for some good work. Long Don Gibson put on an amazing display—he sank nary a point in the first half—then came through with 17 in the last frame.

The all-Varsity swim team will be formed again this year, according to the feedbag; in fact preliminary organization will take place tomorrow at five. Both these Blue and White teams will be featured in the coming Saturday Athletic Nights which begin on the 23rd. On that date it is hoped that Manning Depot's hoop squad will afford oppostion. But more details are yet to be forthcoming.

SED QUANTITUM

At this time last year we thought the facilities of Hart House had been taxed to the saturation point but we find that ten more teams have been entered in the ball grinds that start today. From 53 to 58 climbs the baseball totals. In this case it is mainly due to the increased interest in Medical circles and the increased pressure of the Meds Athletic Director. Meds now floor nine teams and they should be commended on their efforts. Of course School came through with a solid 30 entrants—but most of their games will be played off in house leagues and only the winner will enter playdowns. Entries are as follows in baseball: S.P.S. 30, Meds 9, U.C. and St. Mike's 4, Vic, Trinity and Dents 2, Knox, Wycliffe, Forestry, Pharmacy and Emmanuel one each.

The Sifton Cup, emblematic of interfaculty basketball supremacy, will have 64 teams gunning after it. U.C.'s P.H.E. team copped it last year but a long and tough fight is promised the eventual winner. Basketball entries are: S.P.S. 30, Meds and St. Mike's 6, Vic and U.C. 5, Trinity and Dents 3, Wycliffe 2, Knox, Forestry, Pharmacy and Emmanuel one each.

AND FOR SPLASH ARTISTS

Senior Meds will have a job holding the Eckhardt Cup this year. The water polo enthusiasts get to work this coming Wednesday down in the pool with a 13-team league. Emmanuel has entered a team for '43 and Meds have entered a Junior "B" team to swell last season's total. Groups have been alloted and in their construction, drill days have been deeply considered and as far as we can see as good a job as possible has been done. In the first group four of the five teams have Tuesdays free while in group two all parade on those days. The remaining group is unfortunate but the hours will be arranged as best as possible. Two will enter the playoffs from the first group while one will represent each of the other two groups. Groupings are:

Group I—Sr. Meds, Vic, Jr. S.P.S., Jr. Meds., Sr. S.P.S.

Group II—U.C., St. Mike's, Emmanuel, Trinity.

Group III—Jr. Meds "B," S.P.S. III, Dents, Vic II.

Track is Back But Few Events

Track is back. Yes, among those sports resuming action today is indoor track, which will inaugurate its interfaculty season with a three-man relay. Hec Phillips has drawn up a track and field program stretching over the next two months which corresponds closely with that of last year. In order to supply a full program only two or three events will be held each week. At the same time this schedule will enable any one athlete to enter more events than he would be able to if a complete program of events was squeezed into one afternoon. Another very convenient arrangement has been announced whereby each event will be spread over two days of competition in order to allow those who have military training on the first to run on the second.

The first event which will be run off today and tomorrow at 5 p.m. will in all probability have a very slim entry list. The three-man event (one lap each) will probably go to School whose team of MacDonald, Booth and Howsom won the event last year. The Tuesday session is only for those who have training on Monday.

Before competing each man must sign the eligibility list provided in the Athletic Office. P.T. credits will be meted out to those who show interest and attend practices regularly and entry points in the T. A. Reed Trophy Race will be awarded for each three nights of competition.

INDOOR TRACK SCHEDULE

Jan. 11, 12—3-man relay, one lap each.

Jan. 18, 19—3-man relay, one lap, two laps, three laps, respectively.

Jan. 25, 26—880 senior, 50 yard dash, 880 novice.

Feb. 1, 2,—100 yard dash, 2-mile relay (four men).

Feb. 8, 9,—one mile senior, 220 yard dash, one mile novice.

Feb. 15, 16—high jump, shot put, 440 yards.

Feb. 22, 23—two miles, 880 yard relay (six men).

Mar. 1, 2,—one mile relay (four men).

Mar. 8, 9—50 yard low hurdles, standing broad jump.

U.C. WATER POLO

Meeting of all men interested in playing waterpolo in Jr. Common Room at 1:15 p.m. In order to qualify for team it is important to be present.

Announce Policy Regarding Science Students

University Science Students Regulations Decree Students in Science Courses Must Accept Empolyment in Essential Industry as Given by Department of Labour Unless Volunteering for Active Service

POSSIBILITY OF BEING MADE RESERVE UNITS

Under the University Science Students Regulations (P.C. 9566), announced last month, all students in technical courses are required on graduation to accept employment in essential work as directed by the federal Department of Labour, unless they volunteer for active service.

(Complete text of the Regulations appears elsewhere in this issue of The Varsity.)

Science students now enrolled or intending to enrol at a university are required to declare in writing whether they wish to volunteer for active service as technical officers. The Department of Labour is authorized to request science students to enter the reserve army, should the number of volunteers for active service prove insufficient, and to order them to undergo such military studies as it may specify, either during the academic year or at other times.

Students refusing to accept status in the reserve army or undergo military studies as required will not be allowed to continue in attendance at universities.

HART HOUSE GLEE CLUB

The first rehearsal of the Hart House Glee Club for the new year will take place tonight in the Music Room at 4:40 p.m. All members are requested to attend. New members welcome.

When people write a nice long letter, put it in an envelope, address it, stamp it and drop in in the box, they promptly forget about it, assured that it will be whisked to its destination by those whom "rain nor storm nor darkness of the night shall delay the feet . . ."

The only trouble is that this doesn't always happen.

Where? When? At Honey Dew, of course, any day. Grand food properly prepared, temptingly served. Benevolent to budgets, too.

1. These regulations may be cited as the University Science Students Regulations, 1942.

2. In these regulations, unless the context otherwise requires,
   (a) "Minister" means the Minister of Labour or any person or persons designated by him to act on his behalf under this order;
   (b) "essential work" means work which is, in the opinion of the Minister, essential to the efficient prosecution of the war;
   (c) "technical person" means a person to whom the Essential Work (Scientific and Technical Personnell) Regulations, 1942, apply;
   (d) "science student" means a male person who has registered at a university as a full-time student during all or part of the academic year for a course the successful completion of which, in the opinion of the Minister, will qualify the person as a technical person;
   (e) "University" means any person or group of persons, including His Majesty in right of any province, administering or operating a university or college which is, in the opinion of the Minister, properly equipped and staffed to train persons to be technical persons.

3. (1) The armed forces of Canada, the Departments and agencies of the governments of Canada and of the provinces of Canada, and all other persons employing technical persons from time to time, at the request of the Minister, shall supply him with such information as he may specify with reference to their present or future requirements of technical persons for essential work.

(2) Every university from time to time, shall supply the Minister with such information as he may require with reference to science students registered with the university.

(3) If at any time, in the opinion of the Minister, the number of science students in the universities should be increased, he shall recommend to the universities the steps which ought to be taken to train the necessary number of technical persons.

4. (1) Before a person is permitted to commence or continue work as a science student he shall make a declaration in a form prescribed by the Minister indicating whether he wishes to volunteer for service in the armed forces of Canada as a technical officer.

(2) Every university, from time to time, shall at the request of the Minister, supply him with a list of the names of the science students who wish to volunteer for service in the armed forces as technical officers; and the Minister shall from time to time select therefrom the names of persons who in his opinion will fulfil the requirements of each branch of the armed forces and shall submit lists of such names for the consideration of the various branches of the armed forces.

(3) Every science student shall submit to such medical examination as the Department of National Defence may from time to time require.

5. (1) If, at any time, the number of science students who wish to volunteer for service in the armed forces as technical officers is not adequate, in the opinion of the Minister, he may request any science student to accept such status in the reserve army and undergo such military studies and duties whether during the academic year or not, as he may specify.

(2) No university shall retain any person in the university as a science student if such person refuses to accept status in the reserve army or to undergo military studies and duties as requested by the Minister pursuant to this section.

6. The Department of National Defence and the Department of Munitions and Supply shall provide such facilities for the training of science students as the Minister may from time to time require.

7. Every person who completes a course as a science student at a university and does not volunteer for service in the armed forces of Canada shall accept employment in such essential work as the Minister may require and remain in such employment during each day the Minister so requires.

8. No person, whether acting or pretending to act on behalf of any of the armed forces or any department or agency of government or not, shall
   (a) interview any science student, either before or after graduation, with regard to any employment, office or position;
   (b) solicit any science student, either before or after graduation, to enter any employment or to accept any office or position;
   (c) offer any science student, either before or after graduation, any employment, office or position; or
   (d) take any science student, either before or after graduation, into any employment or give him any office or position;

except by or with the consent of the Minister.

9. Any person who contravenes any of the provisions of these regulations shall be guilty of an offence and liable on summary conviction for a first offence to imprisonment for a term of not less than one month and not exceeding one year or to a fine of not less than fifty dollars and not more than five hundred dollars, or to both such fine and such imprisonment, and for any subsequent offence to a term of imprisonment of not less than two months and not exceeding one thousand dollars, or both such imprisonment and such fine.

10. These regulations shall come into force on the first day of December, nineteen hundred and forty-two.

PERSONS TO WHOM THE "ESSENTIAL WORK (SCIENTIFIC AND TECHINCAL PERSONNEL) REGULATIONS, 1942" APPLY

1. A person who is normally engaged in the engineering profession in a consulting, technical or supervisory capacity in design, construction, manufacture, operation or maintenance and who has had a regular professional training in practice and in theory as an engineer in any of the following branches of enginering: civil, mechanical, electrical, chemical, metallurgical and mining.

2. A production, industrial or other engineer or chemist who normally holds in any engineering works or manufacturing establishment a position of authority involving responsibility for any phase of executive management or control of any technical function.

3. A person who has obtained a degree at any Canadian or other recognized university and who is normally engaged at a university or technical college.

4. A person who has been trained, or who is or has been normally engaged, in the practice of any branch of the science of chemistry but not including a registered pharmacist.

5. A research scientist, that is, a person who, by training or practice, is skilled in the independent search for new knowledge of the properties of matter or energy.

6. A person, other than a teacher, who has obtained a degree at any Canadian or other recognized university in Engineering, Chemistry, Physics, Geology, Mathematics, Architecture or in any natural science, or who is a technically qualified member of the Engineering Institute of Canada, the Canadian Institute of Chemistry, the Canadian Institute of Mining and Metallurgy, the Royal Architectural Institute of Canada or of any provincial association of professional Engineers, Chemists or Architects.

7. A person, not in the classes described above, who, in the opinion of the Minister, possesses technical qualifications and skill which are needed in undertakings engaged on essential work.

never repudiated by Mr. Wright—contained such suggestions.)

"Mr. MacNamara said that the Government favoured retention of Arts courses and that previous rumours to the contrary were without foundations," Dr. H. J. Cody, President of the University of Toronto, said after the conference. "He said that if the universities would carry out ruthlessly the regulations concerning those students who fail, and continue the present military training programs, that would be all that was necessary at the present."

"I believe we reached a sound conclusion," Dr. Cody added. "The general atmosphere was good. I was satisfied with the result."

let's go places

War, rationing, manpower shortage—nothing can stop Hollywood when it decides to put on a spectacular, stupendous, gigantic production, as attest this Arabian horse opera complete with numerous harems. Hordes of Arabians clad in flowing raiment of hues and cleanliness probably unknown to the land of Khayyam cavort about, stage terrific brawls and even burn a tent city, while we are permitted to see more of more beautiful starlets than these tired old eyes have gazed upon in many a moon.

UPTOWN "ARABIAN NIGHTS"

There is even a plot. Strictly from "Once Upon a Time" it is, involving two brothers, a throne and the love of a beautiful (she really is) dancing girl (Maria Montez). The villainy is supplied by the scheming grand vizier, a bewiskered rat in the Hollywood tradition.

We even get humour, both crude and subtle, and also corny. But it is the fighting that makes one wonder. Clean shaven heroes revive from deathbeds to take on 40 or so slave traders, villains die most gory and convincing deaths, there are chases and even a rescue combining the better techniques of Tarzan and Valentino.

Not a bad picture, really. There are also selected short subjects on the bill. Just why or how they were selected is an unsolved mystery.

D. S.

If you are in a mid-examination rut and you want a lift, run down to Shea's and take in The Major and the Minor. No one likes to be embarrassed, but it's good clean fun to watch someone else's embarrassment — that's the whole theme. Ginger Rogers, tired of the tricks of New York, decides to go home. She's short on her train fare and masquerades as Susan, a 12-year-old, to go half rate. She foils the raised eyebrows of the conductors till she bites off a fag and gets caught.

SHEA'S "MAJOR AND MINOR"

Susan ducks into a compartment and Ray Milland, pitying the child, is forced to take her off to a military academy, where she leads a dual life—queen among the cadets (the maginot line technique is well worth the once over) and chief instrument in busting up Ray's lovelife. I won't tie up the strings, you'll want to see it for yourself.

U.S. University Students Raise Objections To New Military Training Plans

Army Program Resembles No 1 Canadian Army Course Here; Academic Requirements Still Undecided

NAVY MORE LIBERAL

By Rex Wilson

(The following article is the second part of a roundup of the general features of the policy regarding universities in the United States which was announced by the War Manpower Commission before Christmas. It includes brief surveys of the Army and Navy plans in more detail than was permitted in Friday's issue.)

Further opposition to the Army and Navy training plans is voiced in an editorial in The Minnesota Daily headed, "Army, Navy Training Plans Need Revision" and criticises the forces for their slowness in formulating the plans and expresses doubts that they will be any swifter in putting them into effect.

A brief summary of the plans follows:

The Army

The Army Training Program resembles basically the arrangement of No. 1 Canadian Army Course now being given at this University. It will be open to physically fit young men between 18 and 22 who have completed their basic military training. They will be fed, clothed, and housed, at the expense of the government and will be under strict military supervision. Selection will follow the general plan for the selection of enlisted men for Officers Candidate Schools.

Academic requirements will be formulated after consultation with the American Council of Education.

Indefinite and short extensions have been made available to Seniors in the Reserve Officers' Training Corps and the Enlisted Reserve Corps which may enable a number of them to graduate. The latest date of any of these deferments is June 30, 1943.

Special provisions have been made for medical students (including veterinary and dental students) in the enlisted reserves. They will be called to active duty at the end of the first semester of 1943 and will then continue their medical instruction under a plan similar to that of the upper years in Medicine and Dentistry at this University, although not necessarily at the schools at which they were originally enrolled.

A certain number of pre-medical students in the enlisted reserve will be included under this plan, but they must undergo basic training after which they

1ST BATTALION ORDERS

C.O.T.C. 1st Battalion Orders for the following week will be published in the Friday and Monday issues of The Varsity until further notice.

Madill Discusses Ottawa Meeting

Lieut.-Col. H. H. Madill, Officer Commanding of the C.O.T.C., has returned to his desk at 119 St. George St. after attending a conference on university military training in Ottawa.

Military training policy will remain largely unchanged, but Col. Madill stated that the conference with the heads of other University C.O.T.C. contingents and with the Department of National Defence was "most helpful" in the discussion of matters of administration procedure and of matters of the interpretation of instructions. The new training regulations for medical students, announced last month, were also discussed.

This spring and summer, some students may wish to get away to an Officers' Training Centre. It may be possible for them to leave on a quota, Col. Madill said; but he felt that it would be preferable for those students to remain in school and go to camp in the summer.

"The extra training and hardening-up will help to make the break between civilian life and training at the O.T.C. easier," he added.

Newton's Anniversary Formally Commemorated

The 300th anniversary of Sir Isaac Newton's birth was commemorated on Dec. 25, 1942, by the presentation to the University of an edition of his great book "Philosophiae Naturalis." The book was personally supervised by Newton and published in 1726.

This marked the formal presentation of a bust of Newton, executed in Italian marble by Dame Dora Clarke which was given to the University by Dr. Sigmund Samuel through Professor Burton of the Physics Department. It is a copy of the original by Roboullliac in Trinity College library at Cambridge, the university which Newton attended.

This copy, which is only the second likeness, has been placed in the foyer at the entrance to the mathematics laboratory in the Physics building.

20 Wycliffe Students "Stood Up" As Blackout Incident Miscarries

About 20 Wycliffe students were "stood up" during the blackout last Wednesday evening, when they waited in the cold outside the college for the Auxiliary Transport Service to come and "evacuate" them. This incompleted incident was the only one occurring during the most successful blackout the campus has witnessed. There were only three reported infractions.

The "evacuation" was planned at the request of the Air Raid Precautions Wardens, and was designed to test their auxiliary transport. Vehicles were to come and remove the students to a place of safety. When the blackout warnings were sounded at 9:45 p.m., No. 2 A.R.P. headquarters was notified and all students then in the building were assembled in front of the college on Hoskin's Ave. where they began their vigil.

Investigation later revealed that the failure of the vehicles to show up was due to "weaknesses" in the system that "are being corrected."

Otherwise the test blackout, with 132 wardens manning posts in the University, was a success. Intermittant lights showed at South House, U.C., where air force personnel, who are not under A.R.P. jurisdiction, are quartered. A light was burning in a house on St. George St., but no one was home at the time, and a car drove through the sector, refusing to stop at the warden's command.

"The student co-operation was excellent and a vast improvement over the last time. This, I believe, is due to the publicity given in The Varsity," stated A. J. Butlin, head of the local A.R.P.

Ottawa Conference Approved by Students

By Janet Bryce

Student opinion on the outcome of the Ottawa Conference is generally one of approval. First thing yesterday morning, when uncertain rumours were being discussed, and "arts courses were being rationed" there was a depressed feeling abroad. But by noon, when The Varsity had been perused somewhat, campus opinion expressed itself in terms of condonation.

From the Arts Colleges came statements by various student leaders to the effect that they considered Mr. MacNamara's speech and the conference resolution to be reasonable, under the circumstances. "It is difficult to take any sort of stand in the face of conflicting opinions," said Mary Mogan, St. Joseph's College. "But it seems to me that they are showing courage, understanding and far-sightedness in permitting Arts Courses to continue."

And in comparison with the situation in the United States, Don Rohr, of St. Mike's, stated that he considered it would be absurd to follow exactly in Canada the American system of drafting all men of military age regardless of whether or not they are university students—because conditions are dissimilar in the two countries. "For one thing," he said, "there are much greater numbers in American universities."

"It is hard to make any comment as yet," said Tom Nixon of Vic, "because the situation, as I understand it, is quite elastic. Until we know exactly the standard the University will set students we are really not much further ahead."

Both Eileen Acton, of Vic, and Don Rowat of U.C., pronounced the Conference outcome as very satisfactory. From the Faculty of Medicine George Culnan voiced the opinion that "highly trained men are certainly essential, and —whether doctor, dentist, engineer, or artsman—the National Selective Service is sure to recognize their worth."

First U.C. Dean Speaks to Women

"Africa and the New Order" was the topic of an address given by Miss Margaret Wrong, first Dean of Women at University College, in the Trinity College Board Room yesterday afternoon, under the auspices of the Student Christian Movement.

This evening at 7:15, Miss Wrong, who is at present the Secretary of the International Committee which prepares Christian Literature for Africa south of the Sahara, will address the women of University College (residence and non-residence) in Falconer House Common Room.

There are certain practical issues which have to be faced in Africa both during and after the war, Miss Wrong told yesterday's meeting. There is a strong sense among many African peoples that they are part of a community bigger than the local group and they are developing a very defined attitude toward a world community in which there shall be no barrier of colour or race.

The African people have been anxious to serve in this war in both civil and military capacities. They feel that they would be very much worse off under any control endorsing the race theories of Axis leaders and that this war is very much their affair.

African communities have given amazingly to all kinds of war funds, said Miss Wrong. They have contributed to raise money for mobile canteens and ambulances to serve the bombed people of Great Britian. In communities where there is little money in circulation, the people have made their contributions in kind.

In their plans for a post-war world, they feel that they, like other colonies, must advance to self-government, and educated Africans desire some form of political responsibility and representation.

C. E. Silcox to Address Arts and Letters Club

Speaker at tonight's meeting of the Arts and Letters Club of the Medical Society will be C. E. Silcox, a Toronto graduate and composer of "The Blue and White."

Mr. Silcox will speak on the topic: "French Canada's Role in the Dominion."

The meeting takes place in Wymilwood tonight from 6:30 to 8:00 p.m.

Reconstruction Subject of Talk

Commissioner David C. Lamb of The Salvation Army will speak on the "Fundamental Principles of Reconstruction" and "The Spirit of the British Peoples" on Wednesday, Jan. 12, at 1:00 p.m. in the Debates Room, Hart House.

During the past few months, Commissioner Lamb, whose home is in London, England, has been touring the United States and Canada where he has spoken to various groups.

He has travelled around the world four times and has crossed the Atlantic scores of times. In 1934, the University of Aberdeen conferred on him the Honorary Degree of Doctor of Laws "for services to humanity." The late King George V made him Campanion of the Most Distinguished Order of St. Michael and St. George (C.M.G.) "for services to the British Empire." He has been awarded the highest honour of The Salvation Army, the Order of the Founder (O.F.) "for outstanding services to the organization."

The first contact that he had with The Salvation Army was at Aberdeen University where he was studying medicine. He has been with The Salvation Army for over 60 years and has been an officer for 57.

Leaves, Appointments Granted to Professors

President Cody recently announced that two University professors had been given leaves of absence to study in the United States.

A. S. P. Woodhouse, of the Department of English, University College, left recently for Pasadena, California, where he will study in the Huntington Library. Professor Woodhouse has received a Guggenheim Fellowship to enable him to carry on his work on a book on Milton. He will return to this campus next fall.

F. H. Underhill, of the History Department, is also on a Guggenheim Fellowship, and is at present in New York. His study is connected with political parties in the Canadian Government since Confederation.

President Cody also announced that E. A. Smith, formerly an associate professor, has been made professor of industrial chemistry, and Dr. R. R. McLaughlin, formerly associate professor, is professor of chemical engineering. Dr. J. G. Breckenbridge has been promoted from the position of lecturer to that of assistant professor of chemical engineering.

Approximately 100 Names Forwarded To Authorities After Senate Meeting Friday

Most Students Freshmen in Faculty of Applied Science and Engineering; Others Included Also Freshmen

RECORDS UNSATISFACTORY

Academic records of approximately 100 University of Toronto students—mostly freshmen in the Faculty of Applied Science and Engineering—were considered unsatisfactory at last Friday's meeting of the University Senate, and their names are being forwarded to the proper authorities, A. B. Fennell, Registrar of the University, announced yesterday.

It was understood that a few of the students listed were registered in first year in other faculties. "A second batch of names will be handed to military authorities in February when the Senate meets again," Mr. Fennell said.

Names of students considered academically unsatisfactory are being forwarded by the University to the District Officer Commanding and the Registrar of the appropriate National War Services Board under the conditions laid down in National Selective Service Mobilization Regulations (P.C. 10924) passed Dec. 1, 1942, to supersede Section 17, P.C. 8343. Subsection 4 of P.C. 10924 reads:

"The authorities of every university, college or school at which any student is pursuing a course of studies shall furnish the District Officer Commanding and the Registrar with the name, date and place of birth and last known address of every student who fails to pass any required academic examination and the Electoral District and Polling District numbers shown on his Registration Certificate."

11 Affected at Dalhousie

Halifax, Jan. 11—(CUP)—Names of 11 students at Dalhousie University whose records for the fall term have proved unsatisfactory have been forwarded to the local War Services Board, university officials announced tonight. It was not immediately known whether these students will be required to leave the university before receiving their draft call.

Students Await Call

Winnipeg, Jan. 11—(CUP)—Eighty-nine male students at the University of Manitoba who were asked to withdraw from classes on account of failure in mid-term examinations and who are liable for military service will be placed on the next call by their War Services Board, it was announced here tonight.

PHOTOGRAPHY EXHIBIT

The Camera Committee of Hart House announce with regret that owing to the limited time which members of the House have had for photography this season and the small number of contributions which were promised for this show the Annual Exhibition of Photography which was to take place in the art gallery from January 19 to 31, has been cancelled.

Unable to Admit More Engineers

Edmonton, Jan. 11 — (CUP) — The University of Alberta will be unable to take more students into engineering courses until a larger staff can be obtained, Dr. Robert Newton, president of the university, said today. He was commenting on reports that an inereasing number of Canadian university students might be diverted into technical courses as a result of the Universities Conference held in Ottawa last weekend.

Dr. Newton revealed that the University of Alberta already has two and a half times its normal quota of freshmen engineers. "We will also require more accommodation before we can increase the number taking technical courses," he said.

(Heads of the Faculty of Medicine, Dentistry and Applied Science and Engineering at the University of Toronto expressed doubt as to the feasibility of further acceleration and increased enrolment when the question arose last October. They were agreed that large classes and increased speeding-up of science courses would impair the efficiency of graduating students.)

'Canada' Badges Given C.O.T.C.

Wearing of "Canada" badges on the sleeves of all ranks of the C.O.T.C. this term is the result of an order from Ottawa (applying to both active and reserve units of the Canadian Army) which, however, in no way affects the status of reserve units, Major H. C. H. Miller, adjutant of the first battalion C.O.T.C., stated to The Varsity.

Members of active units who have volunteered for overseas service will be distinguished from members of other units in two ways.

Non-commissioned ranks in the active army will wear a black circular badge, bearing the letters G.S. in red, standing for "General Service." This badge will be worn on the lower sleeve.

Service chevrons will be worn by all ranks of the active army while in Canada. These will be small chevrons worn on the lower left sleeve, with the point upwards. A soldier who enlisted prior to 10 Sept. 1940 will wear a silver chevron plus one black chevron for each additional twelve months service. Those who enlisted after that date will wear a black chevron for each twelve months service.

Title Song of Follies To be Broadcast Tonight

Title song from last fall's University College Follies, "Everything's OK," written by Harold Shuttleworth and Gord Hardy, will be sung coast-to-coast tonight on a CBC hookup. The program on which it will be heard locally is scheduled for 8:30 p.m. over Station CBL.

RECREATION MATERIAL

Recreation material ordered by the women students who took the fall course in Recreation Leadership, is now available at the University Press.

NEWSFRONTS

Moscow—Six Caucasian cities along the road to Rostov have fallen to the Russians in their biggest bag of the winter offensive, a Soviety communique announced late last night.

London—The Fighting French are speeding up their northward drive toward Tripoli from Lake Chad in Southern Libya, and it is reported that "operations are proceeding satisfactorily."

Washington—The United States Navy announced last night that the aircraft carrier sunk last Oct. 26 in the battle off Santa Cruz Islands was the 20,000 ton Hornet. Other vessels previously reported sunk were identified.

Classes Postponed

The War Manpower Commission's new plan for the colleges and the universities of the United States is a drastic one, especially when it is compared with the considerably more temperate policy of dealing with the universities on this side of the border. The Association of American Colleges has viewed the new developments with disfavour, being least critical of the Navy's plan which in general allows the individual more freedom of personal choice.

Actually the wide difference in treatment of the same problem on the two sides of the border is not surprising when the governmental policies behind them are examined. The United States, suddenly shocked into an all-out war, immediately, and under great stress of circumstances, adopted an all-out program of Selective Service a tenet of which was that it was impossible to allow some physically fit young men to remain in colleges as they had been under the peace time draft while others were conscripted for active service overseas. In Canada the government has not committed itself to any such program of overseas service and the problem has not been presented with as great force as it has in the United States.

Nevertheless the discrepancy between the two methods of handling the program is a good deal more than marked. Canadian students who are able to keep their academic standing high enough to enable themselves to stay in college can well be thankful for the solution reached here. Students and educators south of the border, while in a difficult position of appearing unpatriotic to at least one element of the population, have good grounds to criticize the new plan, especially when they have the Canadian counterpart, of which they have expressed approval, to compare it with.

Meanwhile the whole story is not yet known. The mechanics of the plans have been set up. but the actual educational programs are only now in the process of formation. The universities wait with tongue in cheek to see what the military men will devise in the way of an education to fit these emergent times.

What that plan will be can only be guessed at just now. It will certainly emphasize technical training but not necessarily to the exclusion of all other types of preparation. English will be stressed in many technical courses, it is said, and it is expected that other departments of the humanities will be utilized in the training of officer candidates.

At any rate the humanities will not die out in American colleges. The impression exists in ill-informed quarters that, academically speaking, the colleges are being closed. This is true of many men's schools which carry on in no other way except under the government's program. But in the co-educational institutions, the women's colleges and in the more highly endowed men's schools which can afford to continue and make a place for the few physically unfit men who may continue their studies, academic life will go on, although under strangely dchange circumstances.

Liberal arts education in the broadest sense is definitely at an end for the time being as far as a quarter of a million young men are concerned, but its continuity is assured by the few representatives they have been able to leave behind and by the co-eds and the students of the women's colleges. The ladies, who once fought a hard battel for higher education, now remain in virtually complete possession of the field. Theirs is now no small trust.

Classes Discontinued

Academic axes, sharpened by governmental regulation, have been falling on unfortunate student necks across Canada since the close of the Christmas vacation. Today we report the news that about 100 Toronto students—said to be mostly first-year Engineers—are deemed "unsatisfactory" and that their names are being forwarded to military and War Service officials. It is understood that this figure represents only a partial toll and that the remainder —including the Arts victims—will be informed of their failure next month.

In the meantime, it gives one food for thought in considering that one of the scientific faculties has suffered so sharply. There has been an abundance of talk in these columns and elsewhere this year about the plight of the Arts student and the pressure he labours under in the present state of affairs. But althought he faces perhaps more wide-spread doubt in some quarters as to his value to the community, the Artsman is apparently under no more stringent set of academic rules than are his year-mates in the technical schools and faculties.

In actual fact, the pressure is on University students heavily this year, and equally.

Wishful Thinking

We understand that there was some little puzzlement yesterday morning in the highways and byways of the campus to which our contemporary penetrated when headline-haggard students were faced with a Globe and Mail streamer in 80-point caps which blurted:

UNIVERSITIES RATION ARTS COURSES

while The Varsity was contenting itself with two decks of relatively reserved 36-point caps which confided:

NO IMMEDIATE RESTRICTIONS FOR ARTS
SELECTIVE SERVICE HEAD TELLS DELEGATES

We were a little puzzled ourselves by the way The Globe seized upon an indefinitely-phrased remark by Mr. MacNamara and a cautiously-phrased prediction offered by a Canadian Press staff writer as basis for the streamer. The writer said in his second paragraph: "While details of the program were not made public . . . it was expected to bring virtual rationing of higher education." This remark in turn was apparently founded upon a quotation from Mr. MacNamara's text: ". . . persistence (of rumours that the government intended early further restrictions upon Arts) may indicate growing feeling on the part, not only of the general public, but perhaps even of educators, that at this time, when all our institutions stand in peril, liberal education like some other necessities may have to be rationed."

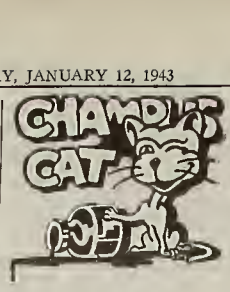
Thus the streamer is traceable to a statement that a condition existing may indicate that there is a "growing feeling" that "liberal education . . . may have to be rationed."

But the whole puzzling business was explained to us later in the day by one student who peered at both newspapers for a long and distressed moment, then remarked: "I s'pose that's what The Globe would like to see happen."

ART OF MUSIC Diana

Definitely Different

Veloz and Yolanda



Most unusual, to put it mildly, is the present billing at the Royal Alec. Veloz and Yolanda, dance team extraordinary, are certainly out of the usual run of entertainment.

The graceful motions of the two, and their skilful interpretations of their music provided an evening of real enjoyment. They are real showpeople and know how to extract everything from everyone of their spectacles. The Samba and the Tango Yolanda were the most interesting dances of the evening.

The assisting artists on the program seem to be there mainly to allow Veloz and Yolanda time to catch their breath, and for the latter to change into another stunning costume. Two very sick pianists form a team (when they remember); there is an accordionist of ability but whose tone is still that of an accordion; and Bill Gary dances several tap numbers with great skill and agility. Vincente Gomez plays a guitar with real virtuosity, developing a number of tone colours which seem impossible from his instrument.

But they are only incidental to the real entertainment of the evening. Veloz and Yolanda come pretty close to being poetry in motion. Their dancing has to be seen to be imagined. It will either inspire or discourage you, depending on whether you are inclined one way or the other by nature.

Class Rationing To be Effective January 15, 1943

Shortage of Professors Makes System Necessary; Books Now Available at Simcoe Hall

ESSAY TOPICS FROZEN

Due to a shortage of professors as predicted in this column last year a system of rationing has been instituted in arts courses to ensure that no student attends the same lecture more than once. Classes will be strictly controlled under the following regulations.

1. RATION BOOKS—All students are required to obtain their ration books at Simcoe Hall not later than Jan. 15, 1943. These may be had by turning in current Admit-to-Lecture cards along with a nominal fee. (Velut Arbor Aevo*.) No more than two books will be issued to each student.

The books will contain pages of coupons in colours especially designed by the Department of Fine Art to correspond with the degree of nausea induced by the subject which they represent. It is hoped that this will help reduce confusion to a minimum.

2. RATIONING.—Each coupon will become valid on a definite date and will entitle the holder to attend one lecture. Coupons will be good for the period to March 1, when all coupons of earlier dates will become void. This is designed to avoid a possible temporary shortage of classes during the crucial pre-examination period.

A special page coloured bile green will contain coupons for seats in the library and will become valid on April 1.

3. HOARDING—The Ration Board is satisfied that students have not been hoarding classes except in the case of Physical Training credits where careful records show that many students have more than the required number of credits. These students will be required to make out a special form and will be required to lie down and rest for an equal number of periods under the supervision of Lungs Larkin, Director of Physical Training.

4. ESSAY TOPICS—Inasmuch as all essay topics assigned are generally considered pretty cold stuff they have now been frozen under the new scheme. To replace these and assure uniformity one general paper not exceeding 500 words will be assigned to students in all courses on the subject "Why I Agree with My Professors."

These will be marked by a former official of the Irish Hospital Sweepstakes especially obtained for the purpose from Selective Service. A great saving in professors is expected.

Hart House Bulletin Board

Informal Recital

Mr. J. S. MacDonald, II Music, will give the first Informal Recital of this year's series, in the east common-room at 1 p.m. today.

Undergraduate Exhibition

During the first two weeks of February the Art Committee of Hart House have reserved the art gallery for the annual exhibition of paintings and drawings by undergraduate members of Hart House. Every undergraduate member of the House who has an interest in drawing and painting in his spare time has an opportunity to show his work. All entries must be in the Warden's office before 5 p.m. on Wednesday 27th January. They must be properly framed. Frames may be borrowed from Hart House by applying at the Warden's office or to Mr. P. M. Gardiner, Keeper of the Prints. Sunday 31st January will be a Visitors' Day when members may bring their friends, including ladies, to see the exhibition.

Grads Rule House On Tuesday Night

Every Tuesday night is Grad Sports Night in the Athletic Wing. You may not realize what that means but in short, that is the time that Senior members of Hart House get together to work down waistlines and in general keep fit for their business life.

A typical evening of fun and fitness begins with dinner in the Faculty Union Dining-room. Then the members pursue their favourite recreations. Some play a little squash, some take a jog around the track and it is even suspected that the chess room is made use of. But the most popular spot is the revolver range where all last fall excellent instruction was given in military technique by Mr. Biggs, a former Dominian champion marksman, and Mr. Flatman, range officer at the John Inglis Company.

At eight o'clock Mac McCutcheon takes over and gives a special forty-five minute course in physical jerks. The session is specially prepared to be of use to the business man—not too tough but enough to work up a sweat and get the muscles in shape. Until 9:30, when the meeting is adjourned, organized volleyball, basketball and swimming are run off to give the members some experience and fun in regulation team sports. These evenings have been found to be very worthwhile by the many who have taken advantage of this opportunity. No fee is charged—the whole evening is included in every Senior Member's privilege.

P.H.E. Leads Hoopsters After Defeating Sr. Vic

P.H.E. dribbled into the lead of the basketball league yesterday with a 38-17 victory over Senior Vic. The Physical fivesome shot into a decisive lead early in the first half, scoring a total of 21 points to Vic's lone tally. Strange as it may seem, Vic recovered in the second half and came back to outpoint their rivals 16 to 15. However, the damage was done and the score ended 38 to 17.

Sammy Stellman, of all-star rugby fame, led the victors with ten points. R. Sturgess followed closely with nine, Whitey Clayton gathered eight, Dalt Nesbitt, eight, and Frank Watson, four. Johnston and Dederick led Vic with six points apiece, Paslowski had four and McDonald three.

P.H.E.—S. Stellman, L. Clayton, R. Sturgess, D. Nesbitt, F. Watson.

Sr. Vic — Waugh, Shugart, MacDonald, Johnston, Dedrick, Moriarity, Paslowski, Bryce.

Former Student Lauded For Triple Air Attack

F/O Hugh Godefroy, 23-year-old former S.P.S. student, and F/O H. D. MacDonald of Toronto, both members of a Canadian Spitfire Squadron, recently shot up a barge, an enemy camp and a gun placement in the course of one flight, R.C.A.F. headquarters announced this week.

Overseas for two years, Godefroy concluded his first year in the University civil engineering training in 1940 and then enlisted.

During a sortie both he and MacDonald located a barge in the canal, the air force announcement said. They skimmed over the water and making a low-flying attack swooped away without observing full results because of their speed.

They later attacked what appeared to be an unoccupied army encampment, and while crossing the French coast on the way home, scored hits on a gun site.

Godefroy, formerly on the University rowing team, is one of a college trio that enlisted with the air force the day the Athenia was sunk.

The trio included F/O John Weir, a former student with the University of Toronto aerial navigation course, who was ultimately taken prisoner of war in November, 1941. F/O James Jordan, who left his first year medical training to enlist, is now back in Canada.

"Even as a boy Hugh wanted to design aeroplanes," Mrs. Godefroy told The Varsity in an interview yesterday. "On the way over to England he wrote that he killed time on the ship by drawing models of his favourite planes."

Speaking Of Sport

By Jim Paton

IF THE SHOE FITS . . .

From a league of 58 baseball teams and another of 64 basketball teams six games were scheduled for yesterday. Of that number three were defaulted. What is wrong? It could be (a) exam trouble; (b) the fact that some of the games are played at night; (c) that there are not enough players to warrant the number of teams in the leagues. It could be, but we don't think so. What we do think is that there is a definite lackadaisical attitude toward sports this year. A few students in each faculty undertake to manage teams and then spend the rest of the schedule hunting down players who seemingly play if and when they feel like it. To these managers it isn't fair; to a hardworking Athletic office staff who have to juggle the schedules it isn't fair; and to the few faithful who do turn up to find no game—that's right—it isn't fair.

We realize as well as the next person that these are eventful days for university students and that sports are relatively unimportant when compared with the military and academic sides of university life, but on the other hand athletics and conditioning have their place and must not be neglected. Varsity has always pointed with some pride to her interfaculty athletic setup and it will be a sad day for the U. of T. if we be allowed to falter through sheer neglect. A new year of sport is just beginning, so let us have no more defaulted games. Has someone got a towel? I think we're going to cry.

INTERCOLLEGIATE ALL-STAR

From Flight-Lieut. Bob Forster, former Montreal sports magazine editor and now attached to R.C.A.F. headquarters in London, comes the good word concerning Pilot Officer Charles McLean, better known to Varsity sporting circles as "Chuck." Noted for his outstanding football ability and fistic prowess around Queen's and Varsity, Chuck proceeded overseas with the R.C.A.F. as a fighter pilot and judging by his most recent encounter he has seen plenty of action. It seems he got into a dogfight over Malta with two Italian planes and one German and accounted for all three. But a fourth plane got on his tail and wounded him twice. Chuck is now doing well in a British hospital where he was flown after some very rough treatment. In all he suffered two cannon wounds and was badly burned before bailing out.

Following the action Chuck spent two and one half hours in the sea before help arrived and it is claimed that his sojourn in the salt water had the proper effect on his near-fatal burns. However, after a miracle of strong will and the foremost type of treatment plus a splendid physical condition, Chuck will be up and around before long.

House Prepares Banting Exhibit

The Art Committee of Hart House has been making extensive preparations to present an exhibition of the paintings, pencil sketches and woodcarvings of the late Sir Frederick Banting in Hart House, Saturday, Febb. 13. Sir Frederick, co-discoverer of insulin, was killed in an aeroplane crash in February, 1941, while on active service.

Up to date 69 pictures have been received in the Warden's Office, and more are coming every day.

Dr. A. Y. Jackson, who was a close friend of the late Sir Frederick Banting, has written a biographical sketch on "Banting as an Artist." This is to be published at the time of the exhibition. In addition, Dr. F. W. W. Hipwell, a cousin and class-mate of Sir Frederick, has written an account of his life which will be included in the booklet. Reproductions of the art as well as the names of all present owners will also be printed.

There will be three visitors' days when the general public will be admitted to view the exhibition. They will be Feb. 14, 21, and 28.

University of Alberta Wins Awards for Cattle

Edmonton, Jan. 11 — (CUP) — All cattle from the University of Alberta entered in the International Livestock Exposition held in Chicago last month placed in the judging.

One first and two thirds were captured as well as other awards in competition with several Universities and Colleges of Agriculture in the United States, and many prominent American breeders.

The Department of Animal Science at Alberta has exhibited beef cattle at both the International Livestock Exposition and the Royal Agricultural Winter Fair in Toronto, and the Golden Gate Exposition in San Francisco for the past twenty years. During that time many honours, including many grand champions and champions, have been awarded to cattle bred at the University farm.

Sir John Clague Speaks on Burma

The people of Burma, a country vastly underpopulated, are facing many grave problems in developing their own way of life, said Sir John Clague in a recent lecture to a group of fourth year students studying Political Science. Sir John Clague has been advisor to the British Colonial Office in Burma for some years.

"At the time of the Japanese invasion, the Burmese were groping, trying to restrict Indian and Chinese inmigration which reduced their strength, trying to release themselves from British and Indian capital in order to set up their own state industries. Japan was considered as a friend, the liberator of the yellow and brown races, and there were only a few hundred of them, mostly dentists and photographers.

"Burma is a Buddhist country, of about 17 million people, surrounded by overpopulated groups in China and India and in a very strategic political position as the gateway to the interior," Sir John pointed out. "Every range of literacy is extant, from the head hunters of the isolated parts who demand human sacrifices, to the university-educated Burmese in the government administration. External affairs are still in the hands of the Governor, but the cabinet-government has been increasing in strength as its powers have been tried.

"The greatest difficulty has been economic. Such efforts as co-opcratives have failed miserably. But the country is rich in raw materials, a major producer of rice, and has good supplies of oil. Burma must stand on her own feet economically, to maintain her own integrity."

School Leads In Track Meet

Repeating their performance of last year the relay team from School settled into the lead of the indoor track race which is to run from now until March by turning in the fastest time in last night's meet. The relay which is a three man event, each man running one lap of the Hart House track, is led thus far by the Engineering combine of Verne Booth, Pat McDonough and Chuck McDonald. The second half of the event will be run today at five. The only team likely to equal or better the Engineer's time of 54.9 seconds is the Medicine team led by Bob Delaney.

As the score stands with night's result, Meds' second team, made up of Wilford, Lewis and Ford, placed second with the time of 55.2, U.C. "A" team of Paskaloff, Conant and Shackleton were third in 56.4, and St. Mike's "A" of Springer, Revelle and King were fourth in 57.9.

The turnout was very pleasing with several colleges fielding two teams. Hec Phillips, judging from last night's results, is looking forward to a really successful indoor season. Of interest is the fact that the greater number of those competing in the races were inexperienced runners turning out for the first or second time. Eleven teams competed in the first half and probably about three or four will run in the second half to be held tonight. Any faculties who have not yet entered still have time to do so. The only conditions that you need fulfill is to have three men on the track. And don't forget the P.T. credits.

Sportswoman

By Betsy Mosbaugh

There's been talk of tennis, basketball and hockey in this column and according to the law of averages, the time has come to speak of badminton. Margaret Eaton College just over on 415 Yonge St., is the habitat for this year's enthusiasts. A general survey shows an improvement in everything from fees to zealousness. Whether or not the latter bears relation to the fact that the membership is only fifty cents and that the club will supply the birds is a debatable question.

Despite any such monetary influences however, two good courts and a spacious locker room ought to provide anyone with ample reason to wander over there. The days of play are Tuesdays, 3:30-5:00, Thursdays, from 2:30 to 5:00, and Fridays from 3:30 to 5:00. The equipment may not always be up but any of the members may erect it as long as the last player puts it away.

The main point to notice is that unless fees are in soon, the birds cannot be obtained, with the result that nobody can play if she isn't paid up. Fifty cents may be paid to the representatives from each college: Trinity—Barbara Richardson; Vic—Helen Carefoot; St. Joseph's—Betty Mondo; Loretto—Betsy Gowan; U.C.—Shirley Geldart; School of Nursing—Kay Anderson; Occupational Therapy—Norah McCaughey.

If the number who have signed up for badminton really intend to play, there should be a larger membership than last year. Of course there are the old stand-byes such as Shirely Geldart, last year's winner, and Betty Allen, but apparently there are a number of promising freshies among whom is Muriel Siulayson. The tourneys take place around Feb. 23, before which date more will be said.

And so we close with the proverbial rhyming couplet,

If yuh got fifty cents, yuh get birds too.
If yuh ain't got fifty cents, then God bless you.

PART I

(1) DRILL

All members of the Detachment except those taking other courses at this hour will report for drill on Thursday, Jan. 14, at 4:15 p.m. at the O.C.E. gymnasium. Cap badges will be awarded to those members who were unable to be present at the regular ceremony.

(2) FIRST AID DEMONSTRATORS

The following members who have been asked to act as demonstrators for the First Aid course will report to Mr. Thomas in the Basement Recreation Room in St. Hilda's on Wednesday, Jan. 13, at 7:30 p.m. when a refresher session will be held: Sergeants Evans, Galbraith and Needham; Corporals Breithaupt and Coy; Volunteers Anglin, D., Anglin, M., Beaton, D., Beatty, E., Corcoran, C., Dunlop, A., Luxford, M. J., and Synge, C. Volunteers Gandier and Harpham are excused from this session. Any other member who finds it impossible to be present will notify Sergeant Galbraith or Sergeant Needham at St. Hilda's College.

(3) FIRST AID COURSE

A First Air course will be given under the direction of the University of Toronto Health Service to all members who are required to take this training. Lectures will be held in Room 331, O.C.E., on Tuesdays at 4 p.m. commencing on Jan. 19. The cost of a practice bandage and a manual will be charged to each member, the amount to be stated in further Orders.

(4) FOOD ADMINISTRATION

Emergency Feeding: The tenth lecture in this course will be given on Thursday, Jan. 14, at 4 p.m. in the 3rd Floor Lecture Room, Household Science Bldg. Subject: Bread and Sandwich-making. Lecturer: Dr. Alice Willard, Chairman, National Red Cross Nutrition Committee.

Toronto General Hospital: Members scheduled for service at the T.G.H. will report to Sergeant Galbraith to arrange hours.

(5) MILITARY LAW AND ADMINSTRATION

Lectures in the above named subjects will be given at 7:30 p.m. on Wednesday evenings for four weeks commencing Jan. 20. Lecturers: Major G. R. Lane, Chief Instructor, Second Battalion, C.O.T.C., and Lieut. J. C. Evans, Adjutant, Second Battalion, C.O.T.C. Further Orders will be issued.

(6) CIVILIAN DEFENCE (A.R.P.)

The following members are required to take the full course in A.R.P. this term: Anglin, M., Macdonald, E., Ferguson, M. H., and Emerson, A. Lectures will be held on Thursdays at 4 p.m., commencing Jan. 21. There will be no A.R.P. instruction on Thursday, Jan. 14.

The following members who were required to take the special A.R.P. lectures held on Jan. 5, 7 and 12, will report their attendance to their respective N.C.O.'s: Gooderham, M. F., Taylor, R., Mountfield, M., Hammond, E., Lloyd, L., Cooper, F.

U.S. University Students Oppose New Army-Navy Training Plans will be selected by the army for further medical training or other military duties. Medical and pre-medical students not in the reserve will also be subjected to army selection which will decide whether they are to complete their courses.

The Navy

The Navy's plan is more liberal, and in general gives greater consideration to individual preferences than the Army's. According to Dr. Charles E. Daniels, President of Southwestern University, present Navy plans come nearer those laid out by the Association of American Colleges than the Army's plan.

With regard to the Reserve programs the Navy is allowing deferments directly related in length to the number of semesters the student has already been enrolled under the reserve program. Engineering students in good standing will be allowed eight semesters from the time of matriculation regardless of the number of semesters they have been enrolled under the program. This gives them sufficient time in which to graduate provided all examinations are passed.

Reservists who are in medicine, dentistry and theology will be allowed to continue in inactive status until the completion of their studies.

Co-Ed Colleges

Co-educational schools are largely planning to continue with classes for their women undergraduates and whatever part of the male student body is under draft age, or unfit for active service. Trinity College, Hartford, Conn., is debating a proposal to admit women for the first time to take the place of the men who will be withdrawn from it by Selective Service. A poll taken by the Trinity "Tripod," the college weekly, finds undergraduates and instructors almost evenly divided on the idea.

Wrong Addresses Interrupt Mails

By Doc Savage

When people write a nice long letter, put it in an envelope, address it, stamp it and drop it in the box, they promptly forget about it, assured that it will be whisked to its destination by those whom "rain nor storm nor darkness of the night shall delay the feet . . ."

The only trouble is that this doesn't always happen.

It is not because of defects in the postal system, but because of defects on the envelope. Every day a small number of letters turn up in the incoming mail in the University post-office in Simcoe Hall that just can't be delivered. Wrong addresses are the chief trouble. Bad writing helps in some cases, but after years of experience, there are very few sets of hen tracks that go undeciphered from the employees of the Dominion Postal Service.

When the letters are returned with a "He don't live here," they are put in a separate pile and an attempt is made to run down the addressee by means of student directories, etc. If, after a period of 10 days, they are still unclaimed, then they are returned to the main post office and put in the dead letter department.

We might as well ask you too, "Did you have a nice holiday?" You did? That's peachy, so did we. But we started out the New Year by going to the dentist, so if this column seems uninspired, blame it all on him. He bores us.

But other people have come back to the campus in more light-hearted, not to say uninhibited, moods. A case in point is a beaming American mugbug who 'lows as how he had a superwhee of a time during the holidays. "But I wish the girls down home didn't wear such heavy makeup," he plaints. "Ya skid."

* * *

Some of the nice girls up at Victoria were passing remarks about a new sweater on one of the lads. (Yes, you read that right.) Seems the thing is quite a fancy job, all done up with little animals on it. One of the co-eds asked what kind of animals they were, mooses? And the fella explained, no, they were gazelles. "And the gyp of it all is that the animals on each shoulder have no heads."

"Well", piped up one brazen voice, "You certainly are slow. You're supposed to get someone else's head on your shoulder!"

Another confusing Christmas present was a sport jacket with an Eskimo-like hood which was received by one Varsity mastheader. "I got a parka," he told one of his colleagues proudly.

"Hunh," remarked the other obscurely.

"You know, a kind of jacket—"

"Ohh," remarked the colleague, illuminated, "I thocha meant a fountain pen." (Advt.)

* * *

And then there was New Year's Eve when we all welcomed the New Year in in various ways. We celebrated this advent vicariously in Child's at Richmond Street by watching the pot-boy kiss the short order cook.

* * *

On the way home on the street car people were very gay indeed, especially one tall brunette in evening dress who took a shine to the conductor. She denounced him roundly for his maladroitness in handling the door, and then, to show she wash jush kidding, mussed his hiar up for him. This gentleman was, however, rather stiff-necked and she realized it. "Awe," she accused him, "You think I'm tight, thas wash the trouble ish you."

"Oooo, nooo, nooo," he assured her, sofening.

"Well, then," she said, "doncha foget to give me Wellesley."

"No, mam, you can have Wellesley."

'Aww, thas nish, you handsome man," and she mussed him up some more.

Just then what should come along but Wellesley and the conductor opened the door for her. But the goodbye was a lingering one as the gorgeous celebrator clasped the conductor's hand in fond farewell and forgot to let go of it as she slowly descended to the street. At last she was out of the car and the conductor's hand was somehow still inside. The doors closed. The conductor mopped his how, straightened his hat, and remarked to his passengers, "Whew! Another drink and I'd have been kidnapped!"

Lot's of people were home on visits during the holidays and it was just swell being together again and all, and in many cases return visits have been planned. One case on campus is that of a co-ed whose fiance has a civilian job south of the border. She hopes to visit him in the spring some time, but there being a war on it's a tough job to get across the border and documentary proof of the object of all visits is required. This lass was told by a Person of Some Authority that before she could visit her fiance she'd have to have a written proposal from him IN TRIPLICATE.

One of those people who made a visit during the holidays was none other than our colleague Hank Sable who has gathered a lot of the real lowdown on what goes on in the wicked city, the Great Bilingual Metropolis in the East and has prepared a hither for tomorrow, entitled "hither and yon in montreal" or "with bank among the heathen."

HOSPITAL NURSING AIDES COMPARE NOTES ON WORK

By Maureen Murphy

The Hospital Nursing Aides course in the Women's National Service Training has aroused much comment around the campus as part-time Florence Nightengales recount their experiences.

Girls enrolled in this course work in the various Toronto hospitals an average of nine hours a week now, having taken a lecture course of instruction earlier in the year.

Off duty, the girls compare notes on their hospital experiences.

Madelaine Mollard, IV Sociology, reflects: "It's hard to be hard. I wanted to stop and sympathize with all the patients, but you really have to get on with your work, don't you? And then, what we learned in the lectures is not always what we do in pratice. Common sense counts most."

"All rather gruesome, I say," chimes in Isabel McMillon, IV Eng. Lang. and Lit. "But there is a humorous side. One woman told me all her family history tonight—and her troubles."

Connie Purser, III Moderns, commented, "They often ask me what I am doing there, and want to know something about me. The uniform seems to intrigue them." "It's fairly decent," says Phyllis Lloyd, III Household Economics. "Huh!—as decent as a sugar-bag, I'd say!" a voice chirps.

Margaret Matchett, IV general, muses thoughtfully. "I always wanted to know what a hospital was like behind the scenes. It is such a new life. I follow the nurses around and try to learn from them. They are so friendly and co-operative."

Funny stories are plentiful. One runs: "I asked an old lady if she would like to brush her teeth. She said 'Yes.' I turned to go but she called me back and said 'Here you are.' . . . She handed me her dentures!"

"Wait till you hear this," cries Nancy Fraser, II Sociology. "I came across one man tonight who was doing his own darning, if you please! Said he taught himself—and then offered to give me lessons!"

Phyllis Lloyd says: "In my ward there was a woman who wanted to see some men—said she was tired of women. But she wanted them to be Theologs from Emmanuel! It seems S.P.S. men bore her."

Bette Mondo, II Pass, crowns the rising spirits. "This one's on me, kids. A fellow asked me to wind up his bed, so I grabbed the handle. The patient in the next bed called out. Seems I had the wrong handle and had cranked up his broken arm by mistake."

"Talking about the patients" says Dorothy Ellison, III Eng. Lang. and Lit., "They really are swell, though. They joke with you; they try to help you out; know when you are in trouble or green; give you pointers. They more or less know the ropes, don't they?"

Dibs Greene, III Moderns, interjects, "And do they ever think we are wonderful!—and love to know about our college life."

"You meet widely different types of people I think—and see a quite different side of life. Great experience for the future," contributes Enid Challen, IV Household Economics.

Murmurs of "great shock at first" . . . "bit of a jolt" . . . "rather depressing," draw out a statement from Kathleen Coyle, III General, "Oh, heavens, no! You expect that. You know right from the start what you are letting yourself in for. It's really just plain hard work." "And not very funny, either," declares Nancy Fraser.

"There are moments . . ." intimates Gerry Wilson, III Pass Arts. "First time I took a temperature, I left the thermometer in the poor patient's mouth 20 minutes. When I remembered and went back, the patient had fallen asleep!"

"Come to think of it," says Madelaine Mollard, "I had quite an alarming experience. A patient had just died. The nurse bustled in. I waited, expecting tender appreciaton from her. Instead, she exploded, 'Fanry leaving dead flowers in a room!' What happened? I stood outside the door clutching a boquet of dead flowers!"

U. of T. Receives Several Bequests

President H. J. Cody announced recently that the University has received, under the will of the late John Morgan Empey, a bequest of $10,000, the interest from which is "to be used for rewards and encouragements to bright students in the Faculty of Applied Science and Engineering." The late Mr. Empey was a graduate of the School of Practical Science.

Among other donations recently accepted by the Board of Governors is one of $1,000 given by the Swift Canadian Company Limited for research in the Faculty of Household Science on mineral, total ash and calcium content of Canadian vegetables.

Roland O. Daly has made a gift of $1,000 for the establishment of a scholarship in First Year Honour French of the value of at least $50 a year.

E. R. Squibb and Sons have donated $1,200 for Dental Research and Dr. Louis J. French has given $50 for research in the Faculty of Dentistry.

Romaine K. Ross of St. Catherines has sent a gift of $70—$20 to cover the award of the Romaine K. Ross Prize for 1942-43, and $50 to be held in trust to build up a fund, the income from which will eventually provide for a scholarship of $25.

Richard Stephen Creagh left in his will two-sevenths of the residue of his Estate of approximately $500 for cancer and diabetes research.

Undergraduates To Exhibit Art

The annual undergraduate exhibition in Hart House Art Gallery will take place between Jan. 30 and Feb. 12, the Art Committee announced recently.

In past years this exhibition has been well supported by the student body. The only major qualification is that the artist be an undergraduate. Any technique or medium may be used—water-colour, oils, drawings, black and white. The deadline is Wednesday, Jan. 27, when all exhibits, accompanied by the name and address of the exhibitor, must be handed in to the Warden's Office. The names should be attached and the work properly framed.

It is felt that there is much work already done by the students as well as pictures already begun and ideas that have not reached the expressed state as yet. All these things in combination should make for an exhibition worthy of the student body and in keeping with the standard of other years.

SPEAKING of SWING

By Barry Townley

A record-breaking crowd rushed to the Palais Royale on Monday, Dec. 28, to hear Charlie Barnet and his orchestra. The crowd entered expectantly and left satisfied, only sorry that they couldn't stay longer.

The band put on a wonderful show. Probably the most striking feature next to Barnet himself was the voicing, which, combined with tasteful phrasing and superb arrangements, produces an effect that is hard to beat. Though influence from Ellington are still perceptible in the odd arrangements, they add to, rather than detract from the glory.

Taste is apparent in the balance of the sections—there is not too much powerhouse brass work—and in the adequate, but not over-done showmanship.

Barnet himself is a great virtuoso, but unfortunately that is his failing. He always strives for the breath-taking effect, the high note (which he sometimes misses) or the fastest phrase, rather than for melodic beauty or brilliance of idea.

A word about the rhythm section. It had only three men, but thanks to Cliff Leeman's bass drumming, which is unmatched in the business, and the bass man's inspired slapping, a powerful beat shook the foundations of the Palais.

Barnet's three coloured boys caused some comment; two were his star trumpeters and the other is one of the best of jazz pianists.

Charlie and the band worked hard, but if the happy smiles of the guys and gals signify anything, it was worth it.

Free Tuition Provided Men of Armed Services

Montreal, Jan. 11 — (CUP) — Sir George Williams College provides free tuition in its regular courses to all members of the armed forces desiring to attend. This has been done ever since the outbreak of war in 1939.

During 1939-40 and 1940-41 this service was a part of the educational work of the Y.M.C.A. with the troops, which, during those years, emphasized the organization of special classes for men in uniform, in their barracks, at the Y.M.C.A., Red Triangle Club, and in Sir George Williams College. Of late, the educational program has been concentrated in the college.

Since November, 1939, total attendance in the various classes is 23,882 class hours. The 200 members of the forces registered in classes of the college so far this year are divided by units of the college as follows: Faculty of arts, science and commerce, 73; high school, 14; business school, 108; school of art, eight.

Miss Parkes To Inspect Red Cross Detachments At McGill, MacDonald

To Be at MacDonald College this Afternoon and McGill Tonight; Member of C.R.C.C. National Committee

BADGES TO BE PRESENTED

Montreal, Jan. 13—(CUP)—Miss A. E. M. Parkes, Commandant of the University of Toronto Detachment of the Canadian Red Cross Corps, will inspect the Detachment at MacDonald College this afternoon, and will inspect the McGill Detachment this evening.

At the parades, the recruits who have successfully passed the Basic Training Requirements will receive their Red Cross cap badges. "These badges have a special significance because they are a part of the official insignia of the Red Cross Society," stated Mrs. Tyrrell of the McGill Detachment, to the McGill Daily.

Miss Parkes represents the University Training Detachments on the National Committee of the Canadian Red Cross Corps. "Under her guidance Toronto has been the pioneer in the University field," Mrs. Tyrrell continued, "and it is largely due to Miss Parkes effort that University Detachments have received their present recognition in the Corps."

Silcox Speaks On French Canada

Emphasis must be placed upon our British cultural tradition if the Dominion is going to avoid having our culture suffocated by the French and the American, Dr. C. E. Silcox, Toronto graduate, and noted lecturer, stated at the Arts and Letters Club meeting last night in Wymilwood. His subject was the "Role of French Canada in the Dominion."

Dr. Silcox made note of the prevalent view of considering ourselves as Canadians first rather than stressing the British cultural extraction of the English speaking provinces. "The Canadian Forum has attacked the culture of the British Tory, yet it is assumed that French Canada has the right to preserve is own culture."

"A much bigger issue is involved," he continued, "if Canada wanted to withdraw from the British Commonwealth following this war, what would be the implications?" Answering his own question, he said, "We have been largely dependent upon the British market in our economic connection with the mother country. There is no reason why Argentina could not supply the same articles to Britian, as Canada does now. If we withdrew we would become a small country of large territory. Actually, Canada's only salvation is to grow closer to the British Commonwealth, providing that great unit does not become absorbed in an even larger international group.

"It isn't that this is a mere colonial view," Dr. Silcox pointed out, "for the future of the British Commonwealth is closely connected with the future of the world. Becoming an appendage to the United States would be our only alternative."

In analyzing the difference between the French and English in Canada the spcaker declared that we are "practically the same people." That is to say, "there is no great racial difference and our traditions are closely connected.

"On the other hand, the religious cleavage is very real. Because of the two views we get no mentality of mutual understanding and thereby we lose points of contact with French Canada. More practical results of this cleavage are the immigration difficulties,

McGill Professor Gets Commission

Montreal, Jan. 12—(CUP)—Professor John Culliton, former associate professor in the Department of Economics of the Faculty of Arts and Science at McGill University, and who accompanied the McGill contingent on the harvesting expedition, has received his commission in the R.C.A.F. with the rank of Pilot Officer.

P/O Culliton has begun his training at the Lachine Manning Depot where he is taking a regular six weeks course.

School At-Home To be Tomorrow

Tomorrow night, Schoolmen and any others who want to go will throng the Banquet Hall of the Royal York Hotel for the Annual School At Home.

The committee have announced that although the dance will be run along conservative lines it will still be formal since it is the only formal that the Schoolmen have during the year. Corsages will be given to all the ladies at the door, and prizes of many kinds are to be given out in the course of the evening.

Decorations are being done by the School of Architecture who were responsible for those at the C.O.T.C. Ball in Hart House last year.

The committee wishes it known that all members of the University are welcome, and for their convenience tickets may be obtained at the door.

H. N. FRYE TO SPEAK AT FINE ART CLUB

The relationship of literature to Canadian Art will be discussed by Mr. H. N. Frye of the Victoria English Department at the Fine Art Club meeting tomorrow night at 8:30 in the Women's Union.

A graduate of this University and Oxford, Mr. Frye has been closely associated with art circles in Toronto, and has contributed many articles on art to the Canadian Forum.

Mr. Frye is at present preparing a book on the poet Blake.

Toronto Grads In Embassy To U. S. S. R.

Mr. Arnold C. Smith and Capt. J. A. McCordick, brilliant graduates of the University of Toronto, have recently been appointed to secretarial positions in the first Canadian embassy to the U.S.S.R.

Mr. A. C. Smith was winner of the Prince of Wales Scholarship and later a Rhodes scholar from the Political Science and Economies course. He has been successively professor of Economics at the University of Esthonia, cultural advisor to the British legation at Tallin and assistant editor of the Baltic times. In 1940 he was attached to the British embassy at Cairo and then became head of propaganda for Turkey and the Near East.

His classmate, Mr. J. A. McCordick, upon graduation from the U. of T. in 1938, has since studied in Heidelberg, Paris and Esthonia, where he was completing a Russian Course when the war broke out. He has since served in the British Intelligence in the Near East.

U.S. Coeds May Join Naval Reserve

Women's Reserve to Release Men for Duty Aboard Ship; Applicants for Commissions Must Have B.A.

EXPECT 11,000 TO JOIN

Co-eds in the United States are now being given the opportunity to join the navy. Congress has authorized a Women's Reserve of the U.S. Naval Reserve to provide additional qualified personnel to release male officers and enlisted men of the naval service for duty on board ship.

The Reserve Act provides for two classes of personnel: officers and enlisted women. Among the officer personnel inducted there will be candidates for midshipman training leading to a commission, officers for technical duties, and administrative officers.

The requirements for appointment are similar to those governing men: a co-ed must be between 20 and 30 years old, agree not to marry prior to completion of the training period, present a bachelor of arts degree from an accredited university or college, and meet the physical requirements stated in the act.

Enlisted personnel under the act will be enlisted at ratings appropriate to their experience and duties. The general fields of duty for this branch of the WAVES include communications work, general clerical and stenographic work, and mess or kitchen help.

Requirements for enlisted personnel are approximately the same as for officer candidates. Applicants must be between the ages of 20 and 30, and show evidence of graduation from high school or equivalent education in a business school.

Present plans anticipate the induction of a class of approximately 1,000 commissioned officer candidates and 10,000 enlisted women into the naval reserve.

High School Students Admitted

University of Minnesota Admits High School Juniors and Seniors for Winter Quarter; Result of Lowering Draft Age

MUST PASS SPECIAL TESTS

The University of Minnesota has admitted high-school juniors and seniors to the university for the winter quarter. The students were admitted following consultation of university and secondary school officials and were required to complete satisfactorily college aptitude tests, an English proficiency test and special college placement tests.

A move is afoot in many parts of the United States to admit senior high-school students to the Universities in the middle of the year. Like the joint Army-Navy plan recently announced, the new move is a result of the lowering of the draft age to 18. By means of this premature matriculation it is hoped that the better students may be enabled to get as much college education as possible before being drafted.

Admission of high-school students to universities follows no great nation-wide plan, but is a matter decided upon by individual colleges. It is by no means universally approved and was widely discussed before Christmas, notably at Boston University.

2ND AND 3RD YEAR MEDS

2nd and 3rd Year Meds will parade to Convocation Hall Friday 15 Jan. and Friday 22 Jan. 43 for A.R.P. Lecture.

Parades Mon. 18 Jan. and 25 Jan. 43 will be held at University Ave. Armouries from 1330 hrs. to 1730 hrs.

Future parades, after the 25 Jan., will be notified on bulletin board University Ave. Armouries.

Social Events Economized In Varying Degrees

By Edgar Simon

Faculty organizations at the University have gone approximately fifty-fifty in their response to an appeal for economy in social events made by President H. J. Cody in his opening address to students last fall.

The President requested that dances be made informal as much as possible and that they be generally confined to the campus. Several have moved their "at homes" onto the campus or made them informal while a few have continued the custom of holding formal dances off the campus.

The Medical A-Home, held in the fall term, took place in a downtown hotel, but was strictly informal. The Dental At-Home, which will be held Friday night, is also downtown but informal.

St. Michael's, St. Joseph's and Loretto Colleges are holding a joint At-Home on the campus in Brennan Hall. It will be formal, there will be no corsages, and substitute favours will be provided.

The Trinity College Conversazione will be formal, but will be held on the campus at Strachan Hall. The dance committee plan to provide corsages at the door.

The School At-Home, to be held tomorrow night, will be formal, held at a downtown hotel, with corsages being given out at the door. Proceeds of the dance, and of several other campus social affairs, are being devoted to charity. The Victoria College At-Home, scheduled for February, is also planned as a formal off the campus.

University College is undecided as yet about the conditions or locale of the Arts Ball, also scheduled for February. This year's ball may be combined with the Junior-Senior, an informal dance generally held in mid-March.

Several women's residences are holding formals on the campus and on a relatively small scale.

Student opinion on the subject of formals appears to be sharply divided. It has been unofficially reported that some students of one faculty holding an informal "At-Home" boycotted the dance in objection to the move, while the dance of another faculty is being ignored by a number of its students who object to its being formal.

S.P.S. and Knox College distributed questionnaires to their students last fall when the question first arose, and the decision of the Engineering Society to make its dance formal was based on the results of this poll.

LABOUR CLUB TO HOLD INFORMAL DISCUSSION

The first meeting of the Student Labour Club for 1943 will be held tomorrow night at 7:30 at 9 Brunswick Ave.

The discussion will be less formal than usual and will centre around any timely topic in which the members are specially interested. The executive have suggested the Beveridge Report, the Darlan - Giraud - deGaulle affair, as important topics

University To Sponsor First Course In Canada On 'Gliders And Gliding'

Course, Under University Extension, to Begin Jan. 27 in Mining Building; Classes to Be Held Wednesday Nights

LECTURE COURSE

The University of Toronto proposes to offer, through the Department of University Extension, the first course on "Gliders and Gliding" that has ever been given in Canada, President H. J. Cody announced recently. It is expected that this course will open on Wednesday evening, Jan. 27, in the Mining Building of the University and will continue each Wednesday evening for thirteen weeks, two hours each evening. This will be a lecture course in which such subjects as the following will be dealt with:

The History of Gliders and Gliding; Aerodynamics and Mechanics of Flight; Design of Gliders; Meteorology; Instruments; Gliding Training and Gliding Technique; Future of Gliding; Gliding Legislation.

Among those who will give instruction in this new course are, Dr. E. W. Hewson of the Department of Transport at Ottawa; W. J. Jakimiuk who is Chief Designer with the De Havilland Aircraft; W. Stepniewski of De Havilland Aircraft; T. Tarczynski and Waclaw Czerwinski of Canadian Wooden Aircraft Limited.

Employed Students Pay Insurance

Students engaged in insurable employment during the academic term, as well as during the summer vacation, are not exempted from paying unemployment insurance, B. G. Sullivan, Ontario regional superintendent of the Unemployment Insurance Commission, told The Varsity yesterday. In short, students are not in any special class with regard to the payment of unemployment insurance.

However, Mr. Sullivan pointed out that the general regulation applies, which states that persons employed less than four hours daily are not required to pay unemployment insurance, providing they have obtained an exemption certificate from the Unemployment Insurance Commission.

Last year, students employed during the Christmas vacation were exempted, but this regulation did not apply to the Easter vacation. Students working in seasonal employment (such as the canning industry) for a period of not more than 20 weeks, however, who have not been employed in insurable employment, are entitled to an exemption certificate.

Student Journalists Most Intelligent Group At Colgate University

New Jersey—Intelligence tests were made recently of students in various activities and organizations at Colgate University, New Jersey. The neutral observers found that the most intelligent group were those on the student paper. These students were 16 per cent above normal.

As for the meek little student whose name never appears on a committee, he's three per cent smarter than the average. A little cold water is thrown on most "big campus men," the fellow who belongs to all the clubs and appears at least a half-dozen times in the group pictures in his class yearbook. Statistics show that it's not the fact that he participates, but what he takes part in that gives a clue to his gray matters. However, the rating for men in minor athletics coincided with the average.

Ratings for men participating in social, religious, dramatic, musical, managerial and cheer-leading activities were found to be "slightly above average." Almost 30 per cent of the nearly 800 seniors interviewed participated in no curricular activities. Men in student government placed second in the comparative list of Group I.Q.'s.

McGill Workshop To Present Broadcasts

Montreal, Jan. 12—(CUP)—The McGill Radio Workshop in co-operation with the Canadian National Nutrition Campaign will present a series of four broadcasts over Montreal stations at the end of this month. The broadcasts are to consist of original radio scripts by Workshop scriptwriters and the actors in the production will be drawn from the members of the Workshop.

The campaign, which is nation-wide in scope, is designed to acquaint Canadians with the necessity of proper nutrition and is being held throughout the months of January and February.

The Workshop, which was inaugurated last term has already developed a group of script writers and actors. It produced one program for the Victory Loan, and has made two recordings of original dramatic scripts.

J. B. Bickersteth Leads Busy Life

As Head of the Army Educational Corps, Warden J. B. Bickersteth, on his fourth year leave of absence from Hart House, has a busy and interesting life overseas.

Owing to the fact that the Warden's communications to Hart House are of a confidential nature, anything other than of general nature cannot be published. Mr. Bickersteth has been ill with flu in No. 5 Canadian General Hospital but is now back at his work.

Army and adult civilian education is the Warden's special province. Public lectures have been most successful as an educative technique, army broadcasting has been effective and films are fairly popular. Music has gone ahead at a considerable rate in a number of groups who either perform or meet for music appreciation. Forces Art Exhibitions similar to the one held last November in Hart House have been held on a large scale.

Make A.R.P. Real

Yesterday saw the third and last of the three lectures on Air Raid Precautions which have been presented since the beginning of this term in Convocation Hall, and which were compulsory for women students. The purpose of the brief course was apparently to acquaint those women students who had not already taken the courses offered by the Red Cross Corps or the A.R.P. course given in the fall term, with the fundamentals of A.R.P., and as such were apparently satisfactory.

The introduction to the concise and helpful booklet entitled Air Raids which has been issued to those taking the lectures contains the following paragraph:

"Preparedness is the keynote of Civilian Defense. The enemy's blows may fall anywhere and no person should think that he is out of range. Therefore, everyone should know what the enemy is trying to do, what methods and what weapons he is using, and how to counter his attack. NOW is the time to get this information. Where the citizen has prepared for all eventualities, so far as he can, fear and panic are averted. It takes strength of character to survive an air raid, and the knowledge that everything that can be done has been done will enable people to stand by each other for mutual safety."

Such an attitude cannot be too highly praised and the knowdelge set forth in the booklet and its accompanying leaflet of new instructions for fighting fire bombs could not be too well known.

The question now is: is mere acquaintance with the fundamentals of A.R.P. of much use? In the event of an air raid such acquaintance would, we hope, result in the individual's being able to help himself and his neighbours; it would at least result in some lack of panic because of knowledge of the locations of the wardens' posts and the nearest first air stations. But on the other hand mere acquaintance with A.R.P. methods, with no real knowledge and practice to back it up, might easily cause much confusion if untrained persons mistakenly tried to help the Civilian Defence authorities and succeeded only in getting in their way. Serious injury would almost certainly result through the ignorant practice of first aid. This second hypothesis has unfortunately been proved correct in the experience of the early blitz in England.

Emphasis on hours spent at the lectures, and not on the knowledge gained from them, has had the effect of further confusing the issue. The information in itself is good. But to be of real worth it should be backed up by practice in the actual methods used to combat attack. If there is real need for A.R.P. information to be widely known, it should be well known, not glossed over.

Lest anyone should acuse us of criticizing A.R.P. itself, we repeat our point, which applies to all civilians and not just to university students: to be of any real use the practice of Air Raid Precautions must be at the citizen's finger tips, and not in his handbook.

Second Front

We are often told that the war we are fighting is a war of ideas. We were also, until recently, harangued on the subject of the Second Front. In reality the Second Front of this war has been and continues to be the ideas and ideals behind the fighting. Psychological attack and propaganda like the "Hitler Myth" have taken their place and their toll among the United Nations, but it remains for the outstanding few in the spate of books about the war and its causes to give us the intellectual Second Front we must have to win not only the war but also the peace.

The universities are, or should be, the centres for intellectual activity, where a close touch is kept with all trends of thought and plans for the future. While the students as a whole have unhappily very little free time for reading books not on their courses or for discussing plans for the future of the country and the world, the fact remains they cannot rightly make proper use of the their work at the University or become clear thinking citizens unles they do.

Even one of the outstanding books of the past year—books like Howard K. Smith's The Last Train from Berlin, Edward H. Carr's Conditions of Peace, Albert Guerard's The France of Tomorrow, or Pearl Buck's plea for equality, America and Asia, is an excellent antidote for either too much theory or too much science. The works of Ziff and Louis P. Lochner are also worth study.

The Second Front of the intellect is winning victories already but to triumph it must have the support of the people. It is up to us to give it all the help we can.

Outstanding Alumna

This week has seen the return to the eampus of one of the University's outstanding alumnae, who was the first Dean of Women at University College: Miss Margaret Wrong. The Universiy College Women's Union stands as a memorial of Miss Wrong's work for the College, for it was she who first established it, during World War I, by taking over the old Union residence for University College lecturers and professors which stood on the present site of Whitney Hall. At that time the organization was renamed "The Women's Union" and some years later was tranferred to its present location so that Whitney Hall might be built.

If Miss Wrong had done nothing else she would be remembered with pride and affection by University College and by the whole University, but for a number of years past this hard working daughter of Canada's, and the University's great historian, George M. Wrong, has been occupied in England with the translation of literature and reading material for the tribes and peoples of Africa. At present she is the secretary of the international committee which prepares Christian literature for Africa south of the Sahara.

This important work virtually provides that section of the world with its reading material, since it has almost none of its own, and the people of that great area, once taught to read, must have something to read.

In extending this welcome to Miss Wrong we wish her both success in her work and a speedy return.

Art, Music and Drama

Secondary School Concert

There is no more enjoyable musical entertainment in the city than the series of Secondary School Concerts which the Toronto Symphony Orchestra has offered for the last two seasons. My point was admirably proved last night by the large and attentive audience of high school students and others who attended the concert, listened to Sir Ernest MacMillan's excellent commentaries and his equally excellent conducting and applauded everything to the echo.

The audience was not fooling itself. It enjoyed the evening thoroughly beeause it heard good music, superbly played and presented to them in a simple, matter-of-fact way which really helped them instead of marring the evening with highbrow overtones as many commentators are prone to do.

The soloist, Betty Ann Fisher, attacked the Bruch violin concerto with energy and skill. Her rendition of the first movement was particularly noteworthy for its vigour and she showed thorough mastery of the difficult technical requirements of the finale.

The orchestra had a remarkably good night. Completely relaxed by the presence of sweaters in the dress circle where silver foxes are still the general rule, they appeared to be enjoying themselves as much as their audience. They whipped through the Secret of Suzanne overture as if they hadn't ever heard it before, much less played it to death in a succession of Varsity Arena summers. They picked their way cleanly through the exacting tempi of Bizet's first suite for L'Arlesienne. Their playing in the Bruch concerto was full of the rich tonal colour which makes the work far more enjoyable than its number of performances would indicate, but it demanded a Heifetz or a Szigeti or (with Mr. MacDonald's permission) a Menuhin playing the solo part. While we feel disinclined to be unpleasant tonight, we must include a slight work of censure for Sir Ernest who at times allowed his men to overshadow Miss Fisher completely, particularly in the slow movement, in which she simply didn't have the tone or the depth to match the T.S.O.'s splendid string section.

High spot on the program was Scheherazade, which was given the best performance I have ever heard. Without indulging in Stokowski-like exaggerations, the orchestra completely caught the spirit of the work. Elie Spivak's solo work was particularly good, but the entire orchestra played impeccably throughout.

Hotbeds of Evil

More Food Would Help Maybe

By Ed Comment

(This is the first of a series of articles by a Varsity staff writer on existing conditions in the University of Toronto and its environs.)

I went into the Great Hall of Hart House yesterday and we were appalled at the squalor and overcrowding we saw there.

Hundreds of men were fighting over stray scraps of food that littered the floor. I saw women trying to stop the men from fighting, but they were unable to do so.

There were long tables for placing the food upon and at one end of the tiny, smoky Hall was a huge refeetory table at which were seated men in uniform with women waiting upon them. Most of these were well-behaved.

This sight puzzled me, for there seemed to be a class distinction implied by letting some men sit at one table and some at another. Also, the Great Hall is supposed to be reserved for men, and yet I saw women in there with my own eyes. Furthermore, is it really by accident that the Great Hall is in elose proximity to several beverage rooms — notably the notorious Tuck Shop?

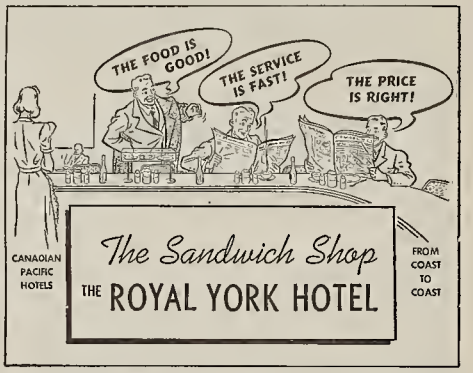
It has been suggested that Great Hall conditions could be improved by limiting the hours during which it is kept open, particularly eliminating the noon-hour session when long lineups of students are invariably observed at its entrance. The only alternative is complete prohibition and a return of the undesirable conditions of the 1920's when students smuggled bootleg food up to the second floor of the house and ate it furtively behind Music Room chesterfields.

The noise in the Great Hall was horrible. It reminded me of the noise of dishes clattering together.

When I talked the situation over with the license-inspector, he admitted that conditions in the Great Hall had disturbed his department for some time.

"We made them close down for a few months during the summer," he said, "but conditions now seem worse than ever."

He said that numerous crimes had been traced to students flashing their rolls in the Great Hall and throwing them at other students. To remedy this situation, rolls are no longer served at Hart House meals.



"SURE I'M HAPPY!"

"Picobac tastes so good—is such a mild, cool, sweet smoke—it helps a man to concentrate while he's working and to relax when he's through. Be happy with Picobac".

UNDERGRADUATE LOAN FUND

Operated by the Students' Administrative Council

This fund is open to students who pay the S.A.C. fee and are in either of the final two years of their courses. The maximum loan is $100.00. Interest is charged at 5% from date of leaving the University. Applicants will be interviewed and loans granted in January. Those receiving loans must sign a note, and a satisfactory endorser is necessary. Application forms are now available in the S.A.C. Office, Hart House.

Don't deprive yourself of Toronto's finest morning daily!

Even if you should think (which Heaven forbid!) that the Cat's flat and the Hither dithers, there's hardly an issue that doesn't run Notices or Orders that concern you.

If you aren't getting the paper at your college building, go and bother your S.A.C. representative. He (or she) might be very pleased if you have a free morning hour and would volunteer to pick up the bundle one or two days a week.

If all else fails---you can get one practically any time at the north door of the Press.

Speaker Reviews African Status

We must think of Africa as a country with whom we will be partners rather than as a far-off savage land, said Miss Margaret Wrong, first Dean of Women of University College, in an address to U.C. girls in Falconer House, Whitney Hall, last night.

There are several elements which make for disunity among African natives, as for example, tribes, customs and various religious cults. The war, however, is drawing them together, Miss Wrong believed. Natives are volunteering for service in the army and in civilian defence units.

A sense of pride in their country is being developed along with this unity. The eventuality is national self-government with independent economic policies.

In order to achieve these aims the fundamental requirement is education of the natives, Miss Wrong declared. As a consequence, she suggested that more scholarships and fellowships in this country be open to negroes.

The essential element on which to base unity in British colonies in Africa is abolition of race prejudice, Miss Wrong declared.

HERE WE GO AGAIN

Tomorrow at Varsity Arena will see the beginning of the hockey leagues. Three games are scheduled with Pharmacy taking on School Thirds at four o'clock, Jr. Meds tangling with Jr. School at five and St. Mike's meeting Dents at six p.m. Most interest will centre on the contest between the young Engineers and Jr. Meds. Jr. School carried off the Jennings Cup last year, turning back Trinity in the finals, after blasting through Sr. School in the previous round. Whether this year's team can repeat or not remains to be seen, but some indication of their ability will be given tomorrow. Most of last year's team will be missing when the Schoolmen take to the ice. In fact, as far as we know, only three of last year's regular will be back. These are Gord Ball, Art Ridler and Jim Boa. However, this is a formidable trio and with adequate replacements, Jr. School should make a strong bid for the trophy. St. Mike's also will receive some attention as the Irish have a habit of sending out powerful ice aggregations, even with their best men performing in Junior "A" company.

Comparatively few students take advantage of the opportunity afforded to see good hockey games (well, fairly good hockey games) for free! Most week-day afternoons there is at least one good contest scheduled at the Arena which would well merit the attendance of a large group of spectators. We are not recommending that anyone go to see School fifteenths outslug Meds fourths (or vice versa) but some really fine hockey is displayed in the upper groups. Most athletes perform better before an audience and hockey players are no exception. Co-eds especially would be welcomed as this is the only major sport this term that girls are able to attend.

Incidentally, we hear that Trinity, last year's finalists, will put forth quite an effort to take all the glory this season. Syl Apps may be coaching the Anglicans and we're told that the same Mr. Apps knows quite a bit about the business of putting the puck in the opponent's net. Whether he will be able to impart a share of his knowledge to the Red and Black boys is a question for the future to decide. With lots of enthousiasm and good coaching Trinity should go far, but we imagine they will be slightly handicapped by a lack of material. Bud Leake, Johnny Aird and Tommy Hull are back from last year's squad but six men are usually considered a minimum number to constitute a team. Bryson and Gordon are down from the Prep School Loop and they should help somewhat. Last year's "B" squad will supply some more but even at that Trinity doesn't figure to come up to last year's standard.

Transportation Difficulties Fail To Daunt University Skiers

By Bill Nicholls

Government regulations on ski trains, the lack of gasoline and rubber are still unable to dampen the enthusiasm of the amateur skiers. Transportation facilities via the T.T.C. make several local regions of hills and trails within easy reach of the harrassed student.

Ski instructors have repeatedly pointed out that thrill-stuff should be avoided if you want to become a good skier. That is one good reason why the practice-hills at High Park is more than kid-stuff. Out east, Scarboro Golf Course can be reached by the surburban car and bus. The territory is not too extensive, but packs a few chillers like "Hogs Back."

The Athletic privileges of University students includes membership at the Toronto Ski Club at reduced rates. The trip to Summit can be made in about an hour from the city limits by radial car and station wagon. Seeing Jack Frost has dished up a pretty good winter, skiing so far at Summit is well worth a second thought.

Getting acquainted with the hills, slalom runs, and the trails is the work of more than one day's skiing. The best policy seems to be to get in shape with a few spills on the practice hills, and then to hit back on one of the trails. Usually trail two is the most popular. The main idea of the trails is that they lead through noticeable land changes so that special hills branch off, beginners. A few words about the 999. Accommodation for waxing skis is provided at the main lodge. Another building is used for refreshments, first aid, and meeting the gang. Half way house is conveniently situated on the grounds and Silverbirch lodge is at the extreme end from the club house.

Special instruction is provided for beginners. Ae few words about the toggery: would suggest a suitable harness, ski boots, vari-coloured (striking) skirts, slacks, and, oh yes, if you do forget your skis in the rush, you can rent them up there. The only caution is, if you don't really think you can make a hill, don't fell you're going to lose face by funking it—ski accidents are not uncommon.

If you want something a bit more spectacular, there is a ski-jump at Newmarket, and if you are especially interested in cross country, you can hike to the University Ski property.

Trinity Review

Christmas, 1942

CHRISTMAS, 1942

The Christmas issue of the Trinity University Review is short of talent and full of troubles. The two are closely related if the leading editorial and a light poem by one of the assistant editors are any indication. We can console the editors of the Review by pointing out, platitudinously, that every campus magazine now and then has a month when contributions just don't seem to come in. The Review's greatest misfortune is that it should have fallen on such a month right after as fine an issue as the last one was.

This issue is particularly lacking in short stories, the fiction being lonesomely represented by R. B. Howard's "Just a Family Man," a veritable little novel in three pages. Don't let the title fool you, it's one of those ironic things and a good little story, but one which in a better month would have had to have taken second mention.

Serious poetry is represented by a sonnet, "Memphremagog Prayer" by Elizabeth Hillman and a slight bit of whimsy called "Fall Fancy" by Yolande Powell. "Memphremagog Prayer" contains some worthwhile description and has done more than its part to weaken this reviewer's inborn and unreasoning prejudice against sonnets.

Light verse is present in profusion, the most amusing being "Two Roundabout Portraits in Doggerel" by M. T. Wilson which delineates D. H. Lawrence and a psychological novelist named Mr. Q. in the manner of Ogden Nash. These portraits most commendably fail to be as bad as Nashisms usually are when they aren't written by the original Odgen.

Possibly unpatriotic, the psychopathically titled, "Don't Look Now, Little Eunice, but Papa Has Discovered Footprints in the Snow," by Lynn Howard deals with wartime Christmases and the giving of war-savings stamps.

"It isn't the gift . . .'—how often you hear it!
So moisten it well with Christmas spirit!"

"The Two-Handed Engine" by J. M. Hodgson suffers from seeming in the first stanzas to be an honest-to-goodness Longfellowism instead of the dig at baby cuts it really is.

While the title of it and the tone of the leading editorial would indicate that "Deadline—Nov. the 20th" by J. B. Seaborn is literally from hunger we would personally like to thank the writer. It is the first time we have ever seen the mental processes and the strain connected with a deadline committed to paper. This verse is really a social document.

Before closing this review in which we've found a lot to deal with in an issue short of talent we'd like to register one loud and untempered squawk against the presumedly critical section on "The Royal Alexandra." Surely in reviewing a season as varied as has been the Royal Alex's this fall a more positive conclusion can be reached than:

"For an evening's entertaiument with an atmosphere slightly more novel than most films offer, the Royal Alexandra is undoubtedly the place to go," fffff

REX WILSON.

Sr. School Edge Sr. Meds In Basketball Tussle

Sr. S.P.S. eked out a 25-24 victory over Sr. Meds yesterday in a close, hard-fought basketball contest. The Engineers grabbed a three-point lead in the first canto, the halfway score being 17-14. Meds had a slight advantage in the second half when they outscored School 10-8 but were unable to make up the deficit. Parchello was the sparkplug for School's attack, scoring 12 points and carrying a major share of the play. Gold fed Meds scorers with 12.

Sr. S.P.S.—Workman (4), Kellam (4), Brooks (5), Parchello (12), VanWyck, Pringle, McIven.

Sr. Meds — Kuckerepa (8), Weinbaum (2), Gold (12), Spring (2), Carson.

Junior S.P.S. turned back Jr. Meds 34-26, emulating their elders. Play was fast and fairly even throughout with the Engineers maintaining a slight advantage. Rod Turner collected 14 points in a brilliant offensive display. Clement and Slemon were the top marksmen for the medicos.

Jr. S.P.S.—Turner (14), Brant (2), O'Laughlin (2), Shock (10), Patterson (6).

Jr. Meds—Haslett (4), Clement (6), Cleland (2), Fegerer (4), Ritz, Nikaido, Slemon (6), Spooner (4).

SPEAKING of SWING

By Barry Townley

On Jan. 2, Duke Ellington played a sensational date at the Royal York Hotel. The Duke and his band are always welcome in this and any other town. They are still the top combination in the business.

I think the crowd noticed a difference in the band, though. There was improved taste, better discipline, and a cleaner attack. One of Ellington's men expressed surprise at the quality the young musicians are showing, and he says he feels that he has to really step to keep ahead of them. Perhaps the whole band feels the same way.

I found it difficult to pin down the secret of Ellington's unique popularity in the jazz field. His band is like a glamour girl—the stuff is there, but try to define it. Perhaps, in Ellington's case, it is taste, or inspiration, if the word means anything. The beat, not only from the rhythm section, but also in the horns, really rides. Their unusual relaxation, the kind that comes from excellent musicianship and long experience, still is there, as is the out-of-this-world voicing of the arrangements.

As to personalities—The Duke himself looks like a new threat in the jazz piano field. Johnny Hodges was in usual top form; Lawrence Brown still rides the most thrilling trombone ever. Ray Nance stayed off trumpet for the night because of a sore lip—but he played a soulful violin. Greer's drumming was too loud, but it may have been bad acoustics in the hall. New trumpet Harold Baker and new chirpers are all holding their own.

A final point—the Duke's many visits to both cities and towns in this country prove that there is a paying market for jazz in Canada.

PART I

TORONTO, Ontario,
12 January, 43.

No. 2-43.

1. SAFETY PRECAUTIONS—SMALL ARMS AMMUNITION

C.A.R.O. 2738 is published hereunder for the information and guidance of all concerned.

Fatal accidents have occurred during training due to the mistaking of live Small Arms Ammunition for drill ammunition.

The attention of all concerned is drawn to certain definite safety precautions which are laid down in S.A.T. Vol. I, Pam. 1, Section 2, and to the precautions set forth in each of the pamphlets of S.A.T. Vol I dealing with particular weapons, as well as those to be taken on ranges, as detailed in S.A.T. Vol. 1, Pam. 18.

The following preeautions, reprinted from S.A.T. Vol 1, Pam. 1, Section 2, are to be noted especially:

(a) Drill rounds are employed in training and are essential for efficiency.

There is, however, a risk of accidents through their becoming mixed with live ammunition. To prevent accidents, inspections will be carried out at the beginning of each lesson.

Instructors will:

(i) Inspect all weapons.

(ii) Inspect all ammunition pouches, M.G. belts and boxes, magazines and carriers, to ensure that no live ammunition is present.

(iii) Inspect all drill rounds.

(iv) Show their own weapons and drill rounds to the squad under their instruction.

(v) Inspect grenades and grenade stores, and order the first saftey precaution to be carried out in grenade training.

(b) Drill rounds will never be used in aiming at an aiming disc held to the eye.

(c) When drill rounds are used for setting up stoppages with automatic weapons on the range, officer conducting the practice will supervise their issue and subsequnt collection.

(d) "Storage of Ammunition—In no circumstances will drill ammunition be kept in, or issued from the same store as that used for live ammunition."

2. ABBREVIATION OF DATES

C.A.R.O. 2725 is published hereunder for the information and guidance of all concerned.

Attention is drawn to Field Service Pocket Book, Pamphlet No. 2, 1939, Appendix II, Section II, in which it is stated that dates will be written in the form 3 Sep. 36 and NOT in the form 3/9/36.

In the United States Forces, the month is written first, followed by the day of the month, followed by the year; thus 3/9/36 in the United States Forces would mean "the 9th of March, 1936." It is, therefore, essential that the correct method of abbreviation as given in Field Service Pocket Book should invariably be used by Canadian Units.

3. CARBINES MACHINE, REISING, CAL .45

Canadian Army Order 445 dated 23 Dec. 42 is published hereunder for the information and guidance of all concerned.

It is very noticeable that proper care is not being maintained in the stripping and assembling of these Carbines, as the two (2) tapered guide pins which hold the Magazine Retainer in place, are, in most cases badly burred, causing jamming of the recoiling portions of the Carbine. As the Action Bar is seated between the Receiver and the Magazine Retainer, these pins are a hand pressure fit only.

In re-assembling the recoiling portions, care should be taken to ensure that the Action Bar lug is properly engaged in the recess of the Bolt, as failure to observe this procedure results in attempting to force the tapered pins into place.

The Locking Shoulders also show a tendency to become slightly burred, also causing jamming of the Recoiling Portions, in such cases repair indents should be sumbitted to the District Officer in order that repairs may be carried out.

Major,

the question of population and easier divorce laws.

"The linguistic problem is very obvious. Every Canadian writer is composing under great difficulties: 30 per cent of the people don't read English, and 30 per cent of the people don't read, consequently the reading public is limited and divided.

"French Canadians have an American point of view, but they fear a connection with the United States for it would mean that their culture would be submerged. Quebec wants to be free of controls and hence does not want to enter into our nation." But there are some bright points, Dr. Silcox suggested. "English-speaking Canadians have little idea of what French Canada is thinking," but his recent investigations show that, "They are beginning to read the things that we are."

For some time past Dr. Silcox has been lecturing in the United States, endeavouring to encourage Americans to come into a realization of their world responsibilities instead of drifting back into the policy of isolation.

In Montreal or Hank Among The Heathen

We arrived in the midst of a 25 below zero cold snap. It took half an hour to thaw pappy out at the station. Then we told him about our fees and he froze again.

Make all cheques payable to the Bursar.

It was so cold on the train coming down that people had to keep winking to prevent their eyelids freezing together. One airman got his face slapped twice.

* * *

During our stay we wandered into one of the large department stores to do a little belated Christmas shopping. The store had recently employed several hundred co-eds as salesgirls. There were so many girls in saddle-shoes and sloppy-joes we thought we'd wandered into Whitney Hall by mistake—but it was too quiet.

* * *

The Manpower Shortage is so acute that the Montreal Tramway have been driven to great lengths. Recently they have actually taken on a few conductors who can speak a little English.

But so little by so few.

As a matter of fact, people are getting to be very educated in Montreal. Even the policemen are beginning to speak French.

It's time they spoke some sort of language.

All of which reminds us of the time we wandered into a store and, in our flawless French, asked for half-a-pound of almonds. The clerk understood perfectly, and promptly produced a tin of lobster.

* * *

During our stay, we noticed the Dorothy Dix's column was informing its millions of readers:

Dorothy Dix Says:

Technique of Wooing Has Many Varied Forms

Yes, yes, Miss Dix, tell us more.

* * *

A few days later we clipped the following deathless verses out of the Montreal Star:

DAISIES

Daisies, Daisies, in the field so white,
Daisies, Daisies, in the field so bright.
We are happy and gay
Every every every day.

Daisies make a lovely shield
So we go around the field
We pick and we pick that
And we make a daisy hat.

TRAVEL

There are trains from San Francisco
And trains from Mexico too
There are airplanes that fly
In the sky so blue.

(First prize, serious verse.)

The neighbourhood barber, whose linguistic achievements tell him that Bonjour will do for both Hello and Good-bye, still (and invariably) says as we leave his establishment: "How are you sir? Thank you very much."

Very well, please.

This is the same honest citizen whom we had suspected of being a Nazi—why else woulda French barber hand out German haircuts. But we finally discovered that twarn't so. He's of Indian descent and was just unable to repress the atavistic urge to scalp people.

Chinese Student Writes Of Flight To Free China

(The following are taken from experiences of Chinese students in their wonderings from a bulletin issued by the National Student Relief Committee in Chungking, China. They are translated in whole or in part from the Chinese. Owing to the lack of sufficient funds to carry on the relief work, the Committee requires case histories of the student to whom the aid is given. This is the first bulletin of its kind to be sent from China.)

One letter tells of a student, Wei Shu-an, who escaped from Hong Kong after its fall, and was enabled to continue his studies in Free China: "Who would expect that on December 8 last year war broke out in Hong Kong? After a few days Kowloon fell into the hands of the enemy. By this time we couldn't escape but had to wait patiently. At night the sky was lit up by the conflagration. Whatever were things of value were taken away by the Japanese. In a few more days the whole of Hongkong fell and so came under the complete control of the Japs.

"The school authorities were then at a loss what to do, as they could not draw any money from the bank, and food they had none. Even if we succeeded in buying little food, it was robbed. . . . Every student became pale and thin through hungcr. Of course the people were in the same plight. The situation became worse when cholera broke out, and dead bodies were lying everywhere in the streets. At this stage the Japs had to evacuate the people, encouraging them to return to their native homes. This was my chance of going to the interior to study, so I applied to the school for assistance and got $60.

"Before we reached Free China we were searched three times by the Japs and were relieved of our watches, fountain pens, woolen things, shirts and whatever things were useful to them." Wei Shu-an lost most his original grant on the journey, and was given further relief at Hengyang throught the Y.M.C.A.

Barely existing makes for peculiar impressions on student morale. Tang Hsin-tao who completcd his studies at Chungking writes of his difficulties after the fall of Shanghai:

"Being alone with the school, the source of economic supply was then cut. Worrics and sorrows were my constant companions. Then I realized that my home, orchard, together with the property therein were destroyed by fire, and the pain within me is unintelligible to anyone except those who have undergone the same as I did. Hence I became more dissipated in will and passive in many ways. . . . It has been two years since, and only by the student loans can I carry on my studies up till now."

Prof. Arthur to Speak In Queen's Lecture Series

Kingston, Jan. 12—(CUP)—Prof. E. R. Arthur, of the Architecture Department of the University of Toronto, will speak on Canadian Cities and Reconstruction on March 1 during the series on fine arts to be held at Queen's University.

In a lecture at Toronto University Professor Arthur criticized the plans for the reconstruction of bombed London which have been submitted for criticism by the British Royal Academy Planning Committee, and suggested that plans for reconstruction in post-war Canada should be made without delay.

Opinions Vary On Formals As Flowers, Taxis, Finances Discussed In Varsity Poll

Co-eds Like Formal Dress, But Happy if Men Go Informal; Financial Question Raised by Students

SUGGEST OPTIONAL DRESS

Campus opinion varies as eds and co-eds currently consider the problems of flowers, taxis, flowing evening gowns and tails in connection with college dances. On the whole, students seem in favour of taking their fun with fewer feathers and furbelows.

"Dances should definitely be informal," is the opinion of Rose Faryna, III Household Science. "Extra money can be used for war purposes, and besides it's just as much fun to go informal."

Murray Thomson, II Vic, and G. Wakely, II U.C., pondered the problem, then concluded Faculty At-Homes should be kept on the campus, and "dress should be optional according to the finances at the disposal of the gentleman in question."

Three St. Mike's co-eds admitted they did like to wear their formals, but they would be quite satisfied if men would wear ordinary clothes. "Besides, men always look so uncomfortable in evening dress," they said, "especially those stiff collars!"

Two medical students thought dances should be off the campus whether or not they were informal.

With their At-Home taking place tonight, School was still divided on the subject. The majority had voted for a formal dance but one poster advertising the dance as formal had a large "Why?" scrawled after it. Two first year Schoolmen sated that first year were against

U.S. Dances Hit by War

Minnesota, Jan. 13—Campus social functions have been hard hit in the United States as well as Canada by war-time restrictions. At the University of Minnesota Snow Week has been changed to War-Time Winter Week, while the Spring Senior Prom becomes an informal dance scheduled for February.

The Gopher year book will appear in March, almost three months in advance in time, for graduation of accelerated students.

Sophomores and freshmen will combine their annual dances and the highlights of the social season, the Jaybee and the Interpro Ball, will be informal. One formal will be held in February.

The dramatic productions will go on as usual as well as the Engineer's Day and the Aero Ball, and the term will end with the usual Commencement and Convocation exercises.

Yale to Train Experts In Foreign Area Studies

Washington, Jan. 13—Yale University is embarking on a program of "Foreign Area Studies," to train experts in various fields in the language, history and customs of those parts of the world which may be occupied by United Nations forces as the war progresses.

The courses will be open to economists, engineers, public health officers, social workers, government officials, business men, and any other college graduates whose ability would be valuable in rebuilding shattered nations after the war.

The training will be of an intensive nature. Students will study a certain section of the world for twelve weeks, although this might be cut to six weeks for those who had a fair grasp of the language.

PROF. GELBER TO SPEAK ON "AMERICAN JEWRY"

Prof. L. M. Gelber of the History Department will address Avukah tonight at their first meeting of the term. His topic will be "American Jewry Looks Around."

There will be a brief piano recital by Martin Clenman.

The meeting will take place tonight at 8 o'clock at Wymilwood.

Peace Plan Topic To be Debated

St. Michael's College Senate Club will meet the Newman Club Debating Society in a mock parliament debate on the subject, "Resolved: that a suitable basis for world peace can be found in a world commonwealth patterned after the British Commonwealth of Nations," on Sunday, Jan. 17, at 2:30 p.m. in Brennan Hall.

The Newman Club debaters will uphold the resolution, with Arthur Maloney, III Osgoode, acting as Prime Minister and Frank Keenan, III Osgoode, second speaker.

St. Michael's men forming the opposition will be Charles O'Connell, II Honour, first speaker, and Alex B. Campbell, III Honour, second speaker.

Jim McCardle, IV Honour, president of the Senate Club, will preside. The debate is open to all students.

MINNESOTA SEES STUDENTS AS POTENTIAL FARMERS

Minneapolis, Minn., Jan. 13—Students at Minnesota University are looking forward to a summer of farming, as economists of the Agriculture Extension stress the increasing need for farm workers.

In an Extension pamphlet titled "The Minnesota Farm Front in 1943," Ernest T. Baughman predicted that one and one-half million new farm workers will have to be recruited this year to fill the gap left by workers going to war plants and the armed forces.

"This will mean that not only farm families but urban men, boys, girls and women as well will have to work in the fields," he said.

Gord Bell Named S.A.C. President

Gordon Bell, former President of the Medical Society and First Vice-President of the Students' Administrative Council, has been named President of the Council for the remainder of this year. He acted as chairman of the first Council meeting of the new term held in University College yesterday.

Jim Cawley, President of the Engineering Society, replaces Bell as First Vice-President while Ruth Robinson, Head of College of St. Hilda's, continues as Second Vice-President.

American Colleges Give Books to Forces In National Campaign

Washington, Jan. 13 — Colleges throughout the United States are actively co-operating in the 1943 Victory Book Campaign to supply more and better books to men in the armed services.

College stores and campus committees have enlisted in the drive, and plans are being made to obtain a record-breaking collection of good books from members of the various faculties as well as from the students at large.

The types of books wanted include best sellers (both fiction and non-fiction), recently published text-books, stories of action, humorous books and small reprints of popular titles.

This campaign is sponsored by the American Library Association, American Red Cross and the U.S.O.

Three Canadian Universities Move To Eliminate Women With Unsatisfactory Marks

Question Not Discussed at Ottawa Conference; No Official Regulations Promulgated Regarding Women Students

NO DECISION HERE

By Canadian University Press

Although no official regulations have been promulgated regarding women students at Canadian universities with unsatisfactory scholastic records, three universities have taken steps to remove them from classes.

While the question was not discussed specifically at the Universities Conference held at Ottawa last week-end, one university official said college heads were agreed on an interpretation of existing regulations which would make no distinction between the sexes.

The Faculty of Queen's University, which announced last term that women would be affcctcd, asked 34 women to leave the university following publication of the results of Christmas examinations.

A number of women students have been "weeded out" at McMaster University, Chancellor George P. Gilmour announced recently. The exact number of women affected has not been disclosed.

While no action has yet been taken at the University of Western Ontario, pending announcement of the results of term examinations, President W. Sherwood Fox has announced that no distinction will be shown between men and women students who fail in these examinations.

No decision has been rcached on the question of co-ed failures at the University of Toronto, but the question is to be discussed at a forthcoming Senate meeting, A. B. Fennell, University Registrar, announced. Toronto men whose records are unsatisfactory have not been asked to leave the university but merely reported to their War Services Board.

Mr. Fennell said earlier that since there was no government conscription of women, it would seem improbable that women students would be dealt with in the same manner as men except possibly in flagrant cases at the discretion of the university.

Hart House Buys 26 New Books

The Curator of Hart House Library has announced a list of 26 newly acquired books which may now be found on the new book shelf. These include 17 non-fiction and nine fiction.

The non-fiction includes such divergent military works as "See Here, Private Hargrove" and "Lee's Lieutenants" as well as other books on this war and on the problems afterward. On the completely escapist side there is James Thurber's latest, and in the realm of bigger subjects Emil Ludwig's "Mediterranean."

The fiction contains Somerset Maugham and Lloyd C. Douglas, with detective fiction represented by Ellery Queen and Agatha Christie.

The list is as follows:

"G. B. S." by Hesketh Pearson; "Where Angels Fear to Tread" by Elizabeth B. Campbell; "Van Loon's Lives" by Hendrik van Loon; "For Hilaire Belloc—Essays" edited by D. Woodruff; "Past Imperfect" by Illa Chase; "The Donkey Inside" by Ludwig Bemelmans; "My World and Welcome to It" by James Thurber; "See Here, Private Hargrove" by Marion Hargrove; "Our Hearts Were Young and Gay" by Skinner and Kimbrough; "The Making of Tomorrow" by Raoul de Sales; "Behind the Mask of Medicine" by Miles Atkinson; "The Mediterranean" by Emil Ludwig; "Balcony Empire" by Reynolds and Eleanor Packard; "From Suez to Singapore" by Cecil Brown; "Canada Today and Tomorrow" by W. H. Chamberlin; "The Roots of American Culture" by Constance Rourke; "Lee's Lieutenants" by D. S. Freeman.

The fiction group consist of:

"The Hour Before Dawn" by Somerset Maugham; "The Robe" by Lloyd C. Douglas; "Bill Guppy, King of the Woodsmen" by Hal Pink; "Phantom Lady" by William Irish; "Reprisal" by Ethel Vance; "Sporting Blood" by Ellery Queen; "Thorn-Apple Tree" by Grace Campbell; "Assingment in Britany" by Helen MacInnes; "The Moving Finger" by Agatha Christie.

Military Training Of Medical Students

In The Varsity of Dec. 11, 1942, instructions were printed which had recently been received from the Department of National Defense regarding Military Training for Medical students of all years. Some modification of these instructions has been found necessary and appear below.

FOURTH, FIFTH AND SIXTH YEARS

After consulting with the District Medical Officer, it has been agreed that pending further instructions from National Defense Headquarters, Medical students of the fourth, fifth, and sixth years will take only the prescribed course in Military Medicine; students of these years who are enlisted in the R.C.A.M.C. will receive further instructions from the District Medical Officer in due course.

FIRST, SECOND AND THIRD YEARS

Medical students of the first, second, and third years will continue their Military Training in the 1st and 2nd Battalions of the C.O.T.C. in which they are now enrolled. Only those second year students who are members of "E" Coy. 1st Battalion, will take the course in special R.C.A.M.C. subjects which began on Jan. 11, 1943.

Artsmen Crack Books, Burn Oil; S.P.S. Under Post-Exam Gloom

With phrases like "rationed," "slashed drastically" and "the axe sharpened" recently tossed at them by the press, students appear to be bearing down to tough routine studies for mid-term examinations.

A Varsity survey revealed yesterday that many a pencil is being sharpened at the grindstone and many a midnight oil lamp is being burned at both ends as students increase their study hours.

"This report that students of mediocre ability will be eliminated from colleges has got me plenty worried," said Anthony Leo, I St. Mike's. "I've been doing some intensive studying during the Christmas holidays."

This was seconded by D. Watts, I U.C., who says he has maintained a "steady rate" of consistent poring through his note books.

While most S.P.S. students questioned seemed to be concerned about the future announcement of names of students who had failed in recent S.P.S. examinations, H. K. Wardell, I S.P.S., said his viewpoint was one of "impartiality."

"It doesn't bother me particularly," said Wardell. "But I'm only uninterested—not disinterested. The outcome of the exams will depend on the University Senate."

C. H. Wood, I S.P.S., mantained that the report stating 100 of the 606 S.P.S. students would be forced to discontinue studies was false. He said that according to professors at the School of Engineering extremely few students had failed and that the actual number in this position was less than 100.

"This number has been magnified by some professors only to scare the students," said Wood.

(A. B. Fennell, Registrar of the University, announced Mon., Jan. 11, that academic records of approximately 100 University of Toronto students—the bulk of which attend the Faculty of Applied Science and Engineering—had been considered unsatisfactory by the University Senate, and their names were being forwarded to proper military authorities.)

I. J. Shales, IV S.P.S., and I. R. Tounsbury, IV S.P.S., both stated they were eager to learn the results of the Senate's decision.

Here's what S. Highman, II Medicine, had to say: "All Meds students are working at a terrific rate apparently to excell in the next exams at the end of March. Meanwhile, if the government will find it necessary to induct fellows like myself into the army, I'm

LIBRARY HILL IS SKIERS' NURSERY

Say what you will about the slopes of the Lauterbrunnen, the Wengen, the Scheidegg, the Grundelwald, the Eiger, or even the Minch. You may praise every ski-way of Alpine Switzerland to the skies. But as far as the kids in the neighborhood of the University are concerned, their best bet for a good ski-way is the 100-foot vallcy which is a few steps from the campus library.

You can shout hallelujahs to the modern conveniecs of Gstaad, or salaam before the skiing hills of Montreux. But the handful of school kids who meet at the University slope every afternoon from four to five to ski think differently. They'll make no bones about informing you that their miniature Sun Vallcy is tops.

And talk about skiing technique. The school kids convened here will tell you with awe that one of their number, Alan Sanderson, 16, from Central Technical School, can make more gelande-sprungs than a double-jointed serpent. And they will chorus that it is believed his snow-plough stops and sitzmarks—not to mention his gremlinesques—almost equal those of the fabulous Arnold Lunn himself.

Sanderson says the snow here is too well packed and is tough to climb, but apart from that the University hollow makes for good skiing. One section of the hill alone contains eight bumps.

Modestly he says: "What I like about the skiing here is that there are only two turns to make—one to the right and one to the left."

One complication that provides the skiers with variety is the tricky business involved in dodging the 20-odd tobogganists from the Bloordale School who scuttle down the hill in homemade bob-selds, sleighs made from wooden boxes, or belly-flop on pieces of plank. But that doesn't worry most of the University Sun Valley skiers. They usually hurdle them.

With every sporting crowd there's usually a wall flower, and at the University Hill we found one in the form of ten-year-old Helen Adler who says she usually accompanies her brother, Dave, when he goes skiing.

Helen has tastes for neither the Lauterbrunnen, the Wengen, the Scheidegg, the Grundelwald, the Eiger, the Minch, nor even for the University Sun Valley. Asked why she preferred neither to ski nor toboggan, she smiled cherubically and lisped, "I like coming here because I like watching the college soldier boys march by."

LIEUT. W. C. PATTERSON REPORTED KILLED AT DIEPPE

Lieut. William Clark Patterson, a former student of the University, is now reported to have died in action at Dieppe, according to the 247th army casualty list. He was associated with the C.O.T.C. and with the reserve army. He then enlisted in the Royal Regiment of Canada.

After his graduation from Humberside Collegiate, he enrolled, first as an occasional student, and then in the Teachers' Course.

Aid To Russia

At yesterday's Students' Administrative Council meeting, it was decided that the student body of the University should be asked to contribute to the present "Aid to Russia" campaign, in co-operation with other youth organizations currently working to make the drive still more successful. General outline of the plan is that each student organization represented on the Council shall raise funds by methods left to the discretion of the individual Executives, and that these funds will be pooled to be forwarded to the fund as an all-University contribution.

Students in the various Faculties and Colleges will be hearing more of this campaign from their student governments within the next few days and will be called upon to make their contributions soon, as the deadline for money contributions to the fund is set for Jan. 31. There is a variety of ways in which such money can be raised—through proceeds from dances and other social functions, tagging and surtaxes placed on tickets, campaigning for individual contributions and so on.

The onus in the particular drive, unlike in the recent War Services Day campaign, rests not with the Council as a whole, but with its constituent members. The S.A.C. will handle only the business of collecting the group contributions and sending them along as the University contribution to "Aid to Russia."

It is unnecessary here to dwell at length upon the merits and worthiness of the campaign. That the public approves it vigorously is evidenced already by the fact that fund figures are close to three-quarters of a million dollars and mounting rapidly. We have little doubt that the fund will meet with equal support on this campus.

When They Come Back . . .

Air Commodore Frank McGill, Commanding Officer of the Royal Canadian Air Force No. 1 Training Command, recently told a press conference of his dream of a post-war university for returned men, to help bridge the occupational gap that may be expected to accompany demobilization.

Here are some of the things he said on the subject: "This is just my own idea; I have spoken to no one about it officially, but I'd like the R.C.A.F. to have the satisfaction of knowing that it never kicked a man out—demobilized him, if you prefer that word—without giving him a chance. . . . I realize that it would take a lot of organizing and perhaps a lot of money, but it could be done. . . . The purpose of this university would be to see what homecoming men—airmen above all—could do, and help fit them for that job. Then, when employers needed men of the type we had, our men could go to them and have a chance. . . . I would like to be able to see a man off with something more than 'Thanks for offering us your life—and goodbye!' . . . This would not be only for air crew, but for everyone. We have the buildings and we could get the staff to do the teaching. . . . I might even get myself into trouble for mentioning this idea of an R.C.A.F. University, so I repeat that it is my own idea. I shudder at the thought of depressions that may come, and airmen who offered their lives being victims of those depressions. It should not be."

Although the loftily-academic may question the right of such an institution as Air Commodore McGill has envisaged to be called a university instead of a vocational school, no one can deny the soundness of his scheme. It would prove an invaluable supplement to the government plan—already in partial operation—for the rehabilitation of students whose academic careers are interrupted through active participation in the war.

And it is good to think that men high up in the armed forces are already giving serious and constructive thought to the problems attendant upon swinging whole Services back into civilian life. To the heroes of the nation we will all owe a debt of such great magnitude that it is none too soon now to begin consideration of how that debt may best be paid.

Correspondence

Editor,
The Varsity.

Dear Sir:

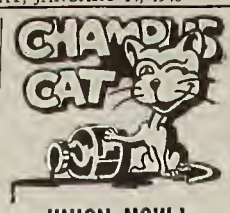
The University at War has been, in the past, largely discussed under the two headings of essential and non-essential courses. There seems to be little doubt in the minds of the authorities and the public about the group of essential courses, which are usually understood to comprise medicine, dentistry, engineering and certain fields of pure science.

About the utility of medical and dental graduates in wartime there can be little question. Yet the full usefulness of the scientist or engineer may only be realized if he is to be employed in the very capacity for which he has been trained. This community certainly cannot be so wasteful as to squander its manpower, money and effort, at a time such as this, in training men for capacities which are not intended to be used, or at least fully used, for a successful prosecution of this war.

A large proportion of the graduates from the highly specialized technical courses of this university have been absorbed, as officer material, in the armed forces of this Dominion, and it appears that an even larger proportion of future graduates will choose this course. This seems logical enough when, for instance, an electrical engineer joins the Signal Corps; but why should a mining, metallurgical or chemical engineer, or a graduate architect, be subsidized and encouraged by the government to pursue his studies of a highly specialized field (during the last two or three years before graduation, at any rate), in order that he may then become eligible for a commission in some technical branch of His Majesty's services, when even the basic training common to all engineers bears on direct relations to the duties of a junior officer in any of the services?

A Junior officer's routine work, his duties and specialized knowledge, all have to be acquired after he has entered the Forces, whether graduate or not. In this job any previous technical training at college will certainly be a distinct help to him. But if men may be trained for highly specialized jobs in peacetime, may they not, equally well, be trained directly for a highly specialized job in wartime? May those, who are to be selected as officers in the services, not be given just those technical fundamentals they need, without the years of wasteful specialization? Recall the training of certain Army, Air Force and Navy personnel which has been carried on, through University of Toronto facilities, for some time in the past.

In the face of a long term war, there seem two courses open for disposing with the scientific courses of this university. If such need exists, allow a carefully selected group of students to enter the scientific courses with the obvious view of employing the graduates in vital war industries. Allow another, equally carefully selected group, to pursue courses equipping them with all the material necessary for a technical officer's job in one of the services.



The "non-essential" arts courses seem doomed for the duration. Why not find a more practical and rational arrangement for the technical courses, in order to economize facilities and forestall justified criticism?

Yours truly,
Peter Kaye,
III Chemical Engineering.
Jan. 8, 1943.

With Mr. Kaye's remarks, except for his reference to the apparent doomed of the Arts courses, we find ourselves in agreement. And we must remember in criticizing that remark that it was written prior to the recent Universities Conference which—to the surprise of more than one of us—left the status of Arts courses much as it had been previously, although it placed further empahsis upon the regulations binding upon students in those courses, and, indeed, in all Univeristy courses.

Undoubtedly there is much taught in some of the scientific courses which can have little immediate bearing upon the future work of the man who enters the armed forces upon graduation. Our one point of reserved judgment is that perhaps this additional knowledge will stand that man in excellent stead in the post-war years, proving of value not only to himself but to the nation of which he is a citizen.

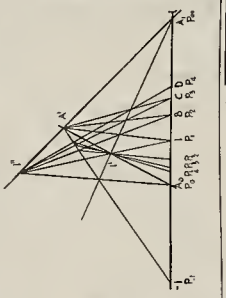
UNION NOW!



Confederation of Provinces to Follow War, Politician Predicts in Maiden Speech; Also Favours Conscription

C.I.O. TO ORGANIZE C.O.T.C.

Winnipeg, Jan. 13—(CUP)—A Federal Union, similar to that now in existence in Australia and in the United States, may be practicable for Canada, I. M. Backin, newly elected leader of the Reactionary-Communist party, said in a speech at Winnipeg during the Christmas vacation. The occasion of Mr. Backin's speech was the installation of officers of the Winnipeg Aid-to-Russia Committee, formerly the University of Manitoba MacDonald-Cartier club.

"This project," Mr. Backin told his startled audience, "is to be the main plank in our party's platform in the coming elections. As soon as we get our hands on a little more of this-here Moscow Gold we will carry the polls."

Blueprint For Federal Union

...for onions, a teor.

Reaction to this speech was varied. "It sounds like a good idea," said Tim O'Buck, newly appointed Professor of Economics at St. Michael's College. "When I was in Russia . . ."

"Now, now, Tim!" his wife interrupted him, "you're always talking about Russia."

"The scheme should be feasible," said an anonymous editorial writer of Le Pouvoir, prominent Montreal newspaper. "French Canada would certainly be willing to go fifty-fifty on everything. For instance we could have a Parliament consisting of fifty members from Quebec, and fifty from the rest of Canada. C'est agreeable, hein? . . . Non? . . . Ah, ces anglais!!!"

"Federal Union would never work—I ought to know," said a tearful-eyed retired politician, when interviewed in his St. Thomas home. "Besides," he continued, thoughtfully, "I HATE UNIONS!! Onions is what I like."

"This matter should be submitted to the people of Canada, in the form of a plesbiscite, let us say," said a usually anonymous source in Ottawa named MacKenzie King.

"We hate plebiscites, they're undemocratic!" said a self-styled newspaper called the Mop and Pail.

At press time no action has been taken, but a statement was expected at any moment from the adjutant of the Queen's University C.O.T.C.

UNDERGRADUATE LOAN FUND

Operated by the Students' Administrative Council

This fund is open to students who pay the S.A.C. fee and are in either of the final two years of their courses. The maximum loan is $100.00. Interest is charged at 5% from date of leaving the University. Applicants will be interviewed and loans granted in January. Those receiving loans must sign a note, and a satisfactory endorser is necessary. Application forms are now available in the S.A.C. Office, Hart House.

Foresters, St. Mike's B Win Baseball

Forestry and St. Mike's B's slightly swamped Emmanuel and Dents B's respectively in a couple of four-inning baseball tussle in the big gym yesterday.

To take their game finally 8 to 14, the white collar lumbermen made a splurge in the first inning and scored the first four men at bat. Next inning a repeat performance was produced by Forestry but from there in the Theolog pitcher, Smith, tightened up and held them scoreless in the final two batting sessions. Clarke, doing Forestry's hurling, allowed only four runs—well scattered—with a run an inning.

Flooring only six men, the Dents B squad, despite some fine hurling on the part of Bob Marshall, just couldn't keep up to the fancy array of batting talent of the Irish. The St. Mike's fielding staff was a lot more efficient and allowed few hits. Tom Jacob did some fine work on the mound and was backed by a strong team—which looks as if it might go a long way in this mushball circuit, at least. Inning scores shows that the Irish went into the lead 1-0 in the first and lengthened it to 4-2 in the second. Dents came back to make it 6-5 in the third but the Double Blue staged a rally and walked away with the game 10-6.

Forestry — Campbell (1), Lawson (2), McBride (2), Adams (2) Hall, Hueston, Bentley (1), Truemmer, Clarke.

Emmanuel — Stevenson (1), Newcombe, Gibson (1), Gillespie, Edworthy, MacLaughlin, Brenn, Wanless (2), Smith.

St. Mike's B—Kennedy (2), Weber, Dunlap (1), Jacob, Des Roches (1), Odette (2), Blum (3), Devlin, Ullich, Casey (1).

Dents B—Lipman (2), Ackerman, Witchell (2), Tenczer, Marshall (2), Goldberg, Chapnick.

Sportswoman

By Betsy Gowan

Today we're going to talk about hockey. It's a game that requires more skill and holds more thrills and unexpected plays (especially when we fair stick-handlers go after the puck with all our vim and vigour) than any other sport on the campus. By now, we hope that all you gals who can skate and are interested in testing your prowess further have decided to try the game, and that all you oldsters at the noble art have pinned yesterday's schedule up in a safe place for future reference. (They have a cute way of disappearing just when you want them.)

Speaking of schedules, everyone almost has to be on time this season or else the games will be shortened because other tilts, especially in the Arena, will follow immediately. It was decided at a meeting of the College representatives at which the schedule was drawn up that figure skates should not be worn this year, unless absolutely necessary, because of the added facility of running with them.

Practices will, with the exception of Vic, be held on the little rinks outdoors at the west end of the Stadium. The times for practice are from 4:30 to 5:30. U.C. and St. Mike's practice on Monday; O.T. and P.H.E. on Tuesday; St. Hilda's and U.C. on Wednesday; O.T. and P.H.E. on Thursday; and St. Mike's and St. Hilda's on Friday. We'd like to see a good turnout for all these practices—experience is not necessary, and freshies are particularly welcome.

Speaking Of Sport

By Roger Conant

AND TODAY IT'S HOCKEY

Unless you read yesterday's S.O.S.—and we urge you to snatch a smattering of Smith once in a while—you may not be aware of the fact that today will see the start of the long treck to the Jennings Cup. And the said Jennings Cup, dear children, is that emblem of interfaculty supremacy in Hockey. And it is for that emblem, that the six teams are beating their brains out against one another this afternoon. And it augurs well for three good games starting at four o'clock—and if drill doesn't take all your time it might pay you to take a looksee at the fracas.

The said Smith enlarged upon some of the entries' chances—School, St. Mike's and Trinity being notable examples. Although we also like the looks and chances of the top S.P.S. aggregation, we would like to make mention of a generally and usually underrated entry from the College of Dentistry. Every game of Dents that we saw last year we enjoyed thoroughly. And this year most of the same team are still going strong. For the third year 'Cos' Castaldi, Lou Channell and Tommy Crouch are together to compose the major part of the Molarmen's offense. And that has been a plenty hot threesome—and unless undue circumstances arise we expect to see a lot more before the old mug has been handed out for '43. And a coupla guys by the name of Tripp and Hambley could also be brought in for honourable mention. Remember though, we aren't predicting anything drastic like winning the silverware for this squad but all we are saying is to keep an eye open for this outfit, for they will be in there tooth and pail.

SPLASH-SQUAD FOREVER

The Varsity Blues natators are at it again! Like all intercollegiate sports the all-Varsity team has no league. But because of the enthusiasm of the better swimmers and because of the inexpensiveness of the pastime, it has been maintained for exhibition purposes. Last year it formed some of the attractions for several of the Athletic Nights. And likewise the team is being formed to be used this year. So far the R.C.A.F. squad from No. 1 I.T.S. has been lined up to give opposition on the Athletic Night of February 6th. It is hoped that Winst McCaty may be able to coach the squad again but his duties at Manning Depot may make him unable to spend much time hereabouts. At any rate a likely lot are turning out several nights a week to get in trim for the coming trials for the all-Varsity swim squad.

A REMINDER TO SUNDRY

As many students have found out by practical experience, that registration card of yours gives the privilege of a bunch of free skating at the beautiful ice surface up at the stadium. This privilege is granted for free on Monday, Tuesday and Thursday evenings and of course every afternoon including Saturdays. On top of this, fancy skating lessons can be obtained every afternoon. To get these you must sign up in the Athletic Office. And of course this goes for the feminine devotees as well. But a warning its given. If you do sign up—and three males have made the bold plunge as yet—you are requested to turn up at the specified hour. Evidently the instructor was on tap yesterday and no one showed up—that isn't cricket anywhere.

SOMETHING OFF OUR CHEST

And now we come to an explanation—mind you not an excuse—for we are not apologizing for anything—but just an explanation. Well, it seems that these days are hard for the average student and it has been inculcated into the minds of many that to see another month of school one must work like a bugbear. Well, it seems that this idea has gotten into the heads of former members of our sports staff and they have vanished from our midst into the deep, dark dungeons of local knowledge factories. Consequently our staff has dwindled to about four regulars—and that ain't good—especially when there are four baseball, four basketball and three hockey games all taking place inside of a couple of hours. It just ain't humanly possible for one or two men to cover all these adequately. And remember we aren't complaining—just explaining why sometimes there is an uncomplete and inadequate coverage of all events. There are only two answers to the problem as far as we can see. First, that some chaps be found who are interested in trying a hand at writing a little sports—and they don't have to have any experience—as a matter of fact sometimes people who can't spell make the best sportswriters—for we can always bluepencil the work. Secondly, if a team wants a full coverage of their game with lots of names sprinkled around we would welcome an account of said set- to by a member of the team or the manager or publicity man of the college or anyone interested in the team. If they made their intentions known to us up in The Varsity office before the affair we would be muchly relieved. We will do our best to cover everything of interest to followers of campus sport. But that may not be adequate, so we invite a bit of aid now and again for everyone's benefit.

M. T. STEWART, U.C. GRAD, IS TRADE ENVOY TO PANAMA

M. T. Stewart, who graduated from University College in Commerce and Finance in 1928, has been appointed Canadian Trade Commissioner at Panama City, according to a recent announcement by Trade Minister MacKinnon.

Mr. Stewart entered the civil service in 1930 as an assistant trade commissioner. When the war with Japan began, he was Canadian Commercial Secretary at Tokio, and was interned with the other members of the Canadian Legation staff. He was repatriated to Canada in August, 1942.

U.C., Dents Smother Irish In Basketball

St. Mike's was subjected to a double defeat yesterday on the basketball floor of the upper gym. U.C. IV did the first job in a hard-fought 23-20 match. Dents "B" later in the evening mauled the Irish "C" squad to the tune of 46-33. Vic III defaulted to S.P.S. V in the only other game scheduled.

The first half of the first game definitely belonged to the Double Blue D's as Stock, Armnesto and Springer led their team in piling up a 12-7 advantage over their opponents. But the old dependable tide started ebbing the moment the whistle opened the second frame. The "Red Shorts'" from the Royal College, inspired by the sure-fire hooting of Russ Tartaglia, came from behind to net 16 counters, while St. Mike's were held to eight.

Tartaglia was the U.C. payoff man and played some clever ball, but Cliff Reid got an even half dozen himself and along with Goldberg made up almost the remainder of the scoring. St. Mike's D had a good combination in the aforementioned Stock, Armnesto, Springer threesome. Although failing to enter the scoring list, MacAvoy showed some plain and fancy ball handling. He set up many plays by his dribbling and was only kept scoreless by the eagle-eye of Bucky Zierler.

In the last affair of the day it practically turned out to be a scoring duel between Jim Tucker of St. Mike's and Jesse Witchell of Dents. Play was rather close in the first half as Tucker led the Irish for 12 points. But the Dents team, most of whom had just come up from the baseball diamond after falling before a St. Mike's nine, had a couple of other scorers in the form of Sam Spivack who hooped eight in that frame and Lipman who spotted four. From halftime, when the score was 25-12 the game see-sawed and remained the same till the closing whistle—for both squads got exactly the same points in that half—21. Ironsides and Halpin came through with some timely scores but the whole Dents offense was handled by Jesse Witchell. This wizard of the wicker could almost score at will and was practically the whole team. However the frish put up a good fight and promise to produce some surprises before the final whistle of the schedule.

U.C. IV—Zierler (2), Goldberg (4), Tartaglia (10), Brown, Zelsman, Rafelman (1), White, Fenix, Reid (6)—23.

St. Mike's D—MacAvoy, Stock (6), Temmerman, Kennedy, Armnesto (6), Gonder, Springer (6)—20.

Dents B—Witchell (26), Lipman (6), Spivack (12), Goldberg (2), Chapnick

St. Mike's C—Tucker (16), Czupello, Montanarella, Halpin (6), Ironsides

GREYING, LIMBER DUELLIST COACHES FENCERS

By Frank Rasky

Even the Count of Monte Cristo would have a tough time bringing grizzled Charlie Walters to his knees.

Fence master at the University for more than 20 years, Charlie has walked off with every fencing championship in Canada, and the list of his international fencing achievements is as long as your arm.

Charlie, who has a grey moustache and snow-white hair, says he has never felt any twinges of old age, and his eyes are as keen as the Dionnes. Fencing has kept him spry and active through the years, he says, and advises, "If you want to keep that way too, join the University fencing classes."

"Barring that, if you don't want to join us, at least see the senior foil competition the week of Jan. 18," he says. "You'll enjoy it."

Charlie says the art of fencing has been know as a sport and a method of deadly combat through 20 centuries, and its colourful history from Napoleon's time onward has developed a tendency towards lighter and more manageable weapons. And now, like controlling a temperamental wife, fencing depends on subtlety and co-ordination rather than sheer strength.

In his classes, Charlie uses the three basic weapons: the foil (duelling sword with a point capable only of inflicting a puncture wound); the epee (duelling sword which is pointed but heavier and more rigid), and the saber (military sword with a cutting edge along the front and along one-third of the back).

Equiment consists of swords, mask, a white body dress and heavy gloves to protect the wrists from slashes.

Here's some advice Charlie offers on how to wound friends and counter-attack opponents:

"Accuracy is preferable to speed at all times. A seasoned fencer makes no tiring wide flourishes, and in time he learns to achieve by intuition just when to attack and when to feint to draw an opponent into a prepared position.

"There are two schools of fencing—the French, which concentrates on finger technique, and the Italian school, which uses the arm for defensive measures. Both schools command equal respect."

Charlie thinks that most duelling scenes in movies are basically phoney because their movements are too mechanical. In pirate and battle cinemas the speed is usually retarded to allow the audience to see actions.

Although he has never participated in an actual duel, Charlie confides that they have often been fought illegally in Canada and elsewhere. The day of chivalry is not over.

Charlie, who learned his art in Toronto's central Y.M.C.A., developed his technique from the teachings of fabulous Professor Peverse, former world championship holder. His bayonet technique was obtained from Sergeant Major J. Brooker of the Royal Canadian Dragoons who was a swashbuckling duellist of the last war.

In the two decades he has taught at the University, Charlie has turned out many a Canadian champion. His star pupil is Al Garcia, who last year won the Canadian Championship for the foil tournament.

This year his topnotch duellists include: J. Tapsell, IV Vic, winner of the intercollegiate championship in 1942; W. J. Horsey, IV Medicine; R. Thiers, III Vic; and D. A. Leslie, III U.C.

Former Sport Dictator Now Exile In Far North

It seems that the cold and frigid north has some attraction, for one member, at least, of the class of 4T2 has moved to James Bay for a livelihood. For it was learned recently that Ken Higwell, Athletic Director of U.C. last year, after graduating from C. and F., took an extensive course with the Meteorological bureau up on Bloor Street and last November moved to Moosonee in the employ of the Dominion Government.

While at University College, besides being in the top brackets of his class, Hignell got quite a name for himself in the way of an athlete—hockey comprising a large part of this. In his duties on the "Lit" he stirred up agitation during the time of the annual fall Junior Harrier when he endeavored to conscript all the freshmen. His success towards this object had a just reward for U.C. won the event that year.

The type of work Hignell does is somewhat of a military secret but at any rate it is called Radio-Sonde. This is a very recent development—having been originated, as the name implies, by a chap of the name of Sonde—not to be confused with a name of the same sound.

Mr. and Mrs. Hignell, for the ex-Athletic Director was married immediately before beginning his career in the north, like Moosonee quite well. Although there are only about 50 white people within a large radius—life in one of the oldest settlements in America (it was founded in 1672) is very enjoyable. There are two Hudson Bay posts flying their Union Jacks with the H.B.C. inscribed thereon — this being unique in the fact that it is the only civilian organization allowed to add anything to the royal flag.

prepared to go any time."

"I haven't been studying—not much," smiled Jack Ladowsky, II Meds. "There's no wasting of time at the Medical Building, and all the boys are quite conscientious, more so than under ordinary circumstances."

Chances are that no Law students will be affected by the decision of the Ottawa conference, according to Bruce Finkler, II Law. "The students there have their hands full with work, and have no time to drift and dream," he said.

"This whole business of selecting certain students is just a guessing game apparently—and it troubles you a little when you don't know the score," commented W. Thompson, III Honor Psychology. He said that while he was not exactly worried with regard to his exams, he was somewhat concerned.

Barry Townley, I Victoria, and John Lummiss, I U.C., said they had both studied during the Christmas vacation and they would be pleased when the day of judgment is over.

ART MUSIC Drama

Design For Moderns

Art Gallery of Toronto

Housed under one roof in several rooms, the Art Gallery has assembled an exhibition that defies all recent shows in this city for variety, abstraction, colour, and instruction.

The work of Henri Rousseau is easily misunderstood by the skeptic or the unsympathetic for it is dominated by lush jungles of tropical fantasies with a peculiar "savage" quirk, possessing the reality of an active imagination rather than of nature. His last work in 1910 is a huge oil titled The Dream. The reality of a girl upon a real sofa is transported to the reality of the jungle at full moon. Snakes coil at the music of the snakecharmer, and fearsome heads peer from the heavy jungle foliage. It is said that some 50 shades of green were used in this work alone, and that every crisis in his life for 10 years was in some way symbolized in this one canvas.

Rousseau makes the most of incongruity, and cannot help raising comment on his technique shown in the Ape and the Indian, which he terms—exotic landscape.

A section of the exhibition deals with the designed mural abstractions of American rugs. A huge twelve-by-nine Flying Carpet by Stuart Davis is a pure invention in abstract design, hand done, in wool, with a loop technique. It is based upon the idea that traditional and conventional design do not satisfy the taste of "new people"—those people who accept the discoveries of modern design in industrial projects, architecture and art, without preconceived antagonisms.

Another rug by a Russian, Arshile Gorky, called Bull in the Sun is a clear exposition in brilliant black and yellow. It is intended to represent the skin of a water buffalo stretched in a sunny wheatfield. Gorky says: "If it looks like something else, then it is still better." Highly intriguing as an intellectual interpretive problem is the simplified Virgin by Charles Howard. The whole technique of hooking rugs is explained with examples and diagrams, to bring this part of the display down to earth.

The 16th annual exhibition of the relatively young Canadian Water Colour group has a wide and pleasing range. As a general motif, is found a new delicacy and disregard of obtrusive detail, which gives a simplicity and fresh cleanness to many of the pictures thus turning a new corner in Canadian water colour technique. Waad Interiar by Miriam Fox Squires exemplifies this observation. The trees may be placed to give distance but the greys and light blues shadowing the white of the snow give the true perspective — not mechanically, but with a lively spirit.

David Milne brightens up and sensationalizes a blurred wash, perhaps suggesting an element of distortion, in Ridge but achieves a steady mood in Rain. In his latest one plane block design attempt, Caven Atkins is again successful in giving a feeling of depth in Basketball. Peter Haworth makes an effective arrangement in Old French Canadian Barns—everything is in place and there is no sense of decay—just disrepair.

The drawings of War Work are intimate studies of work in factories. Carl Schaefer has several excellent contributions which convey the magnitude of the war effort at home—one of these is entitled Marine Engine Bed Plate. A clean-cut picture by Atkins of a war vessel stark and white at pier called Outfitting by Night is about the only coloured picture of this type.

The whole exhibition is striking and stimplating; and is certainly subject to many interpretations.

hither and yon

with rex wilson

First go off we must apologize for something most ungentlemanly which appeared above our signature yesterday and explain that it was added by an unauthorized hand. Ill-natured as we may sometimes seem it is not like us to say, even of a sub-standard issue of "The Trinity University Review," any such rude remark as 'fiffi." Nothing could be THAT bad . . . and besides we are a gentleman of sorts . . . AND BESIDES WE HAVE TO TAKE CLASSES AT TRINITY.

* * *

But we offer no apologies for this one. It serves anyone right who has "Z" for a middle initial. A tired old ex-managing editor of The Varsity home from the wars gazed reminiscently over the pages of this year's volume of Varsities. With memories of such characters as George Bernard Pshaw, and P. Q. McGeech dancing through his nostalgic old head he muttered, "Henry Z. Sable! Who's nom de plume is that?"

And since French has been brought into the column it reminds us of the following:

You have doubtless heard professor groueh about students who are so intent on building up a nice set of notes that they don't take in what's being said. Well, in one of those classes which we take at Trinity there came a pause in the professorial remarks relevant to the course and the lecturer said, "Well, now, let's have a little pause before we go on—reculer pour mieux sauter."

One by one pens stopped scratching and flopped down in exhaustion until there was left but one blondaceous head bent low over a frantic pen-nib. Finally its hand stopped too and it raised inquiring eyes toward the professor. "I beg your pardon, sir," it said, "but I couldn't make out the very last point you mentioned."

* * *

Yankee inventiveness is wonderful. The Harvard Crimson informs us that:

Yardling Invents Face Saving Mask

But it's not a device for sentitive Nipponese. It's a thing to keep umbrella ribs out of people's eyes. The inventor calls it the Little Dandy Umbreller-Repeller.

And in other parts of the U.S. of A. we find that recent drastic government plans for the colleges have not dampened undergraduate enthusiasm and vigour.

For instance, Fratmen at the University of Washington have cooked up a dandy scheme to make the change to army life a thing of bliss. During hell week their pledges are required to wear undies made of burlap bags. They should hit the army itching to fight.

And there's one place on the face of this earth where government orders are even screwier than in this Dominion. This bit from Washington's Office of War Information we offer to you without further comment.

The cost of bowling is coming down. The Office of Price Administration has cut back charges to the September, 1941, levels, plus an allowance for recent increases in costs, for the benefit of 16,000,000 patrons of the alleys. The regulations brings about a national average reduction of one cent for every three games of league bowling and one-half cent a game in open bowling. Each proprietor must post his prices beginning January 22. At the same time, maximum charges for pool and billiards were fixed at the highest levels existing in March, 1942.

But back to the other Washington (University of, in the state of). A prof out there in a class called Econ 1 rashly asked his class if they had any objection to his course. He was shaken to hear one ringing "Yes" from the back of the room, as one lad stomped out muttering, "I'll let the army get me before Econ 1 gets me again." Government regulations make people SO independent.

At Boston University one group of midyear exams was cancelled on account of a fuel shortage. The announcement left the student body cold.

Perhaps it's in a patriotic cause, but the Connecticut Campus sounds like a bad place when its paper of that name runs this head:

Blood Donors Are Urged To Drink, But Not Eat

—Hotbed of Evil?

Moron stories do keep going around, and the only excuse for this one is that it's true. Once there were two fellas, a Varsity editor and a former Varsity editor, who were waiting for a bus. As they waited idly in the cold one of them finished a cigarette and flipped the smouldering butt into a nearby snowbank. "Jeez," said one of them observing the snow melting away from the hot butt, "Y'r burning a hole in the snow." "Yup," said the other, stepping on the butt conscientiously, "I shouldn't oughta do that, that's how forest fires get started."

Days Of Desperation Are Student's Frustration

By Doc Savage

The days of desperation are upon us, what with those joyous bulletins that the Registrar's office has been releasing these days. The time to study is now, but now.

A rather radical departure from accepted practice, true, but Kismet has spake. So, in line with its policy of student service, The Varsity offers this Handy Guide To Troubled Students, or How To Study For an Exam.

The first essential for study, is of course, a book. These may be found at the library, that repulsive stone building off to one side of the campus that you can't smoke in. The only trouble with studying in there is that they either haven't got the book you need, or if they have, about 200 people have got it ahead of you. However, a jaunt to the library is well worth your time for within those solemn walls now walk some of the lovliest of God's creations—those babes whom you couldn't see all year for the clustered wolves. Of course, this presents difficulties if by some quirk of an unpredictable fate, you do get the book you want.

Frustrated, you return to home and notes . . . i.e., to home. You phone from there to see if anyone in your course has any notes. Or maybe you do have some . . . some that you can read, that is. You settle down to study.

No matter what portion of the house you select, no matter how secluded the garret may be, how firm the lack, within five (count 'em) minutes, it takes on all the aspects of Union Station, the day a troop train departs.

The guys upstairs start wrestling. Next door makes with a noisy card game and there is a terrific bull session going on across the hall. And we must not forget the ping pong game in the basement.

You stand in the hall and scream. They all go away to their rooms . . . and turn on their radios. Then too, there is the parade complete with the little man at the end with the lantern, and the brass band—we must not forget the brass band—that goes marching past.

Finally it is late. A peace as of the silence of the tomb settles over the house. They are all asleep. Now is your chance. You seize the books, avidly open them, settle down, start. . . . The page blurs, the head nods, the eyes close. . . . You come to with a start and realize that it is now 4 a.m.

You rise, yawn, and go to bed. Tomorrow is another day.

Opinions Vary On Formals

formals as most of them lacked tails and transportation means. On the other hand, Herb Todgbam, II S.P.S., said, "We've been cut down on enough things. Formals add atmosphere." The same idea was expressed by Hardy Craig, IV Mechanical, who thought that big affairs would be too routine if held informal.

Trinity is largely pro-formal, and are holding their annual Conversat as usual. "Most of us here can't see why it should offend the public for University students to have big formals," John Fotheringham, I Divinity, declared. And Jane Maeder, II Trinity, asserted, "If we're fighting for our culture what point in there in cancelling part of it?"

Wycliffe is going to change their At-Home to informal this year. John R. Flagner told The Varsity that this was being done for economic reasons and as a result of the transportation problem. "Although we all enjoyed our formals, we think that this will be just as nice," he said.

At U.C. the Lit. and W.U.A. have decided to hold the Arts Ball formal if on campus, but informal if held off the campus. Lit. President Don Rowat stated that, "This is being done to conform with President Cody's request to keep our functions inconspicuous."

Other opinions given by students of the Royal College favoured a formal ball. "Since the general public has not foregone formal dances, I don't think we should have to," declared Don Ruwald, II Law.

Two sophs at a U.C. girl's residence claimed that most girls had formals and they'd rather wear them than see them "fall apart." They added that "Every other kind of organization has formal dances at the hotels so why would we be picked out for criticism?" One wistful co-ed when questioned just sighed, "I'd just love someone to ask me out formal!"

"Each faculty might be allowed one formal a year," said Jean Cameron, III Vic, "but certainly the number of formals should be cut down."

BULLETIN BOARD

FINE ART CLUB

The Fine Art Club will meet tonight in the Women's Union, 79 St. George St., at 8:15 o'clock. Mr. H. N. Frye of Victoria College will speak on the Relationship between Canadian Literature and Arts.

MEDS V.C.F.

The Meds Junior Group (for first year) of the Varsity Christian Fellowship will meet at the Academy of Medicine today from 12:30 to 1:30. Come and bring your lunch.

S.C.M.

The Theological College Union at the S.C.M. will meet tonight at 8 p.m. in Wycliffe College. Topic: "The Church's Witness to the State." Knox speakers, Thos. Maxwell and L. Shein.

Says Streamlined Courses For Women Engineers Not Needed In Canada

American 10-Month Curriculum Required by Shotage of Qualified Engineers; Women Previously Barred

NO DIFFICULTY HERE

Doubt as to the likelihood of establishing a special shortened course in engineering for women at Canadian universities was expressed by Dean C. R. Young of the Faculty of Applied Science and Engineering yesterday. A 10-month engineering course for American women will start next month at six engineering colleges in the United States.

C. W. Cole, engineering personnel supervisor of Curtiss-Wright, said that next month 800 American college women with at least one year and a half of college to their credit, will start the course. Formerly engineering positions in aircraft factories had been barred to women but, owing to manpower shortage, the barriers were lowered.

In Canada there is no ban on women engineers working in any capacity, provided that they have an engineering degree.

"I doubt whether 10 months training is capable of qualifying any engineer," said Dean Young. "They might, however, receive training at technicians. This preparation would equip them to carry out simple rountine tasks for which the engineers have no time. Graduate engineers would determine the procedure and these girls would probably carry out the details of drafting or inspection or record-keeping. Even after 10 months' training they would be incapable of design or anything that required profound scientific knowledge."

In Canada male graduates in engineering are subject to selective service according to a recent order in council, and consequently it is expected that more females will enrol in the course.

"I am rather disappointed at the small number of women registrants in engineering because there is a field for them," said the Dean. "The chief aeronautical engineer of the Canadian Car and Foundry Co. in Fort William is a woman, as also is the engineer of the Aluminum Co. of Canada."

At the most there are not more than 10 or 15 women in the course at present. "Most women feel that the demands of engineering are too violent—which is true to a certain extent. Nevertheless, there are branches such as architecture and drafting in which their temperments are better suited," Dean Young told The Varsity.

Col. Line to Speak On Army Selection

"Aptitude Tests and Their Application in Wartime" will be the topic of the Royal Canadian Institute lecture to be given by Colonel Wm. Line, Director of Personnel Selection, Department of National Defence, Ottawa, on Saturday, Jan. 16, at 8:15 p.m., in Convocation Hall.

Colonel Line graduated from Mount Allison University in 1921 with the degree of B.S., received his M.A. at the University of Alberta in 1922, his B.Ed. in 1925, and his Ph.D. from London in 1929. He is now on leave of absence from the University of Toronto where he has been Associate Professor of Psychology since 1932.

In his lecture, which will be illustrated with lantern slides, Colonel Line will show the point of view of selection in the Canadian Army as somewhat different from that applied elsewhere, and will show some of its ramifications in Army policy generally.

No White Ties At Dental Dance

The first informal Dents A-Home in history will be held at the Roof Garden of the Royal York Hotel tonight. Due in part to President Cody's request for inconspicuousness in social functions and in part to the presence of Fourth and Fifth Year Dental students in uniform, strict informality has been ruled for the dance.

Morgan Thomas and his orchestra, who played at the Meds' At-Home last fall, will provide the music and dancing will go on from 9 to 2. In order to lower the admission price, no refreshments will be served, and no flowers or corsages will be offered for sale at the door.

Patrons of the At-Home will be President H. J. Cody and Mrs. Cody, Mayor F. J. Conboy and Mrs. Conboy, Dean Arnold Mason of the Faculty of Dentistry and Mrs. Mason, Assistant Dean T. Cowling, and Dr. S. Woollatt.

"We expect the largest crowd we've ever had," said Don Moore, president of the Dental Society. "Tickets for the At-Home will still be available at the door."

U.S. Army-Navy Training Project Has High Educational Requirements

Washington, Jan. 14 — Qualifications for training at colleges and universities in the United States under the new joint Army-Navy plan were set forth last week by the War Department.

Applicants for the basic training must measure up to these requirements:

1. Score 110 or better in an Army Classification Test.

2. Be high school graduate between the age of 18 and 21 inclusive (not attained 22nd birthday).

3. Complete the regular basic Army training or be in the process of completion.

To qualify for advanced training under the plan the applicant must meet these qualifications:

1. Pass the Classification Test with the same score.

2. Have one year of college work or its equivalent and be at least 18 but not necessarily under 22.

3. Complete or be completing the Army basic training.

The War Department's statement pointed out that the trainees will be in uniform on active duty, will be paid while they learn and will be subject to military discipline. The colleges to which they are assigned will provide the instruction prescribed by the Army and will furnish housing and feeding facilities. The students will receive military training but it will be secondary to their academic work.

"The principal objective of the Army's Specialized Training Program," the statement declared," is to meet the need of the army for technically trained soldiers for certain Army tasks for which its own training facilities are insufficient in exent or character."

Mulock House Is First To Aid Russia

U.C. Women Give $36 to Aid to Russia Fund on Own Initiative Before Start of S.A.C. Drive

OTHERS ORGANIZING

First university contribution to the Aid to Russia Fund yet heard of is from Mulock House, Whitney Hall. This was the amount of $36 collected by the girls themselves on their own initiative and handed in to the fund last week (before the request made by the Students' Administrative Council).

The student body is being asked by the S.A.C. to contribute to the fund through their faculty organizations. When questioned by The Varsity last night members of the various executives were not able to make any statements as to how the money would be raised but indicated that meetings would be held to discuss the matter at an early date. In several cases it was thought that contributions might be made in the form of a donation directly from organization funds.

10,000 Books To Be Sought By McGill

War Council Asks Four Books per Student to Be Collected in Campus-Wide Drive Beginning Monday

ALL KINDS INCLUDED

Montreal, Jan. 14 — (CUP) — Books for men in the Armed Services will be collected on the McGill campus next week, it was announced Tuesday by the executive of the War Council. The book campaign is scheduled to get under way Monday, Jan. 18, and will continue until the objective, 10,000 books, has been received.

The objective set by the War Council requires that each student at McGill give at least four books to the campaign. It was felt that this objective could be realized without difficulty in view of the fact that books of all kinds, whether old or new, technical or fictional, will be collected.

Arrangements are being made to have barrels placed in all the main University buildings, with posters urging all students to put in their old books.

LIEUT. ERIC ZUERRER PROMOTED TO CAPTAIN

Promotion of Lieut. Eric P. Zuerrer to the rank of captain has recently been announced. He is a son of E. R. Zuerrer, Swiss trade commissioner here.

Captain Zuerrer graduated from Mining Engineering in 1941, going overseas shortly afterward with the First Hussars. He is now serving as a military technical officer in Britain.

C.R.C.C. Head Impressed By Montreal Detachments

Miss A. E. M. Parkes Inspects Detachments at McGill, MacDonald College; Presents Badges to New Members

"I was very much impressed by the excellent training demonstrated by the University Detachments of the C.R.C.C. at McGill and MacDonald Colleges," stated Miss A. E. M. Parkes yesterday on her return from Montreal.

As National Commandant of the University Detachments of the Canadian Red Cross, Miss Parkes inspected the Detchments on Wednesday and presented cap badges to the new members.

"The MacDonald College Detachment has just been started this year, and the girls were disturbed that their uniforms did not arrive in time for the inspection," Miss Parkes continued. "But they made a very striking sight marching in their scarlet McGill Blazers and navy skirts." Miss Parkes commended the girls for their high standard of training which, she said, is partly the result of the officers and N.C.O.'s having been given on Officers' Training Course last year in preparation for the formation of the Detachment. The MacDonald College Detachment expects to specialize in Food Administration when the basic training is completed.

Taking the Salute at McGill along with Miss Parkes, were Principal James, Colonel Norris, and Mr. Jackson Dodds, Chairman of the National Council of the Red Cross Corps.

"The Marching of the McGill girls is excellent," Miss Parkes commented. "They spent two hours a week drilling as well as two hours taking war work courses, which is considerably more than the Toronto Detachment does."

"In contrast to the Varsity "blue," the McGill girls wear scarlet ties, and flashes in their caps with the gray uniforms is the standard for the University Detachments."

Says Canadian Culture Lacks National Basis

"There is no Canadian cultural nation," said Dr. H. N. Frye of the Victoria College English staff to the Fine Art Club last night. The Maritimes has an alien cultural relationship as has British Columbia with her own traditions. They have regional characteristics and are not specifically Canadian."

Dr. Frye spoke on "The Relationship of Canadian Literature to Canadian Art." He said that they were at once related in that they both mean Canada. "The community, the region and the empire are the three phases of environment that surround the artist."

Dr. Frye said that there has been no art of an empire since Virgil, so that regional influence still remains. A. Y. Jackson upholds Quebec, and Emily Carr paints British Columbia.

"It is sometimes believed that our conservatism makes us superior to the Americans, but, in reality, our traditions are not of a revolutionary influence as theirs are; and there has definitely been no achievement of the Canadian will."

Senior Women In Medicine Permitted To Finish Course As Army Corps Privates

Four Already Wear Khaki, Receive C.W.A.C. Pay and Living Allowance; Will Qualify for Army Commission

ANNOUNCED IN DECEMBER

Women undergraduates in the Faculty of Medicine are now permitted to join the armed forces, and receive pay, during the two years preceding their graduation.

The conditions on which they enter the services are similar to those under which male students became privates in the Army Medical Corps last spring.

The girls join the Canadian Women's Army Corps as privates, and receive regular CWAC pay plus living allowance. This amounts to $2.25 per day, about 50 cents less than the men get.

When the scheme was announced early in December, Billy Allison and Lorna Sansom of the Sixth Year, and Peggy Forgie and Isobel Rigg of Fifth year joined immediately. The first two are about to commence interneship, and on completion of their eight months in hospital, will be commissioned in the Army Medical Corps, with equivalent rank to male doctors.

Jaffary Outlines Community Needs

The first lecture of the new course, "Community Needs and Resources," which is being introduced this term by the Women's War Service Training Committee was given yesterday afternoon in the Economics Building by Dr. S. K. Jaffary, Director of the School of Social Work.

Dr. Jaffary, in outlining the course, defined its intention as "broader than just social work—instead to offer a picture of the whole community." After two lectures by presentatives from the Visting Homemakers' Organization and the Victorian Order of Nurses, those taking the course will embark upon a program of field work, visiting the Juvenile Court, a Settlement, and a city council meeting. The problem of town planning will also be considered.

This course was not offered last term. The girls taking it have completed half the year's requirement in the various other one-term courses given. The required number of hours for this course is 24.

Junior School Hockey Champions Whip Junior Medicos In Opener

Gord Ball Nets Three; Dents Hold Irish to Tie; School Thirds Nose Out Senior Meds Sextet 1-0

Opening day in the grind for the Jennings Cup saw Jr. School trounce Jr. Meds 5-1, School thirds eke out a close 1-0 win over Sr. Meds and Dents holding a surging St. Mike's squad to a three all tie.

In the first game the Engineers had almost mid-season form as they outskated their Meds opponents. In the first period Herb Stricker and Gord Ball started the School scoring. Goals by Ball and Ratcliffe on passes from Boynton and McDonough were notched in the second canto before Meds retaliated with a lovely Faber to Callahan play. During a Medico penalty shortly before the final whistle Gord Ball completed the "hat trick" by bulging the twine form a play of Herb Stricker's. This was the best game of the day and some good shinny was dished up, with the honours going to Ball, Boynton and Callahan.

School thirds were held on all fronts by the Sr. Meds entry but "Fuzz" Giovanetti managed to elude the doctors' defense to notch the winning tally. Play was rather ragged attimes but the Engineers had slightly the better of the play with the aid of Foulds. Beefy MacMillan was the mainstay of the Medicos' sextet.

The last game resulted in some slam bang-up shinny. Dents and St. Mike's were quite evenly matched and it was just a question of who would outslug the other. Several arguments added to the tension. Dents started the scoring with a Crounch from Castaldi tally. Later in the period Hector retaliated for the Irish. At the four-minute mark in the second canto McKenzie hit the scoresheet for the Double Blue on a pass from Hayden. A minute later "Cos" Castaldi went through the team unassisted to tie np the game. Then at the ten-minute mark Hector notched his second. Castaldi came right back again to end the scoring with a tied game.

Women Too?

At last some authoritative word has come about the problem which is troubling the women students on the campus. The problem is: will women, as well as men, be asked "to leave the University" if they fail in their mid-year examinations? Ever since the regulations regarding the men students have been made public the question has been in everyone's mind, unanswered, but with a host of rumours, suppositions, almost superstitions, following it. Now, while the question has not yet been answered, a definite statement has been made by the University Registrar that the matter will be brought up for discussion at a forthcoming Senate meeting. While the fate of the women students is still undecided, the Registrar's statement will serve the excellent purpose of quieting idle rumours.

It is significant that the question was not brought up for discussion at the Universities Conference held in Ottawa last week-end. However, one university official said after that conference that college heads were agreed an on interpretation of existing regulations which would make no distinctions between the sexes. After the Conference's resolutions regarding the Arts courses, as contained in the address of Arthur MacNamara, Director of National Selective Service, it is difficult to reconcile a complete policy of weeding out the women students. Mr. MacNamara said:

"At the worst it may be hoped that male students not liable or not fit for military service, female students, and a steadily increasing number of discharged men, will maintain the student population at a level sufficient to permit maintenance of staffs and educational standards."

The call-up system for men in the Army is more than justification for the policy now in force here of sending to the War Services Boards the names of those men students who fail examinations, but until a similar system is adopted for Canadian women, as it undoubtedly would be if the need of industry were great enough, it seems pointless to turn any large number of women out of the University. The University itself would suffer quite needlessly from the consequent loss of fees.

If, however, the University authorities made no great sweep among the women students, as it has among the men, but took those who had not only failed in the present term examinations but whose previous scholastic record had been continuously low, and put them on probation, there could be little complaint. In view of the fact that no definite policy has been announced at this University regarding the standing of those women students who fail term examinations, it would be unfair to pluck any great number.

The debated question of the standing of the women students has had an excellent result in so far as it has urged them to renewed efforts of studying. Taking that into consideration and also the unusually serious atmosphere of the campus this year, it is not unlikely that examining professors may be surprised and pleased to find a new low in the number of failures in the term examinations.

"How Are You?"

The new policy which the Women's Medical Office has just inaugurated by which all women io the second, third and fourth years will have medical examinations, as well as those in the first year who have always had them, is a praiseworthy step toward the improvement of health. The old rule of one medical checkup a year is too often forgotten with resultant deterioration of health, which neither the University nor the national can afford, especially in war-time.

During the years of war Canada has had a severe jolt out of its lethargy about national health. A grim set of statistics were released recently by Allan Ross, in charge of rations for Canadian troops, which showed that in a three-month period last year, of 50,000 young men who tried to enlist 20,000 were rejected as physically unfit; in the four years from 1932 to 1935 Canada lost many more potential citizens in the deaths of children and infants than were killed or died of wounds in the first World War. Other figures in the report were equally disheartening, and led Mr. Ross to style Canada as a C-3 nations in the matter of health.

Although the Department of Pensions and National Health at Ottawa immediately replied to this indictment with other proof to show that Canada's health has been improving for years, the fact remains that our nation is not nearly so healthy as it should be. Industries, the most important of then munitions plans, have to keep about ten per cent more workers than they theoretically need in order to make up for days lost on account of illness. Coming ncarer home, for the past week we have not attended a single class in which there were not at least three persons suffering from bad colds.

The great sale of such widely advertised medicines as vitamin tablets and all sorts of nostrums to check "that tired feeling" show only too clearly that the nation lacks needed energy, which it should be getting from its food, and is taking this emergency measure to find it. Such measures are being taken by present-day Germans to suppliment their meagre diets and is presented by Howard Smith in "Last Train from Berlin as a sign that the nation is declining in strength. It should not happen in Canada.

Such relatively petty illnesses as colds can be fought successfully, even eliminated, and health built up, by simple preventatives like proper food, medical checkups, sleep and open air recreation. This statement is no theory; it has recently been proved in England by a system of reconditioning work done on men rejected as unfit by the British army. The course consisted of plenty of sleep, hard work and relaxation; milk and fruit were added to regular Army fare, and a snack of milk or soup, and fruit, was served at mid-morning, in addition to the four regular daily meals. At the end of the course 87 per cent of the men passed the Army's medical tests.

While any such scheme seems extremely remote in this country, which has apparently been deluding itself on the subject of national health, the plan now being put into effect on this campus is a step in the right direction.

Editor,
The Varsity.

Dear Sir:

It seems that the students of Trinity were represented as being below average intelligence as a result of a statement in yesterday's Varsity attributed to "John Fotheringham, I Divinity." Mr. Fotheringham is represented as saying, "Most of us here can't see why it should offend the public for University students to have big formals." Surely it is quite apparent that the public will be critical of frills, and the wearing of unnecessary apparel in war time, when even every-day dress has been simplified.

But the main point I wish to make is that one person cannot express the opinion of "most of us," especially when that character is ficticious — since there is no John Fotheringham in I Divinity at Trinity, or to my knowledge in any other course at Trinity.

Yours very truly,

John H. Crozier.
III Trinity.

The editors of The Varsity acted in good faith in printing the views of a student who gave the name "John Fotheringham, I Divinity," and while it now appears that he was speaking under an assumed name, the reporter who wrote the story in question found that "Fotheringham's" views were shared by other students at Trinity and also by those of other colleges. The Varsity does not imply that these views are necessarily those of the majority of Trinity students. It does, however, feel that giving an interview under a assumed name is not quite cricket.

Finally we say that we are printing Mr. Crozier's letter also in good faith, although we are unable to find a Crozier in the third year at any college.

Now this one here's an imbecile,
His mental age is nearly nil.
Add one more year and he could be
My sergeant in C.O.T.C.

The schizophrenic is no wit;
His personality is split.
And yet, he never weeps for mother:
He doesn't care—he's got each other.

The melancholic, darn his hide,
Makes wild attempts at suicide.
If only he'd succeed, the jerk,
He'd save his doctor lots of work.

Insomniacs from dusk till dawn,
Pursuing sleep from yawn to yawn,
Complain that cats aeross the street
And flies on walls are stamping feet.

The kleptomaniac is prone
To pick up things that ain't his own;
And, should he not escape detection,
He blithely blames his imperfection.

Consider too the masochist,
Who's not content with being kissed—
Oh no—she much prefers her lover
To beat her so she won't recover.

It must be great to be a moron,
Never knowing there's a war on.
But better still, I'd like to be
A student, at the U. of T.

ART & MUSIC

Pianistic Paradise

Arthur Rubinstein

Rubinstein is as fine a pianist as there is in the world, everyone who knows anything about music knows. From the first notes of the Beethoven to the last of Prokofieff, I heard one slightly muffed note. That one note showed that the musician was human. Human he may be, but his playing is immortal.

Depending on who is your favourite composer, that was the best part of the program. Rubinstein plays anything with perfect understanding and complete musicianship. It is a delight to hear him change with the mood of the composer, not only his interpretation of ofe notes but also his actual physical performance of them.

The Beethoven Appassionata topped the evening for me, with the Brahms Intermezzi and Rhapsody as a close second. The former rose to a tremendous climax towards the end of the variations. Never have I heard it played with greater power. Much of Rubinstein's colouring was unorthodox, but everything he did was acceptable as a sincere development of his musical understanding.

Space forbids mentioning much more, but the first encore deserves a place if only because of the light it through upon his technique. Scriabin's Nocturne for the Left Hand sounds, when Rubinstein played it, as if an ordinary pianist were using both. A musician who can make one hand do the work of two, who can pedal with such skill, has an advantage right from the beginning over more ordinary pianists.

NEIL MACDONALD.

Tid-bits from the College Papers

"This statement coming from the director of Selective Service serves in some measure to emphesize the government's willingness---nay desire to have students of a sufficiently high academic standard continue their studies in the humanities, social sciences and other so-called non-essential subjects".

McGill Daily

"But it is impossible to overlook the fact that we seem to stand on the very brink of revelation of what the Government actually intends toward Universities. And after months of hints and rumours, interspersed with trial balloons and the necessary hot air with which to inflate and elevate them, even bad news in this regard may come as a certain relief".

Speaking Of Sport

By Edgar Simon

DUST OFF THAT CUP, MR. JENNINGS

Checking off the predictions of the regular inhabitants of this space against yesterday's hockey scores, we find that both our sports editor and his excellent assistant, have managed to talk their way clear of trouble so far. The defending champions from Junior School looked as if they intend to do a fair amount of defending as they turned back Junior Meds, 5-1. Not that anyone set up the Meds as the class of the neighbourhood, but 5-1 os a nice edge against any company and Gord Ball and the boys really seem to have had the situation well in hand.

We also see by the papers that the St. Mike's boys, for whom this column had a kind word on Wednesday, and the dashing Dentists, who got the sports editor's accolade yesterday, battled to a 3-3 draw. It seems that the Irish have uncovered a Trojan called Hector to deal with the formidable offense of Castaldi, Crouch and company. We also see where Senior Meds seem to have found that it takes more than one solid defenceman to win a hockey game, even if the defenceman is of no less Homeric proportions than Beefy MacMillan, an all-star in any man's league.

All of which points to an interesting hockey season. After dazzling ourselves with the prediction that startled the campus last fall, when we opined (and here we quote) "It's still a bit early to cross the arts faculties off your list of Mulock Cup contenders," at a time when the boys in the poolroom were putting their piecrusts on the monsters from Senior School or laying their lettuce on a group of earnest workmen from the faculty of Medicine, we will assume our most superior attitude and retire undefeated to the Valhalla of sports scribes who guessed right, at present inhabited by two ping pong correspondents from the Elmira Bugle and a Graeco-Roman wrestling expert called Herodotus.

At this point we close off our remarks semowhat abruptly and recommend to your attention an excellent little piece of prose by our Northern Ontario staff writer on page four of this issue. It's great stuff.

Sportswoman

By Betsy Gowan

Volleyball, the ideal indoor winter sport for University girls, has been started on our campus. Victoria is leading the way in this field and has already had a few practices—but there is still room for lots more players. This is one sport where the team can be enlarged to accommodate up to twelve girls, and the larger the team the more fun it is. Vic practice hours are on Mondays and Wednesdays from 4:30 to 5:30 at Lillian Massey's gymnasium, where P.H.E. play. Florence Joy, who is in charge, would like everyone to come out who possibly can.

Everyone concerned would be very happy if a league could be established in this sport. To do this one or two more teams are necessary. Now that basketball is over, this is a marvelous way to obtain all of the exercise you need to finish the term up in good health. If any of the smaller faculties are interested in forming a team they can find out all the details from Florence Joy at Ki 1226.

Washington Committee To Consider Problem Of Student Rehabilitation

Plan to Let Draftees Resume Interrupted Studies; Stress Aid to 18 and 19-Year-Old Students

MEETS THIS WEEK

Washington, Jan. 17 — A committee charged with returning students to their universities and colleges after the war, will meet for the first time this week.

The President has directed the committee to make a study for the taking of steps to enable draftees whose education has been interrupted to resume their schooling and afford equal opportunity for training and education of other young men of ability now serving in the armed forces.

A spokesman for the committee, which is headed by Brig.-Gen. Frederick H. Osborn, director of the Special Services Division, Services of Supply, said it would concentrate primarily on returning 18 and 19-year-old students to their courses when the war is over.

U.C. Parliament To Include Women

Women will attend this Friday's session of the University College Parliament for the first time in some years. Although women did participate in this masculine sport at one time in the history of the parliament, they were excluded several years ago for reasons which are still shrouded in mystery. Now, through the agitation of Literary Director Geoff Johnson, IV Political Science, women are to take their places shoulder to shoulder with the men.

"Freedom of the Press," will be the subject of the debate. Prime Minister Herb Christie, II Philosophy and Englgish, will propose a "bill" giving the government supreme censorship powers over newspapers, and will be aided in defence of his measure by Betsy Mosbaugh, III Philosophy and English. Leader of the opposition is Denis Wrong, II Sociology. His speaking partner has not as yet been named, although it has already been determined that it will a woman.

The Governor-General, in the person of Don Rowat, IV Mod. Hist., will open the session with appropriate ceremony, attired in his robes of state. Mary Motherhill, III Eng., is to judge the proceedings.

Debaters to Link Studies, Morals

In its third session of the year at 8:00 p.m. tonight, the Victoria College Debating Parliament will discuss the topic "Resolved that, abeunt studia in mores." Although this is the official motto of Vic, it is understood many students are not aware of its full connotation, which is being translated freely by the debaters as "studies are creative of a higher morality."

Jack Coleman, leader of the affirmative team, admitted contritely that "Through studies in Victoria College, we in the fourth year feel that our morals, if not higher than those of the first year, should be."

His colleague in the debate, Bill Robinson, expressed the opinion that his morals are much better now than when he came to college. He remarked that even his parents can see a change.

The leader of the negative, Harold

Bursar Elected To Committee

Charles E. Higginbottom, Bursar of the University of Toronto, was elected a member of the executive committee of the Eastern Association of College and University Business Officers of America at a recent meeting of the Association in New York.

It is believed that Mr. Higginbottom is the first Canadian University official to be elected to the four-man executive committee of the Association, membership of which is made up of business officers of 133 universities and colleges in the United States and Canada.

Colonel Wm. Line Is R.C.I. Speaker

Colonel Wm. Line, Director of Personnel Selection, Department of National Defence, told at the Royal Canadian Institute lecture on Saturday night, how Canada's young Army recruits are placed to serve their country in the most effective way.

Colonel Line described the progress of the recruit from Army "reception" centre to front line soldier. The recruit is analysed by army examiners as to educational and occupational background and his native abilities are found by means of a general psychological test. Having this data in mind, the recruit is trained for the occupation in the army in which he is best fitted to serve. In this way the recruit is adjusted to his army situation with the minimum of friction and in the best interest of the army as a whole.

Contrary to popular opinion, Colonel Line stressed the great "flexibility" of the army. He pointed out how if the recruit is maladjusted to the army situation every effort is made to redirect him along satisfactory lines.

Colonel Line praised highly the work done by Army examiners in equating the needs of the army to the personnel with which it has to deal. He praised the examiners for putting academic psychology to work in a realistic fashion, thereby raising the prestige of the science with the Army especially and the public generally.

Biology Club To Discuss Careers

The vocational possibilities for Honour Science graduates under the present and post-war conditions will be discussed at the next two meetings of the Biology Club. The executive is making special plans to get several speakers to discuss the problem with the students.

"Conservation in Ontario" will be the subject of an address by Professor Coventry of the department of Zoology at the meeting on Wednesday at 7:30 p.m. in Wymilwood. The address will be illustrated with new Kodachrome slides.

Following the talk, Ron Taylor, in fourth year Biology, will give a report on an enterprise recently undertaken by the department concerning a Conservation Survey of the Ganaraska Watershed.

In conclusion, plans will be discussed for the next meeting, and members will be asked for suggestions as to speakers and topics.

All members of the club are invited to attend the meeting on Wednesday, especially first year students who will next year be faced with the choice of the various courses offered.

Arts And Letters Club Issues Invitation To All Faculties

To the Students and Staff of All Faculties and Colleges:

Last September the Medical Society founded an "Arts and Letters Club." This arose out of the growing feeling amongst medical students for the need of some organization that would broaden their interests, and take them away from medical matters once in a while and bring them together with men and women of the other faculties.

R. Gordon Bell, President of the S.A.C., who conceived and fostered the Club, felt that after six years of intensive medical training, most of us acquired a purely technical education with very little in our long scientific course to stimulate our interest in other matters.

Accordingly he proposed a short weekly meeting fitting into a busy nine-to-five time-table of students, staff and clinicians of the three University hospitals, with students and staff of other colleges. Our purpose was to get together on a common floor to hear men of note on subjects along non-medical lines, to learn to think and speak on our feet, and to discuss and "rub ideas" with men of all walks of life.

This past fall the beginning was made. The meetings were quite successful, with an average attendance of 100 to 200.

In the coming months, the Medical Society is endeavouring to secure guests of both local and international importance to speak on the most varied subjects possible and to ensure permanent foundation of the organization as the University of Toronto Arts and Letters Club."

We hope in the months and years to come this attempt of the Medical Society to broaden the outlook of Medical students will come to embrace students of all faculties and make a really worthwhile contribution to the extra-curricular life of the campus .

The meetings are each Tuesday evening, 6:30 to 8 p.m. at Wymilwood. This is your Club, and make these your meetings. Your attendance and suggestions of any sort are most welcome.

Watch The Varsity for weekly announcements.

18 MIDYEAR VOLUNTEERS GO ACTIVE FROM U.A.T.C.

Two Groups Transferred to Airforce; Applicants for Army O.T.C. Quotas Being Listed in Both C.O.T.C. Battalions

APPLICATION FORMS HERE

Eighteen members of the University Air Training Corps have left for active service recently. On December 19 and January 7, groups of eight and 10 respectively were transferred.

The members within each group volunteered at almost the same time and accordingly it was arranged that they be transferred in groups to the R.C.A.F.

In the 2nd Battalion of the C.O.T.C. there are about 40 N.C.O.'s who have completed one year's basic training. These are allowed to ask to be recommended to be sent to an Officers' Training Camp. Four have already left, three proceeding to Gordon Heal, B.C., and the other to Brockville.

In the 1st Battalion, application forms for those who wish appointment to an Officers' Training Camp during the Spring and Summer of 1943 have been received. Company commanders have begun to make lists of those wishing to be appointed.

Woman Diplomat Talks to Alumnae

It is the duty of Canadians, surrounded as they have been, by security, to convey that sense of relationships which they possess to the rest of the world which so badly needs them, Miss Craig McGeachy, of the British Embassy in Washington, told the University College Alumnae Association in the Women's Union, Saturday.

Miss McGeachy is the first woman in the British Empire to be given full diplomatic status by the Foreign Office.

Speaking on the point at which we may consider the war to be won, Miss McGeachy said we must go on until the idea which German arms have embodied have been utterly destroyed. She pointed out that the real crime which Hitler has committed is the breaking down of the bonds we create among individuals

She also referred to those countries such as Japan which think of themselves as separate from the rest of the world, and incapable of entering into natural human relationships with other countries. These separatist nations need the illustration which our lucky history can give them, she said.

Miss McGeachy discussed the position of the peoples of the occupied countries of Europe, explaining that when these people head Allied bombers overhead they must realize that they are only doing what is necessary in bombing nearby targets and feel happy about it. She said that she doesn't believe that people in Canada can imagine such a situation, but added that it will be necessary for Canadians to ask themselves if they really are concerned with helping life re-establish itself in the countries Hilter has occupied, and if they are ready to do something about it.

She explained that the British government is already studying means whereby food stuffs and other essentials may be supplied to the occupied countries in the future.

All Canadian Universities May Give Army Course Like No. One At Toronto

Course at Varsity to Be Extended Four Months and Lengthened Course to Be Used If Sastifactory

DECISION IN FEBRUARY

Ottawa, Jan. 17—Courses similar to the No. 1 Army Course now being given to enlistened men at the University of Toronto are to be opened in the near future in 21 universities across Canada, it is expected here.

Final decision on the adoption of the plan is expected early in February after the commanding officers in the 11 military district have investigated on its possibilities in their respective areas.

Interested officials say that in this way 5,000 senior matriculation graduates can be enlisted and enrolled by midsummer in this course in engineering and science subjects.

Meanwhile the Toronto course is to be extended. The leading students of the initial class will be held for an additional four months of concentrated instruction in more specialized subjects. If the 16-month course produces the desired results, it also will be adopted by the other universities in the plan.

Should those enrolled in these courses choose to return to university after the war those who complete the 12-month course will be granted credits for two years work in engineering or science and the government will pay their tuition fees for their third year. Those who complete the projected 16-month course will get credits for three years and be given the tuition fees for their fourth and final year. Under the Post-war Re-establishment Order all who return to university will receive a subsistence allowance of $9 a week.

U. de Montreal Gets Blood Plant

Ottawa, Jan. 17—A new plant for processing dried human blood serum will be established in Montreal in a building supplied by the University of Montreal, Pensions Minister Ian MacKenzie announced recently.

The plant will be in addition to two plants now operated by Connaught Laboratories, University of Toronto, in which dried blood serum for use in Canada and overseas has been hitherto processed.

The Federal Government is providing funds for structural alterations to the Montreal building and for installation of equipment and operating expenses.

Since early in 1941 the government has provided a total of $315,000 for the carrying on of blood serum work and a total of 61,928 cans of serum have been prepared, Mr. MacKenzie said. On the average two blood donations are needed to make up one can.

Allow All Girls To Check Health

The Women's Health Service at 44 Hoskin Ave. is this year extending its examinations to women of second, third and fourth years. Formerly these medicals were given only to girls in their freshman year, but the present policy of the Senate of the University is to include health examinations for all University women.

Resident women in all years at Victoria College who have had regular examinations by their resident doctor will not be required to have another. This system will continue at Vic as before. Also exempt from this examination are women in the C.R.C.C. and those in athletics who have already had medicals.

Dr. J. A. McGreachy of the Health Service stated that these examinations were to have been given in the fall term along with those of first year, but due to a shortage of doctors this was unable to be organized. Speaking of the new service, Dr. McGeachy said, "I believe this is a very good thing as it gives each student a chance to know the condition of her health."

Dents At-Home Strictly Informal

High above the city, on the Roof Gardens of the Royal York, Dents held their annual At-Home Friday night. For the first time since this event was initiated, it was informal.

Gone were the long dresses, the corsages; gone were starched stiff and penquin-like males—along with the current desire to "cut out the nonesscntials" the dance was streamlined to war conditions. Morgan Thomas and his orchestra cut out rhythm patterns and pieced them together to cause the dancers no feeling of dismay for the lack of formality.

Patrons at the At-Home were President H. J. Cody and Mrs. Cody, Mayor F. J. Conboy, Dean Arnold Mason of the Faculty of Dentistry and Mrs. Mosan, Assistant Dean T. Cowling, and Dr. S. Woollatt.

"From all points of view, the dance was a great success," said Don Moore, president of the Dental Society.

Negative Upheld In Newman Debate

"That a suitable basis for international peace could be found in an international political system based on the British Commonwealth of Nations" was the resolution defeated by the Senate Club of St. Michael's College in a debate against the Debating Society of Newman Club at Brennan Hall yesterday.

"The world is faced with the great problem of deciding what type of organization to set up to insure peace and prosperity in the post-war era," stated Frank Heenan, first speaker for the affirmative. "This type of organization should aim at liberty—through political liberty; equality—through non-oppression; security—through non-aggression, and unity of purpose—through the general welfare of the world," he pointed out. He stressed the importance of psychological disarmament of our aggressors, before a solid basis for reconstruction could be established. He cited the British Commonwealth of Nations as an embodiment of the prin-

Student Club To Show Russ Film

A full-length Russian film will be presented Wednesday, Jan. 27, by the Student Labour Club as part of its contribution toward the Student Administrative Council's campaign in support of the Aid to Russia Fund, it was announced at the Club's meeting last Thursday.

At the meeting there was an open discussion centering on three topics: pre-Vichy politics in France, National Selective Service shake-up, and the present steel workers' strikes in Ontario and Nova Scotia.

Future Of Medicine

On all sides, these days, there is a growing volume of talk about post-war reconstruction. There are, however, few fields in which there now exists any basis for this projected regeneration. One such field is that of national health. The structure for a post-war program to maintain and protect the health of Canada is slowly being built up, and plans for further advances are being widely discussed.

One of the chief obstacles to any concerted public health and health insurance program has been the attitude of the medical profession, or, more correctly, of that articulate part of the profession which speaks or pretends to speak for all the doctors in the country. This attitude is typified by an editorial in a recent issue of the Journal of the American Medical Association. This body, whatever its other activities may be, has long been known as one of the foremost opponents to any kind of "interference" with the present system of medical practice. Under the force of circumstance and because of events that even a blind may can see, they have now begun to suggest plans which would be acceptable to them, if a change is inevitable. The proposals of this, and of similar bodies, when stripped of camouflage, say quite plainly, "let us have the status quo, or something as close to that as people can be forced to swallow." However, the chaos which was status quo had many undesirable features, and in a world which is going forward, such chaos must be eliminated.

It is not unusual for us to read of unsung civilian heroes, in factory and in the professions. Among these heroes, recently, were two white doctors, who attended a mixed population of more than 6,000 people, white, Negro and Indian, in the southern United States. It is true that these people are heroes, but we should consider, rather, whether this heroism is necessary. In an country which was pictured by immigrants of the early years of this century as a "land flowing with milk and honey" the discrepancy between such heroism on the one hand, and the six-figure incomes of "society-doctors" should not exist. However, the attitude of the American Medical Association and similar bodies fosters the continuation of these conditions.

The industrial expansion which occurred in all countires after the outbreak of this war led to the universal adoption, in large plants, of some scheme to maintain the productive capacity of the employees at a maximum. The maxim that a healthy worker is a good worker, and that a healthy nation is a powerful nation, is one that is not seriously contested in any quarter. Under the present schemes, the factory doctor is responsible for the examination of prospective employees, treatment of accidents and industrial diseases, and attempting to make the plant a more hygienic place for the workers. Thus far, the possibility of the plant physician encroaching upon the territory of the family physician has been jealously guarded against. In a recent bulletin issued by the Ontario Medical Association, in which the question of Health Insurance is discussed, the fact is carefully noted that "Health insurance is not State Medicine."

Many doctors speak of the "Democratic right of the patient to choose his own doctor," forgetting to mention however, his democratic right to be unable to pay the doctor for his services. Therefore, health insurance has been suggested as a method whereby everybody will be able to afford medical attention. There is a fallacy in such reasoning. Even the advanced legislation proposed in the Beveridge Report under which there would be nearly 20,000,000 participants in a nationwide health insurance scheme (out of a population of 45,000,000) a large proportion of the population would be excluded, and even for those insured, not all eventualities would be covered. In addition, the whole plan depends for its successful functioning, on participants being employed in some industry.

The question of individual initiative has often been quoted as a great drawback to state medicine. The basis of this idea is that the prime objective which moves every doctor is the desire to earn large amounts of money. This argument is short-sighted and superficial, since the greal majority of doctors in Canada and in other countries, do not find Medicine the lucrative profession it is imagined to be. Possibly the overworked (and in many cases underpaid) doctor would be more efficient if he were part of an organized scheme that assured him of a comfortable living and the opportunity to improve himself. Although state medicine may not come, the form of health insurance which is instituted will have to be something more than a slight improvement of the present unsatisfactory conditions.

A Group Grows Up

Early last fall, while freshman ties were still in flower and before the portentous word "harvest" took on such significance, students at large began to hear about the Arts and Letters Club of the Medical Society—a group whose object it was to offer to medical students overburdened with their highly-technical courses some opportunity of gathering some wider form of education than was provided in classroom and laboratory.

The brain-child of the then President of the Medical Society, the Club staged regular supper-time meetings at Wymilwood, at which guest speakers were limited to some 20 minutes' oratory and those attending—not all Meds by any means—were free to discuss points which arose out of the main address. By careful selection of speakers and topics the Club became an informal meeting place for students from all faculties with ideas to exchange. Meetings—for the most part—were extremely well-attended.

Now the Club is expanding its scope. No longer an adjunct of the Medical Society, its title now is: the Arts and Letters Club of the University of Toronto. For a time it will remain under Medical sponsorship, but the men who are now running its affairs hope that in the near future it will become as much an all-University undertaking as are, for example, Torontonensis and the Hart House Library Committee.

There is every reason for the Club to prosper: it has vigorous officers and something worthwhile to offer students. In effect, it is creating another in the slender series of links which bind together the students and staff of this Federated University by offering a common interest in which we may share. Since the inception of the wartime trance of the Hort House Debates, the necessity on the campus for the opportunity of free discussion among all students has been marked, despite efforts of certain of the less dormant Debating Societies.

Now the Club, embarking on its second term and launching into a career of larger endeavour, extends to all students of the University and staff members of the whole campus a cordial invitation to attend its meetings and join in its discussions.. And The Varsity endorses the invitation with the belief that the undertaking is worthwhile and with the wish that it may prosper.

Symphony Tickets

For more years than this tired old editor can remember, the Toronto Symphony Orchestra has made available to students attending this university tickets to its concerts at a reduced rate. They are sold through the Warden's office, Hart House.

The bare announcement of the special offer should be enough to send all music lovers in the University of Toronto post haste to get their tickets before the inevitable sell-out. And that used to be just what happened.

This year, seemingly, the project has not received wide enough publicity. The present situation is, frankly, that the privilege may be withdrawn if a greater response is not met with. It is baffling, to say the least, to try to advance reasons for the lack of interest this year. There just aren't any.

Tomorrow night, the Verdi Requiem is being preformed by the symphony and the Mendelssohn Choir. If you don't go you are missing one of the most interesting concerts this year.

Sunday Evening Concert

In our callower youth, when people still thought Vronsky and Babin were two Notre Dame halfbacks and Bartlett and Robertson a brand of biscuits, two-piano music was being introduced to Canada by a couple of youngsters called Scott Malcolm and Reginal Godden.

It was our good fortune to attend a summer camp at which they were trying their medium on the house, and the effect on a group of eight-to-15-year-olds of double-strength renditions of Danse Macabre and Liszt's Hungarian Rhapsody No. 2 was most gratifying. (They did other things, too, but those were the ones that stuck.)

Then Malcolm nd Godden toured the states for a while and somehow we never got around to hearing them again until last night. We were delighted to find that they stood up extremely well to our early memories.

They did an excellent and varied Bach group. In defiance of the purists

PHYSICAL TRAINING CLASSES TO BE DISCONTINUED

Gymnasium a Hotbed of Evil, R.C.M.P. Declare; Instructors to Be Forced to Read Champus Cat Daily Until Full Confession Obtained

REVOLTING, ISN'T IT?

Agents of the Royal Canadian Mounted Police today exposed what they believe to be "a deliberate attempt to sabotage Canadian manpower" here in the University of Toronto. A ring of "desperate" Nazi agents has been discovered, masquerading under the guise of Physical Training Instructors.

The ring, under the leadership of "Lungs" Larkin, known also as "The Big Wind," hase been operating in the Athletic Wing of Hart House for years, completely unsuspected. Discovery was brought about by the alertness of two Pass Arts men whose suspicions were aroused by the Germanic accent of Lungs' assistant, Karl Swayback, and a strong odor of German beer on Lungs' breath.

They reported this to R.C.M.P. headquarters who sent two agents to investigate, disguised as S.P.S. men. Their suspicions were immediately confirmed by the militaristic manner in which the class was conducted.

"A deliberate attempt to contaminate our youth with the vile doctrine of Nazidom," was the comment of an unnamed policeman. "Why," he continued, "Larkin even admitted that he was teaching the boys Danish exercises—and everybody knows that Denmark is part of Germany."

"The nefarious aims of this organization are all too obvious, even to the casual bystander," said Tim Buck, popular Chief Inspector of the R.C.M.P. "At the beginning of the year the members of these classes, at which attendance is compulsory, are strong, healthy, perfect specimens of young Canada's manhood. And at the end of three months—look at them! They aren't fit for Category E."

"I knew he was a heel, but I never thought he was a Nazi," commented soft-spoken Warren Stevens, when questioned by the R.C.M.P.

U.C. Nabs Four To Vic's Three

Furry and Phenix Out-fox Vic-Men in Tricky Hook - up Sparked by Fullerton; Teams in Poor Condition

GAME CLOSELY CONTESTED

Friday afternoon U.C. I and Vic I tangled in their first game of the hockey season and the Royal College skated off with the decision by a 4-3 margin. A solo effort by Street put the Vicmen in front but a Furry to Phenix combination equalized and from there in the Red and White were never behind. U.C. took the lead a few minutes later on a goal by Nesbitt assisted by Whitely only to have McLean set up a pass for O'Malley to tie the score two all at the end of the first period.

In the second period U.C. took the lead once more again on a Furry to Phenix hook-up. Jim Street came right back to tie the game up for the third time, this time on a pass by Fullerton. Shortly before the end of the game Furry broke loose and sailed in on Cummings, the Vic goaler, to give him no chance on what proved to be the winning goal.

Both teams seemed a little short on condition but they were very evenly matched and the outcome was in doubt all the way. For the winners Furry, Phenix, Nesbitt and Graham stood out, while Street and Kitchen performed best for Vic.

U.C. I — Skinner, Volpe, Nicholls, Furry, Kuryluk, Whitely, Horkins, Phenix, Graham, Nesbitt, Warren.

Vic I — Cummings, Paton, Ktchen, Flewelling, Street, McLean, Fullerton, Fisher, O'Malley, Neiro, Scott.

Sportswoman

By Betsy Mosbaugh

As far as skiers are concerned, "There's gold in them thar hills," but this time it's white gold in the form of snow. And it follows that if our survey of the trails on Saturday are correct, there are plenty of gold-diggers this year.

The University Ski Club is in full swing now, and preparations are being made for the annual women's inter-faculty ski meet. As yet there are no definite arrangements made concerning the matter but enthusiasm is relatively rampant.

Summit Trails are in excellent condition as also are the club houses, where any shivering co-eds can find heat and sustenance. U.C. boasts of two top-barrel-stave representatives out there—Marg Ham, IV House Ec., and Joan Carter, IV Sociology. Of course a Ski Sportswoman wouldn't be a Ski Sportswoman unless some mention were made of the former famous "Punch" Gallie who used to uphold the women's section of the Blue and White.

Arrangements may be made for membership and transportation at Hart House as the women's ski club is a sort of auxiliary of the men's. The club is one hour's ride by radial car from the city limits. Owing to lack of ye old much spoken of rationed produces, there will be no buses running this year.

There need be no qualms about not having skied before as instruction is provided out at the Club, as also are facilities for waxing skis. And as far as feeling "self-conscious" is concerned, don't worry about it, as there are special trails for beginners.

St. Michael's Bow To U.C. Splashers

Red and White Water polo players convoyed two goals safely into St. Mike's net to outsplash the Double Blue 2-1, Friday afternoon in Hart House Pool. The game was clean and hard fought throughout with particularly fierce checking on both sides. It was only a slight edge in the attack that gave U.C. the odd counter.

Ross Sturgess broke the deadlock in the first period with some 20 seconds to go when he sank the first goal for the Royal Collegians. Pressing hard in the second period, U.C. tallied again when Rog. Barns found a stretch of open water and an open corner of the Double Blue net.

St. Mike's then started a push that kept U.C.'s team busy. Devlin finally broke through with two minutes to go, driving home a goal which left the final register on the score sheet: U.C. 2, St. Mike's 1.

ART, MUSIC & DRAMA

who claim that music must always be played as written, we have always maintained that Bach lends himself extremely well to two-piano arrangements (if well done) and the three selections on last night's program proved our point to our complete satisfaction. The prelude from the Sixth Violin Sonata was given a crisp and spirited rendition, with full advantage being taken of the power of the two instruments. Sheep May Safely Graze benefited from the variety of tonal colour afforded by the medium, but was played with flawless delicacy. The Toccata and Fugue in D minor was perhaps the least successful of the three; it fails to measure up to the magnificent organ version, but it makes a valiant effort to capture some of the effects of the original.

Of the remainder of the program, the Debussy Fetes was easily the most interesting. Again the piece paled somewhat beside its rich orchestral setting, but the performers pulled everything in their bag of tricks in a attempt to substitute for woodwinds and brasses and came very close to getting away with it.

The Saint Saens Variations on a Theme by Beethoven are notable chiefly for the ability of the later composer to keep his variations thoroughly in the idiom of the earlier. The popular Infante Sentimiento was performed with fire which was only eclipsed by the pure pyrotechnics of the Paganini-Liszt Campanella.

The final encore, the Arensky Waltz, was a sheer delight. One of the loveliest pieces in the two-piano repertoire, it was done with a lilt and a lightness of touch that must have captured the stoniest academician and the most incorrigible jazzophile.

Trinity Pastes U.C. With 6-1 Showing

Puck Inhabits U.C. Zone in One-sided Game as Leake and Gordon Shoots Works for Trinity

AIRD HOT STUFF

In a very decidedly one-sided game last Friday the Trinity hockey team gave the U.C. seconds a 6-1 pasting and showed themselves to be a team worth more than a passing glance. Trinity exhibited a surging power throughout the entire game which kept the puck almost without exception in the U.C. zone.

The scoring combo of Leake and Gordon proved to be Trinity's most fruitful. Between the two of them they accounted for eight points. Aird set up many of the winner's scoring plays and collected a goal and an assist for himself. McGanity, in the Trinity nets, had little chance to show the stuff which I'm told he has. The close checking defence kept the U.C. players from any serious scoring threats and few shots were made on the goalie from last year's Senior Meds.

Trinity's first goal was on a Gordon to Leake pass at the four minute mark, while Aird sat cooling his heels in the penalty box. Russell, in the U.C. cage, while far from sensational, should improve with practice. The lop-sided score cannot be entirely blamed on Russell since the Trinity attack had little trouble in penetrating the U.C. defence.

Trinity's second counter came after 14 minutes of the first period, when a U.C. player, whose name is not being disclosed, knocked the puck into the wrong net. Gordon was given credit for the score. At the 18 minute mark, Hull made the third Trinity counter on a pass from Aird. In this first period one reason for U.C.'s failure to enter the scoring list was the misfiring of practically all their pass plays in front of their opponents' net. Time after time the Redmen were in scoring position only to miss their chance by a ill-timed or weak pass. Perhaps a week of practice will effect some change for the better.

The fourth Trinity score came after two minutes of the second frame on a shot by Leake and assist by Gordon. After eight minutes U.C. finally dented the Trinity ego on a Morton from Rowat play, while a great shout went up from the six spectators. At the 10 minute mark Trinity scored again. This time Aird was credited with the goal and Leake and Hull with assists. Two minutes later Bud Leake, on a pass from Gordon, sunk the sixth and final goal for Trinity.

The game was clean from the penalty-provoking standards, minors being meted out equally, one to Aird of Trinity after four minutes of the first period and one to Stallwood after 16 minutes of the second.

For the information of those who didn't know, only two periods, each of twenty minutes, are played.

Trinity — McGanity, Aird, Ingler, Laidlaw, Hull, Leake, Gordon, Pringle, Mills, Spence, Jones, Hatch.

U.C. II — Russell, Nicholls, Wade, McCoy, Rowat, McNulty, Stallwood, Morton, Armstrong, Purcell, Cameron.

Speaking of Sport

By Bud Smith

STRICTLY FROM HUNGER

Last week sometime we hazarded some random remarks concerning the relative merits of various Jennings Cup contenders. At that time, knowing nothing whatsoever about the different teams, we were able to ramble on without the restraining influence of facts. However, to give ourself due credit, we find that it is quite true that Junior School, Trinity and St. Mike's have teams in the league (which actually was about all we managed to say in five paragraphs). Since that time, however, hockey has actually been started (as you have been told in five consecutive sport columns) and these imaginative contenders have become realities.

School Thirds started the season with a surprise upset, beating Senior Meds. (That is if a defeat for Meds could at any time be classed as an upset!) A smooth-working Junior School team then breezed through Jurnior Meds. And this same Junior School team is the sweetest looking interfaculty squad to appear for quite some time. They appeard to be almost in mid-season form of Thursday. Last year's team, which was good enough to win the cup, suffers by comparison with this edition. On their first line the Engineers have last year's freshman sensation Gord Bell at centre and two newcomers, Harry Boynton and Bill Houston, on the wings. Boynton started the season with Young Rangers but couldn't seem to cure himself of the habit of sleeping so turned to the interfaculty loop where practices are held at somewhat more orthodox times. Houston is from last year's brilliant U.T.S. team. (Even though we wiled away many pleasant hours in the past watching Mara beat U.T.S. by astronomical figures, we must admit they were good last year.) Art Ridler is back on defence which should stop any worrying about that department, with Johnny Ratcliffe, also late of U.T.S., as his sidekick. The third member of the defence department is none other than Herbie Stricker, whose athletic achievements are many and varied. Harv Spence tends the net and while not impressive in his initial showing he should steady down hereafter. For alternates up front the Engineers have Pat McDonough and Jim Boa of last year's squad, Fuzz Folds ex-U.C.C. performer, and George Carrol, who at one time was incarcerated in Vic and played for the team from that institution. As for predictions, we will go out on a limb—in fact we'll dangle from a twig if need be—to say that Junior School will take the honours for the third successive year.

Dents and St. Mike's managed to nullify each other's efforts in their initial encounter and as far as we know no one will object if we say they are of about the same quality—that is no one except a few thousand people from St. Mike's and a few thousand people from Dents! Then Vic and U.C. tangled in a close contest, with each team playing as if it were their last game—which of course is silly—since the Senate doesn't meet for two weeks? The Red and White boys managed to atone for their Mulock Mug loss somewhat by edging out Vic 4-3. (A rumour that five members of the Gestapo, who have been refused admission to the University, were playing in the Victoria line-up was declared to be entirely false!)

Then came Trinity, who for reasons of thei own—did someone say Reed Trophy?—have had themselves included in a group with University College Seconds and School Fourths. They met U.C. Seconds on Friday and managed to eke out a 6-1 victory. Trinity's first string outfit, which did all their scoring by the way, is quite good indeed. Their alternates are not up to scratch,however, despite evident signs of good coaching. Bud Leake and Tommy Hull, from last year finalists, flank the first line, with Jeff Gordon, again from U.T.S., in the pivot position. Johnny Aird and Bob Inglis hold down defence positions with Rod Laidlaw in reserve. Billy McGanity, who played for Senior Meds last season, is guarding the twine for the Anglicans this semester. For forward line duty Trinity can also call on Pringle, Spence, Hatch and Jones. We doubt if Trinity will have much trouble in their own group but they may find difficulty when the playdowns start, despite the undoubted excellence of some of their players.

Course Completion Same For Medettes In Uniform

Women in 5th and 6th Year Medicine to Wear Uniform, Take Innoculation, Step into Hospital Staffs

NO DRILL AT PRESENT

The women in fifth and sixth year Medicine who have joined the Army Medical Corps will complete their courses just the same as the men. They have no military training as yet but they wear the uniform and attend classes as usual. They also have the routine army innoculations. At the end of the eight months interneship they become first lieutenants in the R.C.A.M.C. and take three months training at Camp Borden, after which they receive the rank of captain.

They will take their places on hospital staffs as bacteriologists, anaesthetists and pathologists. It is possible that they will become medical officers in the Canadian Women's Army Corps, but they will be placed wherever they are needed most.

This new ruling has placed the women on almost the same status as the men which is what they had hoped for.

Billy Allison of Sixth Year, who has joined up, said that she thought it was a very good idea and very satisfactory and explained that when their training at Borden is completed they will be entirely on the same basis os the men.

Lorna Sansom, also of Sixth Year, said that they had had little to do with the army yet and did not expect any military life until they were through their interneship. She felt that the girls were really needed and should take the place of the men required at present in the women's divisions, but only if that was where they were necessary.

Debaters to Link Studies, Morals

Good, said that he was confident of victory. "My colleague and I have two ideas—which is two more than the opposition has."

The second speaker of the negative, Ralph Hicklin, said modestly, "I think it is emminently suitable that the highly moral students of Victoria should discuss the attributes of their less fortunate comrades.

In commenting on the debate, Prime Minister Marg Dillon felt that her sociological studies had revealed to her that certainly "abeunt studia in mores" —especially in the summer.

CONFIDENTIALLY—

Odours were the topic under discussion as a merry group of eds and co-eds warmed their backs at the stove and waited for some others to arrive so they could start their supper at one of the Elizabeth street eateries. "I'll admit the food looks all right," said one lass, "but something smells awfully funny in here." Others admitted they detected it too, and some people made disapproving remarks. "It's getting much stronger," the lass was remarking when the rest of the group arrived and they went to their table.

It was then that somebody noticed she had burned a large part out of the back of her coat.

So we were concerned with one little "fffff" at the end of our review of the Trinity University Review last week! We should work for The Silver and Gold out at the University of Colorado where all sorts of strange comments are found. The four editorials in one issue ended respectively "flkarsh," "flk", "flk," and "wmapell," which they don't seem to think is putting things a bit too strongly.

OH, NURSE! THERE IS A MAN (OR) MEN UNDER MY BED DEPT.:

Seems like women's residences think it's a Bad Thing for young gentlemen to visit young ladies in the infirmary when joims force them to take refuge there. But there are two lads on eampus who believe in cheering the sick, rules or no rules. So up they climb, unobserved, to the infirmary, which happens to be on the third floor of the residence in question, and sneak in to see the cheeree when the nurse is out dragging on her opium pipe. The cheerors are no sooner smilingly greeted than they hear the nurse coming, having remembered her New Year's resolution and laid her opium pipe aside.

Quick like a flash in the best boudoir farce style the two lads duck under the bed. But the brave little invalid notices to her horror that one of the lads who is notoriously long is projecting to the extent of two feet, so she rises painfully and drops a handy towel over the feet.

Unfortunately the nurse has also taken a vow of neatness for 1943, and so picks up the towel to discover, to her horror, two very large feet under it. At this point the lads play their trump card. They duck out from under the bed, trying to look as though they had come to talk for Joe and says, "Shhhh, musn't disturb the sick," and pussyfoot out.

The nurse was last seen breaking her opium pipe.

The oeeasion was the first meeting of a new one term class down in School. In the course of his prefaratory remarks the prof said, "Don't let this course worry you. Experience has shown that only three of you will fail" (uneasy shuffling). The professor hastened to add, "It has also shown that those three have either skipped this lecture or will be late."

Just then the door opened, and three bewildered schoolmen stepped in. "Ah!" said the prof as the class watched in horror. Then the three bewildered Engineers said, "Wrong class," and walked out. The prof looked thwarted.

ciples required for an established new organization.

Charles O'Connell, first speaker of the opposition, traced the growth of the Commonwealth and emphasized that its success as a unit was due to the period of subjugation which took place during its infancy. "What," he asked, "is to replace England as a common denominator; how are trade preferences to be made workable among non-sister nations, and upon what is economic equality to be founded" He listed the seven dynamic factors as differentiated by Herbert Hoover and Hugh Gibson—Idealogies, Economic Status, Nationalism, Imperialism, Militarism, Fear, Hatred and Revenge, Will-to-Peace—and questioned as to how nations varying in each could attain unity through a Commonwealth.

"The post-war world will be one of chaos—a harbinger of revolution—if we were to divorce ourselves from one another we would again be driven to the awful unity of war." declared Arthur Maloney, second speaker for the government. He went on to say that we must have speed to dispatch our problems and a moralization of relationships which have proven workable in the British Commonwealth of Nations. He stated in conclusion, "The Commonwealth idea is signifieant because it shows not what the British people are—but what people can do."

Alexander Campbell, second speakcr of the opposition, re-affirmed his colleague's seven factors and elucidated the three principles of world peace.

"Settlement of idealogical concepts, fostering of a representative government throughout the worl, solving problems created by fear, hate and revenge."

Most people have preconceived ideas about Bette Davis as an actress. Now Voyager, based on a book by the author of Stella Dallas, gives Miss Davis marvellous scope in bringing iut the inner feelings of love-starved, ridiculed and authority-ridden (aunt) Charlotte Vale. Her mother, a ramrod-backed aristocrat of the Boston Vales, drives her to a breakdown. Convincingly, Claude Rains, as a psychiatrist, leads her on her way to self-confidence and a new life. On her trip to Brazil she runs into Paul Hendried (the glimpses of Rio are good), finds he has a wife and child Tina; she, too, is of an emotional nature, feeling she is not wanted by her mother.

SHEA'S "NOW VOYAGER"

Circumstances throw Tino into Charlotte's friendship and care and upon this a queer basis of interest of friendship and love between Tina's father and Charlotte is formed. It's not a bright picture, but in it's choice of subject matter, is not morbid. The only specific objection is the too frequent use of horn-rimmed spectacles as props.

Interfaculty and Interuniversity Sport Competitions Will High-Light Series to Be Held Saturday Evenings

GRADS, PARENTS INVITED

A series of Athletic Nights to be held Saturday nights from Jan. 23 to Feb. 27, commencing at 8:00 p.m. each night, was announced reeently by officials of the Athletic Association Office.

Payment of 25 cents will allow students, parents and graduates admission to the programs scheduled below.

Acting hosts Jan. 23 will be Vic and U.C. who have invited a Manning Depot R.C.A.F. basketball squad. There will be interfaculty teams competing in volleyball, basketball preliminaries and in two games of water polo.

Acting hosts Jan. 30 will be Dents and Trinity, who will compete in basketball with Rochester University and possibly fencing with University of Buffalo. There will be Junior interfaculty teams competing in boxing and wrestling, and if time permits a swimming competition for Senior interfaculty teams.

S.P.S. will do the honours Feb. 6 with basketball jousts against Wayne University, and probably swimming competitions with a squad from No. 1 I.T.S. R.C.A.F. and boxing and wrestling combats with a Y.M.C.A. team.

For Feb. 13 the School of Physieal and Health Edueation will welcome air men from Trenton with a spot of basketball and swimming. There will be boxing and wrestling matches held among Senior interfaculty teams.

Playing host Feb. 20, St. Mike's will compete against Assumption College in basketball; boxing and wrestling games will be held opposing Ontario Agricultural College, and there will be two interfaculty games held in water polo.

Hosts on Feb. 27, Medical boys will hold an interfaculty meet for gymnastics; a women's interfaculty meet in swimming, and possibly basketball competition against a Navy team.

Correspondence

Editor,
The Varsity.

Dear Sir:

What would state control mean to the University of Toronto? Obviously something is radically wrong with our whole system; even casual observers are criticizing it. That glib phrase "state control" has been offered as a panacea for all our troubles.

Many criticisms are being thoughtlessly levelled at the University's minor short-comings—but people would indeed be well justified in criticizing us on more important issues. Students are concentrating on their individual courses, but how much of this work is due to the fear of being expelled? Surely there is something weak in a system that can only make us work through fear! Our aim should be something other than this individual end. We should be considering our responsibility of fitting ourselves to be leaders in the post-war world. That is no mere high-sounding phrase to be scoffed at, but a matter-of-fact statement of the end of University edueation. We must realize that the government is paying a large part of the cost of our education—spending money which could be used to buy munitions—because it considers university students the source of its leadership material.

People are not justified in saying that university students are not working. But we maintain that they are working in the wrong spirit. There is no excuse for the attitude we heard expressed by a student, "You'd better work hard or you'll be toting a gun!"

Would "state control" give the students—and the public—the feeling that university training is not an escape from "gun toting," but an equivalent to it?

"Devonshire Place."

Athletic Nights Resumed to Allow Students to See Intercollegiate Sporting Activities, and to Economize

PROCEEDS TO HELP WAR

By George Elliott

Three years ago, Intercollegiate Sport was put away in mothballs for the duration of the war. Rather than have absolutely no intercollegiate activities at all, Warren Stevens, Director of Athletics for the University, conceived the idea of having a series of "Athletic Nights" sometime during the spring term.

Two years ago, the series of special Saturday nights was extremely successful with a nightly attendance of over 1,000. Last year, the Athletic Nights were still more successful with over 1,200 in attendance each night.

This year, as in previous years, the Athletic Association officials feel that the Athletic Nights will serve a double purpose. It will provide the only opportunity for University students to see good senior intercollegiate sporting activities and it will give students the opportunity to have an inexpensive Saturday night. Proceeds of Athletic Nights will be distributed among several deserving war charities.

Basketball and swimming will be the principal offerings in Hart House on each Saturday night starting January 23 and ending February 27.

As well as a fast basketball game between U. of T. and the R.C.A.F. on Jan. 23, the 15-cent admission fee will let students see interfaculty volleyball, basketball and water polo competition. U.C. and Victoria are hosts for the first night and will provide the additional entertainment and will see that the evening runs smoothly.

Dents and Trinity combine on Jan. 30 as hosts. A senior basketball team from Rochester University comes up that night to play the Blues. Boxing, wrestling, a swimming meet and fencing will be among the many extra added attractions.

Wayne University of Detriot is Toronto's third opponent on the basketball schedule for Feb. 6. Schoolmen will act as hosts that night when a swimming squad from No. 1 I.T.S., R.C.A.F., will appear along with boxing and wrestling teams from the Y.M.C.A.

Sir William Mulock, University Chancellor, Celebrates Birthday

Chancellor Reminisces About College Days in the 50's and 60's; They Had Refugees Then, Too, From the Frontier States in the American Civil War; They Played Football on Site of Parliament Buildings in Those Days

REMEMBERS WHEN U.C. WAS BUILT

By E. Jean Southworth

On the eve of his 99th birthday, yesterday, Sir William Mulock, the University's grand old man, looked back some 80 years to his own academic career, when enrolment at the University numbered some 200 male students, women not as yet having been admitted.

There was just one building at that time, the present University College, and Sir William remembers its opening in 1859. He explained that during its construction, classes were held in the building which was later occupied by the Department of Biology.

As he puffed at his cigar, Sir William recalled the days when in the absence of organized college sport the students used to get together in autumn and play football where the Ontario Parliament Buildings now stand. Hockey was not played as yet.

"The only society at that time was the Literary and Scientific Society," he said, "and oh yes—there was also the Neoplatonic Society." He explained that the purpose of the latter body was the initiation of the freshmen. At the ceremonies conducted in the basement, the senior students impressed the incoming students with a sense of the superiority of the former.

Courses provided by the University at that time included: classics, mathematics, metaphysics, chemistry, geology and mineralogy, modern languages, Latin and Greek, history and arts.

While Sir William was at University, the American Civil War broke out. He recalled that about a dozen students from the frontier states such as Kentucky came to the University of Toronto to continue their education as a result of the war.

NEWSFRONTS

London — Seventeen-month-old German siege of Leningrad was lifted as the Red Army blasted its way through eight miles of Nazi defences and routed four divisions.

Ottawa—A committee of labour, management and government officials went into conference last night in an effort to settle Canada's steel strike which keeps 13,500 steel workers idle.

Cairo—General Montgomery's Army, driving Field Marshall Rommell westward, stood within 100 miles of Tripoli, Italy's greatest African port, last night.

IF IT'S SNOW, YOU'RE A SISSY, IF NOT, YOU'RE AN ESKIMO

The Department of Vital Information which has been closely allied with the Meterological Bureau revealed the following information late yesterday afternoon in a terse communique concerning the recent prolific snow fall:

"The amount of snow precipitation in the Toronto and Lower Lakes region is considerably greater than in previous years at the same date. The explanation of this fact must remain for the present undisclosed."

A more scientific explanation has been given by Peter Dickinson, III Vic. Sunday night he was ordering refreshments at a nearby restaurant when he asked the waitress to "whip him up a snowflake." This morning he was considerably amazed to find he had been taken literally, for the campus was a mass of snowflakes!

It was so bad Joan Proudfoot, IV Household Economics, declared that transportation difficulties prevented her from attending her 8:30 lecture.

As the day progressed considerable measures were taken in the University area to make roads and paths passable. About 11:30 a.m., four delivery trucks got tangled above Harbord on St. George. Bitter words were spoken, but the damage was slight.

Making and clearing paths is an art in itself. U.C. rotunda gossip revealed the heart-felt wish "that people shouldn't wander so, when they make paths," The cut-off across Queen's Park is a classic example of the rugged individualism displayed in making paths.

By late afternoon most of the main line of communication between lectures were cleared by the University horse and plow.

Replying to the customary question—"What do you think of all the snow?" Eileen Acton, IV Moderns at Vic, remarked, "What snow? Where I come from the snow is much deeper, and the temperature runs around 34 degrees below zero."

In similar vein, Campbell McLean, an Emmanuel student, said, "Toronto is lucky—I was preaching at a church south of Jarvis, Ontario, and the snow was seven feet deep!"

On the other hand, Bill Dymond, IV Pol. Sci., said quite tersely, that he had had his fill—"You'd think we were living in Timmins."

But a big snowfall always produces wonder in some quarters. "It's more than I've seen in all my 18 years." For obvious reasons this co-ed desired that her name he withheld.

Arts and Letters Club To Hear Brett Tonight

The University of Toronto Arts and Letters Club will hold an open meeting tonight at Wymilwood from 6:30 to 8 o'clock. G. S. Brett, Dean of the School of Graduate Studies and Head of the Department of Philosophy, will address the society on the subject of "India Today."

Dean Brett plans to comment generally on the existing social and political situation in India and its historical background, prior to opening the meeting for general discussion. Dean Brett spent five years in India in the Indian Educational Service, returning to England in 1909.

Students and staff of all faculties are invited to attend the meeting.

C.C.F. Club Will Hear Alderman W. Dennison

Alderman William Dennison, C.C.F. representative on the Toronto City Council, will speak to an open meeting of the University C.C.F. Club Thursday night at the University College Women's Union on the subject, "The C.C.F. and Civic Politics." The meeting will begin at 8:15 p.m.

Mr. Dennison was a member of the Board of Education in 1938, 1939 and 1940 and was on the City Council in 1941. At present he is alderman for Ward Two. In private life Mr. Dennison conducts a school for speech correction on Jarvis Street. He has taken an active part in the local and provincial C.C.F. Party for a number of years.

Studies Influence Morals Victoria Debaters Decide

Victoria's Motto Accepted by House as Truthful; Education Considered to Produce Morals on Higher Scale

MORALITY DEFINED

"Abeunt Studia in Mores" was the decision arrived at in the Victoria College Debating Parliament last night, upholding the Government's motion. "Studies are ercative of a higher morality" was agreed upon as the translation of Vic's motto to be taken as a basis for the debate.

Jack Coleman, first speaker for the Government, began by making it clear that the term "studies" would be used to include all activities at University, "even S.P.S." He then defined morality as what "intimidates intimacies," quoting as examples the rule of the women's residences that men must be out at 12 o'clock, and the fact that hawk-eyed female graduates of two years standing must be present at class parties.

Children get a bad start in life as far as morals are concerned, Coleman held. What can you expect when they are made to read such stories as Ali Baba and the Forty Thieves, and even Snow White? Didn't Snow White stay in the woods for days with seven men? On the other hand, with education and enlightenment comes a higher morality, for morality requires a rational mind, Coleman established by quotations from 11 books, nearly all available in the Vic Library.

Harold Good, leader of the Opposition, stressed the identity between morality and custom, and stated that "all morals are customs, but not all customs are moral."

By means of a conducted tour in imagination through Dr. Barber's relics in the Library, he gave a brief history of morality. Primitive tribes developed rough systems of ethics, and established rules or morals to maintain these systems. He illustrated his point by bringing attention to a copy of rules in force at the College one hundred years ago. Any intercommunication between the sexes was frowned upon. The young ladies and young gentlemen had separate playgrounds in order to prevent it. One rule stated that "the conduct of students must be distinguished by moral propriety." Social events could by no means take place on Sundays, such as certain Sunday teas which are now very frequent.

Bill Robinson, second speaker for the Government, proposed to contrast University students with non-university people, real students such as one finds in Victoria or occasionally in other arts colleges, with others such as Schoolmen, and finally the Senior and the Freshman. These contrasts were meant to establish the fact that the man with the highest edueation will have the highest morality. For example, when College men were suddenly thrown together with non-college men on the recent harvesting expedition, their higher morality was quite evident, as was evidenced by their singing of Negro Spirituals and their conduct towards

Montreal Colleges Restrict Formals

Montreal, Jan. 18— (CUP) — Since the outbreak of war, formal dances at McGill University have been restricted in number and have been held on the campus.

From the first, it was agreed that formals should be restricted, though not prohibited. Accordingly, the number was limited to two per year. These are the Junior Prom in December and the amalgamated Med-Plumbers' Ball in the second term. Both must be held on the campus. Formerly they were often held in downtown hotels; but it must be remembered that no adequate facilities such as the recently built Currie Memorial Gymnasium, existed prior to 1939.

There has been some agitation for the abolition of formals. However, barring further exigencies of war, the present system seems likely to continue, with the approval of the student body.

There have been no formals at Sir George Williams College since war was declared.

Engineers' Club To Hold Contest

The annual students' night of the Engineering Institute of Canada, Toronto Branch, will be held Thursday night at 8:15 in the Debates Room of Hart House.

This is a meeting held once a year by the Engineering Institute, at which students of the Engineering Faculty are invited to give papers on technical subjects, before the Institute. Prizes are awarded for the best efforts.

This year, for the first time, the meeting is to be held jointly with the Engineering Society. The contest is open to any student in any ycar and papers are to be of a length requiring 15 minutes reading time, or approximately 2,000 words.

Elimination contests are being held today at 4:30 in Hart House and possibly tomorrow (depending on the number of entries), under the chairmanship of Ron Scott, chairman of the S.P.S. Debates Club. Two speakers from the third and fourth years and two from the first and second, are to be chosen.

The Engineering Institute of Canada, of which Dean C. R. Young is president, is the nation's engineering orgauization of the Dominion and represents all branches of engineering.

Patriotism is Note At Trinity Prom

Strachan Hall, new dining hall of Trinity College, will be the scene of the Conversazione, traditional social event of the year at Trinity, which is to be held this Friday evening.

In accordance with the general temper of campus festivities this ycar, corsages are being discouraged by the committee and in their place, favours will be sold during the evening, the proceeds of which will go to the Canadian Aid to Russia Fund.

The Modernaires, well-known Canadian musieal aggregation, will supply music for the dancing which will continue from nine to two o'clock, with time off for supper.

The patrons are: President H. J. Cody and Mrs. Cody, Provost and Mrs. F. H. Cosgrave, Dean W. A. Kirkwood and Mrs. Kirkwood, Dean Lydon Smith, Mr. Gerald Larkin and Mr. C. A. Ashley.

The committee in charge of the affair includes: Messrs. William Somerville, Max Clarkson, Ian Rusted, Richard Howard, George Ferguson, Thomas Hull, Thomas Hogg and Archie Sheppard.

Russian War Posters On Exhibit in Hart House

Humour and determination are the keynotes of Russian war posters, now on exhibition in Hart House Art Gallery. These posters were secured through the Canadian Aid to Russia Fund, and were used in the Soviet.

The theme behind these huge brightly coloured posters is the defeat and humiliation of the Axis powers. Bombs labelled with Allied flags are seen throwing fear into the German Fuehrer. In another intimate glimpse of Hitler, he is shown haranguing his storm troopers — a vast body of greenish-hued helmeted skulls.

Raise Your Glass!

Sir William Mulock, Chancellor of the University of Toronto, is 99 years old today. And to him, as he enters the hundredth year of vigorous life, go forth the congratulations of Canada and the good wishes in particular of staff and students of this campus.

We know Sir William chiefly as the figure in the front row of the Convocation Hall, who rises to confer degrees upon graduating students and visiting celebrities. He is more than an abstract figure. He is a man whose extraordinary busy career has been bound up to great extent in far-sighted and painstaking work for the welfare of the University. It is not an exaggeration to call him the University's very personification.

And, in the words of the recent testimonial to Sir William, issued by the Senate on the occasion of his completing 82 years of service to the University: "May he long continue to flourish, velut arbor aevo!"

Invest In Victory

At first Hitler blamed the slow-down of his previously invincible Wehrmacht in Russia on the furies of the famed Russian winter. When this excuse eventually failed to explain the mounting casualties, he was forced to make public the true cause: the "bestial Russians refused to fight fairly; they waged TOTAL WAR."

These so-called "bestial" Russians first refused to quit. They gave the world a lesson in total defence which should shame the defenders of Singapore and Manilla. Before the German panzer units could enter any captured Russian town they had to clear away the bodies of the defenders which blocked the barricades. The Russians gave the originators of Total War a lesson on their own subject: dead Russians came alive in the dark winter nights, "liquidated" the sentries and blew up the new masters of the conquered towns. The town of Minsk had to be captured five times in as many days by the Germans because the Russians killed off the occupying forces every night.

But while the Allied world looked on in admiration, Stalin revealed that the hard Russian winters did not affect only the invaders. The land was not miraculously warm where the Russians themselves stood. Soviet troops had also suffered from the freezing weather, although not so severely, since they knew what to prepare for and were better equipped. Soviet civilians, especially those in the invaded and devasted areas, suffered terribly from the rigors of winter much like that of northern Alberta. Both soldiers and civilians have suffered staggering casualties in wounded and dead.

An estimated three million have been wounded on the Russian front. Added to these are the hundreds of thousands of victims behind the front, in the besieged cities, and being freed every day as the Soviet forces retake towns and villages from the invader. In this time of great need Soviet medical and related services have proved their worth, with the result that 98.5 per cent of Russians wounded at the front have recovered.

To carry on this stupendous program of healing, to feed, clothe and care for the thousands of homeless, often sick, civilian victims of the German invasion, requires enormous supplies.

The Canadian Aid to Russia Fund is Canada's answer to the Soviet request for help to carry on this vitally essential work. The other United Nations are also helping, where they can. Since Soviet factories are geared entirely for war, supplies for many civilian needs are scarce. A million dollars is the goal set in our country for the present drive for the Fund—a million dollars which will be used to buy what is most needed. A list of these necessities provided by the Soviet minister to Canada includes warm underwear and clothing, boots, blankets, and medical supplies.

Our Students' Administrative Council, at its last meeting, approved a move for the University colleges and faculties to contribute to the Canadian Aid to Russia Fund. Each faculty is organizing the ways and means for raising its own contribution toward helping our greatest ally.

The University of New Brunswick women's alumnae association is one of the first university organizations to aid the Fund, which it did recently with a Russian ball and showing of films. We may well follow their lead.

Every donation, however small, which is sent to the Fund, is an investment in victory. By helping the hard-fighting people of the Soviet Union we are also helping ourselves, since we are helping to bring victory closer. Sympathy and good will are not enough, for sympathy and good will, however commendable, have never won a war.

When your faculty announces its plans for contributions for the Canadian Aid to Russia Fund, give it your support.

All For 25c

Once again the second term of the University's year will see the most popular of the University's gatherings: the Athletic Nights, when the Athletic Wing of Hart House holds open house for hundreds of students in search of fun, frolic and exciting games to watch, at the reasonable cost of 25 cents.

When the Athletic Nights were first held they immediately caught on and were popular with the students. Last year they broke that record; they were sensational, as anyone who remembers trying to elbow through the crowds will tell you. They will also tell you of the hotly contested basketball games with visiting teams from other colleges and the R.C.A.F. which partially took the place of banned intercollegiate sport. Those who saw the great Blues in action last year will grow nostalgic over Lavarnway and his expert team-mates, and will recall the stirring salute to Jack when he finished his last game before going on active service for the United States.

The boxing and wrestling matches drew almost as many enthusiastic fans as the basketball; the water polo and acquatic displays played to packed galleries and the fencing tournaments were big drawing cards.

The dances in the Big Gym and the square dancing in the Upper Gym ended the evenings with a flourish, while the movies and displays in the Boxing and Wrestling rooms amused the less energetic among the Athletic Nights' patrons. It all added up to an evening when a good time was had by all.

This year the faculty host system is again to be followed, and we may well expect even larger and more enthusiastic crowds than last year, if that is possible, since graduates and parents are also to be admitted, as well as students.

In this year when students have even less free time than formerly, the athletic representatives of each college and faculty and the Athletic Association deserve our sincere thanks for again arranging what has become the most popular of student functions.

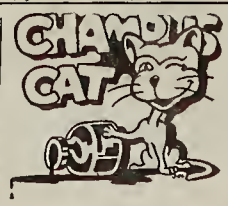
ART and MUSIC Drama

Thud And Blunder

Arsentic and Old Lace

The play has been grossly over-rated.

In fact we were disappointed in Walter Hampden and Cecilia Loftus—two names of high rank in the theatre—for having anything to do with it.



The whole comedy—three repetitive acts and an extensive curtain call—has about enough theme for one Ruthless Rhyme, and as much internal probability as an anschluss between Palestine and the Third Reich. Apart from the acceptable performances of the two leads and a little help from their bewildered supporters there is nothing to recommend the long series of variations of one not-very-funny incongruity as an evening of entertainment.

As the reader probably knows, it concerns the growing insanity of two innocent maiden ladies which prompts them to murder some 13 applicants for lodgings in their Brooklyn house. We have never considered a corpse unroariously funny, and we fail to see that multiplying by 13 makes it any funnier. The slovenly stage-devices which cause the play to drag on to its fore-ordained end may have had some vogue in the days when Keystone comedies were all the rage but they now serve chiefly as an insult to whatever intelligence the modern playgoer may retain.

Habpden, as suggested, was satisfying in the low-comedy Karloff role, and the redoubtable Cissie showed several flashes of splendid technique. Alice John did what she could as the other sister. Arthur Jarrett apparently enjoyed his role of the nephew with the "I-am-Teddy-Roosevelt" complex. LeRoi Operti tried to be Weber and Fields and wasn't either. Henry Richards, as the young nephew, did a thoroughly hideous job of overacting, replete with double takes which would have made a Harold Lloyd fan wince. And ingenue Ethel Britton was a mistake.

And a word—since it seems to be becoming fashionable in this column—about the audience. They enjoyed it. They laughed in even the wrong places. We generally have a great respect for the opinion of others, but when we consider that last night's house gave its biggest belly-laugh to the couple of minutes in the second act when the

Tuck Shop Breeds Crime

By Ed Comneut

(This is the second of a series of articles by a Varsity staff writer on existing conditions in the University of Toronto and its environs.)

The Hart House Tuck Shop is always crowded and noisy. More food flows across its counters daily than is consumed by the hungry children of Germany in a week. Hundreds of bottles of "milk" are passed surreptitiously by corrupt attendants on receipt of a suitable bribe.

Hart House authorities are completely unable to handle the large masses of students which constantly mill about the counter. Frequently students are heard using foul language, such as "cheese and two brown cows," "egg, raisin an' pepsi" and similar snatches of underworld argot.

Crime is constantly being hatched in the Tuck Shop back rooms. It has been suggested that if the chairs and tables were taken away and students were forced to lie down on the floors while eating their lunch, the delinquency rate would drop.

When I visited the Tuck Shop I distinctly heard one student say to his neighbour, "Let's go down to the pool room and shoot a stick." Only by a swift call for the University Police was a particularly heinous crime averted. The two criminals have been incarcerated in the library stacks.

Most Tuck Shop attendants are conscientious and try to keep their quarters in an orderly fashion. "Aw, you don't really want a cup of coffee when you've got a 1:30 lecture," one was heard admonishing a patron as he leaned on the counter in a slovenly fashion.

"Look, chum, you're not nearly old enough to be buying Gillette Blue Blades," he told another who can scarcely have been more than 18. The patron later left the Tuck Shop unaccompanied.

Conditions are not as bad as they were before the rationing of soft drinks and chocolate bars, although a brisk trade in chewing gum and a particularly vicious type of sticky bun is still thriving.

Perhaps the solution would be the flavouring of the drinking water in the fountain next door, which would greatly help in reducing the amount of carbonated beverages consumed on the premises.

Tid-bits from the College Papers

"Girls out at U. of Alberta are worrying about the material shortage . . . they have visions of going up to graduation as they went up to exams—in skirts and sweaters. McGill gals who have tried to get red and white blazers and failed will be somewhat consoled to know that a number of other colleges are giving them up for the duration . . . Jackets are taboo down among Ohio Wesleyan coeds. They're putting their money in war bonds instead—at least, that's what they say. Anyhow it's a good idea."

McGill Daily

"At the University of Toronto, the Council of the Faculty of Arts has asked professors to submit, not later than the Council's February meeting, the names of students of all years whose work during the Fall Term has been found to be unsatisfactory."

SCHOOL SNAGS WIN OVER MEDS IN RELAY

School Team Set Mark of 2.0.5, with Meds Coming in with 2.1.8; Trinity Made Third and U.C. Fourth

SEVENTEEN TEAMS ENTER

Repeating their performance of last Monday, the S.P.S. A team claims the best time thus far registered in this week's track event. The School combo of Verne Booth, Chuck McDonald and McDonough, the same team which won last week's season-opening relay, last night set a mark of 2.0.5 in the 900 (approximately) yard relay. Booth, running the first one-lap leg of the event, pulled ahead of his rival, Wilford of Meds. McDonough ran the second leg, two laps, and was hard pressed by the second Meds-man, Lewis, and McDonald, on the third shift of three laps, was forced all-out before taking Bob Delaney in the final sprint.

The Meds A team, made up of Wilford, Lewis and Delaney, turned in the second best time of 2.1.8., and with a little more conditioning might have taken their Engineering foes.

Third in line were the theologs of the Wycliffe A team. Gillett, Parke-Taylor and Barnett, running in that order, finished in 2.2.1. Fourth placers were Baxter, Conant and Shackleton, sporting colours for the U.C. A's. The School B team of W. Brown, J. Brown and Fordyce were fifth in 2.3.1.

The most surprised and pleased man on the track was Coach Hec Phillips, who thought that a few dozen people had wandered into the wrong wing when he discovered that there were 17 teams waiting to compete. This is three more than last week. Seriously however, it is encouraging to see more fellows taking part in track athletics. If only these fellows had turned out for the interfaculty outdoor meets of last October, then there would be some grade A teams scattered about the campus now. When noses had been counted and double checked all round, it was discovered that there was a grand total of 51 track addicts rushing about the Hart House oval.

Any faculties that have not yet competed and have a team ready to do so, can run off the event today at five o'clock.

School Outpitch Fellow Classmen

A minor uprising ocurred yesterday afternoon as the I S.P.S. B team lashed out a 15 hit barrage to slap a 12-6 defeat on their fellow-freshmen, the A's.

The Bees took full advantage of 15 hits and three walks for 12 runs, while the A's garnered six run on 10 hits and no walks.

Don Harris, the winning pitcher, accounted for three batters via the strike-out route and Bob Barr fanned five. Every Bee batter was a hitter, each getting at least two bingles. Al Jackson and Don Harris both swung a mean strick, hitting three for three. For the losers, Alvin Klasser hit at a four for four clip. The A's runs came in pairs, one for each inning, while the Bees piled up six in the first, one in the second and five in the third.

I S.P.S. A—Phelan, Klasser, Barr, Bullis, Booth and Symes.

I S.P.S. B—Jackson, Harris, Pincey, Schreider, Blair and Williams.

Trinity Whipped By Dental Nine

While we were waiting for the track meet last night our already weary eyes were treated to a display of indoor baseball, the like of which we have never seen before, or will see again, we hope. The Dents' B nine ran up a total of 17 runs as against Trinity B's lone marker. (And only four innings in the game, too!) On top of that, Trinity went hitless.

The score card at the end of the game looked like a mathematician's nightmare with innumerable Dent hits and runs scrawled over four columns for the three innings they batted. (They didn't need to bother in the fourth.)

Perhaps the most noteworthy players on the field were the Denists pitchers. Yes, pitchers. It seems that the first pitcher thought he ought to give someone else a chance after the first two innings. To make a short story even shorter, Marshall pitched the first two innings, allowing no hits and no runs, and Shapiro pitched the last two, allowing one run and no hits.

That one run was a great disappointment to the Dents who were sore afraid that their edge was being threatened. It seems that in the last inning, Sheppard, the first Trinity man up, walked. The second batter, Pitcher Jones, stood at the plate while Sheppard advanced to third, and Sheppard came home when a wide pitch got away from the catcher. Naturally, an argument followed but the judge's decision was final and no employees of the company were allowed to participate in the ruling.

Speaking of Sport

By Roger Conant

HAVE YOUR HEARD?

At the very beginning of today's ramblings we wish to put in a plug for the coming Saturday night, and for the next six for the matter. But if you haven't heard, it seems that the Athletic Nights begin four nights hence. And those are dates to circle in your little red book.

They proved popular last year when an average of 1,200 students and friends paid their two-bit admission fee. The first one broke the record when, under the Medical Society's tutelage, 1,750 jammed the Athletic Wing. Several reasons for Athletic Night's popularity may be presented—(a) low admission price; (b) amount of entertainment received for said small admission price; (c) proximity of Hart House to most students; (d) (and the most important for some) the long line of beautiful stag girls. At any rate so popular were they that $1,200 was raised for war charities.

For the first night the Mulock Cup hatchet will be buried (for the evening) and U.C. and Vic will team up to put on a great show. The Varsity Blues will make their first appearance before a large University audience against a strong Manning Depot quintet. This game alone is worth the evening. But besides this, water polo and volleyball matches will take place and the senior Vic and U.C. basketball teams will mix it up at the preliminary game in the big gym. According to rumours leaking out of the task committee many novelties will be offered such as some expert jitterbugging, quiz contests, and yoyo contests. Of course these are only rumours. It was also learned from good authority that a suggestion to have some one-armed bandits present in aid of said task committee had been rejected. At any rate it all augurs well for five hours of fun for two bits. So we suggest you get the old personality in action and date that beautiful creature you have been eyeing so enrapturedly in the third row.

AS IF DRILL ISN'T TOUGH ENOUGH—

We notice that Minnesota, on top of its regular parade program, has its R.O.T.C. taking extensive courses in swimming. According to the commanding officer, "Most of the men now in training will have to go overseas. Soldiers may have to swim for their lives, so swimming has now been made a part of their training." This seems quite a sensible program, especially in this day of commando raiding. We sometimes wonder how many of our C.O.T.C. could successfully negotiate fifty yards fully loaded with boots and battle dress, let alone any kind of pack or arms. This is not the column for too serious thought but it could be pointed out that those who go active from the local battalions generally have a tough physical time of it for a while at least. Large steps have been taken for physical fitness and we only suggest that perhaps the intramural competitions could stress a little more the sports that would toughen the students. We classify volleyball and baseball outside this jurisdiction and place speed swimming and running as necessities for development of the limbs and especially the heart and lungs. Then of course contact games like rugby and hockey are highly recommended. And perhaps the tops would be boxing and wrestling because of their relation to commando tactics. But at any rate we can't see how a person could get into shape for Brockville by trying to bat a softball around between the rafters of the big gym. We aren't mooting the abandonment of the dozens of teams entered in the leagues, but we only suggest a smaller importance be placed upon the sport in comparison with the more toughening athletics.

YES, AND EVEN MORE HOCKEY . . .

There evidently is doubt in the minds of some as to the groupings in the hockey set-up. Parade days were taken into account by the authorities and as many conflicts as possible have been avoided. Teams to enter the playoffs are as follows: Two from I, two from II, the thirds in I and II decide upon an entrant and one entry from each of the other three. Groups, with little revision, are:

I—Vic, U.C., St. Mike's, Dents, Sr. S.P.S.
II—Jr. S.P.S., Jr. Meds, Pharmacy, S.P.S. III, Sr. Meds.
III—Trinity, U.C. II, Vic II, S.P.S. IV.
IV—S.P.C. V, Emmanuel, Knox.
V—Forestry, Wycliffe, S.P.S. VI.

Since formulation of the groupings it has been learned that Pharmacy has withdrawn and that O.C.E. has made application for a team. A decision will be reached in the near future.

Chemists Make Five Basket Win

Paced by Spear with five baskets, Chemical A ran up a 28-23 score against I Civil in their basketball tilt yesterday afternoon. The Chem. lads jumped into an early lead which, despite the efforts of Plunkett and company, they managed to preserve. Tower, Towns and Plunkett each counted three baskets for their respective teams.

I Civil—Spratt (2), Sensom (3), Plunkett (6), Booth, Fordyce (4), Boa (2), Towns (6).

I Chemical A—Trower (6), Spear (10), Ehrlich (4), Spivak (2), Thomson (4), Wittenburg, Riddell (2).

U.C. JR. BASKETBALL

Game today at 6 p.m. The following men only please turn out: Purcell, Salzman, Silver, Kantor, Morrison, Morton, Tartaglia and Garfunkel.

U.C. WATER POLO

Practice in pool at 12:30 Wed. and Fri. this week. Game on Saturday night.

Trinity Outplays Pharmacy Team

Friday afternoon's game on the upper gym floor saw the pharmacists downed by a score of 22-17. Despite strong playing by Liebovitz and Resnick, Trinity's suprior team play and the deadly marksmanship of John Riley cinched the game for the Red and Black.

Wagland and Brooks showed well and it looks as though Trinity has a good team.

Trinity—Wagland (4), Peterkin (2), Riley (14), Brooks (2), Jones, Bagnall, Tseng.

Pharmacy—Liebovitz (6), Bildewell, Resnick (6), Waltman (2), Rief (1), Gardner (2).

Theolog Team Wins from Trinity

Ed Abbot set the pace with 15 points when Wycliffe B outbasketed Trinity C, 31-21, in an after-supper cage fixture last night in Hart House Upper Gym. Art Capper, his running made, turned up with 8 points in the first half.

Wycliffe had it all their own way in the first period, seemingly scoring at random, but sparking their advantage with a powerful passing combination. Jones popped in four joints and Jenson and Lyall snagged single baskets. At half time Trinity was staggered on the wrong end of a 26-7 score.

When the teams changed ends the Red and Black gained new life. Culop ran up eight points while Higgins netted three. These players accounted for all but a single point of their team's total—Art Sheppard scoring a single on a foul shot.

Wycliffe seemed to lose pace as time went on, Ed Abbot alone grabbing off five points in the last period for the winners.

let's go places

A coffee-coloured Lamarr in a fine house-cleaned old melodrama, has its good points, but they are not drama, dialogue, acting or make-up.

Hedy's new costume, the lurong, fills its purpose adequately, but her new complexion, unless it is UPTOWN LAMARR meant to keep her from being so beautiful that audience overlooks her less admirable qualities, is somewhat of a failure. Authenticity would have permitted her to be several shades lighter.

Walter Pidgeon, villain who turns out to be hero, did the best he could with the part he had, what with all his chances to get really mad cut our by morality concepts of the gentile 194-'s. But why a sensitive fellow like Witzel would stay in the middle of Africa and put up with such a series of dull assistants, and the heat, is hard to understand. It would have been more true to reality if either of his assistants, Ashley or Langford, had driven him to madness or home.

The old doctor, Frank Morgan, was Frank Morgan, lovable in a more drunken way than is usual.

Photography was excellent, except in a couple of shots when the Lamarr eyes were shown to a disadvantage.

There were selected shorts, but Hedy wasn't in them.

With all the talk of snow (gosh, there goes our New Year's resolution) and such, that is floating around our beloved campus, it seems a bit ironical to talk about connivers with the limpid depths—but variety is still the spice of life. And besides the Intramural Swimming Meet is scheduled for the night of Feb. 27. This year it promises to be bigger and better than ever before—which is saying quite a lot in view of the fine calibre of swimmers who have taken part in our previous meets.

We say that it is going to be bigger because the organizers have taken a new stand towards encouraging swimmers of all and various abilities to compete—for the enjoyment and exercise that they will receive and for the glory of their Alma Mater, as well. But, before this meet can boast of being superior to last ycar's and provide exceptpionally fine entertainment for the supporters of our Athletic Night on Feb. 17, a lot of practising has to be done.

To facilitate practising up at the O.C.E. pool, special nights, starting at 7 o'clock, have been arranged for the different Colleges. Here they are in chonological order:

Thurs., Jan. 21—St. Joseph's College.
Tues., Jan. 26—St. Hilda's College.
Thurs., Jan. 28—Meds and S.P.S.
Tues., Feb. 2—Nurses.
Wed., Feb. 3—P. and H. E.
Thurs., Feb. 4—Victoria College.
Tues., Feb. 9—U.C.
Wed., Feb. 10—O.T.P.

In addition to these hours, our swimming organizers have arranged special instruction periods for all mermaids who want to improve their style or their speed before the big event. This is a new venture this ycar and will continue only if sufficient numbers take advantage of its many opportunities. In order that you may check the time of the special kinds of swimming in which you are particularly interested, we have listed all the varieties and the time and place for them. This will be the weekly schedule up until Feb. 4—so come on and let's make it run the full time—

4:30 to 5:30 each afternoon.
Wed., Jan. 20—At Lillian Massey's Pool—Diving.
Thurs., Jan. 20—At Margaret Eaton's Pool—Speed swimming.
Fri., Jan 22—At Lillian Massey—Ornamental or style swimming.
Tues., Jan. 26—At Margaret Eaton—Speed swimming (special attention to times and starting).

DEAN OF GRADUATE STUDIES LEADS FIRESIDE DISCUSSION

Dean G. S. Brett, of the School of Graduate Studies, was the speaker at the Fireside discussion following the S.C.M. Service held Sunday night in Trinity College Chapel.

In every age man strives to achieve a synthesis of his life and to arrive at an integration of all its various factors, Dean Brett stated. In the early Christian era, life was successfully synthesized. This synthesis was more or less common to Christianity, Platonism, and Stoicism. This sythesis collapsed, and a new synthesis was built up in the Middle Ages around Feudalism and the Holy Roman Empire. This in turn collapsed at the time of the Reformation and ever since men have been attempting to build up a new synthesis.

This task has been made more difficult by the fact that this is an age of specialization, Dean Brett said. Men have less now in common than they ever had. Religion is the one link which can bring men together. It unites within itself all fields of life.

People retire from the world of action when it is chaotic, and interpret their religious ideas in this light. Thus we find in religion at the same time an expression of eseape from life and an attempt to adjust oneself to life. Christianity, or any other religion, in order to be effective must give meaning to the life of the common man, in terms which he can understand. If a religion is fundamentally at variance with the rest of life—social and otherwise—it will not be effective, he declared.

3. SAFETY PRECAUTIONS—SMALL ARMS AMMUNITION

C.A.R.O. 2738 is published hereunder for the information and guidance of all concerned.

Fatal accidents have occurred during training due to the mistaking of live Small Arms Ammunition for drill ammunition.

The attention of all concerned is drawn to certain definite safety precautions which are laid down in S.A.T. Vol. I, Pam. 1, Sec. 2, and to the precautions set forth in each of the pamphlets of S.A.T. Vol. I dealing with particular weapons, as well as those to be taken on ranges, as detailed in S.A.T. Vol. I, Pam. 18.

The following precautions, reprinted from S.A.T. Vol. I, Pam. 1, Sec. 2, are to be noted especially:

(a) Drill rounds are employed in training and are essential for efficiency.

There is, however, a risk of accidents through their becoming mixed with live ammunition. To prevent accidents, inspections will be carried out at the beginning of each lesson.

Instructors will:

(i) Inspect all weapons.

(ii) Inspect all ammunition pouches, M.G. belts and boxes, magazines and carriers, to ensure that no live ammunition is present.

(iii) Inspect all drill rounds.

(iv) Show their own weapons and drill rounds to the squad under their instruction.

(v) Inspect grenades and grenade stores, and order the first safety precaution to be carried out in grenade training.

(b) Drill rounds will never be used in aiming at an aiming disc held to the eye.

(c) When drill rounds are used for setting up stoppages with automatic weapons on the range, officer conducting the practice will supervise their issue and subsequent collection.

(d) "Storage of Ammunition—In no circumstances will drill ammuntion be kept in, or issued from the same store as that used for live ammunition."

4. ABBREVIATION OF DATES

C.A.R.O. 2725 is published hereunder for the information and guidance of all concerned.

Attention is drawn to Field Service Pocket Book, Pamphlet ....o. 2, 1939, Appendix II, Sec. II, in which it is stated that dates will be written in the form 3 Sep. 17 and NOT in the form 3/9/37.

In the United States Forces, the month is written first, followed by the day of the month, followed by the year; thus 3/9/37 in the United States Forces would mean "the 9th of March, 1937." It is, therefore, essential that the correct method of abbreviation as given in Field Service Pocket Book should invariably be used by Canadian Units.

continue on Feb. 13 when the School of Physical and Health Education will provide the reception committee. Airmen from Trenton will provide the University's fourth opposition in basketball.

Interfaculty championships in boxing, wrestling, fencing and swimming will be decided on Feb. 20, when St. Mike's men will take their turn as hosts. Assumption College will send their hoop squad north of the border for the second-last game scheduled.

Navy boys will try and scuttle the Blue basketball squad on Feb. 27. With Medical students acting as hosts this final night, there will be gymnastic displays and an interfaculty women's swim meet.

Although this plan does not take the place of the Intercollegiate Rugby days, it provides students with the chance to see the would-be champions. Square dancing, ping pong, aptitude tests, blood grouping tests, are just a few of the many activities in which spectators of Athletic Nights will be able to partake.

Correspondence

Editor,
The Varsity.
Dear Sir:

The committee of the Arts and Letters Club and the Medical Society want to thank The Varsity for its support and endorsement.

To see men of other faculties taking such an interest in the Arst and Letters Club means much for the organization's future. We in Medicine have at times thought The Varsity an "Arts-man's" paper with very little thought or coverage of the students in the scientific courses. One glace at the articles in Monday's Varsity will more than dispel such an idea.

We have felt for some time the need on the Campus not for a formal debating group, but for a very informal gathering of students and staff from all colleges. Most of the time we forget that there are other corners of the Campus where just as important students are persuing their work and activities with just as important a job to do in life as we feel we have in medicine.

By meeting and talking with the future engineers, lawyers, dentists, teachers and journalists of the country, we in medicine find much to colour our viewpoint and return us to medical work with a broadened outlook. Such an outlook does much to promote co-operation along any social lines in future years.

The Medical Society's hope is that through the medium of the University Arts and Letters Club, we can meet one another for a short while each week to mutual advantage and enjoyment of our University life.

Thanks again, Mr. Editor, for your endorsement.

R. Gordon Millar,
Chairman,
University Arts and Letters Club.

SUNDAY, JAN. 24

CHINESE WOMEN STUDENTS RELATE TRYING EXPERIENCES

(Young women students in Chinese Universities have as many difficulties as the men. A bulletin released recently by the National Student Relief Committee in Chungking, China, reveals the following as true stories of the wandering of the Chinese women students.)

At the outbreak of hostilities between China and Japan there was a great deal of propaganda work needed. Wu Li-chen, writing from Kwellin, tells the story of her work in this field and other services for her country.

"I took part in this kind of work, and often after class or on Sundays, we would go down to the villages to do our part. I would draw cartoons, make speeches, or organize performances, and within one year, I finished writing a few plays under the roar of the Japanese aircraft.

"In 1938, I participated in the military training of the high schools and universities of Kwangtung Province. When we student-cadet groups left Canton, I became a homeless girl. During the four months that followed, I could get no news from home when at last to my greatest delight I learnt that my family had moved to Macao. After the military training, when we girls received instructions about nursing, I again underwent for half a year the training of wireless operations. I was employed for about 12 months in the Kwangtung Provincial Government when afterwards I resigned and came to Kweilin I passed the matriculation examination of three universities."

Chen Shu-min, a student in Kwangsi University, reveals a story of the difficulties of herself and her family—a family of 11 reduced to five. Her father was a university professor. In her own words, this is what happened.

"My elder brother entered the Nanking University, and I to the Hwai Wun Girls' Middle School in Nanking. Then came the Sino-Japanese War; we found life difficult in the national capital, so we returned to our native village. Unhappily, it fell into the Japanese hands a few months later. My elder brother died in this occupied district, and father bade me to leave such a dangerous place. Through hardships and sufferings I came back to free China, where I worked for a while. Then I was employed, stranded in Sikang, and I entered Sikang National Technical School. Unluckily, I could not stand the climate there and hence made for Kwangsi University here. I thought that from thence on, I could have the opportunity of continuing my studies, and who would expect upon receiving a family letter to learn that my father passed away because of insanity!

"For these few years, life has been extremely unstable, and economy very difficult. It is a great relief to learn that the National Student Relief Committee offers such aid to us needy students."

Vic Debaters Accept Motto

members of the Women's Armed Forces who happened to be on the same train.

"The fact that morality of seniors is superior to that of Freshmen is evident when we consider freshmen week-end. The perennial question of the Freshmen is 'When do we see the women?' Seniors are never heard asking this. They have seen the women."

Ralph Hicklin, second speaker for the Opposition, quoted a passage from Bacon, "abeunt studia in mores." This way by way of introducing the English Lang. and Lit. Course, which he was able to state from experience has a most degenerating effect on the morals of students the further they pursue it, unless their resistence is terrific. As a student progresses in higher education, he begins to think about things, such as why should we leave Annesley at 12 o'clock, and why not smoke there? The conventional code of ethics begins to seem stupid to him. When he goes out into the world he will be a dangerous character, because the ordinary person will not be able to appreciate the subtlety of his mind.

Coleman summed up the argument for the Government by asserting that studies produce wider morals on a higher scale. The subjects studied have not changed with the years, but morals have; nevertheless, the morals inside the University are still higher than those outside.

Harry Stevenson, I Emmanuel, was Speaker for the evening, as the Speaker of the House, Jack Coleman, preferred to speak from the floor in the debate. Stevenson was Speaker of the House last year.

TELESCOPES, field-glasses and such are handy little gadgets. The army wants them, but we have heard rumours of various frat residences, etc., who are hoarding for more or less obvious reasons. The last time on observation post was reported in existence, it brought up a little discussion on the subject and the tale that allegedly happened towards the end of last year.

Seems as how this merry crew have an excellent location for that sort of thing, but they are constantly baffled by mysterious activity that is going on in a Certain Window of a Certain Residence. One night when atmospheric, lighting and focussing conditions were right, they solved the mystery.

It seems that the girls had a pair of field glasses trained on them!

Bob Chester's Orchestra To Be Featured By U.C. At Annual Arts Ball

American "Big Name" Band to Play for Dance Combining Arts Ball with Junior-Senior; Profits to Aid Russia

BETTY BRADLEY VOCALIST

For the first time in several years an American "big name" band will play at a U. of T. college dance. Combining their traditional Arts Ball with the Junior-Senior, University College is staging a mammoth dance on Feb. 4 for its only large social event of the season, other than the U.C. Follies. For the occasion, the services of Bob Chester and his orchestra have been secured.

This well-known and popular band has been touring the nothern states, and U.C. has contracted for the only appearance of Bob Chester in this district, at their Arts Ball.

With the band will be featured vocalist Betty Bradley, who has been singing with Chester for several years, and has made numerous radio broadcasts.

The Bob Chester band has done much recording on a well-known label, and has made many coast-to-coast radio broadcasts.

The event will be held in the spacious Convention Hall of the Royal York Hotel. In keeping with wartime conditions, dress for the dance will be informal.

Profits from the affair will go to swell the Students' Administrative Council's contribution to the Aid to Russia Fund.

February 15 Deadline For U.C. "Undergrad"

"This year's Undergrad will be a magazine for the masses," said Editor Ben Holdsworth to The Varsity yesterday. "Gone are the days when the Undergrad was written for and by the highbrows. Not only will U.C.'s mouthpiece be a super-improvement on last year's masterly production—it will also contain all the best features of Life, Liberty and the New Yorker."

Managing Editor Gray Cowan announced that the new Undergrad had acquired the services of "probably the best cartoonist ever to come to this University, in the person of Des Gourley, II Hon. Sci."

The Editorial Board, at a special meeting yesterday, decided to award prizes for the best short stories, the best essays, and the best verse published. As yet no decision has been reached as to the nature and value of these prizes.

Editor Holdsworth urged that all contributions should be sent in to the Undergrad office as soon as possible. "The absolute deadline in Feb. 15. We can't use anything submitted after that date."

India Development Topic of Address

"No factor has had so much to do with the development of India as education," stated Dr. G. S. Brett in his talk to the University Arts and Letters Club last night.

Dr. Brett has spent five years on the faculty of the Government College in Lahore, capital of the Punjab. And there he had seen many types of Indians —high caste, low caste, Hindu, Moslem —gathered together for the common purpose of education. "The fact of their mixing in this way, forgetting class and religious differences was in itself," he affirmed, "part of a social upheaval which has been rapidly spreading throughout India."

Dean Brett traced the history of India from 1858 to the present time in a sketch to illustrate how the taking-over and ruling of this country by Britain had been "considered natural and good." She had provided a central government under the Viceroy, and provincial and state governments for those parts of India under direct British rule, merely giving protection to those other parts still under the rule of native princes.

"But one must not forget that the India of today has developed under the British within, literally, one man's lifetime—Sir William Mulock's," commented the speaker.

"Due to India's contribution in the last war," he continued, "a new system of government was tried out for the next ten years in the hope that she would then be ready for her independence. But in 1920 Mahatma Ghandi had gained considerable influence; and his simple principles of non-co-operation and non-violence were very effective in producing and proving nothing."

Dr. Brett then described succeeding attempts, consisting mostly of round-table conferences, which were made in the 30's. "But they accomplished little, so that India was still in a state of transition without even a formal constitution when she was plunged, along with Britain, into this present war."

"And the war," said Dr. Brett, "has swung the world's pivot right around so that the centre is now in the East, especially the Middle East. Britain's supplies there are coming largely from India. Her position, aside from Russia, is the focus of the war."

In speaking of the Cripps mission, the speaker said that it was not a failure, but a success, because it proved that India will have independence as soon as she has reached an internal agreement on a constitution of her own.

After the conclusion of this talk, the society's meeting was thrown open for discussion.

Queen's University Simplifies Campus Formals

By Ken Phin
Editor of Queen's Journal

Kingston, Jan. 19 — (CUP) — At Queen's there has been no reduction in the number of formals held during the year—there are still five—but there has been a steady decline in the grandeur of these affairs.

First, of course, came the currency restrictions which prohibited the importing of American name bands. Then, when the R.C.A.F. radio locators' course was instituted, the airmen were quartered in the gymnasium, making that building unavailable. For the past two years formals have been held in Grant Hall, a somewhat smaller but more attractive hall regularly used for assemblies, graduations and informal dances. Decorations had to be cut down.

Last year, corsages began to be restricted. Most faculty societies sponsoring formals adopted the policy of selling special pins at the door to replace the flowers and to raise money for war savings certificates. Usual selling price of these pins was $1.50.

No serious move was made toward regulating actual formal dress until this fall, when the Medical at-home was put on a dress-optional basis. It is understood that Science, which traditionally has the most lavish dance, will also follow that policy with regard to its formal in February. Arts, Levana (co-ed faculty) and the Alma Mater Society will adopt the "long formal" system, by which dress for men only is informal.

Price reductions have been few. With the first move from the gymnasium to Grant Hall, Medicine lowered its admission from five to four dollars, by eliminating supper and cutting to a minimum all costs but that of the orchestra.

On the whole, these changes have led, rather than followed, the general body of campus feeling. At the head of the movement toward "informal and inexpensive formals" have been Principal Wallace and the Alma Mater Society executive. Faculty societies have been strongly urged to do away with as much of the display of their dances as possible; but most of this work has been done through the executives in charge, rather than indirectly by creating student feeling. General inertia seems to prevail; and any change is neither strongly supported nor (if it is too severe) strenuously opposed by the majority.

The Journal has made periodic comment on the formals-in-wartime subject, but has not made any genuine effort to swing opinion far to one side or the other. Early this year, however, the topic was aired editorially, with particular reference to the Medical dance, which was coming up at the time. Agreeing in outline with the Principal's plan, the paper urged informal dress and reduction of expenses. How much effect these various forces have had in producing subsequent changes, is difficult to tell.

Basic point of the anti-formalities, aside from the obvious one of keeping down needless expense and leaving out costly frills when surplus money is scarce, is one of ethies. Many are in uniform, and others cannot afford or cannot get dress clothes; so, even though a full informal at a college might not make any effective difference from the point of view of cost, such a formal would be in bad taste. It would be simply an advertisement of the fact that students are, after all, a privileged class.

Texts Not Yet Rationed; Rumour Is Unfounded

Rumours have been circling the campus recently that text-books may be rationed, and students may find themselves having to rely entirely upon their professors' notes and library books. But according to a member of the staff at the University of Toronto Press, these rumours are quite unfounded.

"While it is true books are becoming more difficult to get," she said, "the difficulty is to get them when we want them—they always arrive if we wait long enough."

English firms are still printing important text-books. Manufacturers are being careful of their stocks, and are releasing only those which are actually ordered. Because of increased insurance rates, books from England are, in many cases, more expensive than they were before the war. American books, too, are more expensive because of higher customs taxes.

Two types of English dictionaries, the Oxford and Blackie's, have become war casualties. No more are being shipped to Canada, so Canadian students must use other makes for the duration.

International Club To Talk on Cripps

The second meeting of the International Students' Club will be held in St. Hilda's tonight at 8 p.m.

It will take the form of an informal panel discussion on the Cripps Mission in India. The discussion will be led by Mr. Sugit Singh and Dean G. S. Brett will act as critic. After the discussion there will be refreshments and dancing.

Since the purpose of the club is to promote friendship with the many foreign students on the campus, the executive hopes that as many as possible will come.

Reels, Minuets, Squares, To Feature Co-op Dance

In line with the new emphasis on informality in college fun the Campus Co-op is holding an old-time danee at the Y.W.C.A., on McGill St., this Friday night from 8:30 to 12 p.m.

The All-University dance and last year's Athletic Nights showed the rising popularity of square dancing with both jitterbugs and ickies joining in the fun of "swinging your partner."
